U.S. Congress,

Congressional Record

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES

OF THE

FIRST SESSION OF THE SEVENTY-THIRD CONGRESS

OF

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

VOLUME 77—PART 6

JUNE 8, 1933, TO JUNE 15, 1933

(Pages 5227 to 6243)

UNITED STATES
GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE
WASHINGTON : 1933

RESEARCH LIBRARY
FEDERAL EMERGENCY RELIEF ADMINISTRATION

AUTHENTICATED
U.S. GOVERNMENT
INFORMATION
GPO

26,469

Law
J
11
.R5

Congressional Record

SEVENTY-THIRD CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION

SENATE

THURSDAY, JUNE 8, 1933

(Legislative day of Tuesday, June 6, 1933)

The Senate met at 10 o'clock a.m., on the expiration of the recess.

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5755) to encourage national industrial recovery, to foster fair competition, and to provide for the construction of certain useful public works, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the second amendment of the committee.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Austin	Coolidge	Harrison	McKellar
Bachman	Davis	Kendrick	Robinson, Ark.
Bankhead	Erickson	Keyes	Steiwer
Bratton	Fletcher	Logan	Thompson
Brown	George	Lonergan	Townsend
Clark	Hale	Long

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I desire to announce that the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] is necessarily detained from the Senate by reason of his attendance as a delegate representing our Government at the London Economic Conference.

Mr. KENDRICK. I desire to announce that the following Senators are necessarily detained from the Senate on official business:

The Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], and the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD].

I desire also to announce that the following Senators are detained from the Senate on departmental matters:

The Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], the junior Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE], the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. BULOW], the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIETERICH], the senior Senator from Washington [Mr. DILL], the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. DUFFY], the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], the Senator from Iowa [Mr. MURPHY], and the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER].

I wish further to announce that the following Senators are detained in committee meetings:

The junior Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK], the junior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES], the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING], the Senator from California [Mr. MCADOO], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS], the senior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH], and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH].

The VICE PRESIDENT. Twenty-three Senators have answered to their names. There is not a quorum present. The clerk will call the names of the absent Senators.

The legislative clerk called the names of the absent Senators, and Mr. MCCARRAN, Mr. MCGILL, and Mr. STEPHENS answered to their names when called.

Mr. CAPPER, Mr. FRAZIER, and Mr. POPE entered the Chamber and answered to their names.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Twenty-nine Senators have answered to their names. There is not a quorum present.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I move that the Sergeant at Arms be directed to request the attendance of absent Senators.

The motion was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Sergeant at Arms will carry out the direction of the Senate.

Mr. BORAH, Mr. BULKLEY, Mr. CONNALLY, Mr. COPELAND, Mr. DICKINSON, Mr. FESS, Mr. HASTINGS, Mr. HATFIELD, Mr. HAYDEN, Mr. KEAN, Mr. MCNARY, Mr. NEELY, Mr. OVERTON, Mr. PATTERSON, Mr. RUSSELL, Mr. SHEPPARD, Mr. THOMAS of Utah, Mr. TRAMMELL, Mr. WAGNER, and Mr. WHITE entered the Chamber and answered to their names.

Mr. MCNARY. I wish to announce that the Senator from Michigan [Mr. COUZENS] is absent en route to the London Economic Conference.

I also wish to announce that the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. NORBECK] is unavoidably detained from the Senate.

Mr. FESS. I desire to announce that the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BARBOUR], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY], the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. METCALF], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH], the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. HEBERT], the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED], the Senator from Indiana [Mr. ROBINSON], the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WALCOTT], and the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD] are detained from the Senate in attendance on committee meetings.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Forty-nine Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the Pennsylvania Commandery of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, Philadelphia, Pa., favoring the building up and maintenance of the Navy to the full London Treaty specifications, and also favoring the adequate maintenance of both the Army and the Navy, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the Council of the City of Oakland, Calif., favoring the adoption of the manufacturers' sales tax in lieu of increased income taxes in pending tax legislation, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by Pride of Washington Council, No. 6, Sons and Daughters of Liberty, of Washington, D.C., favoring the passage of the so-called "Dies bill", fixing a quota pertaining to the admission of alien immigrants to the United States, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also laid before the Senate a letter in the nature of a petition from Mrs. J. Louis Smith, of Covington, La., praying for a continuation of the senatorial investigation of the Louisiana senatorial election of 1932, which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

He also laid before the Senate a petition of sundry citizens of Covington, La., praying for a senatorial investigation relative to alleged acts and conduct of Hon. HUEY P. LONG, a Senator from the State of Louisiana, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also laid before the Senate a letter in the nature of a memorial from G. W. Toler, of New Orleans, La., endorsing Hon. HUEY P. LONG, a Senator from the State of Louisiana, condemning attacks made upon him and remonstrating against a senatorial investigation of his alleged acts and conduct, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also laid before the Senate a letter from C. R. Israel, of New Orleans, La., endorsing Hon. HUEY P. LONG, a Senator from the State of Louisiana, and condemning attacks made upon him, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also laid before the Senate a memorial of sundry citizens of Bayou Chene, St. Martin Parish, La., endorsing Hon. HUEY P. LONG, a Senator from the State of Louisiana, condemning attacks made upon him, and remonstrating against a senatorial investigation relative to his alleged acts and conduct, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. BARBOUR presented a resolution adopted by the New Jersey Branches of the Catholic Central Verein of America and the Catholic Women's Union of America at Newark, N.Y., favoring the passage of legislation regulating the use of machinery, hours of labor, minimum wages paid labor, both male and female, the amount of profit to be made upon the manufacture, sale, and distribution of the products of industry, etc., which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. TYDINGS presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Baltimore, Md., remonstrating against increase of income taxes on the smaller taxpayer in the lower brackets as a means of raising revenue in connection with the so-called "industrial control and public works bill", which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD presented a resolution adopted by Halvorson-Bowers Post, No. 187, Veterans of Foreign Wars, of Minneapolis, Minn., favoring modification of the reductions made in war veterans' benefits under the so-called "Economy Act", which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented resolutions adopted by members of Freemond Madison Post, No. 447, Veterans of Foreign Wars, of Albert Lea, Minn., favoring postponement of the construction of new post-office buildings in cities of less than 100,000 population and the transfer of the duties of postmaster to the assistant postmaster in such cities as measures of economy, which were referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

Mr. DILL presented petitions transmitted by the Chicago Teachers' Federation, numerously signed by sundry citizens of Chicago and vicinity, in the State of Illinois, praying for the prompt passage of legislation extending the powers of the Postal Savings System by removing the $2,500 limitation on deposits and making it possible to deposit checks and also to withdraw money by check by a procedure similar to that in use in the ordinary bank, which were referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

WOMEN'S BUREAU OF THE METROPOLITAN POLICE DEPARTMENT

Mr. COPELAND presented a letter from John L. Haynes, secretary of the Kalorama Citizens Association of the District of Columbia, embodying a resolution adopted by that association, which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

KALORAMA CITIZENS ASSOCIATION,
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,
June 5, 1933.

Hon. ROYAL S. COPELAND,
United States Senate, Washington, D.C.

MY DEAR MR. COPELAND: I have been directed by the Kalorama Citizens Association to transmit to you the following resolution:

"Whereas the Women's Bureau of the Washington (D.C.) Police Department is not established by an organic act; and

"Whereas the Kalorama Citizens Association is acquainted with the good work of that bureau and desires its continuance; and

"Whereas the Kalorama Citizens Association understands that there is proposed legislation including clauses providing for:

"1. The continuation of the Women's Bureau of the District of Columbia Police Department (by law).

"2. The maintenance of the present Civil Service standards in the Women's Bureau.

"3. An increase in the personnel of the Women's Bureau.

"Be it therefore

"Resolved, That the Kalorama Citizens Association advocate the passage of the measures cited above."

Very truly yours,

JOHN L. HAYNES, Secretary.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON RULES

Mr. COPELAND, from the Committee on Rules, to which was referred the resolution (S.Res. 96) to increase the membership on the Special Committee for the Conservation of Wild Life Resources from 5 to 7 members, reported it without amendment.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED

Mrs. CARAWAY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on June 7, 1933, that committee presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills:

S. 604. An act amending section 1 of the act entitled "An act to provide for stock-raising homesteads, and for other purposes", approved December 29, 1916 (ch. 9, par. 1, 39 Stat. 862), and as amended February 28, 1931 (ch. 328, 46 Stat. 1454);

S. 687. An act providing for the establishment of a term of the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Florida at Orlando, Fla.;

S. 1278. An act to amend an act (Public, No. 431, 72d Cong.) to identify The Dalles Bridge Co.; and

S. 1815. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Ohio River at or near Owensboro, Ky.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. NEELY:

A bill (S. 1856) granting an increase of pension to Margaret E. Gorrell; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BAILEY:

A bill (S. 1857) for the relief of John L. Summers, disbursing clerk, Treasury Department, and for other purposes;

A bill (S. 1858) for the relief of the Washington Post Co. (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 1859) authorizing adjustment of the claim of the Rio Grande Southern Railroad Co. (with accompanying papers); and

A bill (S. 1860) authorizing adjustment of the claim of the Western Union Telegraph Co. (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. JOHNSON:

A bill (S. 1861) for the relief of John F. Considine; to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (S. 1862) for the relief of Edward C. Joslyn; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (S. 1863) granting a pension to Kate Thompson; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. FLETCHER:

A bill (S. 1865) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

A bill (S. 1866) to authorize appropriations for construction at military posts, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. VAN NUYS:

A bill (S. 1867) authorizing an appropriation to provide for the completion of the George Rogers Clark Memorial at Vincennes, Ind.; to the Committee on the Library.

AMENDMENT OF THE BANKRUPTCY ACT

Mr. ASHURST. I ask leave to introduce a bill which proposes to amend the present bankruptcy law as follows: To extend the operation of the bankruptcy law to any county, city, borough, village, town, parish, township, or any unincorporated tax, or special assessment district, any political subdivision of a State and any school, drainage, irrigation, levee, sewer, paving, sanitary, port, or other taxing district, and so forth. I ask that it be referred to the Judiciary Committee.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be received.

The bill (S. 1868) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto was read twice by its title.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Arizona if this is the same bill which has been reported favorably from the House Judiciary Committee?

Mr. ASHURST. No; that bill did not refer to municipal corporations. The bill which I have just introduced extends the operations of the bankruptcy law to municipal corporations like counties, towns, cities, districts, and so forth.

Mr. VANDENBERG. It includes municipalities?

Mr. ASHURST. Yes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY—AMENDMENT

Mr. HEBERT submitted the amendment intended to be proposed by him to House bill 5755, the so-called "industrial control and public works bill", which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

LOANS TO HOME OWNERS—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. BULKLEY submitted a report, which was ordered to lie on the table, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 5240) to provide emergency relief with respect to home-mortgage indebtedness, to refinance home mortgages, to extend relief to the owners of homes occupied by them and who are unable to amortize their debt elsewhere, to amend the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, to increase the market for obligations of the United States, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"That this act may be cited as the 'Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933.'

"DEFINITIONS

"SEC. 2. As used in this act—

"(a) The term 'Board' means the Federal Home Loan Bank Board created under the Federal Home Loan Bank Act.

"(b) The term 'Corporation' means the Home Owners' Loan Corporation created under section 4 of this act.

"(c) The term 'home mortgage' means a first mortgage on real estate in fee simple or on a leasehold under a renewable lease for not less than 99 years, upon which there is located a dwelling for not more than four families, used by the owner as a home or held by him as his homestead, and having a value not exceeding $20,000; and the term 'first mortgage' includes such classes of first liens as are commonly given to secure advances on real estate under the laws of the State in which the real estate is located, together with the credit instruments, if any, secured thereby.

"(d) The term 'association' means a Federal savings and loan association chartered by the Board as provided in section 5 of this act.

"REPEAL OF DIRECT LOAN PROVISION OF FEDERAL HOME LOAN BANK ACT

"SEC. 3. Subsection (d) of section 4 of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (providing for direct loans to home owners) is hereby repealed.

"CREATION OF HOME OWNERS' LOAN CORPORATION

"SEC. 4. (a) The Board is hereby authorized and directed to create a corporation to be known as the 'Home Owners' Loan Corporation,' which shall be an instrumentality of the United States, which shall have authority to sue and to be sued in any court of competent jurisdiction, Federal or State, and which shall be under the direction of the Board and operated by it under such bylaws, rules, and regulations as it may prescribe for the accomplishment of the purposes and intent of this section. The members of the Board shall constitute the board of directors of the Corporation and shall serve as such directors without additional compensation.

"(b) The Board shall determine the minimum amount of capital stock of the Corporation and is authorized to increase such capital stock from time to time in such amounts as may be necessary, but not to exceed in the aggregate $200,000,000. Such stock shall be subscribed for by the Secretary of the Treasury on behalf of the United States, and payments for such subscriptions shall be subject to call in whole or in part by the Board and shall be made at such time or times as the Secretary of the Treasury deems advisable. The Corporation shall issue to the Secretary of the Treasury receipts for payments by him for or on account of such stock, and such receipts shall be evidence of the stock ownership of the United States. In order to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to make such payments when called, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is authorized and directed to allocate and make available to the Secretary of the Treasury the sum of $200,000,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, and for such purpose the amount of the notes, bonds, debentures, or other obligations which the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is authorized and empowered under section 9 of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended, to have outstanding at any one time, is hereby increased by such amounts as may be necessary.

"(c) The Corporation is authorized to issue bonds in an aggregate amount not to exceed $2,000,000,000, which may be sold by the Corporation to obtain funds for carrying out the purposes of this section, or exchanged as hereinafter provided. Such bonds shall be issued in such denominations as the Board shall prescribe, shall mature within a period of not more than 18 years from the date of their issue, shall bear interest at a rate not to exceed 4 percent per annum, and shall be fully and unconditionally guaranteed as to interest only by the United States, and such guaranty shall be expressed on the face thereof. In the event that the Corporation shall be unable to pay upon demand, when due, the interest on any such bonds, the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay to the Corporation the amount of such interest, which is hereby authorized to be appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and the Corporation shall pay the amount of such interest to the holders of the bonds. Upon the payment of such interest by the Secretary of the Treasury the amount so paid shall become an obligation to the United States of the Corporation and shall bear interest at the same rate as that borne by the bonds upon which the interest has been so paid. The bonds issued by the Corporation under this subsection shall be exempt, both as to principal and interest, from all taxation (except surtaxes, estate, inheritance, and gift taxes) now or hereafter imposed by the United States or any District, Territory, dependency, or possession thereof, or by any State, county, municipality, or local taxing authority. The Corporation, including its franchise, its capital, reserves and surplus, and its loans and income, shall likewise be exempt from such taxation; except that any real property of the Corporation shall be subject to taxation to the same extent, according to its value, as other real property is taxed.

"(d) The Corporation is authorized, for a period of 3 years after the date of enactment of this act, (1) to acquire in exchange for bonds issued by it, home mortgages and other obligations and liens secured by real estate (including the interest of a vendor under a purchase-money mortgage or contract) recorded or filed in the proper office or executed prior to the date of the enactment of this act, and (2) in connection with any such exchange, to make advances in cash to pay the taxes and assessments on the real estate, to provide for necessary maintenance and make necessary repairs, to meet the incidental expenses of the transaction, and to pay such amounts, not exceeding $50, to the holder of the mortgage, obligation, or lien acquired as may be the difference between the face value of the bonds exchanged plus accrued interest thereon and the purchase price of the mortgage, obligation, or lien. The face value of the bonds so exchanged plus accrued interest thereon and the cash so advanced shall not exceed in any case $14,000, or 80 percent of the value of the real estate as determined by an appraisal made by the Corporation, whichever is the smaller. In any case in which the amount of the face value of the bonds exchanged plus accrued interest thereon and the cash advanced is less than the amount the home owner owes with respect to the home mortgage or other obligation or lien so acquired by the Corporation, the Corporation shall credit the difference between such amounts to the home owner and shall reduce the amount owed by the home owner to the Corporation to that extent. Each home mortgage or other obligation or lien so acquired shall be carried as a first lien or refinanced as a home mortgage by the Corporation on the basis of the price paid therefor by the Corporation, and shall be amortized by means of monthly payments sufficient to retire the interest and principal within a period of not to exceed 15 years; but the amortization payments of any home owner may be made quarterly, semiannually, or annually, if in the judgment of the Corporation the situation of the home owner requires it. Interest on the unpaid balance of the obligation of the home owner to the Corporation shall be at a rate not exceeding 5 percent per annum. The Corporation may at any time grant an extension of time to any home owner for the payment of any installment of principal or interest owed by him to the Corporation if, in the judgment of the Corporation, the circumstances of the home owner and the condition of the security justify such extension, and no payment of any installment of principal shall be required during the period of 3 years from the date this act takes effect if the home owner shall not be in default with respect to any other condition or covenant of his mortgage. As used in this subsection, the term 'real estate' includes only real estate held in fee simple or on a leasehold under a lease renewable for not less than 99 years, upon which there is located a dwelling for not more than four families used by the owner as a home or held by him as a homestead and having a value of not exceeding $20,000. No discrimination shall be made under this act against any home mortgage by reason of the fact that the real estate securing such mortgage is located in a municipality, county, or taxing district which is in default upon any of its obligations.

"(e) The Corporation is further authorized, for a period of 3 years from the date of enactment of this act, to make loans in cash subject to the same limitations and for the same purposes for which cash advances may be made under subsection (d) of this section, in cases where the property is not otherwise encumbered; but no such loan shall exceed 50 percent of the value of the property securing the same as determined upon an appraisal made by the Corporation. Each such loan shall be secured by a duly recorded home mortgage, and shall bear interest at the same rate and shall be subject to the same provisions with respect to amortization and extensions as are applicable in the case of obligations refinanced under subsection (d) of this section.

"(f) The Corporation is further authorized, for a period of 3 years from the date of enactment of this act, in any case in which the holder of a home mortgage or other obligation or lien eligible for exchange under subsection (d) of this section does not accept the bonds of the Corporation in exchange as provided in such subsection and in which the Corporation finds that the home owner cannot obtain a loan from ordinary lending agencies, to make cash advances to such home owner in an amount not to exceed 40 percent of the value of the property for the purposes specified in such subsection (d). Each such loan shall be secured by a duly recorded home mortgage and shall bear interest at a rate of interest which shall be uniform throughout the United States, but which in no event shall exceed a rate of 6 percent per annum, and shall be subject to the same provisions with respect to amortization and extensions as are applicable in cases of obligations refinanced under subsection (d) of this section.

"(g) The Corporation is further authorized, for a period of 3 years from the date of the enactment of this act, to exchange bonds and to advance cash, subject to the limitations provided in subsection (d) of this section, to redeem or recover homes lost by the owners by foreclosure or forced sale by a trustee under a deed of trust or under power of attorney, or by voluntary surrender to the mortgagee within 2 years prior to such exchange or advance.

"(h) The Board shall make rules for the appraisal of the property on which loans are made under this section so as to accomplish the purposes of this act.

"(i) Any person indebted to the Corporation may make payment to it in part or in full by delivery to it of its bonds which shall be accepted for such purpose at face value.

"(j) The Corporation shall have power to select, employ, and fix the compensation of such officers, employees, attorneys, or agents as shall be necessary for the performance of its duties under this act, without regard to the provisions of other laws applicable to the employment or compensation of officers, employees, attorneys, or agents of the United States. No such officer, employee, attorney, or agent shall be paid compensation at a rate in excess of the rate provided by law in the case of the members of the Board. The Corporation shall be entitled to the free use of the United States mails for its official business in the same manner as the executive departments of the Government, and shall determine its necessary expenditures under this act and the manner in which they shall be incurred, allowed, and paid, without regard to the provisions of any other law governing the expenditure of public funds. The Corporation shall pay such proportion of the salary and expenses of the members of the Board and of its officers and employees as the Board may determine to be equitable, and may use the facilities of Federal home-loan banks, upon making reasonable compensation therefor as determined by the Board.

"(k) The Board is authorized to make such bylaws, rules, and regulations, not inconsistent with the provisions of this section, as may be necessary for the proper conduct of the affairs of the Corporation. The Corporation is further authorized and directed to retire and cancel the bonds and stock of the Corporation as rapidly as the resources of the Corporation will permit. Upon the retirement of such stock, the reasonable value thereof as determined by the Board shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States and the receipts issued therefor shall be canceled. The Board shall proceed to liquidate the Corporation when its purposes have been accomplished, and shall pay any surplus or accumulated funds into the Treasury of the United States. The Corporation may declare and pay such dividends to the United States as may be earned and as in the judgment of the Board it is proper for the Corporation to pay.

"FEDERAL SAVINGS AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS

"SEC. 5. (a) In order to provide local mutual thrift institutions in which people may invest their funds and in order to provide for the financing of homes, the Board is authorized, under such rules and regulations as it may prescribe, to provide for the organization, incorporation, examination, operation, and regulation of associations to be known as 'Federal Savings and Loan Associations' and to issue charters therefor, giving primary consideration to the best practices of local mutual thrift and home-financing institutions in the United States.

"(b) Such associations shall raise their capital only in the form of payments on such shares as are authorized in their charter, which shares may be retired as is therein provided. No deposits shall be accepted and no certificates of indebtedness shall be issued except for such borrowed money as may be authorized by regulations of the Board.

"(c) Such associations shall lend their funds only on the security of their shares or on the security of first liens upon homes or combination of homes and business property within 50 miles of their home office: Provided, That not more than $20,000 shall be loaned on the security of a first lien upon any one such property; except that not exceeding 15 percent of the assets of such association may be loaned on other improved real estate without regard to said $20,000 limitation, and without regard to said 50-mile limit, but secured by first lien thereon: And provided further, That any portion of the assets of such associations may be invested in obligations of the United States or the stock or bonds of a Federal home-loan bank.

"(d) The Board shall have full power to provide in the rules and regulations herein authorized for the reorganization, consolidation, merger, or liquidation of such associations, including the power to appoint a conservator or a receiver to take charge of the affairs of any such association, and to require an equitable readjustment of the capital structure of the same; and to release any such association from such control and permit its further operation.

"(e) No charter shall be granted except to persons of good character and responsibility, nor unless in the judgment of the Board a necessity exists for such an institution in the community to be served, nor unless there is a reasonable probability of its usefulness and success, nor unless the same can be established without undue injury to properly conducted existing local thrift and home-financing institutions.

"(f) Each such association, upon its incorporation, shall become automatically a member of the Federal home-loan bank of the district in which it is located, or if convenience shall require and the Board approve, shall become a member of a Federal home-loan bank of an adjoining district. Such associations shall qualify for such membership in the manner provided in the Federal Home Loan Bank Act with respect to other members.

"(g) The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized on behalf of the United States to subscribe for preferred shares in such associations which shall be preferred as to the assets of the association and which shall be entitled to a dividend, if earned, after payment of expenses and provision for reasonable reserves, to the same extent as other shareholders. It shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to subscribe for such preferred shares upon the request of the Board; but the subscription by him to the shares of any one association shall not exceed $100,000, and no such subscription shall be called for unless in the judgment of the Board the funds are necessary for the encouragement of local home financing in the community to be served and for the reasonable financing of homes in such community. Payment on such shares may be called from time to time by the association, subject to the approval of the Board and the Secretary of the Treasury; but the amount paid in by the Secretary of the Treasury shall at no time exceed the amount paid in by all other shareholders, and the aggregate amount of shares held by the Secretary of the Treasury shall not exceed at any time the aggregate amount of shares held by all other shareholders. To enable the Secretary of the Treasury to make such subscriptions when called there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $100,000,000, to be immediately available and to remain available until expended. Each such association shall issue receipts for such payments by the Secretary of the Treasury in such form as may be approved by the Board, and such receipts shall be evidence of the interest of the United States in such preferred shares to the extent of the amount so paid. Each such association shall make provision for the retirement of its preferred shares held by the Secretary of the Treasury, and beginning at the expiration of 5 years from the time of the investment in such shares, the association shall set aside one third of the receipts from its investing and borrowing shareholders to be used for the purpose of such retirement. In case of the liquidation of any such association the shares held by the Secretary of the Treasury shall be retired at par before any payments are made to other shareholders.

"(h) Such associations, including their franchises, capital, reserves, and surplus, and their loans and income, shall be exempt from all taxation now or hereafter imposed by the United States, and all shares of such associations shall be exempt both as to their value and the income therefrom from all taxation (except surtaxes, estate, inheritance, and gift taxes) now or hereafter imposed by the United States; and no State, Territorial, county, municipal, or local taxing authority shall impose any tax on such associations or their franchise, capital, reserves, surplus, loans, or income greater than that imposed by such authority on other similar local mutual or cooperative thrift and home financing institutions.

"(i) Any member of a Federal home-loan bank may convert itself into a Federal savings and loan association under this act upon a vote of its stockholders as provided by the law under which it operates; but such conversion shall be subject to such rules and regulations as the Board may prescribe, and thereafter the converted association shall be entitled to all the benefits of this section and shall be subject to examination and regulation to the same extent as other associations incorporated pursuant to this act.

"ENCOURAGEMENT OF SAVING AND HOME FINANCING

"SEC. 6. To enable the Board to encourage local thrift and local home financing and to promote, organize, and develop the associations herein provided for or similar associations organized under local laws, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $150,000, to be immediately available and remain available until expended, subject to the call of the Board, which sum, or so much thereof as may be necessary, the Board is authorized to use in its discretion for the accomplishment of the purposes of this section without regard to the provisions of any other law governing the expenditure of public funds.

"SEC. 7. The provisions of this act shall apply to the continental United States, to the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii, and to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

"PENALTIES

"SEC. 8. (a) Whoever makes any statement, knowing it to be false, or whoever willfully overvalues any security, for the purpose of influencing in any way the action of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation or the Board or an association upon any application, advance, discount, purchase, or repurchase agreement, or loan, under this act, or any extension thereof by renewal deferment, or action or otherwise, or the acceptance, release, or substitution of security therefor, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000, or by imprisonment for not more than 2 years, or both.

"(b) Whoever (1) falsely makes, forges, or counterfeits any note, debenture, bond, or other obligation or coupon, in imitation of or purporting to be a note, debenture, bond, or other obligation, or coupon, issued by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation or an association; or (2) passes, utters, or publishes, or attempts to pass, utter, or publish, any false, forged, or counterfeited note, debenture, bond, or other obligation, or coupon, purporting to have been issued by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation or an association, knowing the same to be false, forged, or counterfeited; or (3) falsely alters any note, debenture, bond or other obligation, or coupon, issued or purporting to have been issued by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation or an association; or (4) passes, utters, or publishes, or attempts to pass, utter, or publish, as true any falsely altered or spurious note, debenture, bond, or other obligation, or coupon, issued or purporting to have been issued by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation or an association, knowing the same to be falsely altered or spurious, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $10,000, or by imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

"(c) Whoever, being connected in any capacity with the Board or the Home Owners' Loan Corporation or an association (1) embezzles, abstracts, purloins, or willfully misapplies any moneys, funds, securities, or other things of value, whether belonging to it or pledged or otherwise intrusted to it; or (2) with intent to defraud the Board or the Home Owners' Loan Corporation or an association, or any other body politic or corporate, or any individual, or to deceive any officer, auditor, or examiners of the Board or the Home Owners' Loan Corporation or an association, makes any false entry in any book, report, or statement of or to the Board or the Home Owners' Loan Corporation or an association, or, without being duly authorized, draws any order or issues, puts forth, or assigns any note, debenture, bond, or other obligation, or draft, mortgage, judgment, or decree thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $10,000 or by imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

"(d) The provisions of sections 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, and 117 of the Criminal Code of the United States (U.S.C., title 18, secs. 202 to 207, inclusive), insofar as applicable, are extended to apply to contracts or agreements of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and an association under this act, which, for the purposes hereof, shall be held to include advances, loans, discounts, and purchase and repurchase agreements; extensions and renewals thereof; and acceptances, releases, and substitutions of security therefor.

"(e) No person, partnership, association, or corporation shall make any charge in connection with a loan by the Corporation or an exchange of bonds or cash advance under this act, except ordinary charges authorized and required by the Corporation for services actually rendered for examination and perfecting of title, appraisal, and like necessary services. Any person, partnership, association, or corporation violating the provisions of this subsection shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $10,000, or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

"SEPARABILITY PROVISION

"SEC. 9. If any provision of this act, or the application thereof to any person or circumstances, is held invalid, the remainder of the act, and the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances, shall not be affected thereby."

And the Senate agree to the same.

ROBERT J. BULKLEY,
ROBERT F. WAGNER,
J. G. TOWNSEND, JR.,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

HENRY B. STEAGALL,
T. ALAN GOLDSBOROUGH,
ROBERT LUCE,
Managers on the part of the House.

INVESTIGATION BY BANKING AND CURRENCY COMMITTEE—EXTENSION OF AUTHORITY

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, may I interrupt the consideration of the pending bill for just a moment in order to secure the consideration of the resolution which was discussed last evening? It will take but a few moments to dispose of it. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Senate Resolution 97.

Mr. HARRISON. I understand there will be no debate on the resolution?

Mr. FLETCHER. I think it will require no debate.

Mr. HARRISON. If there shall be debate, I hope the Senator will withdraw the request.

Mr. FLETCHER. Very well.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Florida for the consideration of the resolution indicated by him?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution (S.Res. 97) submitted on June 7, 1932, by Mr. FLETCHER on behalf of himself and Mr. STEIWER, and reported from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Banking and Currency, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, in addition to and supplementing the authority granted under Senate Resolution 84, Seventy-second Congress, agreed to March 4, 1932, and continued and supplemented by Senate Resolution 239, Seventy-second Congress, agreed to June 21, 1932, Senate Resolution 371, Seventy-second Congress, agreed to February 28, 1933, and Senate Resolution 56, Seventy-third Congress, agreed to April 4, 1933, shall have authority to investigate any transactions or activities relating to any sale, exchange, purchase, acquisition, borrowing, lending, financing, issuing, distributing or other disposition of, or dealing in, securities or credit by any person, firm, partnership, company, association, corporation or other entity, and/or any other acts or operations of any one or more of them or of agents, affiliates, or subsidiaries of any one or more of them or of any entity (corporate or otherwise) directly or indirectly controlled or influenced by any one or more of them, which may affect or bear upon, either directly or indirectly, any of the foregoing transactions or activities. Such investigation shall be made with a view to recommending necessary legislation, under the taxing power or other Federal powers.

For the purpose of this resolution the committee, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized to hold such hearings, to sit and act at such times and places, either in the District of Columbia or elsewhere, during the first session of the Seventy-third Congress or any recess thereof, and until the termination of the first regular session thereof, to employ such experts, and clerical, stenographic, and other assistants, to require by subpena or otherwise the attendance of such witnesses and the production and impounding of such books, papers, and documents, to administer such oaths, and to take such testimony and to make such expenditures, as it deems advisable. The cost of stenographic services to report such hearings shall not be in excess of 25 cents per hundred words. The expenses of the investigation authorized by this resolution shall be paid out of the sums heretofore or hereafter made available for the investigations authorized under Senate Resolution 84, Seventy-second Congress, as continued by the resolutions above specified and by this resolution. The authority conferred by Senate Resolution 84, Seventy-second Congress, as continued by such resolutions, shall extend until the termination of the first regular session of the Seventy-third Congress.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I understand that the resolution proposes to give the Committee on Banking and Currency some additional authority?

Mr. FLETCHER. The resolution proposes to give the committee authority which it is considered it should have.

Mr. CONNALLY. I also understand that an additional appropriation is to be made to enable the committee to conclude its investigations.

Mr. FLETCHER. One of the things accomplished by the resolution is to extend the powers of the committee, which otherwise perhaps would expire with the adjournment of Congress.

Mr. CONNALLY. I am sure that nobody would object to that.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. MCNARY. Mr. President, I objected to consideration of the resolution last evening because of the absence of a number of Senators from the Chamber. I stated to the Senator that after the resolution had gone over for the day and had been printed I would make no objection to its consideration today.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator if the committee requested the additional power?

Mr. FLETCHER. Yes.

Mr. HATFIELD. Is it for the purpose of investigating income taxes?

Mr. FLETCHER. It is for the purpose of getting the facts with reference to transactions in the case under investigation.

Mr. HATFIELD. Was the Senator's committee refused the privilege of investigating income taxes?

Mr. FLETCHER. Its authority was challenged.

Mr. HATFIELD. Was the power and privilege not later conceded to it?

Mr. FLETCHER. No.

Mr. HATFIELD. Not at all?

Mr. FLETCHER. No.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

ADDITIONAL FUNDS FOR INVESTIGATION BY BANKING AND CURRENCY COMMITTEE

Mr. FLETCHER. I now ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of Senate Resolution 93, providing additional funds for the investigation being conducted by the Committee on Banking and Currency.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Florida asks unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of a resolution, which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read the resolution (S.Res. 93) submitted by Mr. COSTIGAN on June 6, 1933, and reported favorably from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, as follows:

Resolved, That the limit of expenditures under Senate Resolution 84, Seventy-second Congress, agreed to March 4, 1932, to investigate the practice of "short selling" of listed securities upon stock exchanges and its effect on actual values, as continued in force by Senate Resolution 239, Seventy-second Congress, agreed to June 21, 1932, and further continued in force by Senate Resolution 371, Seventy-second Congress, agreed to February 28, 1933, and as supplemented by Senate Resolution 56, Seventy-third Congress, agreed to April 4, 1933, is hereby increased by $100,000.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the resolution was considered and agreed to.

PAYMENT FOR SERVICES RENDERED TO DISTRICT ATTORNEY FOR NEBRASKA

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, on the desk there are 2 or 3 resolutions reported yesterday by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate. I ask unanimous consent that they may be considered at this time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The first resolution which the Senator from South Carolina asks unanimous consent to have considered will be read.

The legislative clerk read the resolution (S.Res. 87) submitted by Mr. NYE on May 25, 1933, and reported from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate with amendments, on line 12, after the name "Andrews" to strike out "$200" and insert "$100", and on line 13, after the name "Healy", to strike out "$750" and insert "$250", so as to make the resolution read:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate hereby is authorized and directed to pay from the appropriation for expenses of inquiries and investigations, contingent fund of the Senate, fiscal year 1932, to the following-named persons the amounts hereinafter mentioned for professional and other services rendered during the fiscal year 1932 in assisting the United States district attorney for Nebraska in the matter of the United States against Victor Seymour, arising from an indictment for perjury before the special committee of the Senate investigating contributions and expenditures of senatorial candidates, under authority of resolution of April 10, 1930, to wit: John Andrews, $100, William M. Day, $160; Frank Healy, $250.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendments reported by the committee.

The amendments were agreed to.

The resolution, as amended, was agreed to.

AUTHORIZATION OF SURVEY OF INDIAN CONDITIONS

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the next resolution, which the Senator from South Carolina asks to have considered.

The Senate proceeded to consider the resolution (S.Res. 79) submitted by Mr. KING on May 12, which had been reported from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate with an amendment, in line 4, to strike out "$15,000" and insert "$10,000", so as to read:

Resolved, That the Committee on Indian Affairs, or any subcommittee thereof, authorized and directed by Senate resolution to make a general survey of Indian conditions in the United States, is hereby authorized to expend $10,000 from the contingent fund of the Senate in addition to the sums previously authorized for said purpose.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

HARRIMAN NATIONAL BANK INVESTIGATION

The VICE PRESIDENT. The next resolution for which the Senator from South Carolina asks consideration will be read.

The resolution (S.Res. 89) submitted by Mr. COSTIGAN on May 29, 1933, was read, considered, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the limit of expenditures under Senate Resolution 55, Seventy-third Congress, agreed to April 18, 1933, to investigate the delay in prosecuting alleged law violations by the Harriman National Bank, New York City, is hereby increased by $500.

INVESTIGATION OF AIR MAIL AND OCEAN MAIL CONTRACTS

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the next resolution which the Senator from South Carolina asks to have considered.

The legislative clerk read the resolution (S.Res. 94) submitted by Mr. BLACK on the 6th instant, which had been reported from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, with an amendment, in line 5, to strike out "$75,000" and insert "$25,000", so as to make the resolution read:

Resolved, That the limit of expenditures under Senate Resolution 349, Seventy-second Congress, second session, agreed to February 25, 1933, creating a special committee of the Senate to investigate air mail and ocean mail contracts, is hereby increased by $25,000.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, what is this particular proposal?

Mr. BYRNES. It is to carry out the purposes of a resolution heretofore adopted by the Senate authorizing the appointment of a committee to investigate the amounts paid to air mail contractors and to steamship contractors for the carrying of mails.

Mr. COPELAND. In the independent offices appropriation bill we have given the President authority to abrogate or modify contracts. These matters I understand are being studied in the Post Office Department and in the Shipping Board. This seems to me to be a duplication of effort. Certainly for the time being I ask that the resolution go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection is heard, and the resolution goes over.

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5755) to encourage national industrial recovery, to foster fair competition, and to provide for the construction of certain useful public works, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the second amendment reported by the committee, which will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. In section 1, page 2, line 2, after the word "interstate", it is proposed to insert the words "and foreign", so as to make the clause read:

It is hereby declared to be the policy of Congress to remove obstructions to the free flow of interstate and foreign commerce which tend to diminish the amount thereof.

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The next amendment of the committee will be stated.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, on page 3, line 7, after the word "appointed", to insert:

Provided, That no officer or employee receiving a salary in excess of $5,000 shall be appointed or designated under this title except with the advice and consent of the Senate; but the provisions of section 1761 of the Revised Statutes shall not apply to any person so appointed or designated.

So as to make the subsection read:

SEC. 2. (a) To effectuate the policy of this title, the President is hereby authorized to establish such agencies, to accept and utilize such voluntary and uncompensated services, to appoint, without regard to the provisions of the Civil Service laws, such officers and employees, and to utilize such Federal officers and employees, and, with the consent of the State, such State and local officers and employees, as he may find necessary to prescribe their authorities, duties, responsibilities, and tenure, and, without regard to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, to fix the compensation of any officers and employees so appointed: Provided, That no officer or employee receiving a salary in excess of $5,000 per annum shall be appointed or designated under this title except with the advice and consent of the Senate; but the provisions of section 1761 of the Revised Statutes shall not apply to any person so appointed or designated.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I ask the chairman of the committee if he would regard it as inappropriate to offer an amendment to the committee amendment providing the same limitation upon salaries as provided in the bill which was passed a short time ago conferring very great authority upon the Secretary of Agriculture? I am inclined to think perhaps I ought to offer the amendment as an independent amendment in some other part of the bill.

Mr. HARRISON. I hope the Senator will not offer such an amendment to this bill, because it would provoke quite a controversy.

Mr. KING. I think it an amendment which would be very willingly accepted by the Senate, but I have some doubt as to whether I ought to offer it as an amendment to this amendment or offer it perhaps at the close of the bill as a separate section.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I desire to propose an amendment to the committee amendment. On page 3, line 12, following the word "designated", I propose to add the following:

And the salaries of such officers or employees shall not be increased for a period of 90 days after confirmation.

Mr. HARRISON. What is the purpose of the Senator?

Mr. TRAMMELL. I think the 90 days, perhaps, would be better if changed to 6 months. If it is not the law, these salaries might be increased immediately after confirmation.

Mr. HARRISON. In order to conserve time I shall offer no objection if the Senator offers an amendment making it 6 months.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I will modify the amendment accordingly.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment as modified will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 3, line 12, after the word "designated", add the following words:

And the salaries of such officers or employees shall not be increased for a period of 6 months after compensation.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Florida to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment as amended.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator from Mississippi why the amendment is limited to this title? I call his attention to the words "this title" in line 10, on page 3. Why should it not read "this act"?

Mr. HARRISON. There is a similar provision in the next title.

Mr. McKELLAR. It seems to me it ought to apply to the whole measure.

Mr. HARRISON. It applies to the public-construction program as well as to the program covered by this title.

Mr. McKELLAR. Very well.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The next amendment will be stated.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, on page 4, line 13, after the word "title", to insert:

Provided, That where such code or codes affect the services and welfare of persons engaged in other steps of the economic process, nothing in this section shall deprive such persons of the right to be heard prior to approval by the President of such code or codes.

So as to make the subsection read:

CODES OF FAIR COMPETITION

SEC. 3. (a) Upon the application to the President by one or more trade or industrial associations or groups, the President may approve a code or codes of fair competition for the trade or industry or subdivision thereof, represented by the applicant or applicants, if the President finds (1) that such associations or groups impose no inequitable restrictions on admission to membership therein and are truly representative of such trades or industries or subdivisions thereof, and (2) that such code or codes are not designed to promote monopolies or to eliminate or oppress small enterprises and will not operate to discriminate against them, and will tend to effectuate the policy of this title: Provided, That where such code or codes affect the services and welfare of persons engaged in other steps of the economic process, nothing in this section shall deprive such persons of the right to be heard prior to approval by the President of such code or codes. The President may, as a condition of his approval of any such code, impose such conditions (including requirements for the making of reports and the keeping of accounts) for the protection of consumers, competitors, employees, and others, and in furtherance of the public interest, and may provide such exceptions to and exemptions from the provisions of such code, as the President in his discretion deems necessary to effectuate the policy herein declared.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 5, line 5, after the word "interstate", to insert the words "or foreign", and in lines 8, 9, and 10 to strike out "a violation of any provision of any such code shall be a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof an offender shall be fined not more than $500 for each offense", so as to make the subsection read:

(b) After the President shall have approved any such code, the provisions of such code shall be the standards of fair competition for such trade or industry or subdivision thereof. Any violation of such standards in any transaction in or affecting interstate or foreign commerce shall be deemed an unfair method of competition in commerce within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act, as amended.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 6, after line 3, to insert subsections (e) and (f).

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I ask that that amendment be passed over for the present.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment will be passed over for the present and the clerk will report the next amendment.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, on page 7, line 18, after the word "interstate", to insert "or foreign",so as to make the subsection read:

AGREEMENTS AND LICENSES

SEC. 4. (a) The President is authorized to enter into agreements with, and to approve voluntary agreements between and among persons engaged in a trade or industry, labor organizations, and trade or industrial organizations, associations, or groups, relating to any trade or industry, if in his judgment such agreements will aid in effectuating the policy of this title with respect to transactions in or affecting interstate or foreign commerce, and will be consistent with the requirements of clause (2) of subsection (a) of section 3 for a code of fair competition.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 7, line 21, after the word "President", to insert "shall find that destructive wage or price cutting or other activities contrary to the policy of this title are being practiced in any geographical area or in any subdivision of any trade or industry, and", so as to make the subsection read:

(b) Whenever the President shall find that destructive wage or price cutting or other activities contrary to the policy of this title are being practiced in any geographical area or in any subdivision of any trade or industry, and, after such public notice and hearing as he shall specify, shall find it essential to license business enterprises in order to make effective a code of fair competition or an agreement under this title or otherwise to effectuate the policy of this title, and shall publicly so announce, etc.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I desire to ask the chairman a question with reference to the pending amendment and the next amendment on page 8. The two amendments are linked together. As I read the amendment and as I understand it, it would authorize the President to adopt and issue rules and regulations governing a particular geographical area, and in addition to that fact it would authorize him to issue rules and regulations which would not apply uniformly throughout the country. I am wondering if the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] would not agree to strike out the words "in any geographical area" where they appear on page 7, and again on page 8.

Frankly, I do not believe that it is wise, if the bill is passed, to authorize powers which might affect one State or one section where they would not be applied uniformly throughout the country. It is with that idea in mind that I have prepared an amendment which I expect to offer at a later time.

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator wants to strike out the words "in any geographical area"?

Mr. BLACK. That is correct.

Mr. HARRISON. If the Senator offers the amendment I shall interpose no objection.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, there is so much confusion in the Chamber that I could not catch the nature of the conversation between the two Senators. What is happening over there?

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator from Alabama has suggested that in the committee amendment the words "in any geographical area" be eliminated. I told the Senator that so far as I am concerned, I would not interpose any objection to striking out those words and making the matter apply uniformly.

Mr. McNARY. I certainly would object to the Senator accepting an amendment of that importance. What reason has the Senator at this time to accept the suggestion of the Senator from Alabama over a proposal that has been inserted in the bill by his own committee?

Mr. HARRISON. May I say to the Senator from Oregon that it was acceptable to the junior Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] who was most instrumental in drafting the legislation. I prefer to hold the proposition, with some few exceptions perhaps, as the Senate committee recommended it. It would seem to me the committee's action was right in prescribing "in any geographical area"; but rather than precipitate long discussion over a question that might be rather immaterial, so far as I am concerned I am willing to accept the Senator's suggestion.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, it is not an immaterial matter at all. Let us imagine that in some rural county of Pennsylvania unfair practices are resorted to by some 2 or 3 small coal-mining companies. As a result, if the Senator from Alabama succeeds in his suggestion, it would be necessary for the President to impose this licensing system on every coal mine in America, and that would be preposterous. The amendment incorporated in the bill by the committee was brought to the committee, as I recall it, by General Johnson, he saying that he did it with the President's sanction in order to meet just that objection of penalizing thousands of innocent people in different parts of the country because some one man in a particular locality has indulged in unfair practices. I think it is highly important that the phrase should remain in the bill for the protection of innocent men. I hope very much the Senate will adopt the amendment as the President recommended it and as the Finance Committee reported it.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator from Pennsylvania yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. REED. Gladly.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I should like to ask for an interpretation of the general principle involved. Is it anticipated that the code in a given industry will be uniform throughout the country?

Mr. REED. No; it is not.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Is it contemplated that there can be a code for an industry, we will say, in Michigan and a different code for the same industry in North Carolina.

Mr. REED. Absolutely.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Does the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] concur in that interpretation?

Mr. WAGNER. Yes; that is absolutely essential. Conditions may vary in different sections of the country. A wage scale fair in one locality may not be fair in another. The bill provides that codes and rules and regulations relating to various matters involved, such as unfair practices, undercutting, fraudulent advertising, and matters of that kind may be adopted as a general code for the entire industry, and as a matter of fact for all industries; but there will always be some local condition that will have to be provided for in the code to take care of the change or difference in conditions.

Mr. REED. Now, let me answer the question further. The object of the scheme begins to appear when we consider the results of just such differing regulations. It is stated in many places in the bill that it shall be considered an unfair practice to pay less wages than those fixed in the code. It has been stated by the sponsor of the bill over and over again that the wage scale that prevails in North Carolina or Georgia will not be the same as the wage scale that prevails in Michigan or Massachusetts, let us say. Another unfair practice is to sell at less than cost of production. The result will be that we will have lower wages fixed in North Carolina than in Michigan, and there will be a lower cost of production in North Carolina than in Michigan. That is self-evident. If, then, the Michigan factory sells below its cost of production, it is guilty of unfair practices; but if it does not, it cannot compete with the man in North Carolina, whose cost of production is officially fixed at a lower figure.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. REED. Gladly.

Mr. VANDENBERG. That bears on the precise point upon which I am seeking information, and I should like to be very sure about it. Will the Senator permit me to submit a question to the Senator from New York?

Mr. REED. Certainly.

Mr. VANDENBERG. We will take, for the sake of the argument, the furniture industry in Michigan, which finds its chief competition with the furniture industry in North Carolina. We will say, for the sake of the argument, that the cost of production in North Carolina is substantially lower than it is in Michigan—first, because of lower wages; second, because of longer hours; third, because of release from various factors in cost of production, like coal, for instance. Now, how can the furniture industry in Michigan raise its wage scales and shorten its hours, and thus further increase its cost of production, unless its chief competitor in North Carolina is required to live under precisely the same code?

Mr. WAGNER. Does the Senator mean as to wages?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Precisely.

Mr. WAGNER. There is no attempt here to remove fair competition between industries as it exists today, providing we put that competition on a basis of efficiency rather than a basis of exploitation of labor. I have been trying to emphasize that; and there are some competitive advantages that the industries in one locality will have over those in another. Those advantages cannot be removed, and they ought to remain. What we are trying to do here, which does not seem to be understood, is to lift the standard so that those working may have a living wage and may have some leisure through reasonable hours of labor; and, of course, an additional advantage of cutting down the hours of labor, which I thought was universally accepted, is that it will absorb a good deal of our unemployment.

One of the things we will have to do, if we are going to put people back to work, is to reduce the hours of labor. That sort of thing ought to be as nearly uniform as possible. A minimum wage cannot be made uniform, of course, in different localities. Where they may have one advantage, they may also have certain disadvantages. I mean, if geographical location is an advantage to an industry, it ought to be retained as an advantage; but certainly we want to lift the industry up so that we shall have a living wage and decent hours of labor.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I cordially agree with the Senator's objective; but I ask him how we can lift wages in the same industry in one section of the country, and have any trade out of which to get the money to pay the increased wages or the shorter hours, if the competitor in the same industry has lower wages and longer hours somewhere else in the country and therefore undersells the commodity? Why cannot those factors, at least, be uniform?

Mr. WAGNER. The factors of hours of labor I think will be uniform. The wages may not be. I mean, there may be some local conditions which we cannot foresee now which may make it unfair to require in one locality a minimum wage as high as in some other localities; but undoubtedly the policy will be as nearly as possible to make those conditions uniform.

Mr. VANDENBERG. And yet we are to have different codes.

Mr. WAGNER. Otherwise we may talk as we like, but what has dragged industry down more than anything else is the exploitation of labor, cutthroat competition. If you inquire of business men all through the country, the thing they will tell you is, that particularly during these days of unemployment they have suffered because their competitors were able to secure people to work for them for long hours and starvation wages.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Exactly; and it is not proposed here to correct that.

Mr. WAGNER. That is the thing we want to prevent.

Mr. VANDENBERG. But you do not correct it if you have one code for the low-wage area and another code for the high-wage area.

Mr. WAGNER. If the Senator pins me down as to whether or not the wage will be exactly the same in every locality in the country, I cannot tell him that it will be until we know all the conditions surrounding the matter; but certainly we are going to lift it up to a wage level of comfort and decency. That is the objective here.

Mr. VANDENBERG. You are not going to lift it up unless it is uniform.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President——

Mr. REED. Mr. President, nobody would guess it, but I believe I have the floor. [Laughter.]

Mr. VANDENBERG. I apologize to the Senator for taking so much of his time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Pennsylvania has the floor. To whom does he yield?

Mr. WAGNER. Will the Senator yield to me for just one more remark?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. After all, what the Senator speaks of is a matter of administration; and if, in order to have the competition fair, a uniform wage level is required, undoubtedly it will be imposed. I mean that is something that we cannot foretell in absolute detail now; but our objective is very clear, notwithstanding that there were some attempts yesterday to divert us from our course.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I am nearly bursting with some thoughts on this subject that I should like to utter. [Laughter.] I desire, first, to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. REED. Will the adoption of the pending amendment interfere with my subsequent motion to strike out the entire paragraph (b) of section 4?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It will not?

Mr. REED. Mr. President, this is as good a time as any to call the attention of the Senate to the real purpose of paragraph (b) of section 4. In all of the debate that took place yesterday I did not notice any reference to that section, although it is probably the most revolutionary part of the entire bill.

Bear in mind that paragraph (b) of this licensing section is put in as an additional threat to compel the performance of the terms of these codes of fair competition.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. LONG. Just what are we considering now, may I ask?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senate is considering an amendment of the Committee on Finance to the bill under consideration.

Mr. LONG. Which one?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment on page 7, line 21.

Mr. REED. The amendment we are considering is part of this licensing paragraph.

I think Senators ought to understand that before we go further in voting on it.

Bear in mind that these codes of fair competition, once agreed upon and approved by the President, have the force of law. Bear in mind then that a violation of those codes is punishable criminally by fine and imprisonment. In other words, the wrongdoer is punishable by criminal process.

Now the administration insists upon adding to that, over and above the criminal liability, this licensing system, so that by the refusal of a license the wrongdoer may be punished further. His whole right to engage in his vocation is to be taken from him by Presidential order as a further penalty for the violation of these Presidential codes—either agreements made by the industry itself and approved by the President, or, in case of failure to make an agreement as to the terms of competition, the President alone is given power to establish the code. The violation of the code that the President establishes is made a crime; and, in addition to the criminal penalties, the President is empowered to subject that industry to license, and refuse a license to the wrongdoer.

In other words, as the sponsors of the bill explain, the ordinary processes of the criminal law are too slow and not sufficiently emphatic to enable the President to secure the prompt punishment of the person whom he decides to be a criminal in violating the regulations that he, the President, has put forth; and he is given this rather unusual power of denying to the citizen the right to earn his living at his ordinary lawful business if he, the President, alone and unaided, finds this person to be a wrongdoer.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I think the Senator is stressing the President too much there, because this finding will be made by whatever appointee or other man may be in charge of the work, away down the line.

Mr. REED. Why, of course.

Mr. LONG. I mean, if a little administrator in a county finds that a tie hacker made a tie 6 inches too short, he can stop that man from making ties; or, in the case of a woodcutter, he can stop that man from chopping wood, as I read the bill.

Mr. REED. Absolutely.

We have been talking about great industries, such as the textile industry and coal; but we must remember that this licensing power and this code of fair competition extend throughout trade and commerce and industry, from the great motor-car industry and the great steel industry right down to the business of running a pushcart; and the President, under this bill, can establish a code of fair competition for pushcarts if he pleases.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. FESS. There is another element that is more distracting yet to me.

The Senator speaks of codes. Under the provision on page 4 the President can impose any condition that he may see fit; and not only that, but he can modify the code, or he can entirely abolish it. Here is a case of fixing a penalty for the violation of a code that has become a standard, when nobody, not even the President, knows what it will be.

Mr. REED. Of course. The doges used to make their laws in secret. They used to find men guilty because a complaint had been dropped in the lion's mouth. This goes further than that.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

Mr. REED. I yield to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. BORAH. By way of illustration, suppose the case of an industry having its seat of operation in a particular part of the country. There is another industry of the same kind having its seat of operation in another part of the country. Now, suppose the wage conditions and the conditions of production are such in one part of the country that a certain rule is established with reference to fair competition; and in the other part of the country, where the other branch of the industry exists, taking into consideration wages and coal and such matters as that, another rule is established: Can the first industry compete with the second industry without being guilty of violation of the law, and therefore being punishable as guilty of a crime?

Mr. REED. Presumably that will depend upon the text of the regulations. The Senator from New York had his attention called to such disparities a little while ago; and he said he expected that the President would begin by recognizing the existing fact that wages are lower in the South than they are in the North, and he would allow lower wages to be paid in the South than in the North.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I do not think the Senator ought to misstate what I said. I did not say anything of the kind. I said there may be local conditions which may affect the fixation of wages. I do not know; but certainly the wages will be put on such a level as to provide fair competition in the industry, and it may be, as I tried to make clear, that in order to provide fair competition the wage scale ought to be the same all over, universally. That, however, is a matter of administration; and we cannot foretell every little detail in this legislation or in any other legislation.

Mr. REED. No; I know you cannot foretell it, and you leave us in a beautiful haze. If you are going to fix wages at their present level and with their present disparity between sections, and then forbid each of those competitors to sell below his cost, you have fixed by law two unequal costs, and made it a crime for either of them to sell below his own cost. Under such conditions the high-cost man is going out of business. The low-cost man is going to get everything.

Mr. WAGNER. May I interrupt the Senator?

Mr. REED. Just a moment. When that is called to the Senator's attention, and when it is called to General Johnson's attention in the committee, the answer is, "Well, if that does not work, we will try the other way and make wages uniform all over the country." That is a wild way for Congress to legislate. We ought at least to know what is expected to be done.

Mr. BORAH. In the first place, wages cannot be made uniform throughout the country. That is an impossibility. We could not make wages uniform throughout the United States. An attempt to do so would put certain industries out of business, the same as would the other plan.

Mr. REED. Of course, it would.

Mr. WAGNER. If we do not make them uniform, we could at least provide a living wage for all. I wanted to ask the Senator this: Does he favor long hours, and does he favor starvation wages? I know the Senator does not believe in those things, but they seem to be the only alternative.

Mr. REED. That is like asking me, when I oppose some of these wild relief appropriations, whether I favor starving people. Of course, I do not favor sweatships.

Mr. WAGNER. Then how else, under present conditions, can we provide a living wage?

Mr. REED. Give industry a chance. You are choking it to death.

Mr. WAGNER. Industry?

Mr. REED. Yes.

Mr. WAGNER. We are trying to take care of only 10 or 15 percent of industry. The majority of industrialists and business men want to do the right thing. They want to pay a decent wage. They want to employ people a reasonable number of hours per day. But they are dragged down by the recalcitrant 10 or 15 percent of the industry, as they will all testify, who, with the cutthroat wages and the long hours, are dragging the industry down. Those trying to do the right thing are unable to compete with the others unless they go into a race with them in wage cutting and in the employment of long hours of labor. We have been talking about international shocks and all that sort of thing. One of the reasons why we have been dragged down to where we are is just that type of cutthroat competition, sweatshop labor, and things like that, which we are trying to eliminate.

Mr. REED. If the Senator will allow me to answer him, I should say that I am quite as much opposed to sweatshops, and quite as much opposed to cutthroat competition, as is the Senator from New York, and I do not think it necessarily follows, because I think his plan is an insane one, and is going to destroy industry more than it is going to help, that I am not animated by the same lofty motives that animate the Senator from New York. I am willing to concede to him the utmost of charity in his views toward long hours, low wages, sweatshops, and all that sort of thing; I concede the Senator has the loftiest ambition to better conditions. All I ask of him is that he be as charitable to me.

To come back to the argument, a moment's reflection on the power attempted to be given to the President here, must shock any reflective person. Remember, please, that under a lot of beautiful phrases are couched the most tremendous powers. We speak of codes of fair competition. It is only by indirection, and by admission of the sponsors of the bill, that we realize that that means not merely planting roses around the factory so that the conditions of employment will be pleasant, but it means fixing prices, it means apportioning output, it means creating, by the sanction of law, the same kind of pools and price-fixing conspiracies within an industry that we have been fighting for so long, for so many decades.

The steel business 25 years ago was tightly regulated by pools secretly made, which fixed the price of every product in every town in the United States, and fixed the proportion of business each factory might enjoy. We drove those things out of existence by a firm application of the antitrust laws, and a healthier condition resulted immediately. Now we are asked to restore that condition with the Presidential blessing; and that the intent is to make it possible to fix prices in that fashion is shown in the amendment we are considering at this moment, which provides that "whenever the President shall find that destructive wage or price cutting or other activities contrary to the policy of this title are being practiced", then he may put on this licensing system.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, does the Senator find anything to the effect that prices shall be fixed in relation to wages?

Mr. REED. No; but presumably there will be some such consideration. This benevolent dictator who will control our destinies must fix prices in regard to the new wage scale he is going to fix. He must fix prices so high that those wages can be paid. Otherwise the whole industry affected will dry up. Wages have to be paid out of the prices received, and the prices will have to be advanced according to the wages paid.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I do not want to interrupt the Senator any more, but if he will pardon me just one moment——

Mr. REED. Certainly.

Mr. LONG. I know the Senator has gone into this proposed law much deeper than I have. This is a point I thought of last night: We make lard in the country. That is a packing-house business. In the wintertime, when we are salting away the meat, this is the common course for millions of people in this country. There are possibly many here who know very little about it. We take what is refused from the meat, what we cannot pack down after we have salted it down, throw it into the washpot, and make lard. We take that lard out in liquid form. We may trade it around in the neighborhood, at 6 cents a pound, at 8 cents a pound, at 10 cents a pound, for just whatever we can get in trade, for sirup, potatoes, turnips, or anything else.

If the packing-house code or the meat-packing code prescribes a rule, every little woman in the South on a farm will either have an injunction over her head or be facing a criminal prosecution or find her license revoked, so that she will be practically forbidden from feeding her own children. That is the way I view this measure. I can see no other way in which to look at it. They cannot conform to a code.

Mr. REED. Of course, in actual practice such absurdities will not occur, probably——

Mr. LONG. Why will they not?

Mr. REED. But it would be a preposterous thing to pass a law which would make it possible for them to occur.

Mr. LONG. I do not see how they are to be avoided. Let us say that the packing industry is going to be one to be regulated. The dictator, whoever is appointed, comes along and puts 14 cents or 10 cents a pound on lard. In the country, in the seasonal time, when we are gathering up lard, he certainly could not get business out of our community, with us selling at 8 cents a pound, and with him selling at 14 cents. We could make it in that particular season to which I have referred for one third of what he could make it for.

Mr. REED. The Senator understands, of course, that all manufacturers of lard will be compelled to adopt the same system of accounting, so that this housewife to whom he refers will have to keep books and adopt the same method of accounting followed by Swift & Co.

Mr. LONG. Yes; she will have to keep records.

Mr. REED. And those books and those methods of accounting will all be prescribed by the President here in Washington.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, the Senator does not believe that any such program as is suggested will be put into effect?

Mr. REED. No; of course not.

Mr. WAGNER. Let us not get into the realm of amusement, because, after all, the Senator knows that will not be proposed.

Mr. REED. Just a moment. I have the floor. I want to answer that question, and then I will yield for another.

I do not think it will be applied in the case of the Louisiana housewife, but I do believe that it will be applied to many a little Louisiana concern in small country towns, which will not have any more idea of what is in these regulations which bind them than the man in the moon will have. The example of the housewife is perhaps an absurd illustration, but the little corner grocer in some Louisiana town of 500 people will find himself clearly within the code of fair competition that is put on to regulate the A. & P. Co.

Mr. WAGNER. It will be to his advantage; not to his disadvantage.

Mr. REED. That remains to be seen.

Mr. WAGNER. It is the small business man who has been seeking for a number of years in Congress just this type of legislation to protect him against the chain-store system.

Mr. REED. The effect of it remains to be seen.

Mr. WAGNER. Let me make just one suggestion, so that we may not go too far afield.

A suggestion was made that the price at which a particular commodity may be sold in the market would be fixed. The Senator was present during our discussions in the committee. No such thing is contemplated as the fixation of prices. All that will be provided is that there shall not be any sale at a price below the cost of production, and that may differ in different industries in different sections of the country.

That, everyone admits, is an unhealthy situation, where industries are permitted to indulge in rebates, discriminations, and selling below the cost of production in order to destroy some little business man in the community and, when he is wiped out, to restore the old price. It is that type of practice we are seeking to eliminate.

Mr. REED. I have admitted many times that the Senator's motives and purposes are highly commendable, but his methods are awful, and I am trying to point out just why they are.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President——

Mr. REED. Let me answer the price-cutting point first. In this first amendment, brought by General Johnson from President Roosevelt, is found the statement that when the President finds destructive price cutting—in other words, when the President finds that prices are being cut below the point below which he thinks they ought not to go—then he claps on the licensing system. At the point which the President finds is a proper price point the industry must sell or else be refused a license. Is not that price fixation?

Mr. WAGNER. Price fixation? No. It is simply providing that the article shall not be sold at a price below the cost of production, which everybody concedes is what ought to be the rule.

Mr. REED. That is price fixing, is it not?

Mr. WAGNER. The ruthless and predatory practices of large business to destroy small business are the things we want to guard against now. Sooner or later it will be understood by Senators that this is a bill to protect the small business man against the predatory practices of large business.

Mr. REED. This is a bill to protect the small business man, but it is the big business man who has been urging me to support it, and I know why he does——

Mr. WAGNER. And so have the labor organizations.

Mr. REED. Will not the Senator permit me to finish the sentence?

Mr. WAGNER. They have asked us to support it.

Mr. REED. It is quite impossible to debate with the Senator if he is going to interrupt me in the midst of every sentence.

Mr. WAGNER. I beg the Senator's pardon. I shall not interrupt the Senator again.

Mr. REED. I am quite willing to yield to the Senator, but I would like to be able to complete the statement of a thought occasionally.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President——

Mr. REED. Just a moment. I have been approached by such concerns as big steel manufacturing companies, saying that they have thought it over, and, in spite of all the theoretical disadvantages which I have been urging, they think it is going to be a good thing for the industry. They have just one thing in mind, and that is what Mr. Harriman said when he let the cat out of the bag, that this is a repeal of the antitrust laws, and when a man comes and asks my support of this bill with no more creditable motive than that, I am not going to follow his advice.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, has the Senator been requested by labor organizations to support the bill?

Mr. REED. Yes, indeed.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I am very much interested in the Senator's statement that, in his judgment, this bill provides for price fixing.

Mr. REED. Clearly it does.

Mr. BLACK. I am very much interested in that, for this reason. Frankly, it is my judgment that if we take control of an industry and do not at the same time place a reasonable limitation upon profits, so that the unfair proportion which has been going to capital cannot be further diverted from labor, we are going to accomplish very little. My own idea is that if we simply raise wages, and at the same time permit a corresponding rise in the prices of commodities, then the public will have the disadvantage, the consumer will be the one who will be hurt. I am therefore interested to know whether the Senator is of the opinion, not perhaps for the reason which the Senator is discussing, that under this measure somebody will have the right to see that, when the wages of labor are raised so that labor will get a reasonable proportion of its own products, unfair profits shall not be tolerated?

Mr. REED. Clearly I think that is true.

Mr. BLACK. The Senator thinks that is in the bill?

Mr. REED. Prices can be fixed up or they can be fixed down.

Mr. CLARK. As a matter of fact, the whole theory of the bill is based on price fixing to the extent where the committee, by an overwhelming vote, inserted a provision enabling the administrator, or the President, when prices are jacked up by this artificial system, to impose embargoes absolutely closing the American market to any foreign product.

Mr. REED. That is true.

Mr. CLARK. And that falls under the price-fixing feature of the bill.

Mr. REED. Yes. The whole intent of the bill is to raise the cost of production in the United States. When that happens, we have absolutely handed the market to the foreigner, because we cannot compel him to raise his costs in the same way. Consequently, it is only logical that the embargo power is proposed to be given to the President.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. BLACK. The Senator, then, is of the opinion if this bill shall pass—and I am very much interested in his opinion, having studied the bill—that those who are intrusted with this power will have the authority to protect the public from unfair profits, if there are unfair profits; and the Senator is of the opinion that it would not necessarily follow if all the powers under this bill were used that the price of labor would be raised and that the price of the commodity would be raised in proportion, so that the balance between the two would not be disturbed at all.

Mr. REED. I have not one particle of doubt but that the price will be raised at the same time that wages are raised.

Mr. BLACK. Did I make my question clear?

Mr. REED. The Senator is concerned about prices being held down; he wants them to be held down to prevent undue profits.

Mr. BLACK. In other words, if we are going to protect the whole public, I think the Senator will agree, if we take complete charge and protect the whole public, that it would be absolutely essential and necessary that the public be protected from unfair prices if we do away with the competitive system of regulating prices.

Mr. REED. Quite so. Now let us see how it will work in actual practice. The President, with all these powers loaded onto him, and all these additional duties put upon him, will be the busiest man in the world; it will be humanly impossible for him or for General Johnson or for the higher officials who will manage the machinery we are setting up, to have any personal acquaintance whatsoever with the vast majority of questions that will come up. The President may perfunctorily sign papers from time to time, but the actual decision must necessarily be made by people to whom the power has been deputed by the officials to whom the President has first deputed it. I think that is self-evident. The actual working of such dictatorial powers appears to be pretty well illustrated by the purchase of the camp kits about which we have heard a good deal of late. The President's signature is on the letter suggesting that the kits be bought, but nobody thinks that the President had any interest in that matter or exercised any discretion or judgment about it. He merely relied upon his subordinates, who said, "This is the thing to do." So, in the very simple matter of purchasing camp kits, the United States Government appears to have paid nearly twice as much as they could have been bought for in the open market. No effort whatever was made to protect the public by obtaining a reasonable price. A slick salesman found his price accepted as soon as he quoted it, with no effort to contrast it with the prices of anybody else, and no effort made to beat him down. If the Government cannot buy camp kits without "putting its foot in it" like that, how is it going to administer all the industry of the United States, as it will have to do under this bill?

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. Let me finish this thought, and then I will be glad to yield. When the administration comes to pick the man who is going to regulate the textile industry, let us say, it will either have to select a greenhorn who knows nothing about it or it will have to pick a man out of that industry. It is probable it will not pick the greenhorn; it will take too long to educate him. So the administration will get a man out of the textile industry; and he will be the man who, in the last analysis, will decide what is a fair price. I do not believe that I want to give dictatorial power to a man in any industry to decide what is a fair price for the product of that industry.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. Yes.

Mr. CLARK. The Senator will recall that before the Finance Committee the proposed administrator of this act mentioned several of the prospective members of his industrial board. I do not desire in any way to reflect upon any of them, because they are all eminent industrialists, but he mentioned, among others, the head of the General Motors Corporation, the head of the International Harvester Co., the heads of the largest companies in several different industries, as the men upon whom he proposed to rely in administering this act. In other words, it seems to me to be absolutely foolish to talk about protecting the little fellow when we are turning him over by this very act, by the express prediction of the administrator of the act, to the head of the largest concern in each industry.

Mr. REED. Precisely. Take the prices for oil products. I understand from the newspapers that Mr. Teagle, the president of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, is expected to come down here and administer the oil industry. I do not believe I want to pay for gasoline the price which Mr. Teagle says he thinks is a fair price, all things considered. He would probably attempt honestly to fix a fair price; but his education, his experience, his self-interest, everything, would lead him to err on the high side when it comes to fixing the price of gasoline.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President——

Mr. REED. I yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. WAGNER. I do not suppose the Senator overlooks the fact that when we passed the so-called "farm bill" we placed therein a license provision which covers today about 40 percent of the industries of the country. Therefore, so far as 40 percent of the industries are concerned, they are already under a licensing provision which may or may not be imposed, just as this bill imposes it.

Mr. REED. I fought that just as hard as I could; it was just as wrong to put it there as it is wrong to put it here.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. Yes.

Mr. BYRNES. The Senator does not want to create the impression that the prospective administrator of this act stated to the committee that the administration of the oil industry would be turned entirely over to Mr. Teagle?

Mr. REED. No; I saw that in the newspapers; I am not ascribing that statement to General Johnson. Whether it is a correct statement or not, I do not know, and I do not care; but it illustrates the point that you cannot take a man whose life has been spent in a particular business, trying to get as high price as he can, without firmly planting in that man's mind the idea that 1929 prices were, after all, about fair.

Mr. BYRNES. Yes; but that is predicated upon the accuracy of the newspaper statement. The Senator says that he saw the statement in the newspapers. If it be true that Mr. Teagle is to be put in absolute control, then the conclusion which the Senator draws follows; but if it be not true, there is no weight to the conclusion.

Mr. REED. I am merely using it as an illustration; I am not finding fault with it. The Senator did not hear what I said at the beginning. I said that in picking the administrators for various industries the administration has two alternatives—one is to pick a man outside the business, who presumably has neither interest in it nor knowledge of it—and, of course, the administration will not do that—and the other is to pick a man from within the business, and in that way we would get a man habituated to regard high prices as only fair to the producers engaged in that industry.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield further to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. BYRNES. Without having anything to do with the decision or without having heard a discussion of it, I can conceive of a situation where, as administrator, I might call in one versed in the industry, and I might call in the representatives of labor, and then I might call in one representing the public, as an advisory committee, and secure information and advice from that committee, upon which advice I would thereafter act; but not that I would call in one charged with the responsibility of carrying on a private industry today and turn over to him absolutely the enforcement of the act.

Mr. REED. That is the way it will work, just the same.

Mr. BYRNES. The Senator says that is the way it will work, not because of any statement that has been made either by the proponents of the bill or by those who are said to have been selected by the administration. That is his own opinion.

Mr. REED. And it is based on experience. We were told how things were to be done so beautifully in connection with the so-called "conservation camps", but the very first thing that comes to light is a piece of most incredible stupidity on the part of the man who was put in charge of the expenditure of the $300,000,000. One would think that a child would know better than to have made the contract that he made for those kits. That is the way this is going to work under the vast powers to be delegated, for no human being is wise enough or farsighted enough to exercise them successfully.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, may I submit a further inquiry to the Senator?

Mr. REED. I gladly yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I want to refer to the menace of split codes, which, it seems to me, has within it a complete defeat of the very objects to which the Senator from New York says this measure is dedicated. If we are going to have one code in one section of the country and a different code in another section of the country in the same industry, manifestly we are going to have different costs of production legalized in the two competing areas, and manifestly we are going to have different sales prices as the result. All of those commodities come into the same sales market; they cease to be separate when they reach the ultimate market; and, as I understand the Senator's analysis, the manufacturer in the area with the higher code price entering the common market to sell against the manufacturers in the lower code-price area goes to jail if he meets the price of the manufacturer in the lower-code area.

Mr. REED. That is exactly correct.

Mr. VANDENBERG. And if he does not go to jail, he goes out of business, because he cannot sell his product.

Mr. REED. Or both.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Or both.

Mr. REED. Yes.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. It seems to me that the process might work in directly the opposite way. For instance, in the last 25 or 30 years the State of Missouri has taken a great deal of the business of manufacturing shoes away from Massachusetts and other New England States. We were able to do that because the cost of living was cheaper in Missouri than it was in New England. The International Shoe Co., to use an example, the largest unit in the shoe-manufacturing business in the whole world, has some 60 plants in Missouri, located not in St. Louis but in small towns in agricultural sections of Missouri, where the cost of living is cheap; and in certain classes of shoes they have absolutely been able to take the trade away from New England, where the wage scale is higher because the cost of living is higher.

When they come to form one of these associations, to make one of these codes, while the bulk of the shoe trade is in Missouri or the Middle West numerically, in point of number of factories there is a great preponderance in New England and the East. So when they meet to form an association, with 1,300 factories in New England and 300 factories in the Middle West, they may make a code jacking up the wage scale so high to meet New England conditions that the great shoe manufacturers in the Middle West will be absolutely forced out of business, in spite of the fact that a concern like the International Shoe Co. has never had any trouble with its employees, has never had a strike in its entire history, has never laid off anybody even during the depression, and has maintained its wages during the depression, and in spite of the fact that the factories of the International Shoe Co. have been absolute lifesavers to some Missouri communities. But when they get into one of these associations, with the preponderance of votes coming from a number of separate concerns located in New England, it seems to me that the process may work exactly in the opposite way to that suggested by the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. REED. Under those circumstances is it not just ordinary human nature to find the New England manufacturers using these powers to jack up the wages in Missouri so as to make competition more easy?

Mr. CLARK. It seems to me that they would be more than human if they did not use the power in this act to do that.

Mr. REED. With much beating of breasts and saying they are trying to improve working conditions in Missouri, and all that, in the long run they will have their way and the natural competition which existed will be distorted by governmental action.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President——

Mr. REED. I yield to the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Then the net result of the example used by the able Senator from Missouri and of our joint philosophy in respect to the situation is that if they have one code in the shoe business it will ruin Missouri, and if they have two codes it will ruin New England.

Mr. REED. That is right.

Mr. VANDENBERG. In either event somebody is ruined.

Mr. REED. Yes.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. I suppose the conclusion is that after they both provide for a decent living wage the industry is to be ruined. That is the only conclusion I can reach from the statement just made by the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I do not like the argument in personae that we have had so often expressed that anybody who opposes this bill is in favor of low wages and long hours and sweatshops. I hope I am not unfair when I say that there is no place in the United States where there are so many sweatshops, where people are worked under more horrible conditions, than in the city of New York.

Mr. WAGNER. I am not sure whether the Senator is right or wrong; but if he is right, I want legislation of this kind to eliminate such conditions, and that can only be done on a national scale and through Federal authority.

Mr. REED. The State of New York has far more power under our Constitution to regulate working conditions than has the Federal Government, and it seems to me that it ought to put its house in order before it comes here to ask for this kind of power.

Mr. President, I beg the Senate to bear in mind that this licensing scheme is to impose an additional punishment. It is said it is the life of the bill. It is not anything of the sort, because in other sections it is made a crime to vary from the code. The licensing section makes the President not only the author of the law but the judge of its violations and authorizes him in his uncontrolled discretion to give capital punishment to any industry by refusing it a license. I say it is un-American, it conflicts with the most essential concepts of justice, and it ought not by any means to be passed.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] and the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr.

REED] have had so little experience in rural sections that naturally they do not understand the practical application of the bill in rural communities and in small towns, no more probably than I would understand it in its relation to cities had I not lived there the greater part of my lifetime. The bill is not to be thought of only as affecting industries that are organized. In other words, it is not to be thought of only as regulating the employers of men and women. I want to call the attention of the Senators from Pennsylvania and New York, if they will give me just a moment, to the broad aspects of the little man.

I want to preface my statement by saying that there is no one in the Senate who has a record better than mine for having stood for the laboring men in every walk of life. As a lawyer, I never took a lawsuit against a laboring man. I have never voted against a workingman's laws in my life. I am fighting now to keep from enslaving the laboring people and the people who have to work for a living. The big men will wiggle out of this some way. The steel plant and the shoe factory will get together somewhere down the line and make common porridge out of it somehow and in some way. But the little man cannot do it. We are living from hand to mouth in the country. When I saw this depression coming on, I wrote an article for a newspaper that I was publishing at the time, which I headed "Let's swap. Let's forget about making money, and let's swap."

Mr. President, I ask that the Senate be in order. If Senators do not want to listen to me, I do not care; but I do want order while I am talking.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. LONG. The Senators from Pennsylvania and New York could not conceive of the bill being anything but a requirement that every woman who is making a little lard in her backyard shall be under the regulation of the provisions of the bill; but in carrying out the bill, if it is going to do any good at all, that identical thing will have to be done. That is one of the regulations that will have to be made. For instance, we are going to have a set of some kind of fair prices for the packing-house products, for meat and lard, for sausage, and anything else that is made by them. I have seen the time when in my own family we made washpot after washpot of lard and peddled it out over the community and destroyed any such thing as a market for lard in that community perhaps for as long as 5 or 6 months. There was so much home-made lard in the community that was swapped around for 6 or 7 or 8 cents a pound that there was no such thing as a market because the store could not buy from the packing house and compete with the home-made product.

If the bill is to avail anything, as the Senator from New York thinks it will, certainly we are not going to say we are to have prices fixed for packing-house products and at the same time have ten or twelve million country people selling those products below the fixed prices. If the bill does avail to that extent, then we will have an injunction and a revocation of license issued against every man engaged in his own little home-made industry of making lard in his backyard at hog-killing time in the South.

Do not think this is so insignificant, because among the industries we will have to deal with will be the packing-house industry, and the rules and regulations that will necessarily be prescribed will have to be applied to the millions of people living on the farms and in the rural communities of the South and West and, I suppose, of the North and East.

That is not all. Let me cite another industry. We come to the railroad industry and we get down to the matter of steel and cross ties. I want to call attention to the fact, gentlemen of the Senate, that it costs just as much to buy crossties for a railroad as it does to buy steel for the railroad. That is just as important an industry as anything else. Necessarily when we regulate the steel industry we will regulate the tie industry. We are going to get that regulation down to the point that every little man who takes his water jug and ax across his back and goes into the woods to hack crossties is going to have to comply with some rules and regulations and stand ready to have his license revoked for not complying with the rules and regulations that are issued governing the length and width and breadth and thickness and quality of crossties. That is just a fair sample of what the dictatorial measure here contemplated is going to do.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. Has the Senator been able to find anything in the bill anywhere giving a definition of the term "industry"?

Mr. LONG. No; I have not.

Mr. CLARK. I am frank to say I have read the bill a number of times. I questioned the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] in his appearance before the committee as to whether there was anywhere in the bill a definition of "industry", and was told in effect that it was up to the President to decide.

Mr. LONG. Not only that, not only is there no definition of what is industry but I should like to know what is the conference that adopts the code. Where have they defined what the conference is or how the conference is to be called?

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. WAGNER. In reply to the suggestion of the Senator from Missouri, I wish to say that I did not say it was up to the President to decide. What is industry is a matter of common knowledge, and the definition of it is never provided in any act, of course. What constitutes industry is a matter of common knowledge.

Mr. CLARK. As a matter of fact, the term "industry" is used in many different ways. Many people do not consider farming an industry, while others of us do.

Mr. LONG. Hacking ties is an industry.

Mr. CLARK. The work of a seaman is perhaps not considered an industry, and yet we constantly speak of the maritime industry. The term is generally used and diversely used, and is used in such loose ways that the bill as before us would seem to leave it up to the administrator of the provisions of the bill to determine to what businesses he desires to apply the term.

Mr. WAGNER. The Senator knows that in the act itself agriculture is specifically excluded.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Louisiana yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. WHEELER. I was a little surprised at the statement made by the Senator from New York. First of all, let me say that I am going to vote for the bill, but I was a little surprised at the statement made by him, because he says this will permit industries to get cost of production. Did not the Senator say that?

Mr. WAGNER. It is a provision similar to the provision for which the Senator contended so hard in the Farm Relief Act.

Mr. WHEELER. It should be remembered that when it come to the farm relief bill the Senator from New York voted against cost of production for the farmers, while the Senator from Louisiana and several of us were fighting for cost of production for the farmers. The Senator from New York was opposed to cost of production for the farmer.

Mr. LONG. So was the President.

Mr. WHEELER. So were most of the other Senators from the East who represent the industrial States. They say we must not give the farmer cost of production, because if we do that will bring about overproduction and will burden our industries, and now in less than 2 weeks' time those same Senators are here insisting upon cost of production for the manufacturers of the country.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. LONG. Certainly.

Mr. CLARK. The Senator will recall that those of us at that time who voted for cost of production for the farming industry, so to speak, were denounced through the public press and elsewhere as mutineers, Bolsheviks, and by other opprobrious terms.

Mr. WHEELER. We were ridiculed by the press from one end of the country to the other because we wanted to give the farmer cost of production. It was said it could not be done. Now it is desired to give the manufacturer cost of production. I favor giving him cost of production, but I want also to give the farmer cost of production, because he is as much entitled to it.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator admit me into his camp?

Mr. WHEELER. I am delighted to do so, but the Senator is getting in pretty late, after the farm bill has passed.

Mr. WAGNER. The Senator knows I voted for the farm bill.

Mr. WHEELER. Oh, yes; but the Senator did not want to give the farmer the pre-war prices back to 1913, fixing farm commodities on a parity with prices prior to the war. But when we come to the manufacturer, the Senator does not want to go back to pre-war days, but wants to bring them up to 1926, 1927, 1928, and 1929, just as others of us were contending should be done for the farmer.

Mr. LONG. Not only that, but the President's Cabinet officer sent a message to the Senate in which he showed that the cost of raising those products at one place was different from the cost of raising them in another place. The Senate finally struck out the cost-of-production theory for the farmers, and the Senator from New York was one of the able men who helped to do it.

I voted for a stable price for farm products. I am on record here, and I have a record I do not have to defend. I ought to be the priest who is to pass upon whether or not the Senator from New York should get in on this line, if anyone has to approve his application.

I have never voted against a labor law in my life. I have stood up for labor under the charges of impeachment. I never in my life as a lawyer took a lawsuit against a laboring man. Never in my life did I ever take a lawsuit against a poor man in any court. To come here now and hear somebody pleading that we are going to put little administrators and custodians in charge of these matters, who will have the right to revoke the license of a tie hacker to make a living, or a poor little woman to make lard in her back yard, and enable those administrators and custodians to say they cannot even make lye hominy in the springtime without having their license revoked—to come here and talk about giving a living wage, to hear those who have sat here with the blood of Cain on their hands trying to keep the farmer from having his cost of production and trying to annul the antitrust laws and place this country under a tyranny and under a despotism on the ground that they are giving labor something—to a man who has been in that fight as long as I have and who has had only one side to vote on, I know too well what this thing means.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MCKELLAR in the chair). Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from West Virginia?

Mr. LONG. Yes, sir.

Mr. HATFIELD. In other words, the Senator is impressed with the feeling and knowledge that this bill will not help labor.

Mr. LONG. It will ruin labor.

Mr. HATFIELD. It will nationalize labor. It will destroy the idea of collective bargaining. Is not that true?

Mr. LONG. Yes; and when the bill was first introduced, the Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL] informs me, there was not a word about labor in this infamous thing. They went and fixed that up a little bit later on. They did not have labor in the bill when they first introduced this monstrosity. They finally found out that they had to put some cinnamon on one side and some jelly on the other to make the Congress of the United States swallow this thing that has been brought in here.

Mr. HATFIELD and Mr. WAGNER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator yield further; and if so, to whom?

Mr. LONG. I yield first to the Senator from West Virginia. Then I shall be glad to yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. HATFIELD. In other words, the Senator from Louisiana takes the position that this bill has for its purpose the destruction of competition.

Mr. LONG. Yes, sir. That is its chief purpose—the repeal of the antitrust laws.

Mr. HATFIELD. The regulation of the sale of commodities upon a parity price.

Mr. LONG. Yes, sir.

Mr. HATFIELD. Which will result in the consumer paying the bill.

Mr. LONG. Not only the consumer; that will be one result. It will result in—I beg the Senator's pardon. I yield to the Senator from New York; then I will answer the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I always hesitate to interrupt the Senator from Louisiana, but I do not like to have misstatements stay in the RECORD.

The Senator says that when this bill was originally introduced it did not have any provision in it to take care of labor. I introduced the bill originally, and the provisions for collective bargaining and for outlawing the "yellow dog" contract were in the bill from the very beginning; and the representatives of organized labor, beginning with Mr. Green, the president of the American Federation of Labor, appeared before the House committee strongly advocating the bill because of those provisions. Let the RECORD be clear upon that subject.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from New York if it is necessary to repeal all the antitrust statutes and set up an industrial dictatorship in order to guarantee the right of collective bargaining and outlaw the "yellow dog" contract. Is there any logical connection on earth between them?

Mr. LONG. Well, it is this kind of a case—that if we are going to allow you to drink spring water you will have to put a rope around your neck before we will let you have the water. That is what this means. Apparently, as the Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL] informs me, there have been some amendments made to give labor a great deal more mention.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President——

Mr. LONG. I yield to the Senator from Florida.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I made that statement because, as I understand, the bill was not satisfactory to labor, and the Senate committee has written into the bill certain amendments that were requested by labor for the purpose of making labor secure. So I say that in its origin the bill was not satisfactory to labor; and it did not attempt, in its primary purpose and object, to protect labor. While, of course, there was something about the question of protecting them in collective bargaining, they have that right today. They already have that right.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, may I correct the Senator from Florida?

Mr. LONG. Yes, sir.

Mr. WAGNER. The Senate committee made no amendments which were requested by the representatives of labor. An amendment was offered to the bill which was not requested by the representatives of labor and which they do not approve now.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. Yes, sir; I yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. FESS. I have been urged, both by labor and by business—especially big business—to support this measure.

Mr. LONG. Yes; the big business people know what they are talking about.

Mr. FESS. Business seems to be inspired in the hope that it will get rid of the antitrust laws. The antitrust laws forbid any agreements to limit trade or limit production or to increase prices. That is what business wants to get rid of; and we are told that the philosophy of this bill is limited to the producer—that is, to the manufacturer—that it does not extend to the retailer. I have read the bill through and through; and it seems to me that it extends to all kinds of business—not simply to a producer or manufacturer, but to every kind of business, including retailers. If I am mistaken, I should like to have that fact pointed out.

Mr. LONG. It extends, may I say, to every laboring man. Every man is engaged in industry. The man who hacks ties, the man who saws and splits wood, is engaged in industry. There is not any limitation on the matter.

Mr. FESS. I think not.

Mr. LONG. From the interpretation of the bill and its enforcement there can be no exceptions, because there may not be more than one man involved, but he can can peaches. He can can tomatoes. He can can corn. He is in the canning industry. It does not take more than one man to run some kind of a canning factory, if he wants to do it. Every man comes under this bill. In order to hew wood or to draw water you have to get a license, and you have to behave, and I almost said you have to vote right, or you are liable not to have any license.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. LONG. I yield to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. BORAH. In connection with the matter to which the Senator from Ohio has referred—that is, the interest of large business in this bill by reason of what it does to the Sherman antitrust law—may I quote a paragraph from an editorial in the New York Times discussing the interest which large business seems to have in this bill? It says:

> Quietly tucked away in the bill is a clause which gives the great manufacturing corporations what they have long striven for yet failed to obtain, so far as domestic trade is concerned.

And then it quotes section 5.

> This is plainly a charter of freedom from hampering restrictions. It is the way which captains of American industry have long sought and mourned because they found it not. Now, if the bill becomes law, it will be open to them for at least 2 years and 60 days thereafter. Already various trade associations are hailing it as a satisfactory makeweight against the other provisions of the recovery bill over which they hesitate.

Of course, Mr. President, large business interests understand perfectly that this is the end of the Sherman antitrust law.

Mr. LONG. Oh, yes; there is no doubt about it.

Mr. BORAH. And that is the reason why they are supporting it. They are not particularly interested in the other portions of the bill. They can endure those for a time if they can be rid of the law which they have been fighting for the last 25 years.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. CLARK. As a matter of fact, the effect of section 5 of this bill is to reverse what has been the policy of the United States for almost 50 years. Since the passage of the Sherman Antitrust Act it has been a crime in this country to indulge in price fixing. Under the terms of this bill it becomes a crime not to indulge in price fixing, punishable by penalties set out in the bill.

Mr. LONG. Exactly.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, you cannot fix the price of labor unless you fix the price of the commodity which you are selling. That is a certainty; and what is being done here is to make it a crime for anyone not to join in the combine for the purpose of fixing prices.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President——

Mr. LONG. I yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. FESS. I desire to ask the Senator from Idaho a question, if the Senator from Louisiana will permit me.

In view of the fact that only yesterday it was urged upon me by a very intelligent man that the operation of the bill is limited to the producer, and has not anything to do with the man who is dealing in articles produced, like a retailer, I should like to know whether the Senator agrees, after having studied the bill, that it does not extend to anyone except the producer?

Mr. BORAH. Oh, no! I do not understand that the authors of the bill contend that that is the case.

Mr. FESS. But it includes the retailer just the same.

Mr. BORAH. Exactly.

Mr. LONG. Everything—the producer. You cannot limit it.

Mr. BORAH. It includes almost every form of activity upon this mundane sphere.

Mr. FESS. That was my impression.

Mr. LONG. That is what it does.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President——

Mr. LONG. I yield to the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. TYDINGS. It is my understanding that the net result of this bill, from the consumer's standpoint, would be to increase the cost of the article produced. We are in the midst of a depression now; and the aim of everyone is to increase the consumption of articles produced in the United States. It occurred to me that if you should increase the cost of an article to the consumer you would decrease the volume of consumption.

Mr. LONG. Of course.

Mr. TYDINGS. And in the end it seemed to me that you would employ less people than you would employ if the article sold with a reasonable degree of cheapness.

So from the standpoint of employing labor, while it is true that some of the provisions of the bill will perhaps be beneficial to labor—namely, the elimination of bad practices—in the end we must not lose sight of the fact that it is not an unmixed advantage, because the price of the article will be increased, and, therefore, the consumption of the article will be diminished, and a certain amount of labor will of necessity be eliminated.

Mr. LONG. I agree with the Senator absolutely.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President——

Mr. LONG. I yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. CLARK. I simply wish to direct the attention of the Senator from Maryland, in line with what he is saying, to the fact that at the very moment when the United States is going into a world-wide economic conference in the hope of improving economic conditions throughout the world by trade agreements we are about to enact here a bill authorizing the imposition of 100-percent embargoes—a slap in the face of every other nation in the world.

I may say further that while I am absolutely opposed to embargoes, and therefore would vote against this bill for that reason, if for no other, if we once emasculate the antitrust laws and authorize the jacking-up of prices through these monopolistic agreements, the imposition of embargoes is simply the next logical step.

Mr. LONG. I want to say, Mr. President, in line with what has just been said by the Senator from Maryland, and also what the Senator from Ohio brings out, that when you start this thing there is no end to it. The trouble today is the matter of consumption. The people cannot get the things they want to eat, and therefore the meat is going to waste on the shelf of the farmer, because he has not any place where he can sell it, because he has no one to buy it; and the only way he is getting along now is because he is able to swap his meat with the neighbor of the community, maybe for corn, or for sirup, or for meal, or something else.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield to the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. TYDINGS. Would the Senator be opposed to this bill if the antitrust provisions now contained in the law were safeguarded in this bill, and the provisions which seek to eliminate sweatshop practices were retained in the bill?

Mr. LONG. I should be glad to support any bill accomplishing those purposes.

Mr. TYDINGS. In other words, the Senator is not opposed to the desire of the administration and the sponsors of the bill to give to labor a better chance in certain professions or businesses.

Mr. LONG. Oh, no!

Mr. TYDINGS. But what the Senator does not want to do, as I take it, is to go beyond that point——

Mr. LONG. That is it.

Mr. TYDINGS. And permit, perhaps, price fixing under the disguise of benefits to labor.

Mr. LONG. The Senator is not only right as to that, not only is that my idea, but I look upon this as not being a bill for labor. It is the greatest antilabor bill with which I have ever been faced in my experience in State and National legislation.

I have voted for every labor bill that has ever been written here. I voted for the 30-hour law, and fought for it through the committee. When the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK] came to me and said, "We are going to vote on the 30-hour bill," I said, "Well, you know how I am." He said, "I am not worried about you. We know how you are, anyway." They have always known how I stood here for labor legislation. Not only did I stand that way as Governor of my State, Mr. President; not only did I stand that way on the public-service commission for 10 years in my State, but I stood that way as a practitioner before the courts.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. Yes, sir; I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. I have no authority to quote one of the authors of the bill. He is very able to speak for himself. In conversation with him, however, I understand that his purpose is not to permit price fixing and not to permit monopolies to grow; and it occurred to me that perhaps those on both sides of this question might find themselves in agreement if an amendment were inserted in the bill which would state definitely that price fixing and the growth of monopolies were not contemplated in any waiver of the antitrust laws.

Mr. LONG. That will be fine; and I will ask only one thing further. I will ask that the Senator put in, further, that the President has not the power to revoke a laboring man's right to go ahead and pursue his vocation. Do that, and I am willing to go through with the measure.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, in response to what the Senator from Maryland has said, I may say that it is my purpose to offer an amendment to that effect by striking out section 5.

Mr. LONG. That is only part of what it will be necessary to strike out.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. LONG. I yield to the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. TYDINGS. There is one other provision there as to which I do not know whether it could be handled or not; but, as I understand, the law permits the increase of tariffs to take care of any increase in the cost of production. Of course, a pretty good case can be made out for that provision, but certainly it ought not to be so rigid that if we do have any world accord on the revival of international trade it will act as a bar.

Mr. WAGNER. There is not any bar.

Mr. LONG. It allows embargoes with a 100-percent tax.

Mr. WAGNER. That really is not any different than the power the President now has under the tariff act. He can impose an embargo now, under the tariff act, if there is evidence of unfair competition. He can declare an embargo.

Mr. CLARK. Does the Senator mean under the antidumping clause?

Mr. WAGNER. Yes. It is in almost the identical language that appears in this bill. That is now the law. I think this is a sort of reiteration of the law as it is today, not giving any adidtional power.

Let me say to the Senator from Louisiana and the Senator from Maryland, if the Senator will be kind enough to yield——

Mr. LONG. Yes, sir.

Mr. WAGNER. If the Senator will read from section 3 of the bill, he will see that it provides the conditions which the President must find before he approves the code. One is, "that such code or codes are not designed to promote monopolies or to eliminate or oppress small enterprises and will not operate to discriminate against them, and will tend to effectuate the policy of this title." That is a very clear definition.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I think the Senator from New York is attempting to meet a great deal of the criticism which has been directed against this proposal, but, as I see it, the Senator from New York relies upon the President using discretion, while the opponents want the provision definitely written into the law, so that it will not be a matter of anybody's discretion. If the Senator really wants to accomplish that, and will use words to carry it out definitely, rather than leave it up to the President, it seems to me that both sides would be in accord on that provision.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, how can we provide against monopoly in any other way except as we have provided here? We say that the President must find that the code is not designed to promote monopolies. We may put it that the code shall provide against the creation of a monopoly. That is the same thing.

Mr. BORAH. No; Mr. President, if we put into the law a specific declaration that the code shall not result in monopoly or monopolistic practices, then the man who complains may go into court.

Mr. WAGNER. Very well; I am quite willing to amend the bill so as to provide just that. That is what is intended, and if other language is better than the language used here, I am quite willing to adopt the other language. It is intended here to insure against the creation of any monopoly.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, the Senator sees what I have in view.

Mr. WAGNER. Certainly.

Mr. BORAH. It will be a fact that we will have a law, then, and from that law any citizen may appeal who is dissatisfied with the code, and the question may be tested in the courts of the country. I hope the Senator will consent to that amendment.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, there are about 3 or 4 amendments to be offered.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. I dislike to interrupt the Senator, but there are some things I want to clear up.

I have reiterated on the floor two or three times, and it was stated any number of times in the committee that it is not contemplated that prices shall be fixed, because the fixation of prices is not in conformity with the preservation of fair competition. I made that as clear as I could and still there is constant reiteration. I do not think we ought to set up a straw man here and then knock him down.

Mr. BORAH. I think the reiteration arises out of the fact that it is difficult for some of us to see how we are to control the question of wages without controlling the question of prices.

Mr. WAGNER. We can provide that the sales shall not be at prices below the cost of production, but as to what that cost of production is depends on the efficiency of each particular plant, and we cannot have one fixed price.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. President, I want to ask the Senator from New York a question.

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. HASTINGS. I want to find out whether there is anything in the bill which would prevent the fixing of prices.

Mr. WAGNER. Yes; because we are providing a code of fair competition and providing for practices of fair competition, and against practices which bring about unfair competition. That is also well known in the law. The Senator from Idaho yesterday was anxious to have that specifically defined. We do not define it in the antitrust laws. We do not define it in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

We simply use the words "unfair competition." We do not define it in the Tariff Commission Act.

Mr. HASTINGS. Is there any objection to writing in a statement that fair competition shall not include an agreement with respect to prices?

Mr. WAGNER. I have no objection to that.

Mr. LONG. Now, I want to proceed just a moment. I have yielded, and I will yield again in just a moment.

Mr. WAGNER. I do want the codes to provide, which every fair-competition code should provide, that there shall be no selling at prices below the cost of production.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, a suggestion is made by the Senator from Maryland, and the Senator from New York states that he is willing to amend in that regard. A suggestion is made by the Senator from Idaho, and the Senator from New York says that may go into the bill, and the same thing as to a suggestion made by the Senator from Delaware. At least, we have done some good since I have been talking, if those three amendments are to be agreed to, and I believe we can go a little further toward Utopia in this matter. I am glad to see that much already conceded, and I hope we will have amendments to carry out those suggestions at the proper time.

I was saying, when I was interrupted, that I am not unaware of the fact that labor organizations and the members of labor organizations have been persuaded to come in and support this bill. They have been brought in by the big industries, which are trying to get rid of the antitrust laws. They are not going to be hurt for a year or two by any agreement they make with labor, they no doubt feel, but this is what it means, and in saying this I want to go just a little farther:

I had stated, when I was requested to yield to the Senator from New York, that in the record which I have tried to build up, standing as a friend of labor, I have seen the time when every State organization of organized labor fought me in my political campaigns. I have seen the president of the federation of labor of my State, I have seen the officers of every important organization, against me. Yet I have gone into the wards and into the precincts and polled as high as 95 percent of the votes of the laboring people, with every man at the head of the organization opposing my candidacy. Today the laboring people of this country, I think, give me a record of 100 percent perfect as having stood for labor legislation, notwithstanding the fact that I have had to fly in their teeth at times when they would have allowed themselves to yield, and to have been bartered away, on principles that were too dear to the people generally.

In this instance my good friend from New York is sitting in the other man's game; he is sitting in a game he does not know anything about. He has been fighting for labor all his life and for social legislation to upbuild the common man, and he has known how to do it when he has had his pen in his hand. When he sits in the game where they are designing some legislation, with this crowd across the mahogany table who have been working around here trying to get rid of the antitrust laws, he, like one of our conferees over in Europe, will never in the world be able to come out of it with anything for labor.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I assure the Senator, because I notice his interest in my welfare, that so far as my contribution to such legislation is concerned, it is not an overnight thought. I have been thinking of it for years. I do not think we will ever have industry in order until we have nationally planned economy, and this is the first step toward it. It is not a recent conversion at all.

Mr. LONG. I know it is not a recent conversion. I have knowledge of the perfect record the Senator has, and I am going to help keep it perfect. If the Senator will listen to me long enough today, he is not going to indicate his willingness to accept just those amendments of which he has already indicated his approval, but he is going to indicate that he will be willing to accept more. Probably I will indicate some change as I go along.

There is no question but that the Senator from New York has started toward a reform by going backwards. In other words, he has started out to promote fair competition by annulling the antitrust laws. That is what my friend has done.

The Senator from New York says here that we have to have something to stop the unfair practices by which the big are gobbling up the little. That is what we have to do, Mr. President. That is what he said here yesterday, and that is what the Senator from Idaho said. How are we going to do it? Is the first thing to do to repeal the antitrust laws, which for 25 years have been the only bulwark we have had to prevent the big from destroying the little?

I want now to go into what this proposed act means. In the first place, water never rises above its source, and I am reliably informed that the administration of the Farm Act and the administration of this proposed act are centered in two employees of Bernard M. Baruch. Mr. Hugh S. Johnson, an employee of Mr. Baruch, has already been installed in office to take charge of the administration of this act when passed. Mr. Peek, who, I was told—and I have only second-hand information—is another associate of Mr. Baruch, has been placed in charge of the administration of the Farm Act. Mr. Peek can revoke the license of the farmer and Mr. Johnson can revoke the license of the laboring man.

Mr. Baruch has graced this administration, as he graced the Hoover administration, and, regardless of everything we have been trying to do, we find today that my people—the little farmers, the little wage earners—already have been assigned to the tender mercies and to the administration of Mr. Baruch, against whom I waged a fight here in an effort to drive him out of the administration of Hoover, and partly succeeded; but I now find him quite entrenched in an administration that would not have been here if my friends and myself had not helped elect it. Can we not get relief from this thing?

Mr. President, I send to the desk and ask to have read a little article I clipped from the paper this morning.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Three outstanding industrialists—Walter C. Teagle, of Standard Oil; Alfred P. Sloan, of General Motors; and Gerard Swope, of General Electric—last night were reported ready to accept appointment by Hugh S. Johnson to aid in the administration of the Industrial Act.

Announcement of their selection as part of a 5-man board which will represent industry in considering trade agreements under the legislation was said to await only enactment of the bill by Congress.

This is expected to come before the end of the week, with President Roosevelt affixing his signature and appointing General Johnson as administrator.

As representatives of labor, Johnson has chosen Donald Richberg, a codrafter of the bill and counsel for the Association of Railway Labor Executives, and Leo Wolman, a labor expert and professor at Columbia University.

Johnson was described as intending to set up a board of 10 men drawn equally from industry and labor. From the standpoint of the groups they represent, they will be charged with aiding the administrator in the "fair and impartial" handling of the legislation which he promised last week.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, Mr. Walter Teagle, the head of the Standard Oil Co., Mr. Sloan, the head of the General Motors, and Mr. Swope, the head of the General Electric, are to be employed under Mr. Johnson. The act has not yet been passed, but Mr. Baruch's employee is now ready here with the officers set out, and he is now arranging to be kind enough to me and my people to put Mr. Walter Teagle and his kind over the affairs of the little community from which I come.

Mr. CUTTING. Mr. President——

Mr. LONG. I yield to the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. CUTTING. I was merely going to suggest to the Senator from Louisiana that while he is discussing the influence of Mr. Baruch it has been mentioned in the press repeatedly that Mr. Alvin Brown, the Assistant Director of the Budget, was also a prominent member of Mr. Baruch's staff.

Mr. LONG. Yes, sir. What is the full name of the man to whom the Senator from New Mexico has referred?

Mr. CUTTING. Mr. Alvin Brown, to whom has been attributed, in large measure, the reductions which have been brought about in veterans' compensation.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I am almost tempted to remark, as did Hannibal when his brother's head was thrown into the camp, "Carthage, I see thy fate."

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. Returning to the matter which we were discussing a few minutes ago, in which I am vitally interested, I ask the Senator from New York if he would be willing to insert after the word "title" and the colon, on page 4, line 15, the following:

Provided, That such code or codes shall not permit combinations in restraint of trade, price fixing, or other monopolistic practices.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, the Senator from Idaho by that proposal does not mean that a code could not provide in general terms for a uniform price or provide that there shall not be any cutthroat competition and selling below the cost of production? That, of course, he does not intend to interfere with?

Mr. BORAH. No; I do not.

Mr. WAGNER. I am quite agreeable to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. LONG. That amendment, as I understand, is offered by the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. BORAH. Yes.

Mr. LONG. I ask the Senator to send the amendment to the desk, if there is no objection, and let us adopt the amendment, and then proceed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Idaho will be stated.

Mr. REED. A point of order, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. REED. Is not an amendment now pending?

Mr. LONG. I yielded to the Senator from Idaho that he might offer his amendment, if there be no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Let the amendment be read.

Mr. LONG. Let us get to whittling on it, and we will get it all out before very long.

Mr. BORAH. After the word "title" and the colon, in line 13, page 4, I move to insert the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Idaho will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 4, line 13, after the word "title", it is proposed to insert:

Provided, That such code or codes shall not permit combinations in restraint of trade, price fixing, or other monopolistic practices.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from Idaho that to consider his amendment it would be necessary to reconsider the vote by which the amendment on page 4, line 13, was adopted.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

Mr. LONG. We have an agreement to proceed with the Senate committee amendments and then come back to individual amendments.

Mr. BORAH. This amendment precedes the amendment which we adopted; it is not a part of it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that there is an agreement first to consider committee amendments; but the Senator from Idaho could ask unanimous consent to consider this amendment at this time.

Mr. BORAH. Well, I will ask unanimous consent that the amendment may now be considered.

Mr. HARRISON. Reserving the right to object, I was called out of the Chamber, and should like to know the purport of the amendment.

Mr. LONG. The Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] is in accord with this amendment.

Mr. HARRISON. But the Finance Committee must get in accord with some of these things, too.

Mr. WAGNER. I think the amendment ought to be submitted to the chairman of the committee.

Mr. LONG. Let the chairman of the committee take time to consider the amendment while I continue my speech. I have some further remarks to make, anyway.

Mr. HARRISON. I think we had better go along and consider committee amendments first, and then before we finish the first title let individual amendments be offered.

Mr. BORAH. Very well. If the clerk will return my amendment to me, I may improve it.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I was trying to save time. As we point out the weaknesses of the pending bill, I will gladly yield in order that they may be corrected. As we unfold to the very ready and highly trained mind of the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] the various holes that need to be plugged, I believe it would save time if we were permitted to correct them as the Senator from New York sees the necessity of doing so; but the Senator from Mississippi has come in and interrupted all the speed that we were trying to make in order to hasten this bill through. He, of course, being in charge of the bill, has the right to do as he sees fit. I therefore regret that I have to take up the time and make more lengthy my remarks with respect to the bill.

What I said, Mr. President, was that I was informed by the Senator from New Mexico that Mr. Baruch has gotten Mr. —— what is his name?

Mr. CUTTING. Mr. Brown.

Mr. LONG. Mr. Brown as chief cook and bottle washer of the Director of the Budget under Mr. Douglas. I am further informed that he is the man given credit for the stupendous genius that prescribed the specifications and regulations to eliminate the compensation and benefits that were being given the veterans of all wars. He is one of the main men in that line.

There is Mr. Baruch, with one lieutenant, handling the Director of the Budget's office; that settles that. There is Mr. Baruch, with another employee—Mr. Peek—handling the Farm Act; that settles that. There is Mr. Baruch, with Mr. Hugh S. Johnson, another employee, already installed in his offices here, announcing the appointment of the chief men in the Standard Oil Co., in the General Motors Corporation, and in the General Electric Co. as the men who are going to administer this bill when it shall become a law. And from one source——

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I will yield in just a moment. And from one source we have already been told down to the point that there is no such thing as the planting of a stalk of okra or the hacking of a crosstie or the soling of a pair of shoes that is not within the power of these gentlemen who come from Baruch. Now I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I should like to inquire of the Senator if he meant by his language to imply that Mr. Peek and General Johnson are employees of Mr. Baruch? That is the interpretation that might be placed upon his language. I want to know if he means to make that sort of assertion?

Mr. LONG. I mean that they have been Mr. Baruch's employees up until they were hired by the Government, and Johnson has not as yet been hired by the Government.

Mr. BARKLEY. As to Mr. George Peek, who lives in Illinois and who has been interested in the agricultural situation for many years, long before, I imagine, he thought of having any appointment under any administration, in what capacity has Mr. Baruch employed him?

Mr. LONG. I do not know; I will get the Senator up the details.

Mr. BARKLEY. Does the Senator know that he has been employed by Mr. Baruch?

Mr. LONG. I understand so. I was reliably informed by a Senator this morning that he was, and I am sure he has been.

Mr. BARKLEY. Then, the Senator does not know?

Mr. LONG. I do not know of my own personal knowledge that Mr. Brown has been or that Mr. Johnson has been, but

I am reliably informed they have been, and that is a matter as to which we can very easily get the facts. I am certain that what I have said is true, just the same as I am that what is stated in the article I sent to the desk is true.

Mr. BARKLEY. In what capacity did Mr. Baruch ever employ General Johnson?

Mr. LONG. I do not know that.

Mr. BARKLEY. Does the Senator know that he has ever employed him at all?

Mr. LONG. I have been told so by very reliable authority in the Senate, and I understand beyond any question he has been.

Mr. BARKLEY. In what capacity?

Mr. LONG. I do not know.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator, I suppose, would not be willing to divulge the source of his information or rumor or gossip.

Mr. LONG. I do not think there is any question that Johnson has been employed by Baruch.

Mr. BARKLEY. Well, in what capacity?

Mr. LONG. I do not know.

Mr. BARKLEY. Where?

Mr. LONG. I will get that up for the Senator. The Senator can go after Mr. Johnson, and he will no doubt tell him.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator from Louisiana might also have asked him.

Mr. LONG. No; I am not that close to him.

Mr. BARKLEY. And probably never will be.

Mr. LONG. No, I may never be; I doubt if I ever will be. I know, Mr. President, that Eugene Meyer was an associate of Baruch, and I stood on the floor of the Senate—not entirely on account of Eugene Meyer, but when I knew that Baruch was around here trying to pull off this reactionary legislation and was prompting Mr. Hoover in it, I knew he was the man who was wrecking Hoover, and I said so on the floor of the Senate. That is Bernard M. Baruch, who wrecked Woodrow Wilson, and who was going to wreck Herbert Hoover, and he did, and, take my word for it, he is going to wreck President Roosevelt, too, just as he wrecked the other two.

I stated, Mr. President, that Eugene Meyer and Barney Baruch had been in a market rigging operation in New York for many years, and I think I proved it on the floor of the Senate. I am not violating any confidence when I say that one morning a gentleman came to me from Mr. Hoover when I was here last year and asked me why I was making the charges that I was against Mr. Meyer on the floor of the Senate, and would I feel satisfied if Mr. Baruch were taken off the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. I told him that I would, for the time being; and a few days later I added another request to it, that another gentleman under Mr. Meyer's wing be taken off the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Whether it was because of that or not I do not know, but a few days later Mr. Hoover had the good sense to come in here with a message saying that the two gentlemen referred to ought to be taken off the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; and I understood that the influence of Mr. Baruch around Mr. Hoover began to wane, but too late to save the man.

While we are investigating Morgan—and he ought to be investigated, do not forget that—something very peculiar has happened here. We have not heard a word about investigating the Chase National Bank and the Rockefellers. Remember that—not a word. Mr. President, let me tell you something else. If you will investigate the silver purchases and the currency purchases of Baruch and his clients since they have been manipulating this thing, you are liable to find out that they are doing just as much market rigging as they were at the time that I referred to the Meyer case here, and put the facts in the RECORD of this Congress. They are in charge; they are "in the know"; they know all about what is going on, and they know what is going to happen. You, Mr. President, and I do not know. They have been placed in seats where they are in a position to know anything that is going to happen. If they know that the President is going to buy silver tomorrow morning, they know it, but you do not. Somebody is going to know it; he cannot keep it all to himself; he has to have his main arms of the administration in there. And when it is believed that the Government is going to buy silver and purchases are made, they are in on it, and when the Government does buy silver they reap a handsome reward. That is the kind of legislation that Mr. Baruch has guided the President into ever since he has been back here.

Why was Franklin Roosevelt nominated for the Presidency? Baruch is the man that caused him to be nominated, because some of us felt that he was the only man we could nominate and get away from Baruch. When we were around here last May and last April and last March and Baruch brought Al Smith down here and got Democrats to sign up on the same thing that Hoover and his crowd were signing up on, which was supposed to be a nonpartisan effort in behalf of the sales tax and things of that kind, we did not have anybody left to go to but Franklin Roosevelt. We thought that since Baruch was against him, above all other candidates, that was a chance to get rid of Baruch and his kind. This man, who was there telling Wilson when he was sick and could not get around, is here talking to Franklin Roosevelt today more effectively than ever; and I tell you, Mr. President, that now I understand the mistakes of the Director of the Budget.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. HARRISON. I have just been in conference with the Senator from Idaho, the Senator from New York, and the Senator from Wisconsin, and some others in reference to suggested amendments. Will not the Senator permit us to see if we cannot get together on those amendments?

Mr. LONG. I am perfectly willing to do that. I was willing to do that a while ago, if the Senator from Mississippi had not interrupted us, and I am willing to do it now.

I am willing to yield for that purpose now.

Mr. HARRISON. I may say that the amendment suggested by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] with reference to restraint of trade, monopolistic purposes, and so forth, is carrying out the purposes of the bill as we construe it. I ask unanimous consent that it may now be offered so we can eliminate that matter in the hope that we may conserve some time and expedite the passage of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. LONG. I yield for that purpose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There being no objection, the amendment of the Senator from Idaho will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] proposes, on page 4, line 13, after the word "title", to insert the following:

Provided, That such code or codes shall not permit combinations in restraint of trade, price fixing, or other monopolies purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the amendment? The Chair hears none. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, there should be a correction made in the next proviso so that it will read "and provided further."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection the correction will be made.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I want to say something further in answer to the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY]. I think he can give me credit for being in good faith about this matter. He was here at the time when I said on the floor of the Senate what I am saying now, when I said it under the Hoover administration. I said at that time that they could not give Mr. Baruch to the Democratic Party again. I think the Senator from Kentucky heard me say that at the time.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not recall the language that may have been used a year or more ago by the Senator from Louisiana in discussing Mr. Baruch or any other prominent Democrat, and I am not concerned about any quarrel which he has with Mr. Baruch.

Mr. LONG. I do not even know the man.

Mr. BARKLEY. I know Mr. Baruch and I wish to say publicly that I have known him for many years. I have known that he has been unusually interested in agricultural relief. I know that years ago, under both Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Hoover, Mr. Baruch made a careful study and survey of agricultural conditions and suggested some remedies which probably, if they had been adopted, might have prevented some of the disaster which has overtaken and overcome the farmers of the country. I have always regarded Mr. Baruch, so far as his attitude toward the farmer was concerned, as unselfishly desirous of aiding the farmer in any way he could by assistance, by cooperation, or by helpful legislation that might be enacted.

I did not understand that the Senator from Louisiana had the power to give Mr. Baruch to the Democratic Party or that it was necessary, because Mr. Baruch has always been a Democrat. He has supported every Democratic nominee, I am informed, since he was old enough to cast his vote. While I have sometimes found it necessary to disagree with Mr. Baruch with reference to some of his economic views, I have always entertained for him the highest respect, and I do now entertain for him the highest respect. I do not think Mr. Baruch is trying to put anything over on Mr. Roosevelt, or that he tried to put anything over on Mr. Hoover or Mr. Coolidge that was inimical to the interests of the American farmer.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, will the Senator from Louisiana yield further?

Mr. LONG. No; I refuse to yield for any more eulogies of Mr. Baruch at this time.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. The Senator is in poor business——

Mr. LONG. What is that?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I say the Senator is in poor business attacking private citizens on the floor of the Senate and refusing to permit any answer to be made.

Mr. LONG. Let the Senator go ahead and make his answer.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. No; I will take my own time.

Mr. LONG. That is perfectly all right.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I refuse to be beholden to the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. LONG. I am perfectly willing for the Senator to do it now or at any other time, I say again, and I am not afraid to say it again.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. Very well.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. The Senator can come here on the floor of the Senate and attack private citizens and declare that he is not afraid, as he did in a certain case when his hand was called by the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], and then when he is sued for making slanderous or libelous statements he can hide himself behind his immunity. The Senator from Louisiana will never see the day when he can stand in a class with gentlemen like B. M. Baruch! [Applause.]

Mr. LONG. I am glad, Mr. President, if the Senator from Arkansas wishes to make a personal charge. I went to the State of Arkansas, where the Senator from Arkansas lives, and I was one who helped them to attend to him there. I went to Arkansas when the Senator from Arkansas said he would not have anything to do with the campaign out there. We pretty well settled that matter up there. I settled the matter in Arkansas with him and I settled the matter in Louisiana with him. The Senator has no right to come here and attack me.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. No; I do not yield.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. No; the Senator of course refuses to yield.

Mr. LONG. I do not yield to the Senator until I am through making my reply to him.

I say that Mr. Baruch was the chief adviser of Mr. Hoover on the sales tax. I know it because I saw Senators who told me that Mr. Baruch stood outside the door of the Senate trying to get Members of the Senate to support the sales tax when Hoover was trying to put it over. I was told so by Senators, some of whom hear me now. I am not referring to the private character of Mr. Barney Baruch. I am referring to the political operations of Mr. Baruch. I am referring to the fact that Mr. Baruch was the chief manipulator of the downfall of Woodrow Wilson. Everybody who knows political history knows that to be true. I know that he was just as close to Hoover as he was to Woodrow Wilson, and that the downfall of Hoover in a large measure can be traced to the advice he received, which was not received by the American people.

I want to say further that I stood on the floor of the Senate when the Senator from Arkansas was here, Mr. President, when my political career at the time did not mean much to me, but I was using it for the American people, and I said we would relieve the Democratic Party of the influence that had wrecked Wilson and the influence that had wrecked Hoover. I said that Baruch would not be in the category, and I received a letter from the President of the United States after I made that statement, and if I ever read a letter that approved what I said or what he thought I said, I thought I read it in the lines of that letter that came from the President who now sits in the White House.

That is why I was one of those who worked for the President of the United States not only in my own State but I was asked to help in other States to secure delegations for the present President of the United States, and I did. The States in which I was asked to take charge delivered their delegations for the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt. While Senators may condemn me in the Senate or wherever they want to and I will not urge any exemptions or exceptions, they cannot come here and condemn me for having said something that was accepted by my chief and by my party because now I object to that influence coming back into this administration and being the controlling factor not only in the preparation of legislation but in the manipulation and in the administration of that kind of legislation. I am not going to have it if I am the only Democrat who can stand here now with the great welching powers of the party chiefs condemning me for the reason that I condemn that damnable influence.

I will go with the Senator to the people of Arkansas again and we will see who gets the votes of the people and who comes back to the Senate. I will go back with him to Louisiana and Arkansas or any other State on earth. He is not going to make me a party to this blood-stained-hand betrayal of the people of the country by putting Barney Baruch in a place where he can revoke the license of the tie hacker or of the woman at the washpots who give me whatever standing I have here. There may be found some who are afraid to do it, but no one will ever find me afraid to do it.

I will read a little further from one of Mr. Baruch's satellites, if the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CUTTING] has correctly informed me. I read from the New York Herald Tribune of Thursday, June 8, 1933. First, I read the headlines:

Roosevelt and Congress near break on veterans; Borah hits recovery bill. House chiefs demand at least $40,000,000 more than President's limit for service men. Budget head urges him to defy them. Decision due this morning; request for tariff powers dropped in his hope of ending session.

Now I read from the article:

WASHINGTON, June 7.—President Roosevelt was face to face tonight with a decision whether to part company with the Democratic Congress on the veterans' issue when House Democratic leaders left with him a compromise proposal which would have him surrender some of his powers over compensation to ex-service men.

Through his Budget Director, Lewis W. Douglas—

I understand that includes Mr. Brown, who, my friend the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CUTTING] informs me, is another Baruch man. I hope that none of my colleagues will feel it necessary to cast any reflection on the Senator from New Mexico for offering me that friendly piece of information. I hope that whatever murderous charges may be brought down on anybody will descend on my shoulders entirely for volunteering that information, because the Senator from New Mexico was trying to do me a courtesy. I understand the Senator from New Mexico happened to be one who supported Mr. Roosevelt in the campaign long before some of my traducers ever supported him.

I continue reading from the article—

Through his Budget Director, Lewis W. Douglas, the President sent back word that he would communicate with the House leadership at 10 a.m. tomorrow. Mr. Douglas was disclosed as advising the President to stand pat and defy Congress to clip $170,000,000 from his $460,000,000 economies in veterans' payments.

WOULD LEAD TO VETO

This would lead to a veto of the independent offices appropriation bill and require the passage of a continuing appropriation in order to adjourn Congress by the end of this week or early next week. It also would draw the veterans' issue between the President and the heavily Democratic Congress, which has voted him powers such as never before were held by any President.

In the developments of the political crisis, made all the more acute by the President's desire to deal with the war-debt emergency of next Thursday without interference by Congress, Mr. Roosevelt sent word that he was dropping his request for special reciprocal tariff powers. This leaves the national recovery measure and the veterans' issue as the major questions to be cleared away to close out this session of Congress before it can make more trouble for the President.

UNDER TREMENDOUS PRESSURE

The President was under tremendous pressure tonight from both sides of the veterans' question. While his decision was not known, and probably will not be reached definitely before tomorrow, he was taking the position that he could not compromise with principle.

Apparently, Mr. President, the advisers are having their way about it. The President cannot see it. He cannot see that he is taking hundreds of Democratic Members in the lower House of Congress and sending them to slaughter next year; and I cannot make him see it, because he is not hearing me. We are taking hundreds of good men in this Congress who voted for the economy bill, and we are sending them out here to slaughter next year—friends of ours, that we have helped to elect—because of what has been done under the administration of the Economy Act; and today we read in the papers that the administration is willing to veto the bill before it will allow it to go into effect to correct a small part of the injuries that have been done, that an overwhelming majority of this Congress thought ought not to be done.

No; I will say this: I am going to read in just a minute what I said about Mr. Baruch before I was accepted into the folds of Mr. Roosevelt's party. I am going to read it to you in just a minute. I have sent for it. You did not complain about it then. Nobody got up on the floor of the Senate then and said that he was the apostle to lead the Democratic Party. Hoover's own spokesmen did not defend him on the floor of the Senate. On the contrary, I was told by Members here in private conversation that they had advised the President of the United States, Mr. Hoover, the same as I was saying on the floor of the Senate—that he had better get Mr. Baruch out of here; that he was going to wreck his administration, as he did Woodrow Wilson's in the last few months. No one said anything about it at the time; but now it has become a crime for me to get up here and to complain of Mr. Baruch, who, I understand, is a nationally known market operator. I understand that his business is that of being wise on the market. I understand that to be his business—that he is wise on the market, when to buy and when to sell. That is the information I have always received in New York—that Mr. Baruch is known to be market wise.

I do not know what Mr. Baruch would do; but you take any ordinary man, Mr. President, and let him put one of his men running the Budget Bureau, and another one of his men running all the industries and livelihoods, and another one of his men running something else, like the Farm Board, and you do not have to eat a whole beef to tell when it is tainted. Do you mean to tell me that those men who have been in Mr. Baruch's employ all this time are going to forget all about it when they get up there? How many men believe that?

Do you mean to tell me that Mr. Baruch does not know what he is doing when he has Hugh S. Johnson down here already in charge of the administration of a law that has yet to go through Congress? Do you mean to say that Mr. Johnson, if he has a man under him, does not know what he is doing, when right down here now there is a press dispatch, that I have sent to the desk, saying that Mr. Walter C. Teagle, the head of the Standard Oil Co., and the head of the General Electric Co., and the head of General Motors have already been picked to administer the measure that we now have under debate? And yet you tell me that Mr. Baruch has no influence here! Maybe he has not, Mr. President, but it is the most peculiar thing I have ever seen.

Now my friend from Kentucky and my friend from Arkansas volunteer the information that Mr. Baruch is a good Democrat. He may be; I do not know. I do not say that he is not a good Democrat. He is not the kind of Democrat that I thought was going to run this administration. If he is the kind of Democrat that can advise Hoover one day and advise Roosevelt the next day, then we went a long way to do a lot of work that there was not any use of our doing. [Laughter.] You surely could have saved me lots of trouble. It was mighty cold coming through South and North Dakota. You could have saved me from almost falling out with one of the best friends I have in the world, a Governor of a State, trying to keep him in line for Roosevelt at the convention. That is something you could have saved me from doing. You could have saved me from having to go north into another State to meddle in politics that was none of my business if that is true; you probably could have made someone else just as much for me now as the other gentleman is against me. You could have kept me out of lots of trouble if that is what we meant to do.

That may be right, gentlemen. That may be the right thing; but there is such a thing as the rights of a human being anywhere. There is such a thing as a man being treated fairly; and I went farther than that. I went a great deal farther than that. I see men here in this Hall of Congress who sweated out the night sessions in Chicago. I see men sitting here who were there during those days and those nights. They know what we fought, and they know the issue upon which we fought and the lines upon which we fought—Owen D. Young, Bernard Baruch, Al Smith, Newton D. Baker, and others of their kind on one side; the Roosevelt crowd, WHEELER, DILL, LONG, and that crowd on the other side.

There was not any making any mistake as to what the issue was, Mr. President. Wherever there was a power company that had an office, we always felt its weight in that convention, and we knew what it meant at the time. They came in with them all the time, and we had them to beat, and we had them to fight.

I have sent for a copy of what I said before that convention met, which I expect to read to the Senate in a moment.

Now we come here, after I had said all of that on the floor of the Senate, after I said the same thing to the people in the North and in the South and in the West, and we are told that Mr. Baruch is a good Democrat. I am not going to argue with the Senator from Kentucky or the Senator from Arkansas as to whether or not he is a good Democrat, but I am putting up the side of this picture that I presented to the people of the United States from the floor of the Senate and from the public platform, and leaving them to judge of it.

I opposed this reforestation move. I send to the desk a short clipping that I take from this morning's paper, and ask the clerk to read it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the article will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

15 VETERANS LOSE FORESTRY JOBS AS MOB INVADES TOWN—FORT HUMPHREYS EVICTIONS FOLLOW UPROAR CAUSED BY NIGHT BRAWLING OF 200 MEN AT ACCOTINK, VA.; MAJORITY IN CAMP ORDERLY

A brawling mob of drunken men from the veterans' reforestation camp at Fort Humphreys early last Sunday morning threw the quiet little nearby village of Accotink, Va., into a state of fright and uproar, it was learned exclusively last night by the Washington Post.

Soldiers from Fort Humphreys finally herded approximately 200 of the men back to the camp, and for 2 days thereafter military authorities stationed soldier police in the villages of Accotink and Pohick to prevent the reforestation recruits from entering the small communities.

About 15 of the veterans were summarily discharged from the Fort Humphreys camp as a result of the Accotink and other incidents involving alleged liquor drinking, Army officers said yesterday.

No overt acts against the people or property of the Virginia communities were committed by the veterans, it was said last night by residents. However, the men congregated during a quiet hour and brawled among themselves to such an extent that the quiet residential sector was thrown into a nervous furor, it was said.

One man, it was learned, was cut severely during a brawl.

The procuring of the whisky began late last week, after the men had received their first allotment of approximately $2 from the Government. Others had received larger amounts in the shape of Veterans' Administration compensation checks, it was said. The liquor was obtained from backwoods bootleggers, it was said, and some of it was actually smuggled into the camp.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I am going to read now what I said on this floor on May 12, 1932, and I was told by the President himself that he had read it.

Who is this Barney Baruch?—

I said on May 12, 1932—

Who is this Barney Baruch? You cannot feed him to the Democratic Party, because we will not have him, nor can the leader of the Democratic Party in this Senate accept him for the Democratic Party of the Nation. He is the right-hand, twin-bed mate of Hooverism in this country. [Laughter.] Everything that Hoover represents is represented by Baruch. He is supposed to have been engaged in the banking business in New York City. Maybe he was. It was not exactly a banking business, but some kind of a stock-market and bucket-shop operation carried on up in that country, legitimate under the law. He never was in any bank that I could find out anything about in modern days. But to Barney Baruch was sent one Eugene Meyer. Eugene Meyer and Baruch operated a certain investment stock-marketing racketeering enterprise up in New York City. [Laughter.] One of them is supposed to be in control of the financial side of the Democratic Party, the other of them is supposed to be in partnership and in charge of the financial side of the Republican Party. Mr. Eugene Meyer, Mr. Barney Baruch's partner, has been by Mr. Herbert Hoover made the president or chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System of the United States and is today the Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

That is not all I said. A little bit further along I mentioned Mr. Baruch again. This was not a keynote speech for the Democratic Convention, but it was my keynote speech before we had a convention.

Now I will read a little more. I want to read what I said just as I closed the speech, where I went back over that ground a little bit in order to emphasize the fact that the Democratic Party could not win with Baruch handling it. I said:

The Republican Party cannot deed us Bernard M. Baruch for the next 6 months. We will not take him. You cannot hand him to us, whether he is sponsored here on this side of the Chamber or not.

That was in the course of my speech of May 12. I have not said anything today that I did not say on May 12. I was accepted into the councils of the Democratic nominee. I was sent out over the country to speak for my party. They not only knew what I spoke, but I wrote a letter, and I went to see the committee, and I went to the nominee in person after getting a letter from him, and told him that I could not advocate anything else except what I had been advocating here in the Senate, and that if it was going to be of any injury whatever to the party I was perfectly willing not to go out.

They had the chance not to have me go out. That would have been all right with me; but they had me come and tell the people of America the issues as I saw them, for whatever my word is worth—and it is worth something in a few States in this country. It is worth something in my own State, and has been for many, many years. It will be worth something down there for many, many more years to come. It has been worth something in my neighboring States, Mr. President. They made me, against my consent, the issue in a governor's race in one State; but the man whom they charged as having had my support—and he did—was overwhelmingly elected Governor of that State, notwithstanding the fact that in two previous races he never ran better than third. They made me an issue in other campaigns, but in none of them where they have made me the issue in States down there has the man making me the issue come out better than second; and they did not have to have me, if they did not want me, in the last Democratic campaign. But if we were going to have the same kind of influences under Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Smith, or whoever was named by the Democratic Party as we were having at that time under Mr. Hoover, it did not make a tinker's rap with me who the nominee of the Democratic Party was, because I was fighting for relief of the people of this country, and not merely for a change in names and organs.

I come here now and I complain. I complain in the name of the people of my country, of the sovereign State I represent. I complain in the name of the people wherever else it may be known. I complain if it be true, as I am informed by Senators on this floor, that under this act Mr. Johnson, a former employee of Mr. Baruch, has been put in charge of the administration of the act, and has already called as his aides the head of the Standard Oil Co., the head of General Motors, and the head of the General Electric Co.

I complain if Mr. Peek, who is an employee of Mr. Baruch, or has been, as I have been informed on the floor of the Senate, has been placed in charge of administering the Farm Act, however good a man he may be and whatever his ideas may be.

I complain if Mr. Brown, who, I am informed on the floor of the Senate, has been made an influential manipulator of the office of the Bureau of the Director of the Budget, has been an employee of Mr. Baruch, and is now given this authority.

I complain because, on the 12th day of May 1932, before we went to Chicago to nominate a President of the United States, I stood in this very place on this floor and told the people of this country that we were not going to have the Baruch influence, at that time so potent with Hoover, manipulating the Democratic Party before nomination, after nomination, or after election.

I have a right to complain. The Senator from Arkansas might not have that right because he has not uttered such words on this floor; the Senator from Kentucky might not have such right, but I have that right, because within the hearing of 120,000,000 people of America I made those statements. I think that speech was carried in practically every newspaper in the United States, and I know that more than a million copies were sent out. In the hearing of 120,000,000 people my voice went up that the new deal meant an end of "Baruchism" in America.

Now, we are called on to consider some proposed laws, which are to be enacted and which are to be administered. I have every confidence in the world and every faith in the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER]. I know what we are going into. Others may not know. I am sorry my friend the Senator from Kentucky was not in the Chamber when I read my speech of May 12, 1932.

Mr. BARKLEY. I heard it then and I can read it now.

Mr. LONG. I understood the Senator had not heard it before. I had understood the Senator had not heard the speech I made last May.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not know to just which one the Senator refers, but I heard nearly all of them.

Mr. LONG. I heard nearly all the Senator from Kentucky made, so I have been as kind to him as he has been to me. Neither one of us, probably, has been any too subdued.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will agree to that so far as the Senator from Louisiana is concerned.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, now we find this bill before us. I was hoping that I would be able to argue nothing but the bill, but I could not resist the information given to me on the floor of the Senate. Now we come to the bill. I would discuss it further at this time, though perhaps there is someone who wishes to say something with regard to what I have said, and in fairness to any who may have that inclination, I think that at this time I will pause, and permit anyone who wishes to make any comment, to whom I have not seen fit to yield, to take the floor.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I have no intention of taking the time of the Senate in attempting to reply to statements made by the Senator from Louisiana, except wherein I feel that some injustice may result.

As far as his references to the campaign in Arkansas, in which my colleague [Mrs. CARAWAY] was elected, are concerned, as he well knows, I took no part in that campaign, nor was I involved in it. The Senator made the statement on the stump, when he came into the State, that he did not propose to raise that issue. He has boasted that when running time comes again, he will be in Arkansas. I can give my friend from Louisiana the information that I will be there, and that if he comes into Arkansas, I will also take the liberty of going into Louisiana, and I think, from what I know of the state of public sentiment in the two States, that he will be repudiated in both of them.

Mr. President, it does seem to me absurd, however, to take the time of the Senate in replying to some of the statements, such as the one last referred to, made by the Senator from Louisiana. In some way he seems to involve himself in personal antagonisms to citizens who have done him no wrong, who think no wrong of him, and I respectfully submit to this body that it is not reflective of a high character of fairness for a Senator to make attacks on private citizens when he is immune from suit for libel or for misrepresentation because of any statement he may make in the Senate.

I recall that the Senator has the habit of abusing almost everyone with whom he comes in contact who happens to differ from him. I think that is wrong. Perhaps it is out of place for me to attempt to lecture the Senator on good manners and ethics pertaining to procedure in the Senate, but he has so often injected his personal antagonisms into the debates here that I feel justified in saying that he has no warrant for concluding that every time he makes a statement on the floor of the Senate and someone does not deny it that proves the correctness or the truth of his assertion.

The Senator made a number of statements yesterday in his attacks on the President which I think were wholly unfounded, which I believe every Senator on this side of the Chamber believes to have been unfounded. But manifestly his purpose was to delay consideration of the pending bill, manifestly to prevent action on the bill; and I want to say to him now that the statements he made yesterday, and some of those he made today, are not to be taken by him as proved merely because some Senator does not rise here and waste the time of the Senate in pointing out that the Senator from Louisiana, as usual, does not know what he is talking about. [Laughter.]

The Senator made a bitter attack on a citizen of this country who has the confidence and respect of many Members of this body. He has proclaimed that Mr. B. M. Baruch is the political adviser of the present administration, was the political adviser of the Hoover administration, and wrecked the Wilson administration.

Let me say to the Senator from Louisiana that Mr. Baruch never volunteered a suggestion either to Mr. Hoover or to Mr. Roosevelt; that in every instance when he has visited the White House he has been asked to do so and requested to contribute what he could to the study and solution of the problems which are confronting the country. If the Senator will take the trouble to ask Mr. Hoover and to ask President Roosevelt, he will find that instead of Mr. Baruch being a busybody, as he has been called, his advice has been asked.

With respect to the declaration, repeated two or three times by the Senator from Louisiana, that Mr. Baruch wrecked the Wilson administration and was the cause of the downfall of Mr. Wilson, let me point out the fact that Mr. Baruch was chairman of the War Industries Board during the World War. In the capacity of chairman of that Board he was called upon to discharge many weighty responsibilities, and I believe that the record of that service will shine in undimmed splendor for many years. It was fruitful of great benefit to the Nation and it was helpful to the cause of our soldiers who were carrying on the struggle in far-away lands.

When the Senator refers to the downfall of Mr. Wilson I wish to point out to the Senator from Louisiana that he again discloses his ignorance of history; that he does not know what he is talking about. I am assuming, now, that he believes the statement he made respecting the downfall of Mr. Wilson to be a historical fact, but I wish to tell him in this presence—and I wish that my voice could ring from limit to limit of this country—that there has never been a downfall of Woodrow Wilson, notwithstanding men like HUEY LONG have attempted to contribute to such a downfall. Woodrow Wilson is firmly entrenched in the memories and in the confidence of liberty loving, patriotic American citizens. It is true that in the late months of the last year of his life, due to the pressure and strain of great responsibilities, the overwhelming burden which he was carrying, he did fail physically; but Woodrow Wilson performed a great service to his country, a noble service to mankind, and the great statesman from Louisiana cannot bring about his downfall now.

The Senator from Louisiana says that Baruch put Johnson in control of the administration of this bill. The appointment of Mr. Johnson was made, if it has been made, by the President. Mr. Baruch did not solicit his appointment. Mr. Baruch is not responsible for his appointment. I wish to say that Mr. Johnson was regarded by the President as the best man he could find to administer the proposed act.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I may add that not only did Mr. Baruch not solicit this appointment for General Johnson, but that General Johnson himself did not solicit it; and that when he was first approached upon it that he declined to accept it or to consider it, I am informed, and was prevailed upon to do so as a matter of duty.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, the Senator from Kentucky is correct. That is the information which has come to me. So that instead of the statement made by the Senator from Louisiana being true or founded on fact, it is entirely without fact to support it. What good can come from the Senator rising on this floor and attacking a private citizen? What does he expect to accomplish by that practice?

There is another thought that flashes into my mind. The President of the United States is entitled to some consideration, particularly from men who sit on this side of the Chamber and call themselves Democrats. It is perfectly apparent from the remarks of my friend the Senator from Louisiana that he is simply mad because Roosevelt will not let him run the administration. [Laughter in the galleries.] Oh, yes; the occupants of the galleries laugh when I say that, and everybody knows it is true. The Senator refers to a small group, a group of Democrats, who, he thought, with him, were going to run the Roosevelt administration; and because the President chooses to conduct his own administration, declines to respond to the dictation of the Senator from Louisiana, we see the Senator from Louisiana day after day rising on the floor of the Senate, and we hear him denouncing and condemning the great leader of the Nation, who, during this time, I am happy to say, is receiving fair and cordial support from Senators on the other side of the Chamber.

When Roosevelt became President of the United States there was a condition which must not be forgotten. Every bank in the country was threatened with insolvency; thousands of banks had failed; sources of credit throughout the Nation had dried up; business everywhere was suspended; millions of laborers were walking the streets, seeking an opportunity to obtain employment through which to earn a living for themselves and their dependents. There has never been a time in the life of the Senator from Louisiana or during my lifetime when greater distress prevailed throughout the country, when the pall of the gloom and the shadow of sorrow hung like a cloud over the Nation, dense in blackness, terrifying in its threat. The President had a mighty task to perform. He assumed his duties with cheerfulness and with courage. Realizing that the conditions were emergent and unusual, realizing that large groups like the Senate and the House could not work out administrative details always in time to save failing situations, the President bravely accepted his responsibilities and invited additional responsibilities. Through every day that has passed since he took the oath of office he has been working, working, working diligently by day and by night, and his efforts have met with a response that is wellnigh Nation-wide without regard to party politics. Men who hope to see a recovery in our affairs have contributed their best efforts; they have not maligned the President; they have not scandalized him; they have not libeled him. They have realized that all men charged with weighty responsibilities are liable to make mistakes. They have realized that so long as he is earnest in his purpose and conscientious in the performance of his duties, he is entitled to receive the assistance and support of all patriots.

Now, in the hour of trial, while it continues, there comes one who calls himself a Democrat, who boasts that he is responsible for Franklin D. Roosevelt's nomination, who declares that he expected to control his policies—there comes one who arises in the Senate and repudiates the great leader of the Nation, who has become a leader in world affairs. The judgment will be between the Senator from Louisiana and the President of the United States. It is now time to draw the line; it is time for Democrats who have hesitated in the performance of their duties to get together and advance shoulder to shoulder and repudiate the efforts of him who would call himself the Nation's leader, the only effect of whose efforts can be to wreck his party and ruin his country.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, there is a story of a French courtmartial which tried a Russian by the name of Trotsky. The French courtmartial convicted Trotsky, and Trotsky said to the French courtmartial, "That is the march of events." Later on it is said that Trotsky became the ruling hand of Russia and while in the army service the judge of the courtmartial which had tried him was arrested in Russia. He was brought before Trotsky for trial. Trotsky looked down at him, and the judge of the French courtmartial said, "Sir, it is the march of events."

Mr. President, I read the words that I uttered on the floor of the Senate on May 12. By making use of that kind of words I became a Roosevelt leader in May 1932. By having read them today I became an anti-Roosevelt leader. "Such is the march of events." By uttering these words here in 1932 I had placed my friend from Arkansas outside the pale of the Roosevelt fold at that time. Today by making them I make him a Roosevelt leader. "Such is the march of events."

It is my misfortune for having taken the torch, the only torch under which Roosevelt could be nominated, and to have carried it, and it is my misfortune not to have laid down the torch today when the "march of events" requires it.

I do not blame the Senator from Arkansas; I have been his best friend. The course which I have pursued has not only kept him as leader but has made him again a leader. The party might have been defeated had it not been for us. Since we took the course we did we elected the President and since we elected the President we elected the majority leader. Therefore, Mr. President, he is peculiarly fortunate under the circumstances and is now in a position not only to denounce me for what I said to nominate Roosevelt but for what I said after the man had been elected. "Such is the march of events."

The Senator from Arkansas rather temperately—I want to say his speech was a little more temperate than I thought it was going to be; part of it was—has accused me of having tried to accomplish the downfall of Woodrow Wilson. The Senator is in error in that respect. I did nothing in my lifetime that undertook to accomplish his downfall. However, we all know of the typhoon that accompanied the end of his 8 years' service. I do not need to go into that. My stand was well known.

But now the Senator says that I am "mad" because I cannot run the country. That may be so. [Laughter.] That may be true. I did not know that to be the exact fact, but I take the Senator's word for it. However, Mr. President, I do not think the Senator is running the country, either. The Senator may not be "mad" because he is not running the country. There is only one difference between the Senator and me. The Senator is a better soldier than I am, perhaps; the Senator has probably had the legislative experience that teaches him to make column right and column left. I have not had enough experience to understand that. My course is ahead.

We nominated this man, Mr. President, on the promise to decentralize wealth. Do not forget that. Do not forget that Franklin Roosevelt was nominated on a promise, privately and publicly made, orally and in writing, to decentralize wealth. Do not forget that. Do not forget, Mr. President, that he was nominated largely because of the fact that there had become so many advocates of the sales tax that the liberals could not support any other candidate for the nomination except Roosevelt at the time.

I have not tried to run the man's administration one single bit. I have only asked him to carry out the promise he made the American people. I heard the promise made that we would shorten hours of labor, and when the Black bill came into the Senate I naturally expected the President's approval of it. Later I learned that he had given the word that spelled the doom and the destruction of the Black bill. Now, I knew that could not be his own line of logic, because it was not his line of logic during the campaign.

The Senator says that I have maligned the President. He does not tell you where. I think the Senator has prosecuted crime. We usually give a bill of particulars, but he has not said wherein I have maligned the President.

I have not said that Baruch had Mr. Johnson appointed. I said Mr. Johnson has evidently been named, and I have told the source from which Mr. Johnson came. I have not said that Mr. Baruch had Mr. Brown appointed but I have said that Mr. Brown has been named, and I have told the source from which he came.

The day will come, Mr. President, that Mr. Roosevelt will need us just as much as he has needed us in the past. Do not you ever worry; the time will come when Mr. Roosevelt will need to come back to the liberal policy the same as he left it, if he has left it, and I hate to think he has left it, for if he has it is spelling a terrible doom on us. I am undertaking to keep the President in line with what we promised the country, and when the Senator condemns our reuttering on the floor the platform of the party he ought to, as a good Democrat, grieve over the President's leaving it rather than condemn somebody who is trying to hold us to it. The Democratic platform said that we would strengthen the antitrust law. This bill here proposes to set it aside, although we have managed to get a modification of that provision to some extent since I have been speaking.

Mr. President, I am sorry the Senator invoked a personal matter in the speech he first made. I am sorry he brings up political relations between himself and me. He says he is coming down to Louisiana.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. When the Senator comes into Arkansas.

Mr. LONG. Well, I may not have time to go into Arkansas.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. And I may not have time to go into Louisiana. [Laughter.]

Mr. LONG. All right. So I think, Mr. President, we will just "call it a day", for the present. [Laughter.]

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its clerks, announced that the House had passed a bill (H.R. 5767) to authorize the appointment of the Governor of Hawaii without regard to his being a citizen or resident of Hawaii, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the Vice President:

S. 1562. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Levy Court of Sussex County, Del., to reconstruct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Deeps Creek at Cherry Tree Landing, Sussex County, Del.;

H.R. 1767. An act to authorize the acceptance of certain lands in the city of San Diego, Calif., by the United States, and the transfer by the Secretary of the Navy of certain other lands to said city of San Diego;

H.R. 5239. An act to extend the provisions of the act entitled "An act to extend the period of time during which final proof may be offered by homestead entrymen", approved May 13, 1932, to desert-land entrymen, and for other purposes; and

H.R. 5690. An act to legalize the manfacture, sale, or possession of 3.2 percent beer in the State of Oklahoma, when and if the same is legalized by a majority vote of the people of Oklahoma or by an act of the Legislature of the State of Oklahoma.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED

The bill (H.R. 5767) to authorize the appointment of the Governor of Hawaii without regard to his being a citizen or resident of Hawaii, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs.

ADDRESS BY SENATOR THOMAS OF UTAH

Mr. BULOW. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered by the Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS] at the annual commencement exercises of Southeastern University, held on June 6, 1933, at Continental Memorial Hall, Washington, D.C.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. President, graduates, ladies and gentlemen, I trust in the few minutes I stand before you I shall be able to talk in harmony with the prayer that has been offered in our behalf, and that the things which I shall say shall be in keeping with the spirit of this occasion.

This is the first time it has fallen my lot to talk to university graduates at commencement exercises. I have had to sit through an awful lot of them, and I have slept through them, and I find myself now with split emotions. I do not know whether to try to take sweet revenge on you for all that I have endured in the past, and hold you here as I have been held, or whether to become outright revolutionary and decide here and now that these things are things of the past, and that I must stop right now. I am tempted to quit, but I daren't after having been introduced. I am, though, going to talk to the graduates. I do not expect to give them any advice. Far be it from me to do that. I tried it once on a freshman class, and it did not affect even them. Men and women were not made for advice, or else this world would have been very, very different from what it is today. They have to learn. No one has ever learned anything except through experience.

So I am going to talk to you as I believe I should like to have been talked to on the night of my graduation. I was told the whole history of philosophy on the night I was graduated. By the time the speaker got down to Rousseau I was dead.

Most speakers at commencement exercises try to put the world right. I frankly admit I have no message for the world. I do not know how to improve this world at all. But I do know one or two things which you must know if you are profitably going to become a part of this world.

You remember the story in the Jungle Book. The animals never took the monkey into their council because he talked everlastingly, but never said anything. He had learned how to talk, but not to talk to any purpose. He just talked, and when he ceased talking he ceased talking, and that was the end of it. Mencuis, the great Chinese philosopher, said: "Men can never afford to be like earthworms, living merely for the present." Man must have in himself the experiences and the knowledge of the past, and be able to transmit those things to other persons. It is that which makes the difference between man and the other animals. Man has created a social memory; that is, a memory which actually outlives the life of me or the life of you. Man has been able to gather together his experiences and record them, and live them in such a way that now we have men reading thoughts developed from 3,000 B.C., for example. As time goes on, we can take those thoughts and make them ours, and enjoy them today, and this sort of thing makes man a historical being. He thinks in terms of history. He thinks in terms of the present and of the past, and he does this by this remarkable thing which he has created—a social memory. He is not only able to draw upon the past experiences of all mankind and bring, through this memory which he has created, the experiences which have occurred before, but man can, by his mind, actually project himself into the future. He can dream his dreams and scheme his schemes in those places which he knows nothing of, as far as experience is concerned. Because of this, man has been able to evolve a philosophy of progress. He thinks in terms of a better world. Because of this fact, man can plan for the future, and train himself for what he might wish to be, and he thus becomes a person fitted into the universal scheme of things.

You, as trained men and as trained women, have been given an opportunity to come in close contact with a certain past. It is now your task to fit yourselves into this world scheme of things and project yourselves into that part of the future before you. You now have the opportunity and chance to interpret; you may now have the joy and pleasure of being able to dream and understand and feel experiences. You may now adjust and enjoy those great universal thoughts which all men, at all times, have been led to understand, and which, when we finally analyze them, conform closely to some great universals of thought. No matter where we find thought, these great universals teach us what to attempt to live in harmony with and what to gain experience from.

I should like to have had the man who delivered the address when I was graduated say to me: You have got to get a philosophy of life before you can plan, and before you can mold yourself and make yourself a contributor to life. Where am I going to go to get this philosophy? How am I to get it? How am I to acquire it? I care not where you go. It matters not to me. Fit yourselves into the scheme of things. It does matter a great deal to me the attitude which you are going to have toward universal fundamental thought.

We live in an age which is mechanical and which is scientific. We live in an age which interprets most of the things it does in the terms of science. We live in an age where man has built machines so great and so wonderful, where men have actually answered Job's great question, and have, by the light of Acturus, lighted up the earth. Man mechanically, man physically, man scientifically, has arrived at places which persons years ago would never have dreamed he could have arrived. We know about the stars, we know about machinery; we can fly now with our eyes shut, blindfolded, guided by a mechanical man. We can make machines which will destroy us, and we can make institutions which can destroy us. And man of all the animals is the only one that we know anything about who has been able to evolve the appreciation of that concept which we shall call tonight suicide—being able to destroy himself. Man can kill himself; man can destroy himself. It is probably to the glory of man that he has not done it. He may do it unconsciously as he may do it consciously.

I was once talking to one of my professors, and we were discussing the machine age, and what might come of it, and he said: We can make machines big enough to overcome us, but there is still one hope for man, and that is a hope which prevents him from becoming discouraged. Until big machines are able to reproduce little machines we need not fear the machine age, because man can become their master, until these machines are able to remake themselves. These machines can never get a philosophy of life. They can never understand the purpose of life. They can never get rime or reason out of life.

You will remember the story of the robot which was built in such a way that it could be turned on and off by a button in its chest. If you turned the button on he worked; and if you turned the button off he stopped working. The robot got its lease on life from the man who made it, and the man who made it was its master. Finally it dawned on the machine man that he might go in for himself, and that he might enjoy his power and his ability to destroy. He started to destroy everything that came within the range of his power. Finally, just as all of the people in the village were giving up hope and were believing that this thing which had been created was to be a destroying agency, a little baby, absolutely without fear and full of faith, walked out in front of the great giant machine. Everyone watching expected to see the machine grab the baby and tear it to pieces. But that wasn't going to be. The baby had faith and was without fear. It allowed the machine man to pick it up in its arms. The baby became attracted by the button on its chest and turned it, and the machine man dropped. The lesson of this little story is this: Get acquainted with the button, and do not be afraid to turn it off.

There are a number of things I should like to talk to you about. Those things are things which seem to me to be related to the fundamentals which are going to find the right sort of place in your life. First, let me talk about law, since there are so many law students here. Your thoughts of law tonight are thoughts which are probably these: How can I get a case, and what will I do with it when I get it? That is not the type of thought I should like you to have about law. Law is, without exception, the most remarkable and marvelous concept that man has ever had for taking care of man's welfare. As long as it works for man in the spirit of the law it is good. But law is man-made. It is a creature of man, subject to broad interpretation and narrow interpretation.

When Confucius was asked why he was opposed to written law he said: "We must never have written law. Each case must be decided upon its own merits, in accordance with the justice of the particular case. If you write your law you will have lawyers, and those lawyers will become litigants, and once law becomes a process of litigation, justice ceases to be."

I do not know whether Confucius was looking upon the United States in 1933 or not, but he had inside information about this land of ours. We have a government of law and not a government of men. I wonder if Confucius could have looked down to see 1924, for example. This was a time in the United States when law and litigation had evolved so far that a certain great banking and investment institution would pay $150,000 a year for a lawyer, but when that lawyer was nominated for President of the United States that banking institution would rather have another man for President of the United States. It is interesting that things like that may come about.

Are you going to be litigants? Are you going to be narrow interpreters of the law? Are you going to be strict interpreters of the law? Or are you going to have the spirit of the law of the ancients and move in accordance with the great fundamentals in relation to the law?

If you want justice in its absolute state, you are never going to find it. Socrates showed us that. I suggest that you read again closely Plato's Republic.

Take an incident of the last 10 days, in which people tried to be just and logical. A boy killed his playmate somewhere out in the Near East. Their law there is the eye-for-an-eye type. If a life is taken a life or its equivalent must be given. The boy was haled before the elders, and told he must pay the life penalty or the equivalent. The boy said: "I am poor and my parents are poor." But the law said life or its equivalent must be given. The boy had to tie a rope around his neck and hang himself. That is justice.

We are passing through that type of law where men are arguing that the word is the important thing and the fact amounts to nothing. Present-day lawyers are like Middle Age realists, who became so logical that they spent much of their time arguing about how many angels could dance upon the point of a needle. Today most of our orators of all kinds are like Middle Age realists. They want to be sticklers of everything, and they want to be so just that no justice is done. The only difference between these men of today and the realists of the Middle Ages is that today they insist upon more and larger angels and more efficient needles.

Now take economics and politics and put them together. I have hinted at philosophy of the law without mentioning it to you. I have never been able to teach it or talk about it, but you must get the answer, and you must get the moral. But there is one little proverb I am going to leave with you. It is a proverb taken again from the ancients, which shows us that a man who lived 600 B.C. understood the first fundamentals in regard to political life. I wish it might become the fundamental of our economic and political thinking of today, and we would have a united happiness instead of a divided suspicion. The proverb is simply this: If you gather together in one place the wealth of the nation, you will divide the people, but if you scatter over the whole nation the wealth, you will unite the people. Some men have said: Is that right? You have a chance to test it. That is the little proverb I will leave with you, and I hope you remember it and make it your fundamental in economics and politics.

I am going to leave you another proverb, or another little saying, in ethics about telling the truth. I am going to suggest to you that you should not lie. I do not know whether that is a suggestion which seems out of place in this day and age. You know that now every time a person is asked a question in court he must say, "I swear to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help me God." Just as if any man could tell the whole truth. That is what we swear to do. That is why we take lying so lightly—because we swear to do something that man cannot do. There is no whole truth. The poor fellow who made a promise of that kind really needs the help of God, because I know of no man who knows the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. I am not going to tell you not to lie merely because it says in some good book that you should not lie. You will discover that my approach is not an ordinary approach. You ask a Sunday school boy or girl why he should not lie and he or she will say, "Because God says you should not lie." That is hardly reason enough. The reason why you should not lie is because it is just a nuisance to lie. The most interesting thing about lying is that when once you tell a lie you must remember it all the rest of the time, and continue telling lies to keep from being found out, and your life becomes a succession of lies. Tell the truth, because it is the sensible thing to do. You do not want to have to remember everything you say all of the time.

Next I want to talk about government. I shall go back to my ancients again for my fundamentals about government. My bible—that is, my political bible—is still Aristotle. He laid down a fundamental scheme for the interpretation of government which holds for today, and which will give you a fundamental and a test, for example, of whether or not we should recognize the Russian form of government as good. The real test of government is not the form it has. The test of government is, what it does and for whom it does it. Aristotle says there are 6 forms of government, 3 of them good and 3 of them bad. He says all of the good forms are good governments, and all of the bad forms are bad governments, and the test of the whole depends upon how and for whom the government is functioning and working. When the government is for all of the people and for the benefit of all of the people it is a good government. You may, for example, have a kingly government. This is a good government when it is administered for the benefit of all of the people. Such a king would be a benevolent monarch. But when the king rules for the benefit of the king himself he ceases to be a king and becomes a tyrant. Tyrannical government is bad. You may have a good aristocracy as long as the aristocrats rule for the benefit of all, but when they rule merely for the benefit of the aristocrats you have an oligarchy, and that Aristotle condemns as being bad. So with a democracy. When the people rule for the benefit of all you have a democracy, and it is good; but when the common people rule for the benefit of the common people only, you have a mobocracy, and that is bad.

The last fundamental I wish to call to your attention is one related to religion. I will not interpret religion in any narrow way. Any scheme or philosophy of thought which connects you with the past and the future, and thus makes you a part of the universe, is a religion. Ancestor worship is a religion. The religion which connects me up with the whole process of time is based upon the concept of time and of the eternal scheme of things. That is all I am going to say about religion, but my hope and my outlook for the future in regard to politics and in regard to economics, are based upon the experiences which religion has passed through in the last two or three hundred years.

We have made machines, and we have evolved in a scientific way far ahead of what we have done in a social, political, or economic way. We can obtain the same thing for our political and social life as we have for our mechanical and scientific life. This can be proved by a recital of what has occurred in religion in the last three or four hundred years. We have passed through a religious history which gives great hope for the future. There was a time when men killed their neighbors to please God. That was a period of persecution. There was a time when people were burned at the stake that God might be happy. Then came a time when, instead of killing men who disagreed with us, we learned to leave them alone, have nothing to do with them, but forbear with them. Thus a new spirit came into being. Forbearance was a great step forward. Then came a spirit of toleration, and when our Constitution was written the people of the world had accepted the spirit of toleration. We have lived for 150 years under this tolerant influence, and we are going to take a step now toward appreciation. We are actually seeing good in the different religions of peoples. We do not hear the word "heathen" any more. People are discovering all of the time, and they have wonderfully great thoughts, and those thoughts are universals.

The whole world accepts and applauds the spirit of Ghandi, who, on the breaking of a great religious fast, enjoys the completion of the fast by having read first from the Hindu, then from the Buddhist scriptures, and then enjoys a Christian hymn. We note the great universal spirit behind each one. That is one of the remarkable facts of this day of ours.

Can we not look forward to the same sort of progress in the social and political science as we have evolved in the natural sciences? Can we not in our international relations, for example, since the nations of the earth have now by science been made neighbors in time and space, become actual neighbors in spirit, desire, and attitude?

We live so close to the present our immediate failures are perhaps so apparent that we become discouraged and pessimistic about the probable outcome. Those of you who are discouraged about the present, those of you whose faith is now a bit dulled because of world conditions, may profit greatly by becoming historically minded and review the advancements made for man and his well-being in this world during, let us say, the last 25 years. Accept the present in that spirit and you will count the gains and not be discouraged. Civilization may seem to be slipping, but it is not. We can today, apparently surrounded by defeat, accept, if we have the faith of the father of the philosophy of progress, and say that we may go down, we may meet defeat, but onward and upward moves civilization, and ultimately the goal of the truer and the better life will be reached.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5755) to encourage national industrial recovery, to foster fair competition, and to provide for the construction of certain useful public works, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NEELY in the chair). The next amendment reported by the committee will be stated.

The next amendment was, on page 7, after line 2, to insert the following:

(f) When a code of fair competition has been approved or prescribed by the President under this title, any violation of any provision thereof in any transaction in or affecting interstate or foreign commerce shall be a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof an offender shall be fined not more than $500 for each offense, and each day such violation continues shall be deemed a separate offense.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Agreements and licenses", on page 7, line 18, after the word "interstate", to insert "or foreign", so as to read:

SEC. 4. (a) The President is authorized to enter into agreements with, and to approve voluntary agreements between and among, persons engaged in a trade or industry, labor organizations, and trade or industrial organizations, associations, or groups, relating to any trade or industry, if in his judgment such agreements will aid in effectuating the policy of this title with respect to transactions in or affecting interstate or foreign commerce, and will be consistent with the requirements of clause (2) of subsection (a) of section 3 for a code of fair competition.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 7, line 21, after the name "President", to insert "shall find that destructive wage or price cutting or other activities contrary to the policy of this title are being practiced in any geographical area or in any subdivision of any trade or industry, and."

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, there was an amendment pending to that particular amendment. That was the pending question, as I understood. The amendment was to strike from the amendment the words "in any geographical area."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment to the amendment just stated by the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I should like to inquire what amendment is before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the amendment.

The Chief Clerk again stated the amendment.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED] is interested in that amendment, and I think he desires to move to strike the language out. In his absence, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, will not the Senator withhold that suggestion for a moment? Let us pass the pending amendment over for the present and see if we cannot get along with other amendments. Then, when the Senator from Pennsylvania returns, we can recur to the amendment passed over.

Mr. McNARY. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? If not, the amendment will be passed over. The clerk will state the next amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 8, line 6, after the word "interstate", it is proposed to insert "or foreign."

REGULATION OF BANKING—DEPOSIT INSURANCE

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, what may prove to be the final conference on the bank bill will occur at 2 o'clock this afternoon, and I want to make a very brief suggestion in connection with that conference because I should dislike very much to see the many highly desirable objects of that legislation meet with failure. I think, perhaps, instead of losing time we may save time if I make a brief statement at the moment.

Mr. President, the primary difficulty in the conference attaches itself almost exclusively to my amendment providing for immediate insurance of bank deposits not only in Federal Reserve member banks, but also in State nonmember banks which are certified as solvent by their own State banking authorities. Instead of speaking of the situation in my own words which might be prejudiced I want to speak of it in the words of an editorial in the Washington Star of yesterday afternoon. Certainly the Star is conservative in its expressions and in its process of thinking. Certainly I can quote from the Star without any possibility of being charged with dealing in loose terms. I read:

The bank reform bill, passed by huge votes in both Senate and House, is in danger of being sidetracked, first, because of the failure of the two Houses to agree on its final terms, and second, because of the opposition of the administration to any immediate guaranty of bank deposits. No other legislation proposed during the present session of the Congress is more vital to public interest and to recovery in this country on permanent and stable lines than this bank-reform measure.

Mr. President, I digress to agree cordially with that observation and to say that in my judgment and in respect to my section of the United States it is infinitely more important to stabilize banking functions and to restore justified and adequate banking confidence than it is to proceed even with the great and ambitious project which is now the unfinished business before the Senate. The latter and all kindred efforts are futile without the former.

I continue to read:

If it fails to become a law the people will have just cause for complaint. The differences which exist are not insuperable and are capable of adjustment. Stiff-necked opposition at this juncture, with Congress approaching adjournment, is, after all, merely playing into the hands of those bankers who are opposed to this kind of legislation.

Mr. President, where is the "stiff-necked opposition" to which the editorial refers? Of course, I have my own idea as to the source of the stiff-necked opposition, but what obviously is the idea of the Washington Star itself? Let us see. I quote further:

The deposit-insurance feature of the bank reform bill has drawn the fire of many bankers and of the administration. As the bill passed the House the insurance of deposits sections were not to go into effect for a year. The Senate inserted the so-called "Vandenberg amendment", providing for immediate insurance of bank deposits up to $2,500. Opponents of insurance of deposits say that it would put a premium on bad banking.

I digress to observe that the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], who certainly is a conservative and dependable banking authority, completely answered that fallacious argument, completely set at naught any such suspicion or charge, and certainly his judgment in respect to that proposition ought to be conclusive.

I read further:

Opponents of insurance of deposits say that it would put a premium on bad banking; that some of the weaker banks would immediately close up and let the insurance fund pay off their depositors, and thus enable the stockholders and the directors of these banks to escape their personal liability under existing law.

The editorial itself then proceeds to answer that:

The answer to this latter criticism is that the weaker banks have not been permitted to reopen, and that until they are in a position to do business soundly they are not likely to reopen. As for putting a premium on bad banking, the system is likely to make the contributors to the insurance fund careful to compel good banking by all.

I submit that that conclusion is irrefutable. I read another sentence:

The supporters of bank-deposit insurance urge, and with justice—

I emphasize the phrase "with justice." It is true—and with justice, that proper reforms in the system, separating absolutely the commercial banking business from the investment banking, plus a reasonable insurance of bank deposits—

And it is nothing but a reasonable proposition which impends—

plus a reasonable insurance of bank deposits, will not only restore confidence but will also help develop an impregnable banking system.

Mr. President, that is the precise issue that hangs fire in the 2 o'clock conference between the Senate and the House. It is summed up by this impartial authority in simple but direct language:

Will not only restore confidence but will also help develop an impregnable banking system.

Until we restore an impregnable banking system in terms of popular confidence, adequate and justified confidence on the part of 40,000,000 bank depositors, all the rest of the legislation that is going through this extraordinary session of the Congress is calculated to proceed in hobbles and under fatal handicaps.

This is the proposition which now goes, perhaps, to final conference at 2 o'clock. What is the difficulty? The difficulty is a desire, first, to defeat deposit insurance; or, if that cannot be done, to postpone it to the point where it will be inadequate to meet the situation and thus ultimately will fall of its own weight.

I read headlines in the New York Herald Tribune of June 6, defining what is the issue in the conference. It is not an issue between the House of Representatives and the Senate. It is an issue between the Senate of the United States and the President and his Secretary of the Treasury. The headlines suffice to indicate what the issue is:

Roosevelt bars bank guaranty to start July 1. He indicates he would veto bill if Vandenberg amendment is adopted. Writes letter to GLASS. Danger of runs on nonmember units cited.

In the course of an entire column there is just one single paragraph of one or two sentences which indicates why it is argued that there might be some such menace as this in the immediate limited insurance of bank deposits under the pending Vandenberg amendment, and this is the paragraph:

In opposition to the Vandenberg amendment it is argued that the nonmember banks which cannot at once come under the protection of the fund pending a complete examination by State authorities will be at a serious disadvantage and might be subject to runs. On the other hand, it is contended that if the nonmember banks are allowed to come in without a careful examination they will wreck the insurance fund.

Mr. President, in my humble judgment, there is not a bit of justification for that contention at either end of the argument. Under the terms of the amendment to which the Senate practically unanimously assented on the unanimous recommendation of its own Committee on Banking and Currency, it is provided that every licensed Federal Reserve member bank automatically becomes a member of the temporary insurance fund on the 1st day of July, and that every nonmember State bank which is certified by its own State banking authority as solvent in respect to its unrestricted assets shall also come in on July 1 and participate in the insurance-fund protection. The very terms and purposes of the Vandenberg amendment are to avoid the precise basis of this alleged reason for opposing the amendment which the Senate attached to the banking bill. We have had the examinations in most instances already. State authorities can promptly complete any additional examinations. There will be equality of treatment and of protection. Meanwhile the limitation of insurance to $2,500 deposits is adequate protection to the insurance fund.

Let us pursue that one step farther. There is a very distinguished Democratic Member of the other House of Congress from my own State of Michigan who has gone into the public print in opposition to the amendment which the Senate attached to the banking bill. Let us see what his reasons are, they being in line with those to which I have already adverted. He said:

I fear that if the stronger banks take advantage of insurance claims immediately, others will be unable to reorganize.

He further suggests that his objection is that—

The clause making immediately effective the provisions of the measure would permit a few strong banks in a State to come under the insurance provision, while stockholders and depositors of smaller State banks were trying to raise sufficient cash to reopen and prevent loss to depositors.

In other words, the argument is that under this insurance formula which the Senate has approved, the big open banks will proceed to capitalize it, whereas the smaller banks, which have not yet reopened, cannot capitalize it and will be discouraged from reopening. But what are the facts? The facts are that there are scores and scores of these smaller banks waiting to reopen, having already gone through the initial process of tentative reorganization, ready to renew their community service, ready to take their place again in the banking function, but they do not dare to do it until there is a steel beam of public confidence built under the banking structure of the country, lest when they do reopen they will be drained of every penny in them within the first 24 hours that they proceed to function. This amendment means more to closed banks which are struggling to reopen than any other pending aid. It will permit them to open safely and successfully. The defeat of this immediate insurance, available to all solvent banks, whether in or out of the Federal Reserve System, will be a serious blow to the bank reopening prospectus and particularly to the smaller banks.

If there is one purpose more than another which is inherent in the amendment which is now at stake in this conference, it is the purpose to protect the smaller banking institutions, and to make the reopening of closed banks possible as speedily and as safely as it can be done. The very arguments that are used against the amendment by these administration spokesmen are the precise reasons why the amendment ought to stay in the bill.

Talk to me about this amendment favoring big banks instead of little ones. If that is so, why is it that Wall Street bankers within the last 24 hours have telephoned big bankers in my own State of Michigan and unsuccessfully sought to get them to tell me to surrender upon the deposit-insurance amendment? There is utterly no basis of sound reason for attacking the deposit-insurance section as it was written into this law by the Senate upon any such specious grounds as those that are presented by the administration in its opposition to this amendment.

And now, I repeat, the amendment goes into its final conference at 2 o'clock. Probably a compromise will be suggested which would postpone the time for the application of the emergency-insurance formula until January 1, 1934. In my judgment, any such postponement as that would be tantamount to saying to the depositors of this country, "The Government will not trust these banks until next New Year's"; and I do not know why they would not say to themselves, "We will not trust them until the Government does."

I can think of nothing more fatal than to write into law any kind of a deposit-insurance warrant which does not become immediately effective.

So this is what I rose to say:

Let us not in this conference try to compromise both sides of this controversy. Let us do one thing or the other. Let us proceed along the philosophy of immediate insurance action and the line of procedure which the Senate approved when it wrote the so-called "Vandenberg amendment" into the law, or let us eliminate all provisions of the pending law that have any relation whatsoever to bank insurance in them.

In other words, let us not out of this conference create a hybrid situation. Let us either create immediate deposit insurance under the emergency formula which the Senate approved or let us leave all insurance out of the law and leave the next Congress free to take it up and proceed de novo with the problem, without prejudicing the subject and without a notification to the people of the country that it will be 6 months before any of them dare trust their banks.

I personally should, of course, regret the complete exclusion of all insurance sections; but I should feel that despite the rejection of all insurance features—calamitous as I believe that would be—there still would remain a highly useful bank bill that most emphatically ought to pass for what it is worth and I want to help. But if you mortgage that bank bill with a compromised and postponed insurance formula, it will have more of liability than of asset in it, and I should consider the bill to be exceedingly dangerous and I should find it necessary to oppose the conference report to the best of my ability.

Therefore, I suggest to the conferees that they do one thing or the other: Let us either insure deposits, or decline to insure them. And I make this further suggestion in conclusion:

The conferences thus far in respect to this measure have been chiefly between the White House and the Congress. I suggest that the congressional conferees continue to do what they think they ought to do on their own congressional responsibility. I suggest that this amendment be taken to the floor of the House for a roll-call vote to see whether the House wants to reject it or not. Then I suggest that we conclude the bill as we think it ought to be concluded, and let Executive authority speak in its own time and in its own constitutional way if it is dissatisfied with the net result. In conclusion I wish to express my deep personal appreciation to the Senate members of the conference for their effective and zealous fidelity to the so-called "Vandenberg amendment" and the Senate's approval of it.

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5755) to encourage national industrial recovery, to foster fair competition, and to provide for the construction of certain useful public works, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate passed over temporarily paragraph (b) of section 4 because of the absence of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED]. He is now present, and the Senate will return to the consideration of that section.

The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 7, line 21, after the word "President", it is proposed to insert:

shall find that destructive wage or price cutting or other activities contrary to the policy of this title are being practiced in any geographical area or in any subdivision of any trade or industry, and—

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MCKELLAR in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment was, on page 8, line 6, after the word "interstate", to insert "or foreign"; and in the same line, after the word "commerce", to insert "in such geographical area or subdivision", so as to read:

(b) Whenever the President shall find that destructive wage or price cutting or other activities contrary to the policy of this title are being practiced in any geographical area or in any subdivision of any trade or industry, and, after such public notice and hearing as he shall specify, shall find it essential to license business enterprises in order to make effective a code of fair competition or an agreement under this title or otherwise to effectuate the policy of this title, and shall publicly so announce, no person shall, after a date fixed in such announcement, engage in or carry on any business, in or affecting interstate or foreign commerce, in such geographical area or subdivision, specified in such announcement, unless he shall have first obtained a license issued pursuant to such regulations as the President shall prescribe. The President may suspend or revoke any such license, after due notice and opportunity for hearing, for violations of the terms or conditions thereof. Any order of the President suspending or revoking any such license shall be final if in accordance with law. Any person who, without such a license or in violation of any condition thereof, carries on any such business for which a license is so required, shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $500, or imprisoned not more than 6 months, or both, and each day such violation continues shall be deemed a separate offense.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 8, line 20, after the word "offense", to insert:

Notwithstanding the provisions of section 2 (c), this subsection shall cease to be in effect at the expiration of 1 year after the date of enactment of this act or sooner if the President shall by proclamation or the Congress shall by joint resolution declare that the emergency recognized by section 1 has ended.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 9, line 1, after the word "effect", to insert "(or in the case of a license, while section 4 (a) is in effect)", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 5. While this title is in effect (or in the case of a license, while section 4 (a) is in effect) and for 60 days thereafter, any code, agreement, or license approved, prescribed, or issued and in effect under this title, and any action complying with the provisions thereof taken during such period, shall be exempt from the provisions of the antitrust laws of the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Limitations upon application of title", on page 10, line 11, before the word "or", to strike out "self organizations" and insert "self-organization", so as to read:

SEC. 7. (a) Every code of fair competition, agreement, and license approved, prescribed, or issued under this title shall contain the following conditions: (1) That employees shall have the right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and shall be free from the interference, restraint, or coercion of employers of labor, or their agents, in the designation of such representatives or in self-organization or in other concerted activities for the purposes of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 10, line 13, after the word "protection", to insert a colon and the following: "Provided, That nothing in this title shall be construed to compel a change in existing satisfactory relationships between the employees and employers of any particular plant, firm, or corporation, except that the employees of any particular plant, firm, or corporation shall have the right to organize for the purpose of collective bargaining with their employer as to wages, hours of labor, and other conditions of employment"; in line 23, before the words "a labor organization", to insert a comma and "organizing, or assisting"; and on page 11, line 2, after the word "other", to strike out "working conditions" and insert "conditions of employment", so as to read:

Provided, That nothing in this title shall be construed to compel a change in existing satisfactory relationships between the employees and employers of any particular plant, firm, or corporation, except that the employees of any particular plant, firm, or corporation shall have the right to organize for the purpose of collective bargaining with their employer as to wages, hours of labor, and other conditions of employment; (2) that no employee and no one seeking employment shall be required as a condition of employment to join any company union or to refrain from joining, organizing, or assisting a labor organization of his own choosing; and (3) that employers shall comply with the maximum hours of labor, minimum rates of pay, and other conditions of employment approved or prescribed by the President.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 11, line 10, after the word "other", to strike out "working conditions" and insert "conditions of employment", so as to read:

(b) The President shall, so far as practicable, afford every opportunity to employers and employees in any trade or industry or subdivision thereof with respect to which the conditions referred to in clauses (1) and (2) of subsection (a) prevail, to establish by mutual agreement, the standards as to the maximum hours of labor, minimum rates of pay, and such other conditions of employment as may be necessary in such trade or industry or subdivision thereof to effectuate the policy of this title; and the standards established in such agreements, when approved by the President, shall have the same effect as a code of fair competition, approved by the President under subsection (a) of section 3.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 11, line 19, after the word "and", to strike out "working conditions" and insert "conditions of employment"; in line 25, after the word "other", to strike out "working conditions" and insert "conditions of employment", so as to read:

(c) Where no such mutual agreement has been approved by the President he may investigate the labor practices, policies, wages, hours of labor, and conditions of employment in such trade or industry or subdivision thereof; and upon the basis of such investigations, and after such hearings as the President finds advisable, he is authorized to prescribe a limited code of fair competition fixing such maximum hours of labor, minimum rates of pay, and other conditions of employment in the trade or industry or subdivision thereof investigated as he finds to be necessary to effectuate the policy of this title, which shall have the same effect as a code of fair competition approved by the President under subsection (a) of section 3. The President may differentiate according to experience and skill of the employees affected and according to the locality of employment; but no attempt shall be made to introduce any classification according to the nature of the work involved which might tend to set a maximum as well as a minimum wage.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 12, line 13, after the word "corporation", to insert a semicolon and the following: "and the terms 'interstate and foreign commerce' and 'interstate or foreign commerce' include, except where otherwise indicated, trade or commerce among the several States and with foreign nations, or between the District of Columbia or any Territory of the United States and any State, Territory, or foreign nation, or between any insular possessions or other places under the jurisdiction of the United States, or between any such possession or place and any State or Territory of the United States or the District of Columbia or any foreign nation, or within the District of Columbia or any Territory or any insular possession or other place under the jurisdiction of the United States", so as to read:

(d) As used in this title, the term "person" includes any individual, partnership, association, trust, or corporation; and the terms "interstate and foreign commerce" and "interstate or foreign commerce" include, except where otherwise indicated, trade or commerce among the several States and with foreign nations, or between the District of Columbia or any Territory of the United States and any State, Territory, or foreign nation, or between any insular possessions or other places under the jurisdiction of the United States, or between any such possession or place and any State or Territory of the United States or the District of Columbia or any foreign nation, or within the District of Columbia or any Territory or any insular possession or other place under the jurisdiction of the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Application of agricultural adjustment act", on page 13, after line 1, to strike out:

SEC. 8. This title shall not be construed to repeal or modify any of the provisions of the act entitled "An act to relieve the existing national economic emergency by increasing agricultural purchasing power, to raise revenue for extraordinary expenses incurred by reason of such emergency, to provide emergency relief with respect to agricultural indebtedness, to provide for the orderly liquidation of joint-stock land banks, and for other purposes", approved May 12, 1933.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

SEC. 8. (a) This title shall not be construed to repeal or modify any of the provisions of title I of the act entitled "An act to relieve the existing national economic emergency by increasing agricultural purchasing power, to raise revenue for extraordinary expenses incurred by reason of such emergency, to provide emergency relief with respect to agricultural indebtedness, to provide for the orderly liquidation of joint-stock land banks, and for other purposes", approved May 12, 1933; and such title I of said act approved May 12, 1933, may for all purposes be hereafter referred to as the "Agricultural Adjustment Act."

(b) The President may, in his discretion, in order to avoid conflicts in the administration of the Agricultural Adjustment Act and this title, delegate any of his functions and powers under this title with respect to trades, industries, or subdivisions thereof which are engaged in the handling of any agricultural commodity or product thereof, or of any competing commodity or product thereof, to the Secretary of Agriculture.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 14, after line 4, to insert the following additional section:

OIL REGULATION

SEC. 9. (a) The President is further authorized to initiate before the Interstate Commerce Commission proceedings necessary to prescribe regulations to control the operations of oil pipe lines and to fix reasonable compensatory rates for the transportation of petroleum and its products by pipe lines, and the Interstate Commerce Commission shall grant preference to the hearings and determination of such cases.

(b) The President is authorized to institute proceedings to divorce from any holding company any pipe-line company controlled by such holding company which pipe-line company by unfair practices or by exorbitant rates in the transportation of petroleum or its products tends to create a monopoly.

(c) The President is authorized to prohibit the transportation in interstate and foreign commerce of petroleum and the products thereof produced or withdrawn from storage in excess of the amount permitted to be produced or withdrawn from storage by any State law or valid regulation or order prescribed thereunder, by any board, commission, officer, or other duly authorized agency of a State. Any violation of any order of the President issued under the provisions of this subsection shall be punishable by fine of not to exceed $1,000, or imprisonment for not to exceed 6 months, or both.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I ask that the oil regulation part of the bill be not considered at this time, but be passed over, because that will provoke some controversy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the provision on page 14, under "Oil regulation", will be passed over temporarily.

Mr. HARRISON. That concludes the Senate committee amendments with the exception of one with reference to the embargo, for which we are trying to prepare a substitute—it will be ready in a short time—which I desire to have passed over for the present.

Mr. REED. There is one on line 10, page 15, which has not been agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes; the Chair calls the attention of the Senator from Mississippi to the fact that there is a committee amendment on page 15, line 10, which has not been acted upon. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 15, line 10, after the word "competition", it is proposed to insert "and agreements", so as to read:

RULES AND REGULATIONS

SEC. 10. (a) The President is authorized to prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this title, and fees for licenses and for filing codes of fair competition and agreements, and any violation of any such rule or regulation shall be punishable by fine of not to exceed $500, or imprisonment for not to exceed 6 months, or both.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARRISON. I ask unanimous consent now, as to title I, so that we can close that title, that individual amendments may be offered to it before we proceed with the consideration of Senate committee amendments in title II.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, individual amendments to title I will now be offered.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, has it been agreed that all amendments to title I shall be disposed of before the Senate shall proceed to consider title II?

Mr. HARRISON. That was what I asked unanimous consent for, the only exception being the embargo provision, which was the subject of the amendment of the Senator from Pennsylvania—we will confer about that—and the oil provision, both of which are passed over temporarily. Aside from those, I desire to close title I and proceed to title II.

Mr. REED. I did not interpret the Senator's request to mean exactly that. I am in full accord with him, and I hope the Senate will proceed in that way. I think, however, that all amendments to title I should be cleaned up before the Senate passes on to title II.

Mr. HARRISON. That is what I intended by my request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Individual amendments to title I are now in order.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia.

Mr. REED. I think I have the floor, have I not? I am glad to yield to the Senator from Georgia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thought the Senator from Pennsylvania had given up the floor.

Mr. GEORGE. I did not know that the unanimous-consent agreement had been entered into. I know that the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK] has an amendment to title I.

Mr. REED. If the Senator from Georgia is asking about the proposed amendment of the Senator from Alabama on page 7, line 23, to cut out the words "in any geographical area", I may say that I am advised that that amendment never was actually offered, and that the Senate's action has been an acceptance of the committee amendment exactly as it is printed in the bill.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I do not want to take any issue about it; but the Senator from Alabama did offer that amendment, and there are others of us who are interested in the amendment. Unless that language can be taken out, at some other time in the consideration of this measure I shall move to strike the entire licensing provision from the bill. I merely wanted to reserve the right at this time, so that it would not be precluded to bring up this matter for consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the unanimous-consent agreement heretofore made, individual amendments are in order now.

Mr. GEORGE. I understand that they are in order now, Mr. President; but there are some of us who have some other engagements so pressing that at the moment we cannot remain on the floor. I shall myself move to strike the licensing provision from the bill unless we have consideration of this special amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK]; and I merely wanted to reserve that right, if I can have that consideration.

Mr. REED. I am about to propose an amendment to strike from the bill the entire paragraph (b) of section 4—that is, the licensing feature.

Mr. GEORGE. Is the Senator about to press that amendment at this moment?

Mr. REED. Unless something else is preferred by the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. HARRISON. The Senate has taken action on that amendment; but I ask unanimous consent that it may be reconsidered and that that matter may be passed over for the present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARRISON. Let the Senator now present his motion to strike the licensing provision from the bill, if he desires.

Mr. REED. No; I want the licensing paragraph to be finally acted on and its form finally determined before I move to strike it out.

Mr. HARRISON. Then let us take up this amendment in which the Senator from Alabama was interested, so that we can get through with that, and then proceed along with the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the adoption of subsection (b) on page 7.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK] was called out of the Chamber. We cannot remain here continuously, from 10 until 2 o'clock, without absenting ourselves momentarily from the Senate Chamber. I certainly do not want to delay the consideration of this bill, but I do want a consideration of this particular matter. If the Senator from Mississippi is going to insist upon it, I shall move to strike out "in any geographical area or" on page 7, and the same language on page 8 of the bill.

Mr. HARRISON. May I say to the Senator from Georgia that I am not insisting particularly on any proposition in that regard, because this amendment was offered in the committee, and, of course, I feel that I ought to stand by the action of the committee; but General Johnson, when he appeared before the committee, said he did not think it was necessary as to this matter. I asked unanimous consent for the reconsideration of the vote by which it was adopted in order to get the matter before the Senate, so that we could dispose of it.

Mr. GEORGE. I make that motion, Mr. President, and suggest the absence of a quorum unless it is accepted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum is suggested. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Copeland	Kean	Reynolds
Ashurst	Costigan	Kendrick	Robinson, Ark.
Austin	Cutting	Keyes	Robinson, Ind.
Bachman	Davis	King	Russell
Bailey	Dickinson	La Follette	Schall
Bankhead	Dieterich	Lewis	Sheppard
Barbour	Dill	Logan	Shipstead
Barkley	Duffy	Lonergan	Smith
Black	Erickson	Long	Steiwer
Bone	Fess	McAdoo	Stephens
Borah	Fletcher	McCarran	Thomas, Okla.
Bratton	Frazier	McGill	Thomas, Utah
Brown	George	McKellar	Thompson
Bulkley	Glass	McNary	Townsend
Bulow	Goldsborough	Metcalf	Trammell
Byrd	Gore	Murphy	Tydings
Byrnes	Hale	Neely	Vandenberg
Capper	Harrison	Norris	Van Nuys
Caraway	Hastings	Nye	Wagner
Carey	Hatfield	Overton	Walcott
Clark	Hayden	Patterson	Walsh
Connally	Hebert	Pope	Wheeler
Coolidge	Johnson	Reed	White

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Ninety-two Senators having answered to their names, there is a quorum present.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, what is the pending question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending question is the amendment offered by the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] to strike out, on page 7, line 23, the words "in any geographical area or."

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I may say to the Senator from Alabama that that is the amendment he had previously offered, both on page 7, line 23, and on the following page, line 7. I offered the amendment because for the moment the Senator from Alabama was not in the Chamber. I understand it to be the same amendment the Senator offered.

Mr. BLACK. That is correct.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, may I say to the Senator from Alabama that this provision was inserted in the committee on motion of someone—I have forgotten who—and at the time it was put in, it was thought the matter was taken care of by the broad provisions of the bill. Personally, I have no objection, and do not care whether it is in or out, but I should like to have a vote on it one way or the other.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I suggest to the Senator from Alabama that, in addition to striking out the words "in any geographical area or", he ask to have inserted in line 24, after the word "in", the words "any trade or industry or any subdivision thereof", and the insertion of the same language on line 7, page 8, or to strike out the words "in any subdivision of any trade or industry." Otherwise the amendment would not be entirely grammatical and would probably be meaningless.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I think the Senator is correct, and I modify the amendment, if my amendment is the one pending. I understood the Senator's amendment to be pending now. That being the case, I suggest that the Senator modify his amendment.

Mr. GEORGE. I offered the amendment, but solely because the Senator from Alabama was out of the Chamber at the moment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 23, page 7, to strike out the words "in any geographical area or", and after the word "in", on line 24, to insert the words "any trade or industry or"; also to strike out in line 24 the words "any trade or industry", so as to read:

(b) Whenever the President shall find that destructive wage or price cutting or other activities contrary to the policy of this title are being practiced in any trade or industry or any subdivision thereof, and, after such public notice and hearing as he shall specify.

Mr. BLACK obtained the floor.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Georgia, or perhaps the Senator from Alabama, the object of striking out the words "in any geographical area."

Mr. BLACK. I was just about to explain that. If the Senate will look at page 12, lines 5 to 7, it will be found that rules and regulations may be prescribed which differentiate according to experience and skill of employees affected, and according to the locality of employment, so that insofar as prescribing rules and regulations is concerned, there will be absolute authority to prescribe them according to the locality of employment.

When we turn back to the amendment which has just been offered, on page 7, we find that this is with reference to licenses, and that, whenever the President shall find that destructive wage or price cutting or other activities contrary to the policy of this title are being practiced, after public notice and hearing he may find it essential to license business enterprises in order to effect a method of fair competition, or an agreement under this title, and that he can then limit the action to the geographical area or subdivision.

I will state, as clearly as I can, the reason why I do not think that should be permitted. Several months ago there was a strike in Alabama in the mining industry. A few weeks ago there was a strike in Pennsylvania in some particular industry, I have forgotten what it was. I recall some girls were out on strike. That would be an evidence that there might be some unfair practices going on in those two States. It may be true that there are just as unfair practices in 25 other States in the same industries.

It is my understanding, if I correctly conceive the philosophy of the pending bill, that we are to organize this country by trade associations, which are to be comprised of the members of the particular industries, the idea being to prescribe rules and regulations for a particular industry, and those engaged in it, either as to labor, or as to employers.

I strenuously object to having any one State marked off with lines around it, and the statement made to the public that there is an infection in that State in a particular industry. It seems to me that we should either have the rules applied to an entire industry or that they should not apply to it at all. I can see nothing fair, when there might be an investigation of some complaint made about one State, saying that we will require every person engaged in the business in that State, drawing a line around it, to be licensed, but that we will make no such requirement of those engaged in the same industry in any other State. I am very frank to state that I can very readily see where that might absolutely destroy the business of a State.

Some complaint has been made about the textile industry, for instance. I have made some complaint myself.

I have placed information in the RECORD with reference to the long hours worked in certain textile mills in the South, and with reference to the long hours required in the East; but that does not mean that it would be fair to draw a line around a particular State and announce to the public that there are sweatshops in that State, and bring about the antagonism which would result on the part of the public engaged in buying the goods.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, it seems to me that the words "any geographical area" are surplusage, because if the President should find that in a particular State there was a condition with which he desired to deal, he could treat it as a subdivision of the particular trade or industry.

Mr. BLACK. May I state to the Senator that he is correct; but if he will turn to the next page, line 7, he will find that the regulations would be issued, not with reference to the trade or industry but with reference to the geographical area or subdivision. It is to the combined effect of the two amendments that I object. If it were limited to the first, I would have no objection whatever, because it would be immaterial where the unfair trade practice was indulged in; but it becomes of vital importance to a State not to have drawn by a Presidential decree a line around it and the information given to the public that we will require every individual engaged in the business in that State to be licensed because some are running sweatshops or because they are engaged in unfair practices. The point I make is that when the rules and regulations are prescribed they should fit the entire association. The mere fact that a discovery is made that there has been some unfair practice in one place does not mean there are not unfair practices in others. The entire results of the operation of industry show it has been unfair all over the United States. Were that not true the employers could not receive more than their part while labor has received less than its part, thereby bringing about a lack of equilibrium between purchasing power and manufacturing profits.

Mr. President, I have tried to explain just exactly why I do not think it is fair. If a line be drawn around 1 State or around 3 or 4 States an antagonism is created on the part of the whole country against that area; and, I do not care whether it is in the North, the South, or the East, or the West, I believe it is unfair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] as modified by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK].

Mr. REED. Mr. President, the Senator from Alabama is right when he says that it seems unfair to pick out a single State and expose it to the hostility of all the other 47 States, but it is just as true that it is unfair to place this licensing system on the industries which have not at all offended because of an offense committed all the way across the country.

Take coal mining, for example. It may well be that in the mines in the State of Washington some unfair practice is indulged. That ought not to be a reason for requiring every coal mine in Alabama, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania to have to come running to Washington to get a license. That is the most drastic remedy conceivable, and that is added here in addition to the penal provisions for violating the code. To require somebody in Alabama to take out a license because we in Pennsylvania have cut wages or run a sweatshop seems to me to be the height of injustice. If the measure is defensible at all it ought to be applied where the trouble is and applied against the wrongdoer and not applied against innocent people who have observed the law.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. BLACK. There is, of course, much logic in what the Senator from Pennsylvania has stated; but, carried to the final conclusion, it would mean that no one should be required to obtain a license except an offender. You could not have any geographical area at all, either State, county, or Nation, if you would apply it only to the offender, as I see it, wherever he might be. He can be required to get a license, but if anyone else should be required to get a license in any geographical area it would be punishing an innocent person if that person had not violated these rules.

Mr. REED. I see that. The offender and his immediate competitors would be required to have a license, and some innocent people would be inconvenienced; but that is no reason for spreading the injustice all over the United States. Suppose, for example, a processor in the State of Maine cuts wages too low or operates too long hours—why punish people in California for that? That is what is proposed to be done, because this whole licensing system is punishment; it is intended only for punishment. It is the last weapon in the President's hands to compel compliance with these codes of fair competition, as they are called. It is not enough, say the sponsors of the bill, to punish people criminally and send them to the penitentiary for failing to live up to these codes, but they are going to be deprived of their very right to do business at all. It is a shocking provision, I think, and I am going to move to strike out the whole paragraph; but if it is going to stay in, certainly this unfairness ought not to be perpetrated in whole regions where no offense whatever has been committed.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, just a word about the history of this amendment. The Chairman of the Committee on Finance has said that he was entirely indifferent about the amendment; that it made no difference, so far as he was concerned, whether the amendment remained in or came out.

This amendment was accepted by the committee, but it was accepted without consideration of the language in the amendment. The portion of the amendment that was considered was that portion which limited and restricted the licensing power to those cases where it was found that destructively low wages or price cutting or other activities contrary to the policy of this title were being practiced.

General Johnson, who was present in the committee, said that, in his opinion, the amendment was not proper, or, at least, was unnecessary, but if the committee wished to adopt it, it might accept a limitation upon the broad power of licensing which this section would otherwise prescribe. After the committee had passed upon that question General Johnson produced this amendment and said, if it were desired, this amendment might be inserted, and that it would operate as a general limitation upon the board power to license on account of any matter or thing that might have been covered in the code. This particular language was not considered.

There is no argument against striking out the language "in any geographical area", although the Senator from Pennsylvania has undertaken to submit an argument. He has suggested if there be offending units of an industry located in a particular section or scattered throughout the country that those units only should be licensed to live up to the code which other units of the industry were willingly and voluntarily carrying out. If that be true, if there are found to be abuses in the industry as a whole, what is the valid objection to requiring every member of the industry to operate under the license?

Obviously those who are keeping faith, who are abiding by the code, have assumed no additional burden, and obviously it is a physical and moral impossibility for an administrator here in Washington to know the conditions existing throughout a whole industry; and in view of his lack of knowledge, why should a license be required in a particular locality while at the same time making no requirement as to the industry in other parts of the country?

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield to the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. TYDINGS. As a member of the committee I should like to ask the Senator whether or not it was the committee's opinion that this bill would increase the production and consumption of commodities?

Mr. GEORGE. I do not know that I am able to answer the Senator on that point, because the committee's opinion was not taken upon it; but it was the hope of the committee that this bill would increase employment. Whether that will necessarily carry with it an increase in production is, of course, to be considered along with the other provisions of the bill which look to a shorter working hour and a shorter working week.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. TYDINGS. I can understand the very commendable desire to eliminate the sweatshop and to reduce hours of employment where there are abuses along that line, and I can understand how provisions or measures to accomplish that end should be inserted in the bill; but I cannot understand, as seems to be the opinion of the sponsors of the bill, how production will be increased, which implies, of course, that the consumption of products will have to be increased. I can see no provision in this bill, insofar as I have been able to study it, which opens up one new avenue of production or of consumption. I cannot see where one more pair of shoes is going to be produced or worn than would be produced or consumed in any event. If anybody who has made a study of the bill believes that it will increase production and consumption, I certainly shall be grateful if they will explain to me how that is to be accomplished so that I may vote upon the bill with a great deal more intelligence than I seem to have at the present time from the explanations made.

If the Senator from Georgia will permit me further, as I understand, these requirements are bound to increase, though to a small degree, the price of articles produced. It seems to me that if we increase the cost of an article, we will to that extent diminish its consumption, and that therefore the bill will strike at production rather than increase it.

I am not saying that the price of an article should not be raised, perhaps, if fair labor conditions justify the raising of the price; but, under the law of economics, if the cost of an article is increased, its consumption is reduced, and I have not heard from anybody who has spoken so far a single statement to indicate how there is to be any more production under this bill than will occur anyway.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I am speaking directly to this amendment, and if I have not made clear what I have in mind, I desire to repeat it. If any part of an industry, any division of an industry is to be licensed, manifestly the requirement will put no undue burden upon all parts of the industry which desire to live up to the code or practice prescribed or agreed upon; but to retain the language in the bill which will require the licensing only of the industry or division of industry operating in a particular geographical area would, of course, condemn the industry in that area to destruction. There would be no way for the industry to survive. If, for instance, the President should say that a given industry in the State of California has been found to have violated certain provisions of the code of fair practice and should require that industry only to take out a license, before the industry could be heard by the public, before it could make its voice potent, it would be utterly destroyed.

The state of popular opinion would be such as to condemn all of the units of the industry in that area. There would be offenders within the area, and there would be innocent industries within that area, but the provision is not for the licensing of the offenders but of the industry as a whole in a given area. I take it that every Senator upon the floor will agree that it would be difficult to find any particular area in which every unit of the same industry was violating the provisions of the code of fair practice. Therefore, it seems to me that the amendment should be adopted, to the end that if a license is required it may be required of the industry or of the particular branch of the industry, which I understand the word "subdivision" here to indicate, in which the offense is found to exist.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Georgia yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Might we not employ both, the one contemplated by the Senator from Alabama and the other contemplated by the Senator from Pennsylvania, if the license were required only from the offender?

Mr. GEORGE. Yes; that would be true. If there is to be a limitation it ought to be restricted to the offending unit of the industry, in fairness, because a general provision that the industry in a particular State or in a group of States should be required to obtain a license, whereas the same industry in other parts of the country be allowed to operate without license, would obviously destroy all the innocent units of the industry in the territory affected or covered by the order.

Also I apprehend that if the licensing system is to be of service, and I grant that it is one of the most drastic provisions in the bill, it cannot effectively be imposed after an investigation of the entire industry has taken place. Suppose complaint should be made to the President that in the cotton textile industry, which is scattered very nearly over the entire country, and in a particular manufacturing plant or unit of that industry the code was being violated with respect to hours or wages or other conditions of competition. If the President must withhold his order requiring a license until he can investigate the entire cotton textile industry, the provision is largely useless. It would require a year or longer to do it with any degree of fairness. If he should require the industries in a particular geographical area to obtain a license upon proof of violation of a code practice by one unit or two units in that area, it would be manifestly unjust, it would be obviously unfair to require that license without any examination of practices which were going on elsewhere and when the particular unfair practice may have been resorted to in an effort by a unit of the industry to avoid destruction by other units of the industry, engaged in even more reprehensible and more destructive practices.

If the theory of this limitation in the licensing section is to be retained, it should be provided that the license should be required only after the particular industry had been investigated and found to be an offender, or it should provide that the license should be indiscriminately required of the industry as a whole or the particular offending branch or subdivision thereof.

I express the hope that the Senate may agree to the amendment which I have offered, because the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK], who had first offered it, was temporarily out of the Chamber.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. KING. If the amendment should be adopted now without tendering any further amendment, would that debar proposing an amendment to the same amendment at a later period?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands it would not.

Mr. KING. I desire to offer, and I give notice of it now, though I shall not give the phraseology textually, an amendment to this effect: Following the word "activities" and preceding the word "contrary" in line 22, I shall propose to insert substantially as follows: "Or that monopolistic control of any industry or product has been resorted to", so it would read:

Whenever the President shall find that destructive wage or price cutting or that monopolistic control of any industry or product has been resorted to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator can offer his amendment after the pending amendment is disposed of.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. ASHURST. Have we not agreed to a unanimous consent whereby we should consider only committee amendments?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. With the exception of two amendments which have gone over temporarily, all committee amendments to this title have been disposed of.

Mr. ASHURST. In other words, amendments to the text may be offered later?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. After the pending amendment of the Senator from Georgia is disposed of, amendments to title I may be tendered.

Mr. HARRISON. As soon as these amendments to title I are out of the way individual amendments may be offered.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, if I understood the answer to the question of the Senator from Arizona, all amendments to title I have been disposed of?

Mr. HARRISON. No; there are two committee amendments that have been passed over.

Mr. NORRIS. I have in mind an amendment on page 10, the proviso commencing in line 13. Has that amendment been passed over?

Mr. HARRISON. No; that amendment was adopted.

Mr. NORRIS. I wonder if the Senator would consent that that might be reconsidered? I have been called from the Chamber several times, and I desire to oppose the adoption of that amendment.

Mr. HARRISON. Of course, I shall raise no objection if the Senator wants a reconsideration, although I hope that we may again adopt it.

Mr. NORRIS. I do not want to delay the bill, but it seems to me that the amendment is very objectionable.

Mr. HARRISON. I ask unanimous consent that the vote by which the amendment referred to by the Senator from Nebraska was adopted may be reconsidered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE].

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I should dislike to do so, but the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED] wanted to be present, and unless a vote on the amendment of the Senator from Georgia can be postponed a little while I shall have to suggest the absence of a quorum. I do not want to kill time, but I want to give the Senator from Pennsylvania an opportunity to be here.

Mr. HARRISON. I ask that the vote be postponed until the Senator from Pennsylvania returns.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi asks unanimous consent that the vote on the amendment of the Senator from Georgia be postponed temporarily. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, until the Senator from Pennsylvania returns to the Chamber, so that time may not be lost, may I offer an amendment to the text. On page 5, line 14, I move to strike out the words "several district attorneys of the United States in their respective districts under the direction of the Attorney General", and to insert in lieu thereof "Federal Trade Commission", so that subsection (c) would read:

The Federal district courts of the United States are hereby invested with jurisdiction to prevent and restrain violations of any code of fair competition approved under this title; and it shall be the duty of the Federal Trade Commission to institute proceedings in equity to prevent and restrain such violations.

I do not offer this amendment because of any lack of faith in the head of the Department of Justice. On the other hand, I have high admiration for the present Attorney General, Mr. Cummings; his talents and character are much to be admired, and no doubt a vast majority of the district attorneys would be alert and astute looking to the discharge of the duty laid upon here. It seems to me, in order for the bill to be symmetrical, in order that the policy and philosophy of the bill may not be interrupted and marred, that the Federal Trade Commission should be given the authority to institute proceedings in equity to restrain violations.

I do not wish to make a long argument; indeed, I do not know what more I could say than I have said. Logically, philosophically, and as a matter of mechanics, it seems to me it should be the duty of the Federal Trade Commission to institute proceedings in equity.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arizona yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Under the practice that has grown up in the Federal Trade Commission they do not have to bring any suit in equity. They have authority to issue orders to cease and desist wherever they have made an investigation and found that there has been unfair practice within the meaning of the Federal Trade Act.

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator is correct.

Mr. BARKLEY. So there is no need to confer upon them any power to bring a suit.

Mr. ASHURST. Under this bill it would be expedient and wise to give the Federal Trade Commission the power to institute proceedings in equity.

Mr. BARKLEY. As I said, that is not the way they go about stopping violations.

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator is correct about that.

Mr. BARKLEY. But as a matter of fact, and we had a good deal of discussion about the two sections in the committee, it seems to me it would be unwise to supplant the district attorney in any equity proceeding in the Federal court by allowing the Federal Trade Commission to bring it, without regard to him or the Attorney General either. United States district attorneys are supposed to operate under the direction of the Attorney General in controlling suits that are instituted by the United States in the Federal courts.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Arizona withhold his amendment temporarily while the amendment of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], which was pending, may be disposed of? The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED] has returned to the Chamber and we can dispose of it, I think, in a moment or two.

Mr. ASHURST. I am very glad to do so.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE].

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I have no disposition to delay a vote and shall not speak long. It seems to me the amendment ought not to prevail, that the action of the Finance Committee was wise and should be sustained. As I recall it, the committee was unanimous in adopting the amendment in the form in which it appears in the printed bill. The amendment in that form was brought to us by General Johnson at the request of the President, with the President's approval, and it is only just——

Mr. GEORGE. O Mr. President, I do not want the Senator to make that statement because I am sure he is not advised.

Mr. REED. General Johnson so stated.

Mr. GEORGE. He never said at all that the President had approved the amendment. General Johnson said the amendment ought not to be adopted in any part of it, but if the committee wanted to make an amendment that he had no objection to this particular amendment.

Mr. REED. He gave us clearly to understand that the amendment which he had there prepared and written out had the approval of President Roosevelt. I myself know nothing of that. I have not endeavored to confirm my impression. It certainly came from General Johnson, and I think most of the members of the committee had the same impression that I had, that he was authorized by the President to offer it.

Be that as it may, the amendment is wise in its present form, because it is the height of injustice to impose this drastic penalty upon persons engaged in trade or commerce in one part of the United States on the theory that somebody in a totally different part of the country has violated the code of fair competition. Why California should be penalized for some impropriety committed in Pennsylvania, for example, is beyond my power to understand. Yet this very drastic licensing power will be imposed upon everyone in this broad land all because in one little restricted district some improper practice had occurred. I am sure the Senate does not want that to happen.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President——

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, a point of order. What is the amendment we have before us now? We have changed back, I understand, to something we have already considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the pending amendment for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 7, lines 23 and 24, the Senator from Georgia proposes to strike out "geographical area or in any subdivision of any trade or industry, and" and to insert "trade or industry or any subdivision thereof, and", so that, if amended, it will read:

(b) Whenever the President shall find that destructive wage or price cutting or other activities contrary to the policy of this title are being practiced in any trade or industry or any subdivision thereof, and, after such public notice and hearing as he shall specify, shall find it essential to license business enterprises in order to make effective a code of fair competition or an agreement under this title or otherwise to effectuate the policy of this title, and shall publicly so announce, etc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Georgia to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Georgia just what this amendment means?

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I have explained the amendment, but I shall be glad to do so again. It means that if a license is required of any industry or branch of an industry, it must be required of every unit in that industry; that the President will not be authorized to limit his orders to the industries found in a particular geographical area, but if he should find violations in the industry or branch thereof he should require the industry generally, or branch of the industry, to obtain licenses.

Mr. President, let me repeat what I have previously said. The Finance Committee was considering this particular subsection (b) of section 4; and after some discussion of it, it at one time having been voted out of the bill, it was suggested by General Johnson, who was present in the committee, that if the committee desired a limiting amendment, the discussion having been directed primarily at the unlimited scope of the code, or the code of fair practice, this amendment was not objectionable. As a matter of fact, both General Johnson and Mr. Richberg were present, and they said that this amendment was not objectionable, although in their opinion no amendment whatever was necessary or even desirable, but that he, General Johnson at least, would have no objection to this amendment.

The amendment contained the language which I have now moved and the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK] first moved to strike out, to wit, "or in any geographical area." The amendment was offered by those who were favorable to the bill, and who had been instrumental in its preparation, with a view to satisfying certain opposition which existed, because some members of the committee did not want to require a license of any industry in order to compel compliance with anything that might have been covered by the code of fair practice.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Georgia yield to the Senator from Maine?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield for a question.

Mr. WHITE. As I understand the situation, if in my home town there are 15 companies engaged in the manufacture of shoes, and one of them indulges in price-cutting or some other unfair practice, all of the shoe manufacturers in that town, coming within that geographical area, would be obliged to obtain a license under this provision of the law in order to do business. Now, I understand the Senator's amendment to strike out the reference to geographical area, and to insert in lieu of that a reference to a trade.

What practical difference is there if in this same home town of mine, with, say, these same 15 factories, one of them being engaged in that trade, carrying on that particular shoe business, does precisely the same thing—engages in wage-cutting or in some unfair practice? Where is the practical difference in the application of the two methods? I should appreciate it if the Senator would explain that.

Mr. GEORGE. This is the practical difference; and the Senator has put a complete illustration:

If in his home town there are 15 manufacturers of shoes and only 1 of them has offended the code of fair practice by cutting his prices unduly, under this bill, without the amendment which I have offered, the President would have to issue an order singling out the Senator's home city, and every industry in the home city, and requiring a license; and, from that moment on, the 14 innocent manufacturers of shoes in the Senator's home city would be handicapped. Their business might be destroyed. When the decree of the President went down that in a given city or a given State this unfair practice existed, and the units of the industry operating only in that city were required to have the license, then those units of industry would be virtually destroyed. There is no need to argue about it because it is too plain on its face.

Mr. NORRIS and Mr. BANKHEAD addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Georgia yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield first to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, after the Senator has just made the statement that his proposition is so plain that anybody can see it, I hesitate to inquire about it, but I confess I do not see it.

If the thing should happen that the Senator says, and that would injure all those 14 innocent manufacturers, then, of course, it would follow that it would be an injustice; but why would it ruin those 14 if they had to take out a license?

Mr. GEORGE. The taking out of the license, if the Senator pleases, would not ruin them, and that is exactly what I argued a while ago; but the singling out of the geographical area, and requiring a license of those who were abiding by the law and the agreement, along with the few offenders in the area, would so focus public opinion, would so rivet public condemnation upon the industries of that area, as to make it almost impossible for them to carry on their business.

Mr. NORRIS. Why would it injure one of those innocent manufacturers if he took out a license? There would be nothing wrong about that.

Mr. GEORGE. Not at all, and that is the purpose of my amendment—that the license should be required of the whole industry or branch of the industry without regard to its geographical location. In that event there would be no discrimination in terms. There would be nothing to indicate that the President had found trouble in a given locality, and therefore those industries that were living up to the code of practice would have no additional burden placed upon them, but only those that were disposed to violate it would feel the heavy weight of this particular license.

Mr. NORRIS. Does the Senator mean to say that the taking out of the license would of itself be a burden that could not be borne?

Mr. GEORGE. Oh, no; I did not mean to say that. What I mean to say is that if the President of the United States, because he found one offending industry in the State of Nebraska, should require of that industry a license, all good and well; I would not offer the amendment. But he is obliged to require every industry in a geographical area to take out the license, the implication necessarily arises that all of the industries in the area specified by him have been offending against the order.

Mr. NORRIS. As I understand, then, if the Senator's amendment is agreed to, the only license that would be required would be the license required of the offending manufacturer?

Mr. WHITE. Oh, no; the whole trade.

Mr. REED. Everybody in the country.

Mr. GEORGE. I said that I would have no objection to it if instead of the words "geographical area or in any subdivision of industry" it were limited to the offenders; but I pointed out, if the Senator will bear with me, what I thought was a practical objection to a procedure of that kind, not that there is any objection upon the merits of it. I do not think any great harm can come to the industry if the President should say that this industry, or this branch of a particular industry, must obtain a license, because then there would be nothing in the order, which would carry any unfair imputation against a particular industry, if in truth and in fact that industry had not been violating the code of fair practice.

Mr. NORRIS. Now, let me ask the Senator a question, and I am doing it only for the purpose of getting information. I confess I do not quite understand the difference between what the law would be if the Senator's amendment were agreed to and what it would be if it were not agreed to.

If the Senator's amendment should be agreed to, and if some manufacturer somewhere—anywhere—should offend the code, would it be necessary then to remedy the situation for the offender only to take out a license, or would everybody in the business everywhere in the country have to take out a license?

Mr. GEORGE. Everybody engaged in that particular industry or subdivision of the industry would be required to take out a license.

Mr. NORRIS. Would not that be a greater burden than if it were confined to some geographical locality not so great?

Mr. GEORGE. Perhaps it would, but would it not be fairer? Would it carry any implication of discrimination?

Mr. NORRIS. If the requirement of a license were an imputation that the corporation that applied for it and received it were necessarily offending the law before they applied, then I think the Senator's intimation would apply. But I do not understand why, if the manufacturers in a certain geographical location were required to take out a license, it would be any imputation that they had necessarily been engaged in any dishonorable business or had violated the code.

I may be wrong, but I am trying to get information.

Mr. GEORGE. I am afraid the distinguished Senator from Nebraska, contrary to his usual habits, has not read this amendment.

The amendment provides that the President may require a license when he finds that certain things have occurred in a given industry. Then he may impose a license upon that industry; and if a license is required of the general industry, or if it is confined to the particular offender, I am perfectly content. The provision of the amendment, however, is that when he finds that in any industry certain things have occurred, that certain practices do obtain, then he must issue his order against the industries in a prescribed geographical area. The moment the President does that every industry located in that geographical area is under a cloud, and I apprehend that there is not any industry in the country that would not fully appreciate the fact that it was under a cloud. There would, of course, be some injustice in requiring the whole industry to obtain a license. Nevertheless, there would not be that suggestion in the order that would operate unduly against the unoffending industries in the particular area.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Georgia further yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. At the risk of incurring the thought upon the part of the Senator from Georgia that it would necessarily increase my ignorance of this subject, I want to ask him if this is not true:

Assuming that the necessity of getting a license would mean that odium would be cast on the applicant, under the language as it now stands, the persons in the geographical locality would have to get a license, and thereby would, as I understand it, have a sort of an odium cast upon them, a sort of a reflection, in the particular geographical locality. If the Senator's amendment were agreed to, and anybody anywhere in the United States offended, and thereby had to get a license, then this reflection and this odium, whatever it might be, would apply to the manufacturers in the entire United States, instead of in that geographical location.

Mr. GEORGE. Yes.

Mr. NORRIS. Then it seems to me the Senator's amendment would only add to the odium.

Mr. GEORGE. I do not think so, and I make my appeal to the fair-minded men of the Senate, and include in that classification the Senator from Nebraska, on this fact. If we applied the order to all of an industry we necessarily would cover some innocent units in the industry, but inasmuch as it is general, there will be no sectional discrimination or State discrimination. If, however, it is confined to a geographical area, every innocent unit of an industry in that area necessarily would suffer in its business, in its commerce, and the suffering would be one that could not be easily repaired, because the country would say, the purchasers would say, the customers of those industries would say, "The President has investigated this industry and in this particular locality he has found certain evil practices to exist."

Now I point out what is the essential injustice of the proposal, and I ask the Senator from Nebraska to listen.

Let us take the cotton textile industry, for instance. A complaint is made to the President that at some point in Massachusetts certain abuses of the code are taking place. The President investigates and finds that that is true. He does not issue his order against the particular offender. If he did, I would have no objection to the provision. But he issues his order against the industry in that geographical area, whatever he prescribes. In the nature of things, he would have to prescribe an area that would take in, in all probability, at least more than one unit of the industry.

The President cannot delay long enough to investigate the entire industry in the country to see whether there may not be the same or like practices or violations occurring elsewhere. To do so would so greatly defer or prolong the decision that a license be taken out that perhaps the evil would occur before the remedy had been provided.

Therefore, as a practical proposition, and without regard to the merits of the proposal, the President has to do one of two things: He will have to say, "I find certain evil practices which make for unfair competition, such as the payment of starvation wages to the laborers"; and he will say, "Therefore we will license all of the industry"; or, to be just, he will have to make the one single offending unit which he has investigated take out a license.

If he requires the textile industry in a New England State, for instance, or in a southern State to obtain a license because he has found these abuses to exist—and all units of the industry must either close up or obtain a license—it may well be that if the President had the time to extend his investigation to the entire industry, he would find that the particular section affected by his order was simply meeting the same unfair competition coming from some other section of the country, or some other branch of the industry.

If this amendment is to be retained, it is fair, it is just, and it carries no idea of discrimination between industries, although it may place a hardship upon one industry to say, "If we find that in your industry there is this reprehensible and unfair and illegal practice obtaining, we will require all the industry to take out a license," or "We will require only a unit of the industry to take out a license."

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GEORGE. In just a moment. Now let me address myself to the particular question raised by the Senator from Nebraska. It is a hardship upon the innocent units of an industry to require the entire industry to take out a license merely because the President has found that certain units of that industry in a certain State, let us say, have been guilty of unfair practices. But while it is a hardship, if the Senator from Nebraska will look at the question in his accustomed way of weighing public questions, he will find that there is no discrimination between industries, there is no sectional discrimination written into the President's order, and it is precisely the discrimination between industries which would mean the death of an industry if it should be unjustly and unfairly singled out.

Amend the provision so that the license will be required only of the offending unit, and I am quite content, but do not require the President to issue an order which must necessarily include some unoffending and innocent units, not because I desire to have them escape the burden, but because it is fair and it is just to prevent a discrimination between industries, and especially when other units of an industry in other parts of the country may have been engaging in the same practice, undiscovered only because the President has not had the time to make an investigation of the entire industry.

Now I yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. FESS. The Senator from Georgia has really answered the question I was about to ask him. Since the license feature is in the form of a penalty, it would appear to me that it would be just to apply it only to the offender.

Mr. GEORGE. I think so. I agree with that fully.

Mr. FESS. That would not only do justice, but it would be effective, it would seem to me.

Mr. GEORGE. I agree with that, and I am sure that the Senator from Alabama, who also offered the amendment, will agree to it.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator's amendment, as I understand it, does not accomplish that.

Mr. GEORGE. It does not. I was trying to do the next-best thing, but I state now that I would be willing to place the amendment in such form as to make it applicable only to the offending industry.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, if the Senator will rewrite his amendment and make it applicable only to the offending party, it seems to me it could easily be agreed to. Otherwise, I am of the opinion that the amendment should not be agreed to.

Mr. GEORGE. If the Senator will just indulge the Senator from Alabama and the Senator from Georgia a moment, we may be able to offer the amendment. The only reason why we do not offer it is that we do not want to invite opposition from another angle, and we are very anxious to remove any idea of discrimination against industries in the bill, not that we do not cheerfully admit that there is a burden placed on industry, whether we confine the license to a geographical area or make it apply to an entire industry. The idea of discrimination enters in whenever we draw a geographical line around a particular industry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] to the committee amendment.

On a division, the amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now is on agreeing to the committee amendment as amended.

REGULATIONS PERTAINING TO VETERANS' ALLOWANCES

Mr. CUTTING. Mr. President, in pursuance of the subject with which I dealt yesterday afternoon, I want to say one or two words about the Executive order which the President issued on Tuesday, and which purported to initiate great modifications in the previous veterans' regulations issued on March 31.

Let me recall to the Senate that on Tuesday the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] introduced into the RECORD, not the regulations themselves, not the new Executive order modifying the regulations, but a statement, the source of which was not given, a statement which rested on no authority, but which said, in essence, as follows:

> Under the new regulations no directly service-connected veteran will be reduced in payment by more than 25 percent, and the average reduction will approximate 18 percent.

I have read these regulations with considerable care, and I think that it is perfectly clear to anyone who studies them that there is no such provision in the regulations.

I have compared them with the regulations of March 31. I find that there are only some ten or a dozen paragraphs of those regulations which have been modified at all. Everything else in the regulations of March 31 remains intact in the new regulations.

Anyone who has ever dealt extensively with the Veterans' Bureau, or the Veterans' Administration, which succeeded it, knows that it operates under a set of regulations which are not given to the public, but which keep accumulating, and form a sort of code, a sort of corpus juris of precedents which bind the Bureau in other decisions which they are to make in the future. The construction given to certain phrases has been established, and we find those phrases running again and again through every veterans' regulation.

One of these phrases is "medical judgment." Another is "affirmative evidence." Another is "specific finding." Such expressions as "legally", "in accordance with law", "properly", and a number of similar adverbs, in which the unsuspecting layman would see nothing sinister, are applied by those who interpret the veterans' regulations in order to decide any case against the veteran. So I say that when you meet with any of those expressions you have got to be very careful, because the law will be construed as tightly as possible against the individual disabled veteran.

With that preface, I wish to say that there are some things in the new regulations which are an improvement on the regulations of March 31; I admit that. In the first place, the schedule of ratings is established on a basis of 10 steps instead of 5. Instead of having disability ratings of 10, 25, 50, 75, and 100 percent, disability may be rated at 10, 20, 30, 40, 50, 60, 70, 80, 90, and 100 percent; so that if the doctors of the Bureau wish to be liberal in their ratings they have that authority. Of course the merit in any such system depends upon the way in which it is administered. There is nothing in the Executive order to show how those regulations are going to be administered, and I submit that we have to judge the future by the past.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield to the Senator from West Virginia?

Mr. CUTTING. I yield to the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. HATFIELD. What would be the Senator's conclusion as to the atmosphere surrounding the doctor who arrives at a medical conclusion respecting the veteran?

Mr. CUTTING. I have no hesitation in saying, Mr. President, that, while there are good men among the medical officers of the Veterans' Administration, the influences surrounding them are such that a doctor is almost compelled, if he desires to keep his job, to rate a case just as low as he has any authority for rating it. If he does not do that, the doctor almost invariably will find himself disconnected from the Veterans' Administration in a very short space of time.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. CUTTING. I yield.

Mr. HATFIELD. I whole-heartedly agree with the conclusion of the Senator. What he has stated is absolutely true.

Mr. CUTTING. Mr. President, there are some definite clauses in this Executive order which modify the regulations of March 31. For instance, if a man loses both eyes or both feet, his pension is raised somewhat higher than it was under the regulations of March 31. For the loss of both hands or both feet he will receive $150 a month; for the loss of both hands and one foot or both feet and one hand he will receive $175 a month. If he is blind in both eyes, he is to receive $200 a month.

Those figures are slightly more liberal than the figures set out in the regulations of March 31; but may I again call to the attention of the Senate the fact that Mr. Douglas, the Director of the Budget, when he appeared before the Finance Committee on March 10, stated, when asked for whom the maximum rate of $275 a month was to be provided:

> Frankly, for a man who was overseas and who was in the big show and was under fire and was shot to pieces by a high explosive and lost 2 arms, or 2 legs, or 2 eyes, my honest opinion is that that is not too high.

So even under these new liberal regulations the man who loses both hands, both feet, or both eyes still gets far less than the Director of the Budget, Mr. Douglas, was pledged to award him under the terms of his own testimony before the Finance Committee in March. So we still have a long way to go before we do even what Mr. Douglas said in March was justice to those men.

There is another provision in the new regulations which, so far as it goes, I desire to commend. In part II, paragraph 1, section (c), the regulations say:

> (c) Any veteran or the dependents of any deceased veteran otherwise entitled to pension under the provisions of part II of this regulation shall be entitled to receive the rate of pension provided in part I of this regulation, if the disability or death resulted from an injury received in line of duty in actual combat in a military expedition or military occupation.

I may say that that regulation will take care of a small but a very deserving class, namely, those who were injured in combat while not technically engaged in war. It applies to men who fought the Moros or men who were in the service of the country in Nicaragua or in the Boxer rebellion or elsewhere.

The only other important new provision is the one which raises the minimum rates payable to the Spanish-American War veteran over 62 years of age from $6 to $15 a month. That, of course, so far as it goes, is an improvement, although I scarcely think that the Senate will regard $15 a month for disabled veterans over 62 years of age as being particularly princely treatment.

There are some minor changes in the order. One liberalizes the provision for burial expenses of deceased veterans. One extends the meaning of the word "child" as embracing one under the age of 18, instead of under the age of 16; and another allows widows of veterans and employees not receiving salary or compensation for services in excess of $50 per month to continue in employment, although they are receiving a pension or emergency officers' retirement pay.

The most important provision which we were promised in the new regulation, however, should have been the provision with which the newspapers have been filled, the provision that no veteran suffering from a directly service-connected disability shall have his compensation reduced by more than 25 percent and that the average reduction will approximate 18 percent. Of course, Senators will understand that there is no way in which we can tell what the average reduction will approximate. We shall never have the complete list of payments before us. No matter how many cases of injustice may be brought to our attention, the fact may still be that if we had them all the average might be any particular figure. Of course, no regulation can be drawn to insure that the average would be $18 per month; but, Mr. President, it would have been very easy to have drawn a regulation prescribing that the maximum reduction should not exceed 25 percent.

An amendment which I introduced last week, and which the Senator from Arkansas and the Senator from South Carolina were willing to accept, provided:

> That nothing in this act shall authorize the President to reduce to a degree greater than 25 percent the compensation, pension, or allowance of any veteran or dependent of a veteran whose disability has hitherto been traced officially to direct connection with military or naval service.

That is quite clear in its language.

The amendment of the Senator from Texas, which was eventually adopted, reads as follows:

> Notwithstanding any of the provisions of the act approved March 20, 1932, entitled "An act to maintain the credit of the United States Government", in no event shall World War service-connected disability compensation of any veteran or the pension of any veteran of a war prior to the World War be reduced more than 25 percent of the rate being received by him on March 15, 1933.

That also is clear and unmistakable.

Now let me read to you the provision which was written into the regulations which were approved on June 6, the day before yesterday:

> II. In connection with the review directed by section 17 of Public, No. 2, Seventy-third Congress, the schedule of ratings provided for herein shall not operate to reduce by more than 25 percent (exclusive of special statutory allowances) the payments being made to any veteran who on March 20, 1933, was properly rated on a permanent basis and who meets the requirements of regulation no. 1, part I.

Mr. President, why was that word "properly" inserted there, and why are we referred back to another part of another regulation?

I am rather familiar with the word "properly" as used by the Veterans' Bureau. I know that they always try to get it inserted into any law reducing any of their authority. Of course, the argument might be used, "Does anyone want a case to stay on the rolls if it is improperly on the rolls?" To one who is not familiar with the procedure of the Bureau that might seem a cogent argument. The point is that when the word "properly" is inserted the Bureau is given complete authority to decide what case is properly on the rolls and what case is improperly on the rolls. The Bureau is to decide whether or not the rating which is given any veteran is properly given or improperly given. The authority which Congress intended to take into its own hands on Friday when it adopted the Connally amendment is completely rescinded and the Veterans' Bureau is to have that authority.

Mr. President, ever since March we have been trying to assure the compensation in combat-connected cases. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH], in the debate at the time, proposed an amendment which was accepted and which according to him guaranteed the retention of these men on the rolls. It contained a little joker. The joker in that case was the phrase "except as to rate." By cutting down the rate to less than 10 percent the Bureau in effect struck every man whom it wanted to strike completely off the rolls, so that the amendment proposed by the Senator from Massachusetts and adopted by the Senate became null and of no effect.

I remember a similar joker in the Tyson-Fitzgerald bill, which we passed in 1928. As I remember it, that bill purported to provide retired pay for all emergency officers who had hitherto been rated over 30 percent; but instead of letting it go at that the words were inserted "who have hitherto according to law been rated at 30 percent", or words to that effect. The Bureau took the words "according to law" and construed them as giving authority to review every one of the cases to see whether or not the 30-percent rating had been legally and properly given. If I know anything about the Bureau, I know that the word "properly" was put in the present regulation for an exactly similar purpose.

But, Mr. President, they are not satisfied with putting in the word "properly." They go on, and after saying "any veteran who on March 20, 1933, was properly rated on a permanent basis" they add the words "and who meets the requirements of regulation no. 1, part I."

When we turn to regulation 1, part I, we find a number of provisions which would allow the Bureau to reverse the rulings which had hitherto been made allowing the name of any particular veteran to remain on the roll. For instance, there is this provision:

Every person employed in the active military or naval service for 90 days or more shall be taken to have been in sound condition when examined, accepted, and enrolled for service, except as to defects, infirmities, or disorders noted at time of the examination, acceptance, and enrollment, or where evidence or medical judgment is such as to warrant a finding that the injury or disease existed prior to acceptance and enrollment.

In other words, the presumption of soundness which attaches to any man who entered the service can be reversed not merely by evidence, which might be entirely a fair method, but by "medical judgment", not necessarily based on any evidence at all.

Section (c) reads:

A chronic disease becoming manifest to a degree of 10 percent or more within 1 year from the date of separation from active service, as set forth therein, shall be considered to have been incurred in or aggravated by service, as specified therein, notwithstanding there is no record of evidence of such disease during the period of active service—provided the person suffering from such disease served 90 days or more in the active service as specified therein; provided, however, that where there is affirmative evidence to the contrary, or evidence to establish that an intercurrent injury or disease which is a recognized cause of such chronic disease, has been suffered between the date of discharge and the onset of the chronic disease, or the disability is due to the person's own misconduct, service connection will not be in order.

That is the presumptive clause as contained in the regulations of March 31—

In other words, the presumption would be canceled, not on conclusive evidence that it is incorrect, not on preponderant evidence that it is incorrect, but merely on "affirmative evidence to the contrary", no matter how weak that evidence may be.

Let me read another paragraph in the regulations contained in part I:

(d) That for the purposes of paragraph I (a) hereof a preexisting injury or disease will be considered to have been aggravated by active military service as provided for therein where there is an increase in disability during active service unless there is a specific finding that the increase in disability is due to the natural progress of the disease.

Not the preponderating proof, not conclusive evidence, but "a specific finding", and the value to be attached to the specific finding, of course, will be left to the doctors in the Veterans' Bureau.

Mr. President, we have heard a great deal in the last few days about colloquies between Members of the House and the executive branch of the Government. Nothing that I care to say here must be taken to have any reference to those colloquies. I am sure that Members of the other branch of the Congress will act in accordance with their consciences and convictions. But I do want to remind the Senate that these regulations, which were refused me yesterday morning, and which after a change of heart were presented to the Senate yesterday afternoon, show on the face of them that they were written in bad faith and with intention of fraud. That is what is done while Congress is in session. That is what is done when we are sitting right here, still able to use our legislative prerogatives, still able to insure by our votes that the wishes of Congress may prevail. Under these circumstances, what do Senators imagine will happen if we go away from here and do not ourselves decide what we wish to have done?

Perhaps the Connally amendment which we adopted the other day is not correct in all respects. Perhaps it might be improved; but if it is to be improved, let Members of the two Houses of the National Legislature do the improving. Let us not trust to Executive orders, which, although approved by the President of the United States, are in effect promulgated and written by some subordinate in the Veterans' Administration under the pressure of the Director of the Budget, who, as we all know, is trying to cut down veterans' compensation to the lowest conceivable point.

In this particular instance we were promised a limit of 25 percent as the maximum reduction in cases of combat-connected disability and yet the actual regulation issued in pretended compliance with that promise is not worth the paper on which it is written. Let us be very careful, Mr. President, concerning the exact language which may eventually pass the two Houses of Congress with regard to veterans' legislation. Let us be careful of every adjective and every adverb, because if we leave the slightest loophole, as we saw last March with regard to the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH], the Veterans' Administration will take advantage of it and nullify the will of the Congress of the United States.

I am very glad that we have these regulations before us, that we are able to take a look at them some days at least before this body expects to adjourn. Let us act, Mr. President, in accordance with our own convictions. If we believe we made a mistake in adopting the Connally amendment, let us say so. Personally I do not think we went far enough. But whether we went far enough or whether we went too far are matters for the Senate and House of Representatives to decide. Let us not leave these unfortunate, helpless veterans from now until January at the mercy of people in the Veterans' Administration and in the Bureau of the Budget who have proved repeatedly that they are not only completely out of sympathy with the disabled veterans but that they are willing to act in bad faith with the Congress of the United States.

COLLIER'S WEEKLY ARTICLE ON SENATOR LONG

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, Collier's Weekly Magazine is a Morgan concern, and Thomas W. Lamont, a Morgan partner, is a director of the Crowell Publishing Co., which publishes Collier's Weekly. Collier's is a well-known Morgan publication.

Shortly before I came to the Senate, Collier's Weekly had an article in it in which it was said that they had sent Mr. Walter Davenport down to the State of Louisiana to get the facts regarding how HUEY P. LONG had come into politics in that State, and to write up the facts. Mr. Davenport published a long article in Collier's Weekly at the time which, whether regarded as complimentary or not, went to considerable length to show that I had in some measure dethroned the entrenched and corrupt machine politics of that State, eradicated illiteracy, educated the children, and in many other respects glorified the accomplishments at a time after I had concluded my administration and long after I had ever been a candidate for the United States Senate.

But since the Morgan inquiry has developed here and I have had something to say relative to Mr. Morgan in other ways and relative to his clients, this Morgan publication has taken the same author, Mr. Walter Davenport, and say they have sent him down to Louisiana to find out about me and they have now published another article. I shall go to the Congressional Library as soon as I have an opportunity today and obtain the previous article, and shall place in the RECORD, side by side, the two articles that have been printed in this Morgan publication, Collier's Weekly, written by the same writer, Mr. Walter Davenport, so that Members of the Senate and of the Congress who wish to concern themselves can find out how Mr. Morgan and his publication vary their views and their facts which they have discovered to meet what they may consider the emergency of the situation.

Mr. President, before this article got into Mr. Morgan's publication—and it has not yet reached the date of its public sale—Collier's Weekly went to the pains of making a copy of its article in printed form and mailing it to every Member of Congress, with the request that each Member of this body and of the other House write them a letter and tell them what they think about the article for their future information.

In order to show what this damnable outfit has done I am going to do them the credit to read a paragraph from the article:

Add what the parishes and all the subdivisions owe and you find Louisiana in debt to the extent of $395,532,463.47.

Mr. President, I have never had anything to do with floating parish bonds or municipal bonds. I have had something to do with floating State bonds; and I wish to say to you that the Morgan Houses bought Louisiana bonds, as long as I was Governor of that State, at the lowest rate of interest that they had ever bought Louisiana bonds for, and lower than those sold at the time by any other near Southern State, and at a better premium, and the record will show it. There is no such indebtedness as this on the State of Louisiana—nothing of the kind. It is ridiculous and absurd.

I desire to read another paragraph from this article which they printed in advance and sent to the Members of Congress. I beg the Senate to note, following the time that I said what I did several weeks ago with regard to the conduct of the House of Morgan, and its undertaking to control this Government.

I want to say, Mr. President, that I took up the case of Mr. Lamont in this matter. There is another paragraph that I want to read from this article which I think I can readily find, which they have taken pains to send to all the Members of the two Houses. Here it is:

Here's a lawyer of high repute—

They say that a fellow down there is a lawyer of high repute—a little fellow whose picture they have here. If he is a lawyer, I did not know it. If he ever tried a case, I did not know about it. I learned that he was in some trouble here a while back, and got out through some peculiar maneuvers. That is all I ever heard about him. If he ever had a case in court, I do not know what it was; but the author says this:

Here's a lawyer of high repute telling you about Huey's beautiful mansion on Audubon Boulevard in New Orleans. How did Huey get it? Where did he get the money and how much? Is it true that he got the great house from Rudy O'Dwyer of the Club Forest over in Jefferson Parish?

Club Forest is a night club, and carries on gambling, I understand, for the information of the Senate.

And did Rudy get it from an unfortunate gambler, now a bootblack, who turned over the deeds to the mansion when he couldn't take up his I.O.U's.? Well, what about it?

Mr. President, before I became Governor of the State of Louisiana, when I was a lawyer, I lived in a house that cost $40,000, and it was not mortgaged for a 10-cent piece. Since I got through with my experience as Governor, and started for the United States Senate, I am living in a house that is mortgaged for $40,000, the entire purchase price of the house. That is how much good in the house exchanges the Governor's office and the United States Senate have done me. The records are there to show. The transfer was made through a reputable firm of lawyers, Merrick, Schwartz, and somebody, who are also attorneys for the Federal Reserve bank of that district. I do not suppose I am called upon to answer that; but there is another little part here that I want to read.

They say that I took out a life-insurance policy up in some Canadian company. This is an old story that I have heard many times, which they take particular pains to quote. I do not find it readily, but I can state it. They say that I am the owner and holder of a life-insurance policy for $100,000, paid up in full, up in Canada. Well, if someone will locate me a life-insurance policy of that kind, I should indeed like to have it. For the information of the House of Morgan I will say that I came to the Senate with life insurance for $65,000, and since I reached the United States Senate, for the first time in my life, I have borrowed the limit of the life insurance, and owe every dime I could borrow on the life insurance that I had bought long before I became a Governor or a United States Senator; and drew every dime I could on it since I have been in the United States Senate. Those are matters of record; and I understand that Mr. Morgan's outfit controls practically all the life-insurance companies.

I want to say, Mr. President, that this Morgan publication is going to the extent not only of publishing this article, by the same author who wrote the article that I will get some time today or tomorrow and place in the RECORD here for the illumination of the Members of this Congress, but it has gone to an unusual extent in printing in advance this particular article and sending it to the Members of the Senate and to the Members of the House of Representatives.

I am not going to take much more time, Mr. President. This thing has been sent to all the Members. They can read it if they want to. They talk about the fact that two banks broke. Yes; I want to read that sentence to show the kind of business Collier's and Mr. Morgan's outfit see fit now to send over this country. I want to read this, just for fear the Senate will not read it.

If the Senate will pardon me just a moment, I will read it. I should have had this marked. I hope the Chair will not become impatient with me for taking a little time.

I cannot find it, Mr. President. At any rate, this article says that two banks closed in New Orleans in which I was badly involved—the Canal Bank and the Hibernia Bank.

Mr. President, both of those institutions were Federal Reserve banks. I did not owe either one of the banks a nickel—not a penny. I do not own any stock in the banks. The only connection I had with either of them was that when I borrowed $15,000 on my life insurance, and there was a run on the Hibernia Bank, I walked into the bank and put $7,300 in it, so that I might give the crowd to understand that I had confidence in it, in order to stop the run on the bank, and lost my $7,300. [Laughter.] Now, that is my connection with that.

Another thing they say is that in New Orleans we had a surety company that failed. Well, that was a terrible thing!

The Union Indemnity Co. failed in the State in which I live. Now, that is awful! The Union Indemnity Co. did fail; but the National Surety Co. in New York failed for 10 times as much as the Union Indemnity Co. failed for. The International Surety Co. failed for five times as much as they failed for. Surety companies failed all over this country with which I could have no connection, because I did not live in their States; and, for the information of the Senate, I will state that I did not owe the Union Indemnity Co. 5 cents. I did not own 5 cents' worth of their stock; and the only thing with which the State of Louisiana is to be charged—because the Union Indemnity Co. reinsured with the National and the International, and one with the other, and they were all considered as good as any, and they were among the best—the only thing that could be charged against the State of Louisiana was that we gave to our home surety company all the business we could, just as every other surety company gets all such business in its State where the charges are equal, and they are always equal. That is the kind of business, Mr. President, that has evidently seemed to be necessary to be put here in this special form, with all this dispatch, and out of the ordinary course of procedure, by this organization.

Mr. President, I have sent for, and I want to give the Senate, some figures about a few things. If the Senate were the only ones concerned, it would be different; but I have the credit of my State somewhat to defend. I want to tell you about the bonds which I have ever had any part in issuing in Louisiana. I do not know anything about the $395,000,000; but when I became Governor of Louisiana, the man whose picture they print here, Mr. John M. Parker, had issued $41,000,000 of bonds—he and Governor Pleasant and one Governor before him; mostly by Parker. They had issued $41,000,000 worth of bonds on the port of New Orleans, and they did not provide any revenue with which to pay them except the earnings of the port; and as Governor of that State, I had to float a tax in order to retire the bonds for money that had been secured by my predecessors in office, and entirely spent by them.

Not only that; they had, they say, floated all these bonds for large sums of money in the parishes. They had floated one issue of one hundred and some odd million dollars of bonds to build public roads in Louisiana before I became Governor; and when I became Governor of that State there were 26 miles of supposed-to-be no. 1 type road in Louisiana. It was not even no. 3 type; but, at the most, there was only 26 miles of no. 1 type, and $100,000,000 worth of bonds had been charged against the parishes, and $41,000,000 had been charged against the port of New Orleans, and there was not a mile of first-class road in the State. When I left the governorship of the State of Louisiana, whatever bonds had been floated during my term gave that State the standing today of the best good-roads community that there is to be found in America, or anywhere on the face of the earth—around 2,000 to 3,000 miles of paved highway and gravel road—to the point where there are not 5,000 people living in Louisiana that are farther than 1 mile away from an all-the-year-round road on which they can go east, west, north, or south anywhere in the State of Louisiana.

That is not all, Mr. President, that this damnable sheet fails to convey, and tries to insinuate the contrary. I want the United States sometime to know—I do not know whether I can ever say it loud enough so that it will be remembered, because by the time the facts reach the people through this kind of medium they are usually twisted into a false statement—but, Mr. President, I set up something that the United States Government might well have followed, I believe, and probably may some day. When I began to ask the people of Louisiana to vote bonds, and they voted them at my request, I set up a board of 19 citizens, most of whom had been opposed to me for Governor, and some of whom are not my political friends yet. I put on that board my political enemy, the attorney general, Mr. Percy Saint. I put on that board my political enemy, the Lieutenant Governor, Paul N. Cyr. I put on that board my political enemy, the treasurer, Mr. Haney B. Conner. I put on that board the president of the chamber of commerce, a political enemy. I put on that board the president of the Young Men's Business Club, a political enemy. I put on that board of 19 the men selected by publications that did not support me in politics; and not a dime of money for the building of roads was ever spent in the State of Louisiana from any bonds ever voted under me that did not have the unanimous consent of the 19 men comprising my political enemies before it was spent and after it was spent, before the contract was awarded and after the work was done; and until this day not a single dissenting vote is of record in the State of Louisiana against the regularity of the expenditure of a dime of the money, and not a single protest was ever lodged by a single citizen before that board of 19 approving of the expenditures of funds in that State.

That is the kind of a condition, Mr. President, that can be dwarfed and misrepresented; and they want to paint the great mystery: "How is it that the people of Louisiana have ever tolerated or elected HUEY P. LONG?" And Collier's Weekly, under the direction of Mr. Lamont, of the House of Morgan, calls upon the Members of the Senate and the Members of the House to write back their personal reflections as to how any such thing could come about, and sends this specially printed article in advance with a letter to each Member of this House of Congress and to each Member of the other House of Congress.

Mr. President, I will not take any more time of the Senate; and as soon as I can get one set of figures, which I want to put in the RECORD, I will have concluded my remarks.

While I am waiting, I may say that it is said that the ring put me into the Senate. There never was a bigger falsehood ever told. The Democratic organization in New Orleans fought me in my race for the United States Senate and beat me in the city of New Orleans by 4,600 votes. I was defeated in the city of New Orleans by 4,600 votes. When I was elected Governor, they fought me in the city of New Orleans and beat me by 23,000 votes. I overcame the 23,000 votes in 1928, when I was elected Governor, and had 45,000 and some odd to spare. I overcame the 4,600 in 1930, when I came to the United States Senate, and had some 38,000 to spare.

Following that, every candidate elected in the State of Louisiana to a State office was elected on a ticket bearing at the top of it the legend that he had my support, with practically no such thing as enough opposition to hurt us, no opposition of any serious consequence.

Another very damnable and unfair and unscrupulous practice has been resorted to by these scalawags. They have continually pointed out the fact that members of my family have volunteered derogatory political statements against me. If a member of my family holding an office under appointment from me wants to run for political office against my ticket, I cannot help that; and if he does, and I have given my word to support somebody else, am I to be held answerable because I am unwilling to throw another candidate off the ticket, or to change my support from someone whom I promised to support because I have a relative running against him? Am I to be charged and held responsible for everything that may be said because I am unwilling to support somebody else in politics? There is nothing here that has not been presented to the people of Louisiana, except something that is within the realm of imagination.

I have a little record from the Federal Reserve Board—and I want the Senate to take just a little notice of it—of the number of bank failures from January 1, 1928, to February 28, 1933, in five States. I want to show how Louisiana came out during all this crash up until every bank in the United States was closed.

According to this statement, for the whole United States, a total of 491 banks failed in 1928, 642 in 1929, 1,345 in 1930, 2,298 in 1931, 1,456 in 1932, and 389 in January and February 1933, making a total of several thousand banks. Without adding it up, I should say there were some seven or eight thousand banks that failed.

Here is the record of the State of Louisiana: In 1928 there were two bank failures, very little banks, too, no such thing as a big bank. In 1929 we did not have one bank failure. In 1930 there were 9, in 1931 there were 7, in 1932 there were 14, and in 1933 there were 3. Of all the bank failures we had, not one bank was even a third-class bank; and of the insignificant number of banks that failed in Louisiana out of the many thousands that failed in the United States, of the very few that may have been said to have failed in Louisiana, about 30 were small banks, and most of them were amalgamations.

I will compare the record of the State of Louisiana against the record of any other State in the Union. I wonder if I could take the example of some State, just to get an illustration, without having some Senator feel I was reflecting on his State. I will compare the record of Louisiana with the State across the line, Mississippi. There is no comparison. I will compare it with the record of Arkansas. There is no comparison. I use those States because they are right next to my State. The fact that there were bank failures does not reflect upon anybody.

In 1928, 14 banks failed in Arkansas, 4 failed in Mississippi, and 2 failed in Louisiana.

In 1929, 11 failed in Arkansas, 3 in Mississippi, none in Louisiana.

In 1930, 135 failed in Arkansas, 52 failed in Mississippi, none in Louisiana.

In 1931, 57 failed in Arkansas, 60 failed in Mississippi, 7 in Louisiana.

In 1932, 13 failed in Arkansas, 12 in Mississippi, and 14 in Louisiana.

In January and February 1933, 5 failed in Arkansas, 6 failed in Mississippi, 3 failed in Louisiana.

It will be found that whereas the banks which have closed in our neighboring States were the biggest banks they had in the States, the little banks which closed in the State of Louisiana before the bank crisis were banks of very insignificant importance compared with the main banks.

I send to the desk this table, together with a letter which has been furnished me by the Federal Reserve Board, and ask that the letter and the table be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

(See exhibit A.)

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask further that if I am able today to find the record of the previous article written by the same writer in this very magazine of Morgan & Co., I may have opportunity of putting them in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chairs hears none and it is so ordered.

(See exhibit B.)

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I wish to say, in conclusion, that I have not the time to continue answering this kind of thing. I do not have time for such things. I do not suppose any Senator has, if he does anything else.

I want to say, further, that we have paid very little attention to this kind of claptrap in Louisiana. We know the caliber of enemies we have down there. They have been steadily voted out of public office. So far as the ring politicians are concerned who have come over since they have been beaten, and do not fight us any longer, it does not make any difference what they do. We know the people down in that State, and if they want to stay or do not want to stay it makes no difference.

It is said in the article to which I have referred that the political henchmen are ready to jump away from the HUEY LONG organization. God bless them, let them jump. If they jump, they will "stay jumped." We have never tried to keep anybody from jumping yet, and if they want to quit anybody, they do not have to worry about quitting us.

I want to say, in conclusion—and I hope this will be in conclusion; I have been intending to conclude several times—there will not be any elections in Louisiana for a long time. We have had a few. We do not have to elect any more Senators for 4 years, or another Governor for 3 years, and the city election in New Orleans will be a formality. We will not have an election down there for a long time, and our opponents naturally can make a lot of prophecies of the great waning influence, and of the terrible rising rebellion.

Mr. President, there is not one of those fellows just mentioned who could be elected justice of the peace in a single precinct in the State of Louisiana. They could not get a corporal's guard. They cannot even write out the names of enough friends they have in the State of Louisiana to send something to. They have to send their communications to our men.

They have no friends down there, they do not deserve any friends down there, because they had put the State of Louisiana at the bottom of the list in literacy when I became the Governor of that State. Look at the statistics today, and see where it is. The Louisiana State University was a third-rate university when I became Governor of that State. Look at the college statistics today, and you will find it no. 1, with Harvard and Yale. Look at any other institution in any other State on the face of the earth, and see if Louisiana does not top the list, or come close to it. Then compare that with the condition that prevailed when these sabotage skunks were in control, and see what has been done in that State. Then it will be understood why the State of Louisiana wanted somebody like me in the Governor's office and would not want to go back to the clique we put out.

EXHIBIT A

FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD,
Washington, March 27, 1933.

Hon. HUEY LONG,
United States Senate, Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR LONG: In response to your telephone request of today, there is enclosed a table showing the number of bank suspensions in each State, by years, from 1928 to 1932, inclusive, also during the first 2 months of the present year.

Very truly yours,

E. L. SMEAD,
Chief Division of Bank Operations.

Number of bank suspensions, Jan. 1, 1928, to Feb. 28, 1933, by States

	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933 (January and February)
Alabama	------	11	34	36	18	2
Arizona	------	------	5	5	7	------
Arkansas	14	11	135	57	13	5
California	------	4	7	18	33	15
Colorado	3	5	5	21	24	8
Connecticut	------	------	7	10	6	------
Delaware	1	1	------	------	1	------
District of Columbia	------	------	------	------	4	1
Florida	35	63	39	17	11	------
Georgia	26	32	31	35	25	2
Idaho	2	3	1	10	24	6
Illinois	18	30	126	238	209	41
Indiana	24	24	90	96	68	20
Iowa	51	34	86	208	147	21
Kansas	26	12	43	38	69	20
Kentucky	7	2	29	27	38	1
Louisiana	2	------	9	7	14	3
Maine	------	------	------	2	------	------
Maryland	1	1	2	20	4	2
Massachusetts	------	------	3	19	5	------
Michigan	------	9	21	113	87	18
Minnesota	46	31	22	101	62	18
Mississippi	4	3	52	60	12	6
Missouri	31	23	104	122	80	65
Montana	1	1	11	11	8	------
Nebraska	50	149	44	109	51	33
Nevada	1	1	------	2	16	------
New Hampshire	------	------	1	2	------	------
New Jersey	------	1	3	38	8	5
New Mexico	------	1	------	1	1	------
New York	3	5	8	55	10	5
North Carolina	8	18	93	63	31	7
North Dakota	38	36	60	66	14	------
Ohio	11	10	25	115	26	7
Oklahoma	5	20	23	24	32	4
Oregon	3	1	2	14	26	6
Pennsylvania	1	5	19	137	42	3
Rhode Island	1	------	------	------	------	------
South Carolina	22	18	27	34	18	3
South Dakota	7	13	54	73	23	5
Tennessee	4	12	28	31	28	19
Texas	23	10	34	86	35	6
Utah	2	------	3	9	14	------
Vermont	------	------	2	------	------	------
Virginia	7	9	20	37	9	2
Washington	2	7	3	22	28	7
West Virginia	5	14	10	57	6	2
Wisconsin	6	11	24	49	67	17
Wyoming	------	1	------	3	2	1
Total	491	642	1,345	2,298	1,456	389

EXHIBIT B

[From Collier's for Dec. 13, 1930]

YES, YOUR EXCELLENCY!

By Walter Davenport

(HUEY LONG is a born salesman, a fast thinker, and a powerful talker. Louisiana's young Governor has spent a good part of his 37 years selling soap, groceries, a political candidate, furniture, starch, clothing—but his biggest and most successful sales campaign was to convince his State that they simply had to send him to the United States Senate. The Senate is going to hear something.)

There were two candidates for tick inspector in Winn Parish, La., in 1907. HUEY PIERCE LONG, 14 years old at the moment, was not one of them, being denied by his youth the privilege of righting the people's wrongs. On more than a few occasions since then Mr. LONG has given it as his opinion that just because a fellow is a bit shy of his legal majority is no reason why the public should be deprived of his political services.

At the time of this crisis in the history of Winn Parish Mr. LONG was a journalist well on his way into a career which has led him through half a hundred jobs to the Governorship of Louisiana and to the United States Senate. How much farther he is going nobody (not even Huey) knows, although you'll find sane citizens of his State who, like Mr. Last Calloway, of Old Shongaloo, Webster Parish, will take your long odds that Huey won't be President of the United States, King of England, or boss of the South Sea Islands.

"How many Senators are there up there in Washington?" asked Mr. Calloway.

"Ninety-six."

"Shucks", said Mr. Calloway. "That'll be easy for Huey. Only 95 to think faster than."

But when the memorable tick-inspector campaign of 1907 was approaching its climax, Mr. LONG was about nine tenths of the editorial and mechanical staffs of the Southern Sentinel, a weekly newspaper published at Winnfield. He was also the most active half of the advertising department, which left him ample time to superintend circulation and help his father wring a thin living out of a few acres of clay called a truck farm.

Inasmuch as Mr. LONG was debarred by youth from running for tick inspector he chose that aspirant who, in his opinion, would be the better occupant of the office and took stock of his man's chances. They were remote. So Huey went to him and violently explained that he was certain to be beaten unless he adopted the Long plan. So convinced was the man that defeat was his that he was glad to listen, even to a reedy-voiced boy.

Briefly, the Long plan was that the candidate's campaign should be managed by HUEY PIERCE LONG, who, for the sum of $5 (two fifty down and two fifty when elected), would route and direct his speaking tours, organize and direct a group of reliable applause promoters, plant fearless hecklers in the camp of the opposition, write all speeches, and attend to all the other thousand and one details of a heart-gripping campaign.

On the Long plan Huey's man was elected tick inspector with many votes to spare—12 or 14, to be more specific. But what accomplished his overwhelming victory was a speech written by his manager—a speech still cited as the acme of vote appeal in Winn Parish. Its last paragraph did the work:

"If I am elected, I will inspect every cow, male and female, for ticks. Them that's got 'em will get rid of 'em, and them that ain't got none won't get none."

A POLITICAL BOBCAT

That was 23 years ago. Since that remote day HUEY PIERCE LONG, filled with the same unconquerable confidence, cleaving to the same directness of purpose and speech, overflowing with an energy which flattens weaker beholders, ruthless as a machine gun, a political bobcat, has overcome enough obstacles and achieved successes enough to make up 2 or 3 robust careers. Huey has done about everything except write mystery stories; and his enemies, producing Huey's messages to the legislature and to legislators, his speeches and his defensive alibis, insist he is a master even of that.

Last September 9 he was nominated United States Senator by the Democrats of Louisiana, defeating the incumbent, Joseph E. Ransdell, by 38,000 votes and reducing the far-famed New Orleans ring to a pulp of abject misery. Naturally that means election. But every one of Louisiana's 18 dailies and almost all the weeklies fought him with a bitterness that choked their columns with such epithets as thief, plunderer, demagogue, liar, thug, hypocrite, panderer, corruptionist, and buffoon. I mention only the most prominent, taking them swiftly from the newspaper files. But Huey, ignoring his enemies with a thoroughness that drove them mad, and pursuing a medicine-man campaign wherein he demonstrated that he is one of the greatest salesmen of our times, captured the Protestant north of the State and the Catholic south, although Mr. Ransdell is a Catholic. He even won three wards of New Orleans.

And on the morning of the 10th he sat down to the telephone in his hotel room and began calling up the New Orleans newspapers that had fought him. To the first editor he represented himself as an irate Italian. What did that editor mean by advising him, a poor fruit vender, "that thisa man HUEY LONG no gotta chance? What th' hell, hey? You tella people thisa guy LONG sure gat beat.

"I betta guy feefty dollar on Ransdell because you taal me HUEY LONG ees a bum. And now I loose my money. What th' hell, hey?"

While the editor with becoming dignity was trying to pacify the excited one Huey dropped his voice disguise and with a loud, backwoods laugh roared: "Okay, okay, this is only Huey talking. Happy days, mister."

IN THE BOOKS

To the next editor he represented himself as a Jew who wanted to know whether it wouldn't be a graceful thing for that newspaper to apologize to HUEY LONG for its gross misrepresentation of the new boss of Louisiana. If it did not, the speaker would feel obliged to withdraw his advertising.

Again Huey heard pacific words from editorial lips until, unable longer to restrain himself, he shouted: "Drop in and see me some day, boy. This is HUEY LONG speaking."

And so on down through the newspaper list until he tired of the fun.

Little things like wholesale opposition, like impeachments on 25 counts, running all the way from lack of official dignity to kidnaping, bribery, graft, and moral turpitude—little things like these fail even to give Huey pause. I have met many men, many politicians, but I have never met one so quick to turn an enemy's thrust against the attacker or to convert a mean situation into a personal triumph.

For example, there was the morning Huey was in his tub when somebody knocked viciously on the door. At Huey's roar to enter, a man came in with a bill for printing and electrotyping in his hand.

"Hello, oldtimer", bellowed Huey through lather. "Just the guy I wanted to see. Here, take this brush and soap. Take off your coat and roll up your sleeves. Thata boy. Now scrub the nasty old Governor's back. Allez-oop!"

It may be difficult to believe, but the intruder took the brush and soap and scrubbed the gubernatorial back with a vicious will.

"Thata boy!" shouted Huey. "Thata boy. Hey. Lay off. That's enough."

He leaped to his feet, thrust the scrubber back, and turned on the shower—cold. In a moment the bathroom was a cloudburst and the bill collector, wiping water from his eyes, backed out, blind and speechless. Then, struggling free from the influence of his dynamic Governor, he fled in damp panic, the bill still in his pocket.

Then there was that schoolbook legislation. Distributing public moneys to the schools of Louisiana had been a problem which had robbed Governors of sleep, prestige, and office. The politicians had turned contortionists and acrobats in their wild efforts to dodge the wrecking machine of the school appropriations.

North Louisiana is Protestant. South Louisiana is predominantly Catholic. The children of the upper parishes were cared for by the public schools. The parochial schools receive the majority of the youngsters in the lower part of the State. How, then, was State money to be disbursed for education? Politically it was not healthy to deny State help to the children of Catholics simply because they attended Catholic schools. Politically it was dangerous to antagonize that considerable element which insisted that State funds might not be given to sectarian institutions.

Huey met the situation with characteristic simplicity. Huey is one of earth's perpetual children anyway. A keen but everlasting sophomore. All he did was to draw up a bill which provided that every child in Louisiana should be given free schoolbooks. That's all—schoolbooks. It mattered not where that child went to school, just so long as it was enrolled in a school. Free schoolbooks—and God love 'em.

His opponents, chagrined that so old a problem should be solved by this irreverent upstart, appealed to the courts. Huey had dared the unfriendly legislature to refuse to pass the bill. He dared them to reject it and then to go back and face the parents of the children. They passed it. But the more courageous of Huey's enemies followed it into the courts, demanding that it be declared unconstitutional because it gave State moneys to sectarian schools—indirectly, of course, but still gave it.

And Huey himself, admittedly one of the best lawyers in the South, went along arguing to victory after victory until it appeared in the Supreme Court of the United States. There Huey defended his naive legislation with such conviction and enthusiasm that it was not only declared wholly constitutional, but Huey was commended by Mr. Justice Brandeis.

There's no routine, no uniformity, convention, nor schedule to the Long method. Details are not delegated to clerks and secretaries. Huey attends to all that, making as much furor over a detail as over a whole campaign.

SPEAKING HIS PIECE

If he adheres to his present plan (which he probably won't) Washington will not have the joy of knowing him until after his term as Governor expires—until his successor is elected in the fall of 1931. The reason is that he is much more interested in maintaining his personal dictatorship in Louisiana than in sitting in the Senate; and he is not going to surrender the Governorship to his mortal enemy, Dr. Paul N. Cyr, Lieutenant Governor. Dr. Cyr, a combative dentist, openly declared war on Huey when the latter insisted that Mrs. Ada LeBoeuf hang with her lover, Dr. Thomas E. Dreher, for the murder of the lady's husband. Both were hanged, and Dr. Cyr has since devoted his time to plans calculated to ruin the political career of HUEY LONG. He hasn't succeeded, but Huey pays Dr. Cyr the compliment of declining to turn his back on him.

Huey is 37 years old, about 5 feet 10 inches tall, and a natural light heavyweight. He carries himself like a well-conditioned baseball player, and his reddish hair seems to get redder as he works himself up to his favorite fighting speed. You may not agree with his politics, his methods, or his demagoguery (and Huey's a demagogue), but it's almost impossible for the visitor from outside not to like him. He's a combination of Billy Sunday, Jack Sharkey, Sonny Boy, and the late Harry Houdini. He is also a smart politician.

He was born in lonely Winn Parish. During his childhood food was so close to being a curiosity in the Long home that Huey went to work at the age of 7. Out of his daily wage of 35 cents he saved enough money to buy ragged sets of Victor Hugo, Shakespeare, and Sir Walter Scott. He memorized whole poems and chapters of the Bible. He dared anybody to bet him $10 he couldn't recite all of Pilgrim's Progress, but people fled at the prospect. In rapid succession he became a book peddler, a printer, a salesman of a lard substitute. He sold soap, groceries, furniture, clothing, starch, and Heaven knows what else. He went to school whenever he had money enough to keep himself housed and fed. He tramped the State organizing cooking contests for the makers of the lard substitute, and in Shreveport gave first prize to a girl named Rose McConnell for her bride's loaf cake. Soon thereafter he married her, and he has the grace to admit that she has done more to promote his success than he has.

NO CRIME TOO GREAT

At her urging he borrowed $450 in 1912 and registered at Tulane University as a special student in law. In 7 months (this straight from the records) Huey, taking every class offered him and working day and night, completed the 3-year course and passed the bar examinations. By sheer clamor he induced the supreme court of the State to hold its examinations 3 months in advance of the set time, and he passed that test far out in front of the others.

Even if he weren't a good lawyer, he'd be a prominent one because of his love for a fight. He boasts that he never turned down a case, and would today appear in police court to defend a chicken thief or a liquor toter and tomorrow argue the case of the Standard Oil Co. of Louisiana. He would, too.

At his wife's insistence, he ran for public-service commissioner for northern Louisiana in 1918 and won hugely over four competitors. In 1924 he was defeated for Governor, but even his enemies admit that the weather did it—the rain deluge keeping the farmers at home. Four years later he won by the largest majority ever accomplished for the office—140,000.

Since then practically everything short of hanging has happened to him. He has been accused of all sorts of graft, from taking fees from State contractors to shaking down the Standard Oil Co.; from outright banditry in the State treasury to illegal transfer of public land. He has been accused of bribing legislators with jobs and cash. They have charged him with bargaining with one Battling Bozeman, a heavyweight prize fighter, whom he once retained as his bodyguard, to murder Jared Y. Sanders, one of the most active of his opponents. Mr. Sanders, happily, is alive and well, and Mr. Bozeman is no longer protecting his Governor's person from assault. One Joe Messina has succeeded to Bozeman's old job.

Huey has been challenged to a duel by a septuagenarian legislator, Gilbert Dupré, for saying, "Some men think just because they're deaf they're honest." Huey made it clear that he was talking about Mr. Dupré and Mr. Dupré was quite upset. However, Huey declined the duel. Then an even older man, Judge J. E. Reynolds, 78, expressed himself as eager to punch Huey's nose because Huey was extremely active in having the judge defeated for the State supreme court.

"What's the matter with all these old boys? Ain't there somebody younger than 70 to take a poke at me?"

There was. William G. Wiegand, a newspaper reporter, called on Huey one morning and Huey, being a bit fretful, applied to Mr. Wiegand the most popular of American epithets. Mr. Wiegand, being even younger than Huey, knocked Huey groggy with a magnificent right to the chin. Whereat Huey's guards rushed Mr. Wiegand against a wall and held him there while Huey pulled himself together and socked the reporter, making matters more or less even.

CAPTURING THE GERMANS

One hears all these charges against Huey and asks repeatedly and in vain just why a man guilty of so many crimes (if guilty) isn't sent to jail instead of to the United States Senate, or whether the State, despairing of jailing so desperate a brigand, has compromised on the next best thing. Certainly the celerity with which the politicians dropped their charges against Huey when he demonstrated by 38,000 votes that he was the undisputed boss of Louisiana indicates that their aim was to rid themselves of a tyrant, not a criminal.

He is a one-man machine. He brooks no interference, tolerates no advice, recognizes no other intelligence and won't even listen to the plans of the old party leaders. Huey is the State. The others, in Huey's calm judgment, are a collection of clucks.

Perhaps his most famous exploit involved the reception of the officers of the German cruiser Emden. Huey insists that the country didn't get it altogether straight.

"Doggone, boy, I had an awful time explaining green silk pajamas to the folks back in Winn Parish. Pajamas were bad enough; but silk ones! Boy! Listen, after that story folks all over the country, from New York, Chicago, San Francisco, all over, began sending me silk pajamas. I got close onto 500 suits of pajamas now. Want a suit?

"Listen. These German officers came early in the morning. I was just out of the hay. I heard the knock on the door and there they were. Boy! All dressed up. 'Come on in,' I said. They came in but I could see they didn't like it. 'Have some coffee,' I said. They didn't say anything. 'Okay,' I said, 'have some eggs.' But nope, they wouldn't. Boy, I was in bad. I had to apologize because there was no telling what would happen.

"I asked some authorities on this international eat-a-cat how I'd have to dress to go down to the ship and apologize. Boy, I didn't have any such clothes. But I scouted around. You ought to've seen HUEY LONG. Wow! Listen, I borrowed a pair of patent-leather shoes from a guy in a barber shop. The assistant manager of the Roosevelt Hotel lent me a pair of striped pants. One of the waiters slipped me a boiled shirt and a preacher lent me his swizzle-tail coat. Listen, I was wearing a collar so high I had to stand on a box to spit over it. I went down to that ship and told the captain I was damned sorry about those pajamas and in no time they fired 21 guns—21 loud ones for Huey! And we were hot friends. The newspapers bawled me out for being undignified. Sure, I'm undignified.

"And listen, I'm going to be less dignified hereafter. I've got too much Cajun in me to get dignified. This State's full of sapsucker, hillbilly, and Cajun relations of mine and there ain't enough dignity in the bunch to keep a chigger still long enough to brush his hair."

(Cajun is a corruption of Acadian. The Acadians were the French of Nova Scotia, many of whom, when deported by the British in 1755, made their way to the Bayou Teche sector of Louisiana.)

While his amazing energy lasts, he'll rule Louisiana. Let the legislature balk him, as it did for a while on his $68,000,000 good-roads program, and Huey takes his case straight to the people. He's forever campaigning. At 80 miles an hour, with reporters panting far behind, he darts hither and yon like an infuriated hawk, screaming anathema upon refractory legislators and talking so fast that among the simpler minded the impression remains that the people's liberties are about to be snatched out of their hands and that the only way out is to rally hard round HUEY LONG. What he says may have no direct bearing upon the political issue, but when Huey departs with a final roar from a town it is a safe bet that the heart of the town has gone with him.

Defeat HUEY LONG! Of course somebody is going to do it—but not just yet. One of the reasons why he defeated Mr. Ransdell was the weakness of his opposition, Mr. Ransdell included. Or perhaps the opposition only seems weak by comparison. But the truth is that the Long mind is usually 5 or 6 laps ahead of any political rival's.

When the Louisiana House of Representatives moved to impeach Huey, few except Huey believed that the senate would fail to find him guilty. Which would have meant the end of Huey—until the next election anyway. But while his enemies were still gloating over so comprehensive an indictment of the tyrant, an amazing thing happened. Huey had leaped into his bellowing motor car and had crashed up and down the State, screaming hate and derision and calling upon the farmers to look to their liberties. He returned to Baton Rouge, called a conference of a few senators and then announced that the house of representatives had his permission to go to hell.

TRY AND PROVE IT

Almost simultaneously, 15 Senators—more than one third of that body—signed a manifesto wherein they declared that no matter what the evidence was, they would not vote to convict Huey, because they believed the whole proceedings illegal. And there you are. How Huey accomplished this is one of his own secrets. His enemies, licked again, said it amounted to bribery. Very well, replied Huey, prove it. They didn't. They didn't even try.

Presently they dropped the whole impeachment, admitting thereby that Huey was boss. Not only that, they adopted his magnificent road program—a program that will not be carried out in its entirety. Not on $68,000,000 anyway.

His plan is to lay 3,000 miles of concrete roads and 6,000 miles of gravel highways. Somebody discovered that Huey's concrete roads were going to cost $54,000,000 and his gravel $30,000,000. Add to this a $15,000,000 bridge which happens to be an item in his scheme and you've spent $99,000,000. It just doesn't work out.

Not that Huey pauses. He simply refers you to his new tax on gasoline (he raised it from 2 cents a gallon to 4) and says the solution lies there, because with better roads there will be additional motorists and with more cars to consume gasoline the aggregate taxes will * * *. Anyway, you're answered.

Once—at least once—Huey went to a party. The outstanding personality at that party (before Huey arrived) was a lady named Miss Helen Clifford, whose dancing was one of New Orleans' most popular reasons for staying up late. So completely had Huey's enemies lost their political sense that they tried to convince the State that Huey's presence at the lovely Miss Clifford's party was something that the truly God-fearing men and women of Louisiana could not possibly tolerate. This seems to have been a sizable mistake because, according to the votes Huey amassed while his opposition blushingly whispered about the party, large numbers of the best people of Louisiana indicated at the ballot box that their only regret was that they too hadn't been there.

There was nothing in Huey's campaign for the senatorial nomination to indicate that he was interested in national affairs. Hardly once did he mention a national issue. He won on his good-roads issue and his tremendous appeal for the rural vote. To compensate for the enmity of all the daily papers in the State he started a newspaper of his own—a weekly—the Louisiana Progress. In no time it achieved a circulation of fifty thousand and the right to its claim to being the livest and frankest journal in the State.

THE KIDNAPING MYSTERY

As a final desperate and futile effort to discredit Huey, the newspapers surrendered their front pages to the mystery of Sam Irby and James Terrell, who were supposed to have dark secrets about Huey's dealings with the highway commission—secrets of graft that would convict the Governor and forever retire him from politics.

Boldly they accused Huey of kidnaping Messrs. Irby and Terrell (the latter the divorced husband of Huey's secretary, Miss Alice Grosjean, lately appointed secretary of state) to prevent them from testifying before the grand jury.

The excitement was at its height. The election was but a day away. That night Huey addressed Louisiana by radio, promising a nice surprise. And Huey made good. After a brief (for Huey) speech, he introduced Mr. Irby, who proceeded to ruin everything by telling how he'd been taken for a nice airplane ride by Huey's enemies and paid $2,500 to say nasty things about Huey. Being a gentleman of honor, there was but one thing Mr. Irby could do—and thereat he proceeded to do so.

He gave the $2,500 to Huey for campaign uses! They tell me that the screams of anguish from the opposition could be heard for miles. A few of them are still protesting, but in sullen whispers only.

"Listen", says Huey, "there are smarter guys than I am—I guess—but not in Louisiana."

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5755) to encourage national industrial recovery, to foster fair competition, and to provide for the construction of certain useful public works, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair calls the attention of the chairman of the committee to page 8, lines 6 and 7. There has been no reconsideration of the vote by which that amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I move that the language there be amended to conform to the amendment previously adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the vote by which the amendment was agreed to will be reconsidered, and the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. REED obtained the floor.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Pennsylvania if he will not now offer the amendment he was about to offer before we got into the other discussion?

Mr. REED. That is what I am about to do. I move to amend the bill by striking out the last 5 lines on page 7 and all of page 8, that being the so-called "licensing section."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 7, beginning with line 21, to strike out down to and including line 25 on page 8.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, a moment's thought will show how un-American this section is. The President is given power to fix a code for any industry, and to alter it from time to time. That is a legislative power. The President then is given power to decide whether any particular industry or member of an industry has or has not violated that code. That is a judicial power. Finally he is given power to sentence the particular units to extinction by refusing a license, and thereby is made the executioner of an executive power.

The President writes the law, he decides whether or not it has been violated, and he carries out the sentence of himself sitting as judge by denying to particular Americans the right to carry on their business any longer.

Mr. President, it seems to me that the whole thing is un-American, and that it is repugnant to the form of government under which we live. We have always at least pretended to keep some separation between legislative, executive, and judicial powers. This provision combines all three functions in the President of the United States. It would not work in practice. Whether it would or would not work in practice, it would be vicious, fundamentally wrong, and I ask the Senate to strike it out.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. REED. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. REED. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Costigan	Kendrick	Russell
Ashurst	Cutting	Keyes	Schall
Austin	Davis	King	Sheppard
Bachman	Dickinson	La Follette	Shipstead
Bailey	Dieterich	Lewis	Smith
Bankhead	Dill	Logan	Steiwer
Barbour	Duffy	Lonergan	Stephens
Barkley	Erickson	Long	Thomas, Okla.
Black	Fess	McGill	Thomas, Utah
Bone	Fletcher	McKellar	Thompson
Borah	Frazier	McNary	Townsend
Bratton	George	Metcalf	Trammell
Brown	Glass	Murphy	Tydings
Bulkley	Goldsborough	Neely	Vandenberg
Bulow	Gore	Norris	Van Nuys
Byrd	Hale	Nye	Wagner
Byrnes	Harrison	Overton	Walcott
Capper	Hastings	Patterson	Walsh
Caraway	Hatfield	Pope	Wheeler
Carey	Hayden	Reed	White
Clark	Hebert	Reynolds
Coolidge	Johnson	Robinson, Ark.
Copeland	Kean	Robinson, Ind.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-nine Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED].

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, my attention was diverted when the yeas and nays were ordered. I do not, however, intend to discuss this measure. I merely wish to register my opposition to the provisions in the pending bill which authorize the issuance of a license to carry on a legitimate business and empower any official to revoke such license. I will merely say that to require a free man to take out a license to carry on a legitimate business in a free country is abhorrent to my conception of freedom itself. The two things cannot subsist at one and the same time in the same country. I would be as willing to trust the President of the United States or his nominees with that power as I would any other man or any other men living today or that ever lived within the tides of time. My convictions on this subject are impersonal. My objection to such license is impersonal. I shall resolve every doubt that I can in favor of his policies and his recommendations—grieved when I cannot do so, but license and liberty are, to my mind, incompatible the one with the other; they are mutually exclusive. I feel as deep a desire as any man for the success of the President and his administration. Failure would be a disaster, both national and individual.

I do not intend to detain the Senate, but I do wish to have read into the RECORD two or three authorities which I believe will command not only the attention but the respect of this body. Apart from Jefferson, I will let the Supreme Court speak in my stead. The first extract is from Thomas Jefferson himself in a letter written to Edward Livingston in 1800. The House of Representatives had passed a bill requiring the Government to charter a concern to operate a copper mine in the State of New Jersey; and I wish all Senators, particularly those on this side of the aisle, to give ear and attention to this language from Thomas Jefferson himself.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read as requested.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

> The House of Representatives sent us yesterday a bill for incorporating a company to work Roosewell's copper mines in New Jersey. I do not know whether it is understood that the Legislature of Jersey was incompetent to this or merely that we have concurrent legislation under the sweeping clause. Congress are authorized to defend the Nation. Ships are necessary for defense, copper is necessary for ships, mines necessary for copper, a company necessary to work mines, and who can doubt this reasoning who has ever played at "This is the house that Jack built"? Under such a process of filiation of necessities the sweeping clause makes clean work. (The Writings of Thomas Jefferson, lib. ed., vol. X, p. 165; letter to Edward Livingston, Esq., April 30, 1800.)

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I now wish to have read into the RECORD at this point an extract on a kindred point from a decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Heisler v. Thomas Colliery Co. (260 U.S. 250). It has to do with the power of Congress or the legislative authority to charge a business with a public interest regardless of the facts. I call the Senate's attention to this point.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read as requested.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

> We may, therefore, disregard the adventitious considerations referred to and their confusion, and by doing so we can estimate the contention made. It is that the products of a State that have, or are destined to have, a market in other States, are subjects of interstate commerce, though they have not moved from the place of their production or preparation.
>
> The reach and consequences of the contention repel its acceptance. If the possibility, or, indeed, certainty, of exportation of a product or article from a State determines it to be in interstate commerce before the commencement of its movement from the State, it would seem to follow that it is in such commerce from the instant of its growth or production, and in the case of coals, as they lie in the ground. The result would be curious. It would nationalize all industries, it would nationalize and withdraw from State jurisdiction and deliver to Federal commercial control the fruits of California and the South, the wheat of the West and its meats, the cotton of the South, the shoes of Massachusetts, and the woolen industries of other States, at the very inception of their production or growth, that is, the fruits unpicked, the cotton and wheat ungathered, hides and flesh of cattle yet "on the hoof", wool yet unshorn, and coal yet unmined, because they are in varying percentages destined for and surely to be exported to States other than those of their production. (Heisler v. Thomas Colliery Co. (260 U.S. 250, 251).)

Mr. GORE. I have another quotation which I wish to have inserted in the RECORD at this point.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read as requested.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

It has never been supposed, since the adoption of the Constitution, that the business of the butcher, or the baker, the tailor, the wood chopper, the mining operator, or the miner was clothed with such a public interest that the price of his product or his wages could be fixed by State regulation. It is true that in the days of the early common law an omnipotent Parliament did regulate prices and wages as it chose, and occasionally a colonial legislature sought to exercise the same power; but nowadays one does not devote one's property or business to the public use or clothe it with a public interest merely because one makes commodities for, and sells to, the public in the common callings of which those above mentioned are instances. (Tyson & Bro. v. Banton, 273 U.S. 438.)

Mr. GORE. The other two extracts are brief. One is from the case of Wolff Packing Co. against Court of Industrial Relations of Kansas, where that State undertook to regulate the wages of a packing plant. The Supreme Court held the power was beyond the competency of the State.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read as requested.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW—DUE PROCESS—RIGHT TO CONTRACT AS LIBERTY

1. The right of employer and employee to contract with respect to wages is part of the liberty protected by the fourteenth amendment to the Federal Constitution.

* * * * * * *

4. The expression "clothed with a public interest", which gives the right of public regulation of a business, means more than that the public welfare is affected by its continuity or by the price at which a commodity is sold or a service rendered; the circumstances must be such as to create a peculiarly close relation between the public and those engaged in it, and raise implications of affirmative obligations on their part to be reasonable in dealing with the public. (Charles Wolff Packing Co. v. State of Kansas, 262 U.S. 522, Syl. 1 and 4.)

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, perhaps the latest case on that point is a case coming up to the Supreme Court from the State of Oklahoma. Oklahoma undertook to charge the business of manufacturing ice as being affected with a public interest. It required those engaged in the business to take out a license, and forbade anybody to engage in the business who did not obtain such a license. The Supreme Court of the United States decided the act void, holding that a man has a right to engage in an ordinary business that is not affected with a public interest without let or license from State or Nation. It actually holds that a contrary course amounts to a violation of the due-process-of-law provision in the fourteenth amendment and the fifth amendment of the Constitution.

I have here just a paragraph or two from that decision which I will ask to have read into the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read as requested.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW—LEGISLATIVE DECLARATION THAT BUSINESS IS AFFECTED WITH PUBLIC INTEREST—EFFECT

3. The mere declaration by the legislature that a business is affected with a public interest is not conclusive of the question whether or not its attempted regulation on that ground is justified. (Chas. Wolff Packing Co. v. State of Kansas, 262 U.S. 522, Syl. 3.)

Also, I would call your attention to the following quotation: "In the endeavor to reach a correct conclusion in respect of this inquiry, it will be helpful, by way of preface, to state certain pertinent considerations. The first of these is that the right of the owner to fix a price at which his property shall be sold or used is an inherent attribute of the property itself. State Freight Tax Case, 15 Wall. 232, 278, amd. as sicj. within the protection of the due-process-of-law clauses of the fifth and the fourteenth amendments." (Tyson & Bro. v. Banton, 273 U.S. 429.)

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, SECTION 636—DUE PROCESS OF LAW—INTERFERENCE WITH LAWFUL OCCUPATIONS

6. The State has no power, under the fourteenth amendment, arbitrarily to deny or unreasonably to curtail the common right to engage in a lawful private business, such as the manufacture and sale of ice.

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, SECTION 636—DUE PROCESS OF LAW—EXPERIMENTAL LEGISLATION INTERFERING WITH BUSINESS

7. Unreasonable or arbitrary interference with or restrictions on the common right to engage in a lawful private business such as the manufacture and sale of ice cannot be saved from the condemnation of the fourteenth amendment by calling them experimental. (New State Ice Co. v. Liebmann, 285 U.S. 262.)

Mr. GORE. Just preceding that quotation in the same volume there is another paragraph in the syllabus, holding that a legislative declaration that a business was affected with a public interest did not make it so. I should like to have the clerk find that place, because I am particularly anxious to have that go in the RECORD. The courts uniformly hold that the power of Congress over interstate commerce is no greater than the power of the State over intrastate commerce. Such powers are equal or equivalent, and Congress cannot exert power over interstate commerce greater than a State can exercise over intrastate commerce. I say that in order to show the pertinency of these decisions, whether relating to Federal or State power.

I may observe in this connection that a few years ago the Legislature of Louisiana undertook to charge a sugar refinery or that business with a public interest, and declared the business of refining sugar was affected with a public interest. The Supreme Court of the United States held that that legislative declaration was of no avail, that it did not affect the fact, and the question as to whether a business is affected with public interest is one of fact and not of law, to be determined by the court and not by the legislature. (McFarland v. American Sugar Refining Co., 241 U. S. 78.)

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. GORE. I yield.

Mr. COPELAND. I assume from what the Senator has said that he is out of sympathy with the entire measure, even though it starts with the declaration of policy that the present national emergency affects the public welfare, undermines the standards of living, and so forth. On that theory, the same as in a State, by the exercise of the police power, the Congress undertakes to do something unusual.

I have had some experience in the matter of dealing with business by exercising such power as the license section of this act provides. Years ago I was commissioner of health of the city of New York and president of the board of health. It was my duty to enforce certain regulations relating to the so-called "offensive trades or offensive businesses", like horseshoeing shops, slaughterhouses, and organizations of that sort.

We found it utterly impossible for us to enforce our regulations until we determined upon the licensing system. Each one of those institutions had to apply for a license. Then if we found it operated in violation of the regulations we set aside the license, and of course the proprietor was without power to operate.

Here the members of the committee have undertaken in the formulation of the bill to impose certain regulations upon industry, very unusual regulations, of course. The measure is pressed because there is a national emergency.

If we have power actually to impose these regulations upon industry, I cannot for the life of me see how we could enforce them except we had the authority of issuing the licenses and doing away with them in case of violations.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, this high-sounding declaration of purposes in the preamble or preliminary sections does not create any additional power and vest it in Congress. Congress cannot by such a declaration invest itself with a power which it would not otherwise possess. The Congress of the United States derives its powers from the Constitution of the United States and not from the preamble of its own enactments.

The preamble of an act of the British Parliament rent the British Empire asunder. It created this Republic. I hope this Republic will not be dismantled by another preamble.

The supreme object of our Government, the object of our Constitution, the object of the first 10 amendments, was to place certain rights and certain liberties of the individual beyond the power, beyond the caprice of any government on this earth. If it has failed in that thing, it has failed in all things. I have often said, indeed I have said in the Senate, that one of the chief glories of our free institutions is that the Government of the United States, with all its power and all its majesty, with all its armies and all its navies, cannot strip a street urchin of the rags upon his back—not without the urchin's consent, except upon the payment of just compensation. The Constitution is the sheet anchor not only of our free institutions but of all our liberties. It is the sheet anchor of our ship of state. If that anchor breaks, all is lost. The Supreme Court is the guardian of this ship of state, the guardian under our Constitution, the guardian unswayed either by popular agitation on the one hand or by Executive power or Executive favor on the other. Upon that narrow isthmus all our institutions, all our liberties, must stand or fall.

The Senator from New York confuses the police power with the power to regulate commerce. The police power relates to public health, public safety, public morals, and it is legitimate to exercise the licensing power in the enforcement or administration of the police power. In a sense that is penal in its character. This principle does not apply with reference to the power to regulate commerce. The courts and the cases make that distinction because the power to license is the power of life and death; and when we revoke a free-born American citizen's license, we destroy his business without trial by jury and without due process of law.

Perhaps my convictions were hardened on this point during the late war when I was waging war against the late President, Mr. Hoover, for the extensive licensing power exercised by him under the food control law. Under that law the wheat farmers of the country were robbed of $1,000,000,000. The cotton farmers were robbed of half a billion dollars. Our farmers who produced livestock were robbed of $1,000,000,000. The venerable Senator from Wyoming [Mr. KENDRICK] will corroborate my statement when I say that that measure virtually broke and ruined every livestock producer in the West. Mr. Hoover's administration of that act beat our farmers down to their knees and they have never stood erect from that evil hour till this.

Obedience or the bowstring! That was the maxim of the sultan. It meant obedience or death. Licensing in a free country, licensing of freemen to carry on their honest business, is placing the life and the destiny of freemen otherwise than where they belong. The Supreme Court of the United States says the freedom of commerce between the States is the object for which the Constitution was adopted, and to convert that right into a privilege and require a citizen to obtain a license to carry it on is annulling both the letter and the spirit of the Constitution itself.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at the close of my remarks a newspaper clipping containing an expression of opinion by the late Senator Walsh of Montana, concerning the constitutional power of Congress to license a private business. It related to the Davis-Kelly bill, providing for the licensing of operators engaged in the coal business. The late Senator Walsh was appointed chairman of a subcommittee of the Committee on Mines and Mining to prepare a report on the constitutional authority of Congress to enact a licensing law. As his last official act, and perhaps in the last official words that fell from his lips, with the light of another world breaking in his face, he declared against the constitutional power of Congress to compel a private citizen to take out a license to engage in a private business. That report did justice to his long and illustrious career as a jurist.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the article will be inserted in the RECORD.

The article is as follows:

SENATORS DECIDE DAVIS-KELLY COAL BILL IS ILLEGAL—REASONS FOR FINDINGS HELD IN ABEYANCE PENDING REPORT TO FULL COMMITTEE—MEASURE CALLED FOR LICENSING PRODUCERS—WAGE FIXING AND PRICE CONTROL ONE OF PRIMARY PURPOSES OF BILL; SPONSOR WILL REINTRODUCE MEASURE AT OPENING OF NEXT SESSION

WASHINGTON, February 21.—The Davis-Kelly coal regulation bill was held unconstitutional today in a report of the Senate Mining Committee by a subcommittee of Senators Walsh (Democrat, Montana), Logan (Democrat, Kentucky), and Robinson (Republican, Indiana).

Reasons for the subcommittee's findings were held in abeyance pending report to the full committee.

The committee is not likely to take formal action before Congress expires March 4, which failure would automatically kill the measure.

Walsh, one of the Senate's outstanding authorities on constitutional law and probably the next Attorney General, told newspapermen the subcommittee's finding was predicated on a belief Congress did not have the power to regulate private industry.

The measure provided for licensing coal producers and controlling their interstate shipments, set up other regulatory machinery, and had as one of its primary purposes wage fixing and price control.

Representative KELLY (Republican, Pennsylvania) sponsor of the bill in the House, said he would reintroduce the measure at the opening of the next session. The House Commerce Committee killed the bill several weeks ago.

KELLY said he "could not understand why Senator Walsh found the bill unconstitutional, in the light of Supreme Court decisions on corporations engaged in interstate commerce.

Support of the Roosevelt administration for his or a similar bill is expected by KELLY.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED] on which the yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. LEWIS. I wish to announce that the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], the Senator from California [Mr. McADOO], and the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN] are necessarily detained on departmental matters.

Mr. HEBERT. I wish to announce that the Senator from Vermont [Mr. DALE] has a general pair with the Senator from California [Mr. McADOO]. I am not informed how either Senator would vote if present.

The result was announced—yeas 31, nays 58, as follows:

YEAS—31

Austin	Glass	Keyes	Schall
Barbour	Goldsborough	Logan	Steiwer
Borah	Gore	Long	Townsend
Bulkley	Hale	McNary	Tydings
Byrd	Hastings	Metcalf	Vandenberg
Carey	Hatfield	Overton	Walcott
Dickinson	Hebert	Patterson	White
Fess	Kean	Reed

NAYS—58

Adams	Coolidge	Kendrick	Russell
Ashurst	Copeland	King	Sheppard
Bachman	Costigan	La Follette	Shipstead
Bailey	Cutting	Lewis	Smith
Bankhead	Davis	Lonergan	Stephens
Barkley	Dieterich	McGill	Thomas, Okla.
Black	Dill	McKellar	Thomas, Utah
Bone	Duffy	Murphy	Thompson
Bratton	Erickson	Neely	Trammell
Brown	Fletcher	Norris	Van Nuys
Bulow	Frazier	Nye	Wagner
Byrnes	George	Pope	Walsh
Capper	Harrison	Reynolds	Wheeler
Caraway	Hayden	Robinson, Ark.
Clark	Johnson	Robinson, Ind.

NOT VOTING—7

Connally	Dale	McCarran	Pittman
Couzens	McAdoo	Norbeck

So Mr. REED'S amendment was rejected.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I move to strike out section 5; and I desire to give notice that if that motion prevails I shall then move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED] was rejected.

I do that for the reason that it seems to me that the vice of this bill is that, having taken the first vicious step, it is impossible to find any place to stop. The antitrust statutes having been emasculated, there is no logical reason for refusing to impose an embargo on all foreign products coming into the United States as compensation for the artificial jacking-up of prices sought to be accomplished by the monopoly to be created by the repeal of the antitrust acts.

Having done that, having repealed the antitrust statutes, having authorized embargoes, there is then no logical stopping point short of complete Government control of all industry.

For that reason I voted against the amendment of the Senator from Pennsylvania; and for that reason I give notice that if this amendment shall prevail I shall move to reconsider the vote whereby the amendment offered by the Senator from Pennsylvania was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK].

Mr. CLARK. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I do not know that I am in order just now, but I offer an amendment on page 5.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator is in order. Individual amendments to title I are now in order, the Chair understands, by order of the Senate.

Mr. ASHURST. I have heretofore moved, on page 5, beginning in line 14 with the word "several", to strike out "several district attorneys of the United States, in their respective districts, under the direction of the Attorney General," and insert "Federal Trade Commission", so that, if amended, subdivision (c) will read:

The several district courts of the United States are hereby invested with jurisdiction to prevent and restrain violations of any code of fair competition approved under this title; and it shall be the duty of the Federal Trade Commission to institute proceedings in equity to prevent and restrain such violations.

Mr. President, as I said a few moments ago, I do not offer this amendment because of any lack of confidence in the head of the Department of Justice. On the contrary, I believe the country is impressed with the many talents and high merits of Attorney General Cummings. I believe likewise that the several district attorneys may be trusted generally to perform their duties impartially; but in view of the other duties laid upon the Federal Trade Commission by this bill, in view of the philosophy of this bill, in view of its mechanics, if we are to have a symmetrical bill which will do justice to all parties and will not be confusing, the Federal Trade Commission should institute proceedings in equity to prevent and restrain such violations.

Mr. COSTIGAN and Mr. WAGNER addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Arizona yield; and if so to whom?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield first to the Senator from Colorado. Then I will yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, has the able Senator from Arizona determined in his own mind the question whether the Federal Trade Commission is authorized under existing statutes, and, if not, will be authorized under the language he has suggested, to institute proceedings in equity to prevent and restrain violations?

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, the esteemed and learned Senator from Colorado was a valued member of the Federal Trade Commission.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Of the United States Tariff Commission.

Mr. ASHURST. He was valued wherever he was. Mr. President, I answer as follows:

The Federal Trade Commission now has some power under the present statutes, but there may be doubt if the present existing power is adequate.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President——

Mr. COSTIGAN. If the Senator from New Mexico will permit me to pursue my inquiry further, I should like to ask whether it would not be desirable to add, after the words "Federal Trade Commission" in the Senator's amendment, the words "and it is hereby authorized and directed", and whether there would be objection to such an addition by the Senator from Arizona?

Mr. ASHURST. If I may, I accept the suggested amendment of the Senator from Colorado.

I now yield to the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, in view of the fact that the Attorney General and the several district attorneys constitute the staff representing the Government in matters of litigation, I wonder if the Senator from Arizona would consider the advisability of inserting the following language after the word "General", in line 16—upon request of the Federal Trade Commission, or otherwise.

So that it would become the duty of the several district attorneys, under the direction of the Attorney General and upon the request of the Federal Trade Commission, or otherwise, to institute proceedings. That system would leave it first to the Federal Trade Commission to determine whether a suit should be instituted; and if it decided that such a suit should be instituted, and should request the Attorney General to do so, it would become the duty of the Attorney General.

Mr. ASHURST. I am quite impressed with that suggestion; and if I may still further modify my amendment to comply with that suggestion, I shall do so.

In other words, I believe that the Federal Trade Commission, after its searching investigations, should be the moving spirit and power; but quite naturally the mechanics would fall into the Department of Justice.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President——

Mr. ASHURST. I yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. WAGNER. I desire to get clear the amendment which the Senator from New Mexico has suggested. His amendment would mean that the several district attorneys, under the direction of the Attorney General, may institute these proceedings; and that if the Federal Trade Commission so request, they must institute the proceedings?

Mr. BRATTON. That is the effect of the amendment as I intended to suggest it.

Mr. WAGNER. Then I do not quite know whether the Senator wants to agree to that amendment, because then the Federal Trade Commission upon its own initiative will not be authorized to bring proceedings.

Mr. BRATTON. No; my thought was that once the Federal Trade Commission determines that a suit of that kind should be instituted, it makes a request of the Department of Justice; and upon that request being submitted, it becomes the duty of the Department of Justice to institute the suit.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, if I may suggest to the Senator, if we can leave the language as it is in the pending bill, we have language exactly as it appears in the antitrust laws now, which authorizes the Federal Trade Commission, where they find violations in the way of unfair competition, to institute proceedings to compel the violator to cease and desist; and, in addition thereto, the Attorney General and the district attorneys under the Attorney General may also bring proceedings for violation of the antitrust laws; and we have simply transposed into this legislation the power which exists now in the antitrust laws with reference to the institution of actions to enjoin. It has worked very satisfactorily; and I should think that we ought not to change that policy that we adopted away back in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and which has been in force up to the present time. There has been no complaint of it.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I cannot escape the conclusion—it seems inevitable to me—that if this bill is to work effectively, the Federal Trade Commission, if it is to have functions to perform—and it certainly has—ought to be given the power to perform and carry out such functions and duties.

Mr. WAGNER. And it is given that authority, may I say to the Senator, because it provides that any violation of such standards and any transaction in or affecting interstate or foreign commerce shall be deemed an unfair method of competition in commerce within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act as amended.

Mr. ASHURST. That is quite true.

Mr. WAGNER. And that act provides that when there is such an unfair method of competition, certain suits shall be instituted by the Federal Trade Commission; so that the authority is clear.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I do not need to suggest to the astute and able Senator from New York, who won for himself a proud place at the bar of the great State of New York before he went upon the bench, and on the bench was regarded as one of the great judges of our country—I need not suggest to that superb intellect that the other language which he has quoted and the other language of the existing law is probably too general, and this may be a penal statute.

Mr. WAGNER. No.

Mr. ASHURST. Certainly it is wise and expedient that power to institute the proceedings in equity to prevent and restrain violations ought to be in clear, unmistakable language, so that when the Federal Trade Commission institutes proceedings and goes into court with such a suit they can say, "Here is the statute under which we are acting, ita lex scripta est—'thus the law is written.'"

The Senator is too able a lawyer to argue against that. I doubt very much whether, without this language in paragraph (c), the Federal Trade Commission would have the unquestioned power to carry this direction out. I am willing to accept the amendment of the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ASHURST. As I understand the amendment of the Senator from New Mexico, and he will correct me if I am wrong, if and when the Federal Trade Commission, after its investigation, reaches the conclusion that proceedings in equity ought to be instituted to restrain and prevent violations, the Federal Trade Commission makes its application to the Attorney General, and ipso facto it is the duty of the Attorney General to carry out those instructions. Have I stated the question correctly?

Mr. BRATTON. Exactly so. Under the amendment the Department of Justice would have the power to institute a suit of its own motion.

Mr. ASHURST. Very good.

Mr. BRATTON. But it becomes the duty of the Department of Justice to institute proceedings when requested to do so by the Federal Trade Commission.

Mr. ASHURST. I am content.

Mr. WAGNER. I do not think the Senator is, with all due respect, because under the amendment we would take all power from the Federal Trade Commission to institute an action on its own behalf. It may under the antitrust laws now institute a proceeding, and this limits it to a proceeding brought by the Attorney General. If the Senator is satisfied with that, I shall not quarrel about it.

Mr. ASHURST. Let it go to conference.

Mr. WAGNER. It is contrary to what the Senator is contending for.

Mr. ASHURST. Surely the able Senator from New York sees the advantage of the language offered by the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. If the Senator from New York is right, the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice both have jurisdiction.

Mr. ASHURST. The Department of Justice has a right to institute a suit, but the Federal Trade Commission requests the Department of Justice to carry on the proceedings.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. If the Federal Trade Commission so requests, does the Senator think that that takes away from the Federal Trade Commission the right to institute proceedings in its own behalf?

Mr. ASHURST. No; I do not think so, because the language in subdivision (b) points that out.

Mr. WAGNER. If the Senator wants to send it to conference, very well.

Mr. ASHURST. Let it go to conference.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Arizona a further question?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield.

Mr. COSTIGAN. I trust the able Senator from Arizona will not abandon the form of amendment which was originally offered. If, however, the Senator is appealed to by the amendment of the Senator from New Mexico, it would perhaps be proper to add the power indicated by the Senator from New Mexico as an alternative or cumulative but not substitute method of procedure. It is clearly the desire of those who are friends of or connected with the Federal Trade Commission, and who feel that the jurisdiction of that independent establishment is imperative under the pending bill, to support an amendment corresponding to that which the Senator from Arizona has offered. As evidence, with the permission of the Senator from Arizona, I send to the desk and ask the clerk to read a brief statement by the noted and competent counsel of the Federal Trade Commission, Judge Healy, in which he sets out persuasive reasons for that position. I ask that the clerk read this memorandum.

Mr. ASHURST. I yield for that purpose.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

MEMORANDUM RE: H.R. 5755 (SENATOR HARRISON'S NATIONAL RECOVERY BILL)

By paragraph (b), section 3, violation of standards of fair competition established in a code approved by the President is made an unfair method of competition within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act. Ordinarily one would believe that jurisdiction of the Federal Trade Commission to proceed against such a violator for a cease and desist order would automatically attach.

By its basic act the Federal Trade Commission is empowered and directed to prevent unfair methods of competition in commerce. H.R. 5755 (sec. 3, par. (b)), makes a violation of the code an unfair method of competition. Paragraph (c) of section 3 gives the district courts jurisdiction to restrain violations of the codes, and it is made the duty of the district attorneys, under the direction of the Attorney General, to institute proceedings to prevent and restrain such violations.

The question has been raised whether by these provisions the proposed act will not prevent the Commission from proceeding to issue cease and desist orders against violators of the codes, on the theory that the specification of a precise remedy excludes the implied jurisdiction of the Federal Trade Commission.

There is also present a very serious possibility that the codes will forbid unfair methods of competition with which this Commission is dealing every day, such as false advertising, various forms of misrepresentation, commercial bribery, etc., etc. If this is true, and I believe there is great substance to it, the Commission will lose much of its present jurisdiction.

I think it is a mistake to take this jurisdiction from the Commission and give it to the district attorneys. They are not specialists in this work. They are not trained in it. Our men are. Our men have helped to build up the body of the law on the subject of unfair competition. The district attorneys have many other duties. Many of them have their private practices. They are exposed to local political pressure. If the act works out, as I fear it may, the district attorneys will lose this jurisdiction at the end of 2 years, and it will return to this Commission, whose organization in the meantime will have been destroyed.

My suggestion is that paragraph (c), section 3, be amended to read as follows: "The several district courts of the United States are hereby invested with jurisdiction to prevent and restrain violations of any code of fair competition approved under this rule; and it shall be the duty of the Federal Trade Commission to institute proceedings in equity to prevent and restrain such violations.

Respectfully submitted.

ROBT. E. HEALY, Chief Counsel.

JUNE 5, 1933.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, it has been suggested as a sort of compromise that the matter go to conference in the alternative.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, the committee considered this proposal quite fully, but I am perfectly willing, in order to save time, that the matter as suggested go to conference for consideration.

Mr. ASHURST. I thank the Senator.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to strike out "several district attorneys of the United States in their respective districts, under the direction of the Attorney General", and to insert the words "Federal Trade Commission, and the several district attorneys of the United States in their respective districts, under the direction of the Attorney General, upon request of the Federal Trade Commission, or upon their own motion."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

COMPOSITION OF MUNICIPAL DEBTS

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, if I may have the attention of the senior Senator from Arizona a moment, he presented a bill a few moments ago to provide for the composition of municipal debts. I asked him a question with respect to that which I think he misunderstood. It is so exceedingly important that I want to ask him again if this is not a counterpart of the so-called "Sumners bill" which was introduced in the House yesterday?

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator is correct, and I apologize to him for the inconclusive reply I gave an hour or more ago. I was doubtless under a misapprehension.

The bill I introduced today is, so far as I know, a counterpart or rescript of the Sumners bill introduced in the House. The bill provides that it shall be in operation for 2 years, and it proposes to amend the present existing Bankruptcy Act so that municipalities, counties, cities, boroughs, villages, parishes, towns, townships, any unincorporated "tax" or "special assessment district" or political subdivision of a State, a school district, drainage, irrigation, levee, sewer, paving, sanitary, port, or other "taxing district", may avail itself of the Bankruptcy Act and may be brought into involuntary bankruptcy.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Is it not a fact that this proposal has the emphatic endorsement of both the Treasury Department and the Department of Justice?

Mr. ASHURST. I answer the question by saying "yes"; that the Treasury Department and the Department of Justice are earnestly in favor of the bill. I am not able to speak for the White House, but I feel quite certain that this bill is favored by the President.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I thank the Senator from Arizona for his statement, and I want to supplement it simply to this extent: There was considerable dispute over this proposition as to municipal debts in the last session of the Congress. It is my understanding that the bill which the Senator has now introduced represents substantially a meeting of minds respecting those who heretofore have been in disagreement regarding this matter. I know of my own knowledge that it has the endorsement of the large insurance companies, which heretofore have been the chief opponents of this type of legislation. It is absolutely necessary that something along this line shall be done before this session adjourns. I want to urge the Senator, in his capacity as Chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, that he put every possible emphasis upon action between now and the adjournment.

I wish to urge the Senator, in his capacity as chairman of the committee, to put every possible emphasis upon action between now and adjournment, and I ask, at the present moment, to have printed in the RECORD a telegram carrying resolutions just adopted by the Common Council of the city of Detroit, which typically indicates the desperate nature of the need for this legislation in one of many large cities of the country.

I ask that the telegram which I now send to the desk may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the telegram was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DETROIT, MICH., June 7, 1933.

Senator ARTHUR H. VANDENBERG:

Whereas it is necessary that the city of Detroit refund its $400,000,000 bonded indebtedness in order to prevent default and to continue and maintain orderly government, and to preserve the peace, health, and safety of its citizens; and

Whereas the Legislature of the State of Michigan has just enacted appropriate laws providing for such refunding; and

Whereas the plan of refunding such indebtedness cannot be successfully carried out without Federal legislation: Therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the legislative body of the city of Detroit, respectfully urge and request that His Excellency Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, transmit a message to Congress today urging the passage of the so-called "Sumners bill", H.R. 5885, or legislation of a similar character; and be it further

Resolved, that the city clerk be, and he is hereby, directed to immediately transmit copy of this resolution to His Excellency the President of the United States, and to the Senators from Michigan.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I thank the able Senator from Michigan for his contribution to the discussion of this question; and, if I may be pardoned another minute on this particular subject, I wish to say that I am inundated, engulfed by telegrams from all parts of the country, urging the passage of this legislation. The telegrams have come to me not because of any importance on my part but because I happened in the evolution of affairs to be Chairman of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary. I have examined the proposed legislation with the best lights before me, and it is so important that I have resorted to the unusual procedure—I may have to ask my committee in the morning for forgiveness—I have resorted to the unusual procedure of presuming to appoint a subcommittee to examine this bill before its reference to a committee in the hope that the committee will report at the earliest possible moment. Indeed, I have already appointed on the subcommittee to examine the bill Mr. VAN NUYS, chairman of the subcommittee, and Messrs. MCCARRAN, NEELY, HASTINGS, and HEBERT. I would not be so offensive as to presume to ask that subcommittee any questions. I feel, however, that the subcommittee will proceed with all possible haste and diligence and that they fully realize the enormous importance of this bill as much as the Senator from Michigan or I could appreciate its importance.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4812) to promote the foreign trade of the United States in apples and/or pears, to protect the reputation of American-grown apples and pears in foreign markets, to prevent deception or misrepresentation as to the quality of such products moving in foreign commerce, to provide for the commercial inspection of such products entering such commerce, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4220) for the protection of Government records.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4589) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of such District for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, and for other purposes; that the House had receded from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate nos. 9, 15, and 28 to the said bill, and concurred therein; and also that the House had receded from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate nos. 22, 32, and 34, and concurred therein, severally with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5755) to encourage national industrial recovery, to foster fair competition, and to provide for the construction of certain useful public works, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Mississippi desire to return to the amendment which was passed over?

Mr. HARRISON. I was hopeful that the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] would now be willing to have that amendment considered.

Mr. NORRIS. That is agreeable to me.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, I want to offer an amendment affecting that offered by the Senator from Nebraska.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the amendment proposed by the Senator from Colorado.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 5, line 8, after the word "amended", it is proposed to insert a semicolon and the following:

but nothing in this title shall be construed to impair the powers of the Federal Trade Commission under such act as amended.

Mr. HARRISON. I see no objection to that amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, is the bill open to amendment?

Mr. HARRISON. I hope we may now get through with the labor amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the committee amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 10, line 13, it is proposed to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That nothing in this title shall be construed to compel a change in existing satisfactory relationships between the employees and employers of any particular plant, firm, or corporation, except that the employees of any particular plant, firm, or corporation shall have the right to organize for the purpose of collective bargaining with their employer as to wages, hours of labor, and other conditions of employment.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, in the first place, I want to thank the Senator from Mississippi for agreeing to a reconsideration of the vote whereby this amendment was adopted in my absence, although I have been trying to watch it as best I could during the entire day. I think Senators realize, most of us—all of us, I presume—especially when we commence the session of the Senate at 10 o'clock and continue until late in the evening, the necessity, unless one is very discourteous, of being called from the floor many times. During my temporary absence this committee amendment was, I think, agreed to as a matter of form only, there being no debate on it. I regard this amendment as a very important one, and I hope I may have the attention of the Senate in the brief time I shall occupy in discussing it. I think I shall ask that a roll call be had on this amendment. If I can be assured of that, I think it will probably shorten the debate considerably.

Mr. HARRISON. May I say to the Senator if that is his desire I shall be glad to cooperate in getting a roll call and having an expression of the Senate on this proposition?

Mr. NORRIS. I thank the Senator.

Mr. President, I am interested in this subject, because for several years the Judiciary Committee, at the time I had the honor of being chairman, had under consideration the so-called "anti-injunction bill" dealing with the labor problem. The committee held extended hearings on that bill. From those hearings and the long consideration given the measure we found that one of the greatest evils we had to provide against was the so-called "company union." This amendment, as I understand and interpret it, legalizes such company unions.

Every man who has studied the question of injunctions in labor disputes and the labor subject generally will, I think, agree with me that it is one of the great evils that must be met in the settlement of the labor problem. We thought we had met it in the bill which finally resulted from our long consideration and is now on the statute books, and that in labor disputes we had made it impossible for a corporation wanting to bear down heavily upon labor, and in effect, under the guise of a union, to make it impossible, as a practical matter, for labor to be represented by organizations of its own choice, to accomplish such a purpose.

This particular provision in the bill, section 7, reestablishes, almost in the identical language of that bill, the right of employees to organize in unions of their own without any coercion of any kind from any source. However, it adds a proviso which I think comes very near to destroying, if it does not entirely destroy, the effect of the language which precedes it. This is the proviso that I am seeking now to strike out. I have no fault to find with the language which precedes it, but the proviso, after giving labor the right of self-organization, the right to be represented in disputes by an organization of its own choice, then imports this language into the bill:

Provided, That nothing in this title shall be construed to compel a change in existing satisfactory relationships between the employees and employers of any particular plant, firm, or corporation, except that the employees of any particular plant, firm, or corporation shall have the right to organize for the purpose of collective bargaining with their employer as to wages, hours of labor, and other conditions of employment.

That looks fair on its face, Mr. President. I think if we were trying to accomplish what at first blush it would seem is sought to be accomplished, all we would have to do would be to strike it out, as it is already in the preceding wording.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President——

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Is there not ambiguity in the expression "existing satisfactory relationship"?

Mr. NORRIS. Oh, yes; there are all kinds of opportunities there.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Might that language not perhaps be regarded as affirming that all existing relationships are satisfactory?

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, in many of these cases the conditions which are not satisfactory will appear to be satisfactory on their face. One of the methods that capital has been using for years to destroy labor unions is to organize unions in the individual plants. The employer pays for the union; he furnishes the money; he controls that union as completely as a man controls his own child. The employees know that to go against the orders of that kind of a union, paid for and maintained by the employer, means dismissal; it means that they will lose their job. So if they were asked whether existing conditions were satisfactory they would say "yes", because to say anything else would mean that they would lose their jobs. There are numerous instances, all the way from New York to California, where this method has been adopted by corporations which wanted to prohibit their employees from joining a union.

Moreover, Mr. President, a union of laboring men, to be effective, must not be confined to the workers in one plant, but must take in its scope and under its jurisdiction all plants engaged in the same industry. Experience has demonstrated that that is the only effective way by which the laboring men may organize. I think the proviso is a direct blow at organized labor.

Some honest people, a great many of them, believe that there ought to be no such thing as organized labor. If their view be the correct one, then we ought to strike out this whole section and say nothing about it; but if we are proceeding on the modern theory, which has been approved all the way from the Supreme Court down, at least in expressions of sympathy for the laboring man, then we ought to provide that the laboring men shall be permitted to organize in their own way without any coercion, without any influence from their direct employers, and that they shall be permitted to select representatives of their own choice to represent them in controversies which they must continually meet with organized wealth. I do not think there is a Senator here but who believes that the right thing to do and the necessary thing to do, if we are to protect labor, is to get away from the company union.

Therefore, Mr. President, I hope the Senate will strike this proviso from the bill.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, sharing the critical apprehension of the able Senator from Nebraska as to the committee amendment, may I say to the Senator from Nebraska that I am further concerned over the fact that certain language in line 7, on page 10, of this section differs from similar language in lines 18 and 19 on the same page? It is provided in line 7:

That employees shall have the right to organize and bargain collectively.

In line 18, following the ambiguous reference to "existing satisfactory relationships", it is provided that the employees "shall have the right to organize for the purpose of collective bargaining." In order that this language may be consistent, the language in lines 18 and 19 should provide that the employees "shall have the right to organize and bargain collectively."

Otherwise it may well be argued in the courts that where it is claimed that the relations of employers and employees are satisfactory, the limit of authority permitted to the employees is to organize for the mere purpose of bargaining collectively without any provision in the statute inviting the fulfillment of that purpose.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I should like to say to the Senator from Nebraska that, in my opinion, this proviso does not have any such effect as he is attributing to it. The proviso was adopted by the unanimous vote of the committee. Mr. Richberg, one of the authors of the bill, well known as one of the leading labor lawyers and a leading representative of labor unions, was present and not only accepted the amendment but said he thought it was very beneficial to the bill. He suggested only the insertion of the word "satisfactory" in line 2 of the proviso.

General Johnson, who has been designated as the administrator of the bill, was present and said that he thought the addition of the proviso would be most beneficial, and that he considered it an exceedingly constructive amendment. The right of the employees to be free from coercion, to be free to organize in the way in which they may see fit for collective bargaining is specifically guaranteed in section 7 prior to the proviso.

The only purpose of the amendment, the only purpose of the insertion of the proviso, was to clarify and state in the bill what was the consensus of opinion of practically every witness who appeared before the committee. It was not contended on the part of anybody that it was the purpose to compel the employees to organize in a particular way against their wishes. On the other hand, it was the purpose of all concerned to guarantee to the employees the right to organize in any way in which they might see fit and to guarantee the right of collective bargaining. That is what is done by section 7 as it now stands with the proviso contained in the committee amendment. I hope the motion of the Senator from Nebraska will be voted down.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Missouri whether he would have any objection to the substitution, in lines 18 and 19, of the words "and bargain collectively" for the words "for the purpose of collective bargaining"?

Mr. CLARK. I will say to the Senator that, as I recall it, when I offered the amendment it was in the form in which he now suggests it. It was changed at the suggestion of Mr. Richberg.

Mr. COSTIGAN. It was not my fortune to be in the committee meeting at the time.

Mr. CLARK. So far as I am personally concerned I have no objection.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Unless there is objection I offer the amendment which I have just stated. Is that satisfactory to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. NORRIS. I am sorry, but my attention was distracted at the moment.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Is the Senator's motion to strike out the proviso?

Mr. NORRIS. It is not a motion to strike, because the question is on the adoption or rejection of the committee amendment. The way to strike it out is to vote "nay."

Mr. WHEELER. Why does not the Senator from Colorado wait until after the motion to strike is decided?

Mr. CLARK. We do not have to strike it out. The question is on the adoption or rejection of the committee amendment.

Mr. COSTIGAN. I will withdraw the amendment for the present.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I concur in the statement made by the Senator from Nebraska with reference to the proviso. I am utterly amazed to hear it stated that Donald Richberg, the attorney, has said this amendment would be satisfactory to labor. As a matter of fact, if the amendment is adopted, labor gets nothing under this section of the bill, because, as the Senator from Nebraska has declared, the laboring men who belong to a company union do not dare to say their souls are their own. They would not dare to come before any committee of the Congress of the United States and say to that committee that conditions were not satisfactory, that labor conditions in their particular industry were not satisfactory.

When we had the coal hearings we found that very situation to exist. It will be found, for instance, in the railroad company unions. Members of those unions do not dare to write in here to protest against conditions unless they request secrecy with reference to it. That is true in every section of the country. I have in my files letters complaining about labor conditions, but saying, "My name must not be used, because if it is used I will lose my job."

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. The words employed are "existing satisfactory relationship." The word "relationship" is an all-embracing word and includes hours of labor, wages, methods of employment, and so forth. I fear, and the more I reflect the more the fear grows, that it may be regarded as a nullification of the other provisions of the bill which outlaw the "yellow dog" contract.

Mr. WHEELER. Why, of course!

Mr. WAGNER. This may be a legalization of that contract. I am not sure about it, but that is my apprehension.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, where does the Senator find anything in the proviso that could possibly be construed as a legalization of the "yellow dog" contract? We specifically outlaw it in terms.

Mr. WAGNER. The proviso is, "That nothing shall be construed to compel a change in existing satisfactory relationships." If the particular industry is following the policy of employing only those who will agree to join the company union and make that a condition of employment, it may be that this section will be construed as legalizing such contracts, at least so far as that particular industry is concerned, because that is the existing relationship and it would be interpreted as continuing that existing relationship.

Mr. CLARK. In the very next paragraph it is provided specifically that no employee shall be required as a condition of employment to join any company union or refrain from joining, organizing, or assisting in the organization of a labor union.

Mr. WAGNER. I understand the other side of the argument, but it does cast doubt upon the provision, because we say "provided nothing in this title shall be construed to compel a change in existing satisfactory relationships." It may lift that situation right out of the bill and say that those relations shall continue.

Mr. WHEELER. I do not think there is any question, for instance, if we have a situation where there are long hours of labor, that the bill is intended to cover that situation. If it is going to give the laboring people of the country anything at all, it is for the purpose of shortening hours, giving better wages to employees throughout the country. If that is not the purpose of the bill, if that is not what the bill is intended to accomplish, then the laboring people of the country have been grossly fooled in their support of it.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Montana yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Some little time ago in the debate a statement was made that Mr. Richberg was representing labor organizations in his presence during the sessions of the committee. I wish to correct that statement, because Mr. Richberg made it perfectly plain, after he had been invited by the chairman of the committee to sit in during the time the committee was in session, that he was not acting in any representative capacity for any labor organization and that he had not so acted in his participation in assisting in the drafting of the bill.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I would like to say to the Senator from Wisconsin that if I created the impression that Mr. Richberg said he was before the committee representing any labor union, it was entirely inadvertent on my part. What I did say was that Mr. Richberg is one of the leading labor lawyers and one of the leading labor representatives in the United States, and that is unquestionably true. I was simply illustrating the fact that he spoke from the viewpoint of labor.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, who has the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana has the floor.

Mr. LONG. Will the Senator from Montana yield to me?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. LONG. Mr. Richberg is a railroad labor attorney, who has been before the Interstate Commerce Commission very adequately protecting the rights of labor. This is beyond the scope of his employment, if I understand it. I happen to know, and I think some of us know who understand trade unions, that the most iniquitous practice we have had to contend with is the company union. It is an organization they set up themselves. It is an organization that is set up to prevent a union that is not controlled by the company. They have their social functions worked out in connection with it. They give dances in which the employers participate. They go through that kind of thing and make it a matter of impossibility for a labor union to exist other than a company union. If we are going to attempt to safeguard the labor union, let us not put a spider in the soup and make impossible the very thing that we are trying to accomplish.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, it is inconceivable to me that Mr. Richberg, being an able lawyer, would for one moment sanction a provision of this kind being written into the bill if he had given it any consideration at all. It would seem that the minute we seek to put these codes into operation for the purpose of getting better conditions for labor, for the purpose of getting better wages and shorter hours or anything of that sort, we then provide that "nothing in this title shall be construed to compel a change in existing satisfactory relations." If that language remains in the bill, labor gets nothing whatsoever out of the bill. Men who are working for a company and who belong to company unions, particularly where conditions are bad, dare not go before any committee, dare not go before any organization or any body and say, "We want shorter hours or we want to do this or that." They will be compelled by their employers to go before committees and say conditions are satisfactory.

We have had examples of that before congressional committees where companies would bring their employees before the committees, paying their expenses, and where the employees would say to the committees that conditions were absolutely all right, that they wanted this or that, when we knew as a matter of fact that they were not their own free agents but were merely speaking at that time for the company which they represented because they knew that if they did not do it they would be put out in the streets and their wives and children would have to go without food and perhaps without shelter.

Let us not try to fool the workingmen of the country by putting in a provision of this kind. Either we mean to better their conditions or to leave them just as they are today. If we mean to better their conditions, then let us reject this amendment. If we mean to leave them in the condition in which they are today, if we mean to keep them in sweatshops and work them 10 and 12 hours a day, then leave the amendment in the bill. But do not go back and tell your constituents that you voted to leave the provision in the bill because you thought you were voting for the rights and interests of American labor. Do not go back and base your vote upon the fact that Mr. Johnson or somebody else came before the same committee and said to that committee, "This is entirely satisfactory to organized labor."

As I said a while ago, I am perfectly amazed to hear the Senator from Missouri say that Mr. Richberg made a statement of that kind. It cannot be possible, it seems to me, that he had read this provision or that he had given it any consideration. It is inconceivable to me that a man who has represented organized labor as long as he has, just because he is going to be taken into the Government service, should completely change his views with reference to the necessity of protecting organized labor. I do not believe that Mr. Richberg would do it; but if he had given this provision careful consideration, and if he had given it careful thought, and then said that it is satisfactory to the organized labor of this country, I should say there was something wrong with Mr. Richberg when he made that statement.

I submit that this section, if we really want to protect labor, should be stricken from the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JOHNSON in the chair). The question is on the proviso beginning on line 13, page 10, on which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. McNARY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum is suggested. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Cutting	La Follette	Russell
Ashurst	Davis	Lewis	Schall
Austin	Dickinson	Logan	Sheppard
Bachman	Dieterich	Lonergan	Shipstead
Bailey	Dill	Long	Smith
Bankhead	Duffy	McAdoo	Steiwer
Barbour	Erickson	McCarran	Stephens
Barkley	Fess	McGill	Thomas, Okla.
Black	Frazier	McKellar	Thomas, Utah
Bone	Goldsborough	McNary	Thompson
Bratton	Gore	Metcalf	Townsend
Brown	Hale	Murphy	Trammell
Bulkley	Harrison	Neely	Tydings
Bulow	Hastings	Norris	Vandenberg
Byrnes	Hatfield	Nye	Van Nuys
Capper	Hayden	Overton	Wagner
Carey	Hebert	Patterson	Walsh
Clark	Johnson	Pope	Wheeler
Connally	Kean	Reed	White
Coolidge	Kendrick	Reynolds
Copeland	Keyes	Robinson, Ark.
Costigan	King	Robinson, Ind.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-five Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. Those who are in favor of the committee amendment will vote "yea" and those who oppose it will vote "nay"? Is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes. The question is on the committee amendment.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. President, I desire to propound an inquiry to the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] or to the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON]. I wish to see whether I understand definitely with respect to this amendment.

If I am correct in my understanding, under this bill the various industries have a right to prescribe a code, which may be approved and must be approved by the administrator; and if a certain industry does not provide any code, the administrator may himself provide one for that particular industry. Each of these codes will have written in it these provisions set out in section 7, giving to labor the right to organize free from any interference on the part of the employer.

The inquiry I desire to propound is whether, anywhere in this bill, any authority is given to the administrator or to anybody else over the employees of these various industries of the Nation; or is it the purpose of the bill to leave the employees entirely free to do exactly what they please with respect to every industry that has adopted a code under this bill?

Mr. HARRISON. It is not my construction that the employees can do everything they want to do. I may say that the contention of the labor representative before the committee was that if the employers would guarantee to employ labor, they would not object to certain guaranties that were insisted upon on the part of the employers.

Mr. HASTINGS. But it is true, is it not, that the administrator has no power whatever over the labor organizations under this bill, and that they are perfectly free to work or not to work, or to do just exactly what they please with respect to bargaining with the employers?

Mr. HARRISON. There is nothing in the bill that compels labor to work, may I say. The bill does give to labor the right of collective bargaining.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I did not intend to say anything; but certain Senators have just come in, and I fear the question of the Senator from Delaware is just a little misleading.

The matter is a perfectly simple one. Section 7 (a) provides as follows:

Every code of fair competition—

That is what is going to be made, a code, under this agreement—

Every code of fair competition, agreement, and license approved, prescribed, or issued under this title shall contain the following conditions:

It is a limitation upon the power of the man who makes the code. That code must contain these conditions, and then, after that, it sets up what the conditions are:

(1) That employees shall have the right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing—

And so forth; and then it adds a proviso that they cannot do it! That is the effect of the proviso.

In other words, there is a proviso that makes the company union legal—one of the great evils that labor has had to fight against since the beginning of the war between capital and labor—and the question comes on that proviso. The committee amendment adds the proviso, and we are seeking to prevent the adoption of the committee amendment.

Mr. KING. Mr. President——

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. KING. Does the Senator construe that as meaning that if a union exists it is petrified, and may not be changed, and must continue to remain?

Mr. NORRIS. This proviso would pretty nearly mean that.

Mr. KING. I do not think so.

Mr. NORRIS. The proviso says:

Provided, That nothing in this title shall be construed to compel a change in existing satisfactory relationships between the employees and employers of any particular plant—firm, or corporation, except that the employees of any particular plant, firm, or corporation shall have the right to organize for the purpose of collective bargaining.

That is a definition of a company union—

That is what the company does with the company union. It is organized by the company; the expenses are paid by the company; it controls the union just as completely as a master controls a slave; and a member of that company union is beholden to the men who are operating the plant in which he is working. It is a company union. They are not unions of the employees' own choice. They cannot join a union composed of men engaged in that particular craft or business. They are compelled to join a company union. It is an outlaw in the labor world. It is, as Senators said before the roll call here, one of the great reasons why labor in its struggle with capital has been so often defeated. It means the destruction of organized labor; and this amendment preserves those company unions.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. President, I did not want to get into any controversy or argument with respect to this particular amendment. I merely wanted to inquire whether I clearly understood this bill.

I might call the attention of the Senator from New York and the Senator from Mississippi to the fact that there is a provision with respect to railroad labor which gives to a board the right to pass upon the disputes that arise between the employer and the employee. That, as I understood, has always been done upon the theory that the railroads being quasi-public corporations, and being used for the benefit of the public, the Congress had a right to regulate them in that way.

If I understand this bill, we have now gone beyond the railroads; we have gone beyond those corporations that serve the public, and we have now entered into an entirely new field; namely, the field of every industry in the country, of every kind. We are undertaking to control them under this bill, and at the same time we are giving labor the right to make their own agreements among themselves, with no authority anywhere, in the administrator or any board or anybody else, to pass upon the questions that may arise between the laborer and the employer.

It seems to me that if we have put all of these various industries in the hands of one man, giving him 100 per cent control of all of them, at the same time it might be well for us to consider whether he ought not to have some control over the people that they depend upon to produce the things that they manufacture.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the interpretation placed upon the amendment offered by the Senator from Nebraska is not, in my opinion, sound, and it certainly is not the construction given to the language of the amendment when it was being considered by the committee. It was my understanding when the amendment was offered in the committee that it was for the purpose of affording protection to labor and to restrain efforts that might be made by employers to interfere with employees. It was designed also, as I understood, to respect conditions where the relation between the employee and employer were entirely satisfactory. The section as a whole, including the amendment now under consideration, properly interpreted, as I believe, is designed to permit employees to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and further, to provide that they shall be free from interference, restraint, or coercion upon the part of their employers or any of their agents or any other person. Certainly the language of the section not only recognizes existing unions, and guards and protects the members of unions from any interference or coercion by their employers or any other person, but it also recognizes and, indeed, guarantees the right of employees to organize and to bargain collectively. Existing unions are preserved and protected, and unions to be organized are likewise to be preserved and protected against interference or coercion. In other words, the utmost freedom is provided to all employees to form unions or to refrain from forming unions, and whether employees are unionized or not they are to be free from coercion or interference from employers.

The language criticized by the Senator, properly interpreted as I believe, declares that where satisfactory relations exist between employer and employee there shall be no compulsion to disturb such relations. Under this provision it is obvious that if a plant is unionized the employer may not interfere with such union organization or restrain or coerce in any way the members of such union. The employees are free to maintain their union, free from any interference of any kind at the hands of the employer. The amendment also provides that the employees shall have the right to organize for the purpose of agreeing upon wages, hours of labor, and other conditions of employment. In other words, the whole spirit of the section, as amended, as I interpret it, is to afford the greatest possible protection to labor and to give employees unrestrained and unrestricted right to organize and to collectively bargain as to wages, hours of labor, and so forth.

I do not read into the language of the proposed amendment the slightest interference with labor in its dealings with its employers. Employees may organize or not as they please; they may form unions or other forms of organization if they desire. Any interference upon the part of employers with their employees or with organizations now in existence or that hereafter shall be organized would come within the denouncement of the statute.

I have always believed that labor had the right to organize and to bargain collectively with employers. My recollection is that I organized the first miners' union in my own State, and upon a number of occasions acted as attorney for union labor.

In our capitalistic system there is much to be said in favor of the organization of labor. That labor has derived benefits from union organizations must be conceded by all, and I should vigorously oppose any plan or any legislation that would interfere with the desires of the employees to organize and to collectively act to secure all legitimate rights and benefits.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, let me say that I cannot understand how the Senator from Utah can put that construction on it, because of the fact that it provides, first, that a code shall be set up, and the first thing the code is going to contain is a provision that the employees shall have a right to organize and bargain collectively and shall be free from interference, restraint, or coercion on the part of the employers of labor. Then it provides that nothing in this title shall be construed to compel a change in an existing satisfactory relationship.

There is nothing in the first paragraph which could possibly be construed as changing existing conditions if they were satisfactory, but it simply means that the men themselves shall have a right to go out and organize or join a union if they see fit to do so.

The proviso instead of protecting organized labor, instead of protecting the man who wants to join a union would simply in effect prevent him from joining a union. The proviso would absolutely undo what is done in the first part of the provision.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I submit to the Senator that the proviso would not do any such thing. The proviso is that nothing in this title shall be construed to compel a change. The remaining portion of subparagraph (1) has already provided for the right to collective bargaining, guaranteeing that the employees shall be free from any interference, restraint, or coercion. Subparagraph (2) provides that no employee and no one seeking employment shall be required as a condition of employment to join any company union, or to refrain from joining any organization of his own choice. All the proviso does is simply to say that the statute shall not be construed to compel a change in a satisfactory relationship.

Mr. WHEELER. Of course; but, as I said before, every man in the Senate, I think, wants to see industry compelled to give shorter working hours. Every man in this body and in the other body of the Congress wants to see these sweatshops, which in some instances today are paying to the women and children working in some of those places as low as 25 or 50 cents a day, compelled to stop that sort of thing.

If we put this proviso in, we cannot prevent them continuing those practices. What I want is some power in this land to compel them to stop these sweatshops from working women and children long hours, and it cannot be done if we leave this proviso in, because of the fact that they will simply say the working conditions are satisfactory, and they will get the poor girl who is working long hours, for small wages, to come forward and say that conditions are satisfactory. If she does not do it, she will be thrown out on the street.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Mr. President, is it not true that the net effect of this committee amendment would be to legalize the "yellow dog" contracts wherever they are now existing?

Mr. WHEELER. I would not be of that opinion, because of the fact that the next subdivision provides "that no employee and no one seeking employment shall be required as a condition of employment to join any company union or to refrain from joining, organizing, or assisting a labor organization of his own choosing."

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Even so, if we accept this proviso which the committee has inserted, would it not nullify the succeeding statement?

Mr. WHEELER. No; I do not think so. That would not be the interpretation I would put upon it.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, it seems to me perfectly clear that it might be used, if there is an agreement now existing with a company union that has any kind of a contract, and they will say it is satisfactory, which they will, and especially in these times, when to lose a job of most any kind means starvation for the family. It may be the means where one exists now, of continuing a "yellow dog" contract or any other kind of a contract.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. That is precisely what I was getting at. It would permit coercion to be applied by the employers in times like these, which would simply in the net effect mean legalizing the "yellow dog" contract.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, from a somewhat lengthy experience with organized labor, as counsel for a labor organization, I am compelled to agree wholly with the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] and with the remarks just made by the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER].

I know that labor works always at a distinct disadvantage, and I think we are going to make a very sad blunder if we in any wise hamper the freest expression on the part of organized labor groups. I know what the Senator from Montana says is absolutely true. There are girls and men working in the industries in this country who do not dare to say their souls are their own so far as organization is concerned, and certainly we should not hamper them.

It seems to me the language in the bill, aside from that in the italics, which is the committee amendment, is ample to protect any reasonable employer, and I think it is going to be a tragic blunder if we, in the enactment of so-called "progressive legislation", make it apparent to labor all over the country that we are now trying to hamper these organizations which so far have been the only bulwark of labor in maintaining decent standards of labor and decent working conditions. For that reason I am wholly in sympathy with the effort of the Senator from Nebraska to strike this provision out. I think there is ample left to protect any fair-minded employer.

I do not speak idly about this. I have had long years of experience with these problems as attorney for these groups, and I know the disadvantage under which labor works all the time, and in these tragic and trying times it is going to be infinitely harder for labor to get a square deal because of the economic pressure which compels them to stay on the job whether conditions are fair or not.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment as amended. The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LOGAN (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS], who is absent. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER] and vote "yea."

Mr. McNARY (when his name was called). On this vote I have a pair with the senior Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND]. Not knowing how he would vote if present, I withhold my vote. If I were permitted to vote, I would vote "yea."

Mr. WHEELER (when his name was called). On this vote I have a pair with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS]. I transfer that vote to the junior Senator from South Dakota [Mr. BULOW] and vote "nay."

Mr. McADOO (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Vermont [Mr. DALE], who is not present. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] and vote "nay."

Mr. HEBERT. I desire to announce that the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS] has a general pair with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN]. I am not advised as to how the Senator from Pennsylvania would vote if present.

I also wish to announce the following general pairs:

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WALCOTT] with the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS]; and

The Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] with the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY].

Mr. LEWIS. I desire to announce that the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. KENDRICK] has a general pair with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. FRAZIER].

Mr. McKELLAR (after having voted in the negative). Has the Senator from Delaware [Mr. TOWNSEND] voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That Senator has not voted.

Mr. McKELLAR. I withdraw my vote, having a pair with that Senator.

Mr. LEWIS. I desire to announce that the following Senators are necessarily detained from the Senate on official business: The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. BULOW], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND], the Senator from Florida [Mr.

FLETCHER], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS], and the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY].

The result was announced—yeas 31, nays 46, as follows:

YEAS—31

Austin	Dieterich	Hebert	Reed
Bailey	Fess	Kean	Robinson, Ark.
Bankhead	George	Keyes	Sheppard
Barbour	Goldsborough	King	Steiwer
Barkley	Gore	Lewis	Stephens
Carey	Hale	Logan	Vandenberg
Clark	Harrison	Metcalf	White
Dickinson	Hastings	Patterson

NAYS—46

Adams	Costigan	McCarran	Shipstead
Ashurst	Cutting	McGill	Smith
Bachman	Dill	Murphy	Thomas, Utah
Black	Duffy	Neely	Thompson
Bone	Erickson	Norris	Trammell
Bratton	Hatfield	Nye	Tydings
Brown	Hayden	Overton	Van Nuys
Bulkley	Johnson	Pope	Wagner
Byrnes	La Follette	Reynolds	Walsh
Capper	Lonergan	Robinson, Ind.	Wheeler
Connally	Long	Russell
Coolidge	McAdoo	Schall

NOT VOTING—19

Borah	Couzens	Glass	Pittman
Bulow	Dale	Kendrick	Thomas, Okla.
Byrd	Davis	McKellar	Townsend
Caraway	Fletcher	McNary	Walcott
Copeland	Frazier	Norbeck

So the committee amendment as amended was rejected.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I offer an amendment to come in on page 11, line 3, after the word "President", to insert a semicolon and the following:

And (4) that employers shall not transport or assist in transporting employees from one State, county, city, or place to another for the purpose of taking the place of men out on strike.

I will state that the purpose of the amendment is simply this: It proposes to add a new paragraph or a new subject to be inserted in the code. In other words, the bill provides that:

Every code of fair competition, agreement, and license approved, prescribed, or issued under this title shall contain the following conditions.

Then follow clauses (1), (2), and (3), and I have asked that this fourth condition shall be added.

Let me say to the Senate that the reason why I propose to add this clause is because of the fact that when the Senate ordered the investigation, for instance, upon which the Senator from New York was a member, into the coal strike in Pennsylvania, we found this situation to exist: Immediately when there was difficulty between the men and their employers, the great coal companies went down South and brought trainloads of Negroes up to Pennsylvania, shipped them in in box cars and kept them there living almost in slavery, one might say, and taking the place of those white men; in other words, using those Negroes merely as strike-breakers. Of course when the white men returned to work, as they did, agreeing after a while with their employers, those Negroes were thrown out of employment and onto the community.

The purpose of this amendment is simply to prevent that sort of practice by great organizations of wealth throughout the country. In communities where such practices are indulged they only breed disorder and trouble; and it seems to me when organized capital is going to get the opportunities and the privileges which it will get under this proposed law that it ought to be willing to make a part of its code the agreement that in the event it has a disagreement with its employees and the employees cease to work temporarily it will not bring into that community swarms of strike-breakers from outside communities. The bringing in of strike breakers has been the chief source of bloodshed and riot in pretty nearly every community where there have been labor troubles. For that reason, Mr. President, I hope this amendment will be adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NEELY in the chair). The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Montana.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama offers an amendment, which the clerk will state.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed on page 10, after line 3, to insert the following:

(d) No trade or industrial association or group shall be eligible to receive the benefits of the provisions of this title unless such associations or groups give an equal voting strength to the industries, trades, and groups of each State, as State units, irrespective of the magnitude of trade, or business of the trades, industries, or associations of the different States.

Nor shall such industrial association or group be eligible to receive the benefits of the provisions of this title unless each individual business enterprise within the association or group is given an equal voting strength to each other business unit, irrespective of the magnitude of such business enterprise or its volume of business.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I desire briefly to explain the effect of the amendment, and I wish to state that, in my judgment, there can be no more important amendment offered during the consideration of this bill. This bill, if it shall pass and become a law, will transfer the law-making power of this Nation, insofar as the control of industry is concerned, from the Congress to the trade associations. There is no escape from that conclusion. That is exactly what has happened in Italy, and as a result the legislation passed by the parliamentary body of Italy, as expressed by one economist, has reached the vanishing point.

As a preliminary, let me state that the effect of this amendment is twofold. It provides that if a trade association of a particular industry shall be formed each State shall have an equal voting strength in that association irrespective of the magnitude of the industry within the State. Secondly, it provides that within the association each particular business unit shall have equal voting strength with every other business unit.

If this bill shall be enacted and shall become effective, Congress will no longer pass legislation controlling industry so long as the law shall remain in effect. It may be that it will remain in effect only for one year, but what we are doing—and make no mistake about it—is that from now on we are transferring from the House of Representatives and the Senate the right to control industry, its hours of labor, its wages, its profits; where a new business shall be established, whether or not a new industry shall be established at all; in what State it shall be permissible to dig a new coal mine; in what State it shall be permissible to establish a new cotton factory. That is the object and purpose of trade associations; that is the object here, to regulate competitive conditions.

After those laws shall have been enacted by trade associations, under the bill they go either to the President or to a subordinate for approval or for veto. Under our present system of enacting legislation they come to the House of Representatives and to the Senate, and then go to the President for veto. Each State is represented in this body by two Senators. It makes no difference about the size of the State, the interest of each State can be protected to some extent by two Senators.

Mr. President, I now call attention to one particular industry. A man was in my office last week who stated that 72 percent of the volume of business in his industry was controlled by one business enterprise. I call attention to the fact that one fourth of all the large manufacturing establishments in America are located in seven counties. With 3,000 counties, one fourth of all the manufacturing establishments in America are located in 7 counties. One half of all the manufacturing enterprises in America are located in 34 counties, and three fourths of all the manufacturing enterprises in America are located in 134 counties. Remember that when this bill shall become a law the rules and regulations controlling industry will not be fixed here during the time the bill shall remain in effect; they will be fixed by the elected representatives of industry itself.

Mr. President, I do not know whether this amendment will appeal to the Senate or not, but I do know this—and I now warn the Senate of the fact that if there shall not be a provision in some form in this bill protecting the States that do not now have a large concentration of industry, and we leave the voting strength for fixing the rules and regulations for the establishment of a new business enterprise, for cutting off a new business enterprise, for reducing the output of an existing business enterprise, as is now provided—I know that the natural human effect will be that the control will be in the hands of the few counties that control 75 percent of the business activities of this Nation. I am not willing for the bill to be voted upon without first calling this fact to the attention of the Senate.

Secondly, the amendment would provide that the small business enterprise should have one vote each time the large business enterprise had a vote. At first blush that might seem to be unfair, but remember we are transferring to the trade associations the power to make laws. This is no new or novel thing. It is exactly the method of procedure adopted in Italy. The trade associations there regulate industry just exactly as we have proposed to do in this bill.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. BLACK. I yield.

Mr. LOGAN. I would call the attention of the Senator to the fact that not only is it nothing new but we are reverting to the old trade rules of Rome of more than 500 years ago and which flourished in England immediately after the feudal days for a good many years. It is not anything new. We are not progressing. We are going back 500 years and taking the old trade laws and writing them into the bill.

Mr. BLACK. The Senator is correct. We fluctuate. We do what we think is progressive for a generation or for a century, and then we progress further by going back exactly to the old situation. There is no question about it. We are now, however, getting back to the idea that the best way to enact laws regulating industry and trade is by means of the elected representatives of industry and trade. Since we are abdicating to that extent the right to enact laws governing industry, and our States have heretofore had a representation in this body, I could not sit quietly by and let the bill go through without calling attention to this very important feature. There is nothing new about the proposal. That is the reason why we have a Senate in the United States. That is the reason why the Constitutional Convention provided that each State should have two Senators. But now, getting away from the Constitution insofar as Congress enacting laws is concerned, we expect to transfer, and I think we will transfer, to elected representatives of industry itself the right to make the laws governing industry.

Where is that industry? Seventy-five percent of it is in 134 out of over 3,000 counties. Fifty percent of it is in 34 counties out of over 3,000 counties. It means that unless we provide legislatively for equal representation of the States in these new law-making trade associations, the great majority of the States will have no voting chance at all.

The second feature to which I want to call attention is the fact that this would give equal voting strength to each industry. I have on my desk a letter from a man engaged in a certain business. He tells me that there is about to be organized in Alabama a trade association in that industry. He tells me they have agreed to allot to each manufacturer a certain proportion of output for their plants. He likewise tells me that according to that allotment he will go out of business the next day after the allotment goes into effect because he cannot possibly operate on such a small allotment. The larger business enterprises can.

In providing for trade associations to enact laws, I believe the small business enterprise is entitled to have one vote every time the large business enterprise has a vote. I concede that the bill itself says that the President is authorized to prescribe rules and regulations designed to insure that any organization availing itself of the benefits of the title shall be truly representative of the trade or industry, but it does not give to the President the right to say what representation each business shall have nor what representation each State shall have in a Nation-wide industrial organization.

I present the amendment because I come from one of the States that is as yet not fully and completely developed industrially. I realize, and I shall vote for the bill fully realizing, that the natural effect of the measure will be for a time at least to freeze industry where it is today. The object is to prevent overproduction. Therefore it would be wholly ineffective if they did not have the power—and they are given the power in the bill—to limit new industries and to limit the output of old industries.

Personally, and speaking for myself, although I desire and expect to go with the administration on every conceivable occasion, I do not desire that the bill shall be passed in its present form without at least calling to the attention of Senators who come from States like mine that unless this provision or a similar provision is inserted in the measure, Senators can rest assured that the control of the law-making bodies of the Nation in the future for commerce and trade will rest not with their States having equal representation, but by reason of our voluntary abandonment of our own right to pass laws we are surrendering that right to representatives of the trade associations. We will have surrendered our equal representation, which our forefathers guaranteed that each State should have in this body, in enacting laws to govern the trades and industries of the United States.

I submit the amendment and ask for its serious consideration by the Senate, with a plea to Senators who have not read the bill to read it carefully before they vote against the amendment. It is the transfer of the lawmaking power of this body and of the House of Representatives to the trade association. I am making no argument against it at the present time. I shall probably not do so under present conditions, but I do want it known that if the lawmaking privilege which we now have is to be voluntarily abandoned by us, then as a representative of the State of Alabama I want my State to have an equal representation in the trade associations that will govern the industries in the State in which I live.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BLACK. Certainly.

Mr. LONG. I have been unable to find any mechanism in the bill for the invoking of a conference, with the exception of the amendment that is offered by the Senator from Alabama. Is there any other method prescribed?

Mr. BLACK. There is.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I can say for the information of the Senator from Louisiana that it was testified before the committee that General Johnson has already called all of these conferences and has all the codes prepared even before he has been appointed.

Mr. BLACK. I call the Senator's attention to page 9, to a provision which perhaps is the closest of any to what he has in mind. It is that "the President is authorized to prescribe rules and regulations designed to insure that any organization shall be truly representative." That is a little different from the statistic system of Italy where they prescribe that a very small percentage can enact rules and regulations. Here it is left to the President to determine what the percentage shall be.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, the bill provides that any association adopting a code must be truly representative of the industry.

Mr. BLACK. That is correct.

Mr. WAGNER. And that the membership in that association must be free.

Mr. BLACK. The Senator is correct.

Mr. LONG. I understand the Senator can issue some pronunciamento or rule or order or something of that kind.

Mr. BLACK. What is meant is that after an association has been formed the President can investigate to see whether or not it is truly representative of the industry, whether there are enough numbers of the association to make it representative of the industry. It would not at all affect the method of organization of the industry. There is no provision in the bill whatsoever which attempts to prescribe by legislative decree how these associations shall be made up as to their representation.

Mr. LONG. The point I am trying to make, unless we adopt the amendment of the Senator from Alabama, is that I do not see anything in the bill topside or bottom that says whether it shall be according to States, according to capital, or what will be the basis of getting a trade or industry together to write a code.

Mr. WAGNER. Those who meet must truly represent the industry or a subdivision thereof. It must appear, and the President must find, that such associations or groups impose no inequitable restrictions on admission to membership and, as I said, are truly representative of such trade or industry or subdivisions thereof.

Mr. LONG. The President must find it is truly all right. I admit that. But that does not mean anything. It only means that he shall be fair. In other words, we assume he will be fair. I thought probably we would have some light on it, and I waited for someone to offer an amendment relating to it, and I am glad the Senator from Alabama has offered it. But the point I make is that there should be some fair rule. If the Senator from Alabama has not got one, then let us have one that is fair.

Mr. BLACK. Let me say that this may not be the proper way to fix representation. I do not know.

Mr. LONG. I do not know either.

Mr. BLACK. But I do know this: A man was in my office last week and told me the United States Cast Iron Pipe Co. had put him practically out of business by reason of the fact that they manufacture a secondary product and sell it at a price so much below the cost of production that he, a small manufacturer, could not continue in business. That is one of the competitive matters that the Senator from New York seeks to correct, and it is something that should be corrected.

I said to him, "Are you willing to go into a trade association with the United States Cast Iron Pipe Co. and the other pipe companies in order to fix the rules and regulations governing this situation?" He said, "No." I said, "Why not?" He said, "Well, I would have about 1 percent of the business and the United States Cast Iron Pipe Co. will start out with 72 percent of the business, which will give it 72 percent of the voting strength"; and he said, "It will mean that the 72 percent of voting strength will absolutely determine the rules and regulations under which I am to operate down in Birmingham, Ala."

I looked at the bill after that, in order that I might determine for myself how the matter could be remedied. This man stated to me that he would prefer to have the matter left in the hands of Congress, because he knew that his State had two Senators here who would at least try to see that no injustice was done to the smaller industries there. Now, however, since this bill seems to be destined to pass, I want to ask those who desire that it be made successful how we are going to protect the smaller industries from the trade regulations adopted by the larger industries, unless there is somewhere placed legislatively in this bill a provision which will guarantee that the industries in the smaller States, or the smaller industries in the larger States, shall have an equal right in some way to have their voice heard.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. BLACK. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. WAGNER. I do not see how it is practicable to limit the membership or the voting strength of the trade associations, as the Senator proposes, by mere State representation. I do not think it would be fair that in one State where there might be 10 units of an industry and in another State only 1 the 1 shall have a vote equal to the 10 votes in another State. I do not think State lines ought to be considered in connection with this but only industries.

There is a very definite mandate in this legislation that the President, before he approves a code, shall find that the association represents the industry——

Mr. BLACK. It might do that.

Mr. WAGNER. And also, as I said before, that admission thereto shall not impose inequitable restrictions. The clear implication there is that each industry and member of the association shall have an equal voice at that meeting and in the adoption of a code.

Mr. BLACK. If it means that, then, of course, there is no objection to putting it in the bill.

Mr. WAGNER. That is what it does mean.

Mr. BLACK. Then there should be no objection whatever to this amendment.

Mr. WAGNER. The Senator is not proposing that. The Senator is putting in a great deal more that may seriously hamper the proper administration of this legislation, because he provides here:

> No trade or industrial association or group shall be eligible to receive the benefits of the provisions of this title unless such associations or groups give an equal voting strength to the industries, trades, and groups of each State, as State units.

That might be so disproportionate as to be very unfair to the industries of one State. I think the logical and the sensible way to provide representation is that each unit in the industry shall be represented, and that they shall have equal representation and equal votes in that association; and undoubtedly that is the requirement which will be imposed. That, however, is not at all what the Senator is proposing.

Mr. BLACK. In reply to what the Senator has said—because the Senator has hit the gist of the argument—may I say that if you will go back and read the debates when the Constitution of the United States was written, you will see that the Senator from New York has made exactly the arguments that were made against each State having two Senators. The statement was that it was not fair to give a State with a small population as many Senators as a State with a large population. Nevertheless, that was written into the Constitution; and nevertheless today, when we pass laws governing and regulating industries, those laws are passed by, and must meet the approval of, a body composed of two Senators from each State—the small State of Arizona, and the large and populous and wealthy State of New York. So there is nothing new in that argument.

Mr. WAGNER. I do not think the Senator is citing an analogy at all. I do not think that is involved in this question. Does the Senator think it fair that 2 units in one State may have the power to impose a code upon 10 units in another State, by a vote of 2? I do not think that is fair.

Mr. BLACK. When States have a privilege which has been given them under the Constitution, and which they have enjoyed since the very beginning of the history of this Government, if their representatives in this body deliberately yield that right, divest themselves of the lawmaking power to protect their States, and to that extent turn the lawmaking privilege over to another association where their States do not have their constitutional privileges and their constitutional representation, I think they are abandoning something which their States are entitled to receive; and I think there is an argument in favor of it. I will tell you what it is.

There are certain States in this Union that have been largely developed already. It was not altogether due to the fact that they had any more natural wealth than the others. There were many things that entered into it. For instance, the section from which I come was held back by reason of reconstruction days. The section of the West has been held back. There has been a slow and gradual process of development; but those States have resources of industrial wealth that are as yet practically untouched. I claim that if this bill means what it says, and if I can read it aright, it means that the trade associations can determine hereafter how much a factory in Alabama shall produce, how much a factory in New York shall produce, where a new coal mine shall be dug, how much coal shall be dug in Alabama and how much shall be dug in Pennsylvania.

There can be no question about that. That is the object and purpose of the trade associations. That is exactly what they have done in the countries that have them. Without that it would be useless to pass the law. It would be wholly useless to establish trade associations unless we were going to restrict extraordinary output and curtail it where it is necessary, and to prevent new developments where necessary.

I claim that those States which do not happen today to have as much population as some others, or which do not happen today to have as many industries, but which have just as much natural wealth, are just as much entitled to an equal representation in the body that makes their laws as are the States that have already been developed in their resources and their population.

This is a fundamental question which I am raising in this amendment. It is a question in which every Senator from a smaller State, as he will realize in less than 6 months, if he does not realize it now, is vitally interested. I have already realized it from my own correspondence, because of the information which has come to me with reference to what is being done with reference to the allotment of output of a mine. I know that it means—and it may be absolutely right that it should mean this—putting a number of small mine operators out of business. It means that they will be thrown into bankruptcy.

If it is necessary to do that in order to advance the general welfare and to conserve our natural resources, that is another proposition; but when this body, which is composed of two Senators from every State, from Arizona to New York, from the small State of Nevada to New York, divests the two Senators from a State of the right to determine how the mines out in that State shall be operated, what shall be their output, and whether or not a new one shall be dug, I claim that those Senators will neglect their duty in this body if they do not attempt to see that their State has an equal representation in the new legislative body which we are setting up by this measure.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, as stated by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK], I think his amendment does raise a very serious question, and one that should be given serious consideration at the hands of the Senate.

One feature of the legislation which we have been considering and are now considering that has caused me considerable apprehension has been the fact that unless it was safeguarded there would be manipulations within the trade groups and within the organizations that would be the to the detriment of the smaller industries in the country.

There is one thing that we have not yet done, and it is illustrated upon every question that comes before the Senate: We have never yet driven out of the human breast a spirit of selfishness, and a desire to promote first the interests of those who are engaged in a particular industry.

If anyone doubts that, trace, if you will, the provisions of every piece of legislation that comes before the Senate, and you can easily point your finger to indications—although they may be veiled or shielded more or less in the measure—of selfishness, where someone is endeavoring to get the advantage of someone else.

That was true in our bank catastrophe that occurred about March 4. The banks were all closed, presumably for a commendable purpose, and for the purpose of safeguarding the public; but when we reached the point, in the process of reopening the banks, of enacting new legislation governing the banks—there is no use of going into that question—everyone knows what happened.

The first legislation that was passed here gave absolutely no recognition to the interests of the State banks. It gave no recognition to the interests of their depositors, to their security, or the localities in which they were situated. I voted for that legislation, because we had to do something; but I stated upon the floor, and the RECORD will disclose that I stated, that I was sadly disappointed in that legislation which was being hurried through the Senate, because there had been a total ignoring of the interests of more than a majority of the bank depositors of this country.

That was thoroughly established. Of course, if anybody had deigned to offer an amendment on that evening, when we passed that first bill, he would have been accused of being a traitor to his country; yet on the day following amendments were proposed, and within 5 days three different amendments had been proposed to this holy legislation, and in the course of time we succeeded in getting more or less amendments.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. TRAMMELL. I do.

Mr. LONG. I desire to say to the Senator that I offered an amendment that day, when it looked as though a man would be murdered if he did; and we messed around here 2 or 3 weeks, enacting into law the substance of the amendment that I offered to that bank bill.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Yes; I recall that.

Mr. LONG. And as the result of failing to carry out that amendment, we have been fiddling around and trying to get a bank bill ever since.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Yes. We have a very desirable provision, as I understand, that is liable to be eliminated by the conference committee—a provision which provides a guaranty protection for patrons of State banks and depositors of State banks. Why should they not have a guaranty, the same as the national banks of this country?

Therefore we see plainly the spirit of selfishness running into our banking legislation; and it has happened, so far, that the national-bank crowd has predominated, and that the State banks have gotten only the crumbs that the national-bank crowd were willing to give them.

Whatever purpose may be behind this legislation—and I attribute to it a commendable purpose, a desire to help and assist our country in its hour of distress under the conditions which exist today—that commendable purpose can be effectuated and accomplished only if the details of the legislation are properly embraced within the measure which may be enacted. What I want is to see the industries generally protected. I want to see such safeguards thrown around these different groups that every other group may be fairly treated, and that the public may be fairly treated. Of course, if I had been endeavoring to frame legislation to take care of the situation among the industries, I would not have abolished the antitrust laws, I would not have placed the industrial affairs of this country in the hands of the men who carry on the industries, each one of whom will be inspired to do the best he can for his.

We witnessed here during the war somewhat of a condition of this character, when the Government turned over practically everything to organizations known as "war councils", and the Council of National Defense, and we used the dollar-a-year man quite a good deal, and I see this bill authorizes the use of the dollar-a-year man.

During war times, of course, we attributed patriotism to the person who aspired to be on the roll as a dollar-a-year man. He was a patriot. I observed a good many of them in 1917 who were patriots, but upon the other hand I observed a great many of them who absolutely used the positions into which they had wormed themselves under the guise of patriotism for their self-aggrandizement, for their enrichment, and if we do not watch the situation, there is going to be a good deal of that going on under this legislation.

I had fresh in my mind years ago some instances, a great many of them, in fact. A fellow would get on a council, or on a board, who sold shoes. Some other man would get on the same board who sold clothing. Some other man would get on the board who sold hardware. Perhaps every member of a board composed of five would have some business coming before him in which he was specifically interested. The law provided that he must not vote on the particular transaction which affected his own business. He would stand aside, and the other four would vote to give him a large contract, probably give the shoe man a contract involving two or three million pairs of shoes. The shoe man would be able to say that he had nothing to do with that. If it was a question of buying 3,000 suits of clothing, the clothing man would stand aside and the others would fix him up a nice order. There was every character of manipulation of that kind going on in Washington. More or less of it was discovered, as we recall, following the war, but we did not discover anything like what transpired on the part of these patriots who worked for a dollar a year.

I do not think we ought to have anything of that kind in this bill. Many of the dollar-a-year men will be honest and conscientious, but, on account of the policy, there will be sufficient of those dollar-a-year men to make it an expensive and extravagant proposition ever to appoint one of them, because those who are inclined to use the Government for their own benefit will by extravagance and by poor business application obtain sufficient from the Government to make the whole transaction one of loss to the Government.

Personally, I would not criticize what happened here recently about the kits for the conservation camps. I do not care anything about that particularly, except that the Government lost $100,000 by a departure from an ordinary business method that would have applied to the average business man.

When I was Governor of Florida, I had to remove some county commissioners, not on account of sins of commission, but on account of sins of omission. In one instance a board had allowed $100,000 to slip away, and three or four of them said, "Well, this other man suggested that." I said, "It was your duty to have known whether it was proper or not for that $100,000 to have gone in that direction. As you failed in your duty in the way of a sin of omission, I see nothing to do except to suspend you with the remainder of the board who were guilty of that sin of commission." Of course that brought on a great deal of controversy.

That is what ought to happen to somebody in regard to this kit business. Somebody has been negligent, grossly negligent, in that transaction, or the taxpayers of the United States would not have had a loss of over $100,000 on account of it.

What I am apprehensive about is that the same selfish spirit is going to prevail if we give too much control to a certain group or unit, that the others are not going to have much of a chance for a fair deal.

We may talk all we want to about a fair deal, but I have observed that, as a rule, those in power in industry, when they have the authority, have used it for their own self-enrichment; and, if to enrich themselves, and to promote their interests and their business, though it slaughters and ruins some other people who have not the strength, they proceed, regardless of the wrecks they leave strewn along the avenues of those who could not defend and protect themselves.

I have had the hope there was something in the bill which would give every State some protection, and the amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama is better than nothing of that kind. I know the purpose and intention are absolutely right, and there is call for such legislation. With that before me, and nothing else, I would gladly support it. I know the Senator's intentions are just as good as mine, and in my opinion the set-up is along proper lines to bring about an administration of the law that would be fair and just, instead of having it dominated and controlled absolutely by the Standard Oil interests, or by the General Motors interests, or by the packing interests of the country. I hope the amendment will be agreed to.

The paragraph referred to in the discussion has nothing to do with the point raised by the Senator from Alabama. That paragraph does not provide that the President shall issue a code of instructions in regard to who shall participate in the question, but it provides that the President is authorized to prescribe rules and regulations designed to insure that any organization availing itself of the benefits of this title shall be truly representative of the trade or industry or subdivision thereof represented by such organization. It does not provide that he shall issue rules and regulations to see that every group has a fair representation in the consideration of questions which may be involved. It does not do that, but there is a clause which provides that the President, by rules and regulations, can purge and investigate the entire list of those trying to get representation, and, if he does not think they are entitled to it, then they do not get representation. It does not bear upon the question of the rules and orders to see that every locality, according to State lines, has representation, or that every group has representation. It has no bearing whatever upon the point raised by the Senator from Alabama, and unless someone else can point out something else in the bill which attempts to give them representation, certainly the best we have—and I do not know but that it is perfectly all right—is the amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama, and I hope it will prevail.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK].

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATIONS—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, with the consent of the Senator from Mississippi, I ask unanimous consent of the Senate to call up the conference report on the District of Columbia appropriation bill. It will take only a moment, I think, to dispose of it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the conference report.

Mr. AUSTIN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Connally	Hebert	Robinson, Ark.
Ashurst	Coolidge	Kean	Robinson, Ind.
Austin	Copeland	Keyes	Russell
Bachman	Costigan	King	Schall
Bailey	Cutting	La Follette	Sheppard
Bankhead	Dickinson	Lewis	Smith
Barbour	Dieterich	Lonergan	Steiwer
Barkley	Dill	Long	Stephens
Black	Duffy	McCarran	Thomas, Okla.
Bone	Erickson	McGill	Thomas, Utah
Bratton	Fess	McKellar	Trammell
Brown	George	McNary	Tydings
Bulkley	Goldsborough	Murphy	Vandenberg
Bulow	Gore	Neely	Wagner
Byrd	Hale	Norris	Walsh
Byrnes	Harrison	Nye	White
Capper	Hastings	Overton
Carey	Hatfield	Pope
Clark	Hayden	Reed

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Seventy-three Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Was unanimous consent granted to take up the conference report on the District of Columbia appropriation bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Unanimous consent was granted for that purpose.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Then, I ask for the immediate consideration of the report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the report as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4589) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of such District for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 10, 11, 17, 20, 21, 23, 24, 25, 30, and 33.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 5, 8, 12, 13, 14, 16, 18, 19, 26, and 27, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 7: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert "Director of the Bureau of the Budget"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 29: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 29, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "$1,300,000, to be immediately available"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 31: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 31, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "Director of the Bureau of the Budget"; and the Senate agree to the same.

The committee of conference report in disagreement amendments numbered 9, 15, 22, 28, 32, and 34.

ELMER THOMAS,
WILLIAM H. KING,
HENRY W. KEYES,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

CLARENCE CANNON,
THOMAS L. BLANTON,
J. P. BUCHANAN,
Managers on the part of the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, this report involves a material reduction in the lump-sum appropriation, does it not?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It does.

Mr. COPELAND. And likewise it necessitates the District of Columbia paying a million dollars toward the reimbursement of the park fund. It was understood that for this work the Federal Government should advance $12,000,000; was not that the total amount?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I think it was $16,000,000 altogether.

Mr. COPELAND. It was $16,000,000 altogether; and that the District should pay back at the rate of one sixteenth per year. As a matter of fact, the District has paid back $4,000,000; and our committee thought that this year, in view of their overpayment, they might well be relieved of the necessity of making the payment.

Then, too, the lump-sum appropriation has been materially reduced under that of last year, which was less than that of the year before. I am frank to say that in my opinion the District of Columbia is not having a fair deal from the Federal Government.

I realize how useless it is to protest at this time and I know how nobly our conferees have labored. I also realize the embarrassment under which they have labored, because I myself have served upon a similar conference committee. I can see nothing for us to do except to accept the report and to agree to the amendments of the House to the Senate amendments, but I do feel that a voice ought to be raised, at least, in protest against the abuse of the District.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, the House of Representatives has agreed to the amendments of the Senate nos. 22, 32, and 34 with amendments. I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the amendments of the House to the Senate amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair lays before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives, which will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, UNITED STATES,
June 8, 1933.

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 9, 15, and 28 to the bill (H.R. 4589) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of such District for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, and for other purposes, and concur therein;

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 22 to said bill and concur therein with the following amendment:

In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert:

"BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS

"Not to exceed $570,000 of any unexpended balances of appropriations contained in the District of Columbia appropriation acts for the fiscal years 1932 and 1933 for the Municipal Center is hereby reappropriated and made available for the construction of public-school buildings as follows:

"For the erection of an 8-room building on a site already appropriated for in the vicinity of the Logan School, $95,000;

"For beginning the construction of a senior high-school building at Forty-first and Chesapeake Streets, NW., in the Reno section, $475,000, and the Commissioners are authorized to enter into contract or contracts for such building at a cost not to exceed $1,150,000;

"In all, $570,000, to be immediately available and to be disbursed and accounted for as "Buildings and grounds, public schools", and for that purpose shall constitute one fund and remain available until expended: Provided, That no part of this appropriation shall be used for or on account of any school building not herein specified."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 32 to said bill and concur therein with the following amendment:

Restore the matter stricken out by said amendment amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 6. No part of the appropriations contained in this act shall be used to pay any increase in the salary of any officer or employee of the District of Columbia by reason of the reallocation of the position of such officer or employee to a higher grade after June 30, 1932, by the Personnel Classification Board or the Civil Service Commission, and salaries paid accordingly shall be payment in full."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 34 to said bill and concur therein with the following amendment:

In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert:

"SEC. 8. When specifically approved by the Director of the Bureau of the Budget upon recommendation of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, transfers may be made between subheads of appropriations provided in this act for the free Public Library, public playgrounds, public schools (except buildings and grounds and repairs to buildings), health department, and public welfare, respectively: Provided, That such transfers under this section shall not be made between appropriations for the several municipal services named; and all transfers, whether approved or contemplated, shall be reported to Congress in the estimates of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year 1935."

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I move that the Senate agree to the amendments of the House to the amendments of the Senate nos, 22, 32, and 34.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Oklahoma.

The motion was agreed to.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5755) to encourage national industrial recovery, to foster fair competition, and to provide for the construction of certain useful public works, and for other purposes.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, may we not now have a vote on the pending amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK].

Mr. McGILL. I ask for the yeas and nays, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays are demanded. Is the demand seconded?

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. As many as are in favor of the amendment will say "aye"; those opposed "no."

Mr. LONG. I ask for a division.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The "noes" seem to have it.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I am a little bit surprised at the announcement of the Chair. I do not believe Senators understood the amendment. May we not have the amendment again stated?

Mr. HARRISON. I ask that the amendment may be read, if the Senator so desires.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 10, after line 3, it is proposed to insert the following:

(d) No trade or industrial association or group shall be eligible to receive the benefits of the provisions of this title unless such associations or groups give an equal voting strength to the industries, trades, and groups of each State, as State units, irrespective of the magnitude of trade, or business of the trades, industries, or associations of the different States.

Nor shall such industrial association or group be eligible to receive the benefits of the provisions of this title unless each individual business enterprise within the association or group is given an equal voting strength to each other business unit, irrespective of the magnitude of such business enterprise or its volume of business.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I think a sufficient number of Senators demanded the yeas and nays, and I do not think the question was understood. I should like to have the question put and see if a sufficient number desire the yeas and nays. If they do not, it is all right. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is the request sufficiently seconded?

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk called the roll.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I have been requested to announce the unavoidable absence of the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], and the senior Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER]. Those two Senators are paired.

Mr. TYDINGS (after voting in the negative). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. METCALF]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS], and let my vote stand.

Mr. McADOO. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Vermont [Mr. DALE]. I see he is not present, and, as I do not know how he would vote, I withhold my vote.

Mr. FRAZIER. On this question I have a pair with the senior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. KENDRICK]. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote.

Mr. HEBERT. I desire to announce that the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS] has a general pair with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN].

I also wish to state that the Senator from Missouri [Mr. PATTERSON] is detained from the Chamber. If present, he would vote "nay."

I also desire to announce a general pair between the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WALCOTT] and the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN].

Mr. McKELLAR (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Delaware [Mr. TOWNSEND]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] and allow my vote to stand.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, so that I may be able to move a reconsideration, I change my vote from "yea" to "nay."

Mr. WAGNER (after having voted in the negative). I inquire if the senior Senator from Missouri [Mr. PATTERSON] has voted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That Senator has not voted.

Mr. WAGNER. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Missouri. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER] and allow my vote to stand.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I desire to announce that the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. BULOW], the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH], the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. THOMPSON], the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS], and the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] are detained from the Senate on official business.

The result was announced—yeas 25, nays 41, as follows:

YEAS—25

Ashurst	Bone	Clark	George
Bachman	Bratton	Dickinson	McCarran
Bankhead	Byrd	Dill	McGill
Black	Capper	Erickson	McKellar
Murphy	Robinson, Ind.	Schall	Thomas, Okla.
Neely	Russell	Stephens	Trammell
Overton

NAYS—41

Adams	Cutting	Hebert	Sheppard
Austin	Dieterich	Kean	Steiwer
Bailey	Duffy	Keyes	Thomas, Utah
Barbour	Fess	King	Tydings
Barkley	Goldsborough	La Follette	Vandenberg
Brown	Gore	Lonergan	Wagner
Bulkley	Hale	Long	Walsh
Byrnes	Harrison	McNary	White
Carey	Hastings	Pope
Coolidge	Hatfield	Reed
Copeland	Hayden	Robinson, Ark.

NOT VOTING—30

Borah	Fletcher	Metcalf	Smith
Bulow	Frazier	Norbeck	Thompson
Caraway	Glass	Norris	Townsend
Connally	Johnson	Nye	Van Nuys
Costigan	Kendrick	Patterson	Walcott
Couzens	Lewis	Pittman	Wheeler
Dale	Logan	Reynolds
Davis	McAdoo	Shipstead

So Mr. BLACK's amendment was rejected.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment and ask that it may be read and considered at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana offers an amendment, which will be stated.

Mr. LONG. I wish to insert it on page 9, after line 7, as a new subsection.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Senator from Louisiana proposes, on page 9, after line 7, to insert the following:

(b) Nothing in this act, and no regulation thereunder, shall prevent an individual from pursuing the vocation of manual labor and selling or trading the products thereof; nor shall anything in this act, or regulation thereunder, prevent anyone from marketing or trading the produce of his farm.

Mr. LONG. That was substantially, with the exception of the Borah amendment adopted this morning, what the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] caused me to say this morning when he proposed that with the Borah amendment——

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me to interrupt him, I will state that if there is no other objection, so far as I personally am concerned I have no objection to the amendment.

Mr. LONG. All right.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Louisiana.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair inquires whether the Senator from Mississippi desires to return to the amendments passed over?

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, there was an amendment passed over giving the President power to stop the entrance of goods into this country; but I do not see the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED] present at this moment, and I do not desire to bring it up in his absence.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina offers an amendment, which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Senator from South Carolina proposes, on page 11, line 1, after the word "pay" and before the word "and", to insert "maximum machine load of employees", so as to read:

That employers shall comply with the maximum hours of labor, minimum rates of pay, maximum machine load of employees, and other conditions of employment approved or prescribed by the President.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, this is only an additional factor of safety——

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me to interrupt him, I think it is already covered; but if the Senator is apprehensive about it, I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BYRNES. I offer the same amendment on page 11, in line 10.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Senator from South Carolina proposes, on page 11, line 10, after the word "pay" and before the word "and", to insert "maximum machine load of employees", so as to read:

(b) The President shall, so far as practicable, afford every opportunity to employers and employees in any trade or industry or subdivision thereof with respect to which the conditions referred to in clauses (1) and (2) of subsection (a) prevail, to establish by mutual agreement the standards as to the maximum hours of labor, minimum rates of pay, maximum machine load of employees, and such other conditions of employment as may be necessary in such trade or industry or subdivision thereof to effectuate the policy of this title; and the standards established in such agreements, when approved by the President, shall have the same effect as a code of fair competition approved by the President under subsection (a) of section 3.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I move a substitute for the committee amendment on page 6, subsection (e), which I send to the desk and ask to have reported.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts offers a substitute for the committee amendment, which will be reported for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Senator from Massachusetts proposes to strike out the committee amendment, being section (e), page 6, lines 4 to 25, and page 7, lines 1 and 2, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

(e) On his own motion, or if any labor organization or any trade or industrial organization, association, or group which has complied with the provisions of this title shall make complaint to the President that any article or articles are being imported into the United States in substantial and increasing ratio to domestic production of any competitive article or articles and on such terms or under such conditions as to render ineffective or seriously to endanger the maintenance of any code or agreement under this title, the President may cause an immediate investigation to be made by the United States Tariff Commission, which shall give precedence to investigations under this subsection, and if, after such investigation and such public notice and hearing as he shall specify, the President shall find the existence of such facts, he may, in order to effectuate the policy of this title, direct that the article or articles concerned shall be permitted entry into the United States only upon such terms and conditions and subject to the payment of such fees and to such limitations in the total quantity which may be imported (in the course of any specified period or periods) as he shall find it necessary to prescribe in order that the entry thereof shall not render or tend to render ineffective any code or agreement made under this title. In order to enforce any limitations imposed on the total quantity of imports in any specified period or periods of any article or articles under this subsection, the President may forbid the importation of such article or articles unless the importer shall have first obtained from the Secretary of the Treasury a license pursuant to such regulations as the President may prescribe. Upon information of any action by the President under this subsection, the Secretary of the Treasury shall, through the proper officers, permit entry of the article or articles specified only upon such terms and conditions and subject to such fees, to such limitations in the quantity which may be imported, and to such requirements of license as the President shall have directed. The decision of the President as to facts shall be conclusive. Any condition or limitation of entry under this subsection shall continue in effect until the President shall find and inform the Secretary of the Treasury that the conditions which led to the imposition of such condition or limitation upon entry no longer exist.

Mr. WALSH. I should like to have read at the desk in this connection a letter from Mr. John Dickinson, who has represented the Secretary of Commerce in negotiation and preparation of this title to the pending bill. It will explain the reasons for the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the clerk will read, as requested.

The Chief Clerk read the letter, as follows:

JUNE 8, 1933.

Hon. PAT HARRISON,
United States Senate, Washington, D.C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: My attention has been called by a prominent industrialist to the provisions of section 3, subsection (e), of the national industrial recovery act as reported to the Senate from the Finance Committee. This subsection, as you know, is the one dealing with restriction of imports where such imports threaten to obstruct the effectuation of the purposes of the bill. Assuming that the bill is to contain such a provision at all, I should like to suggest for your consideration whether or not the subsection as it now stands is not too broad in one direction and too narrow in another. As the language now reads, it provides for absolute exclusion of the imported articles. The absoluteness of this provision might be tempered by providing that the President might permit the entry of the articles upon terms and conditions which would obviate their interference with the policy of the act.

Secondly, I should like to raise the question whether in another particular the subsection is not too narrow. As the language now stands, proof is required that the imports have already driven some of the American producers into a course of unfair competition before the President may act. In other words, the only way to bring into effect the operation of the section is for some of the American producers to violate their codes of fair competition or licenses if they are to have the benefit of a Presidential determination. This might well operate as an inducement to such violations and would probably do so. The difficulty could be obviated by providing that the President could act whenever he finds the imports are coming in on such terms or conditions as to obstruct or impede the effectiveness of codes or agreements in accomplishing the purposes of the act.

I attach a suggested redraft of the subsection which I believe obviates the difficulties of the subsection as it now stands. I have consulted the Secretary in this matter and find that he agrees with my suggestions.

Cordially yours,

JOHN DICKINSON.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, the committee amendment was originally proposed by the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED]. The committee felt that the effectiveness of the measure would be greatly restricted, if not destroyed, unless there were some provision giving the President authority to restrict imports that would be in competition with the domestic producers who were obliged to comply with codes fixing limited hours of labor, with a minimum wage, and sell their products at a fixed price not incompatible with the public interest. The proposal of the Senator from Pennsylvania gave the President the power of embargo. He could declare that particular imports were tending to destroy the effectiveness of the measure and prevent their being imported into the country.

The substitute which I have proposed has been submitted to the Senator from Pennsylvania and meets with his approval. It has been submitted to the Senator in charge of the bill [Mr. HARRISON]. We all believe that it is preferable to the committee amendment. It retains the power for the President to embargo when necessary, but also gives him, which he does not possess under the committee amendment, the power to impose limitations upon the amount of imports that may be permitted to enter the country, and also gives him the power to compel importers, where imports are restricted, to take out a license, so that he can prevent their violating his regulations.

So far as I understand, everyone interested in this particular phase of this bill is in accord; and I assume the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator just one question?

Mr. WALSH. Certainly.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Without changing in any degree the ultimate authority of the President to control the entire situation, would the Senator object to changing the first verb—it is not numbered, and I cannot identify it particularly—when the sentence says:

The President may cause an immediate investigation—

About eight lines down on the first page. Would the Senator object to making that read:

The President shall cause an immediate investigation?

In other words, simply at that original point to make an inquiry mandatory.

Mr. HARRISON. I do not think there is any objection to that, Mr. President.

Mr. WALSH. In view of the fact that the Senator from Mississippi has no objection, I accept the amendment. Therefore I modify my amendment by inserting the word "shall" instead of the word "may" at the place suggested by the Senator from Michigan.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the modified amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I am willing to accept this substitute for that which I had offered in the committee. Frankly, I do not believe part of it is constitutional.

The amendment now pending gives the President power to impose fees on the importation of the foreign article. That means, in plain words, power to put a tax upon the importation; or, in other plain words, it means that we are trying to give the President power to put on additional tariffs, and we are not giving him any rule to guide his action. It is left to his free discretion under all the circumstances, with no rule to control his action.

I do not think Congress can delegate that power in that fashion. The amendment does give the President power to establish total or partial embargoes. In my judgment that is what we shall have to do, although it may be that for a time he will attempt to collect these additional tariffs.

It is a strange contrast with the platform promises of the majority party. We now find this to be necessary, but, unfortunately, the "new deal" has to use the old multiplication table. The eternal verities of mathematics remain the same.

Mr. LONG. We are going to repeal that. [Laughter.]

Mr. REED. We might repeal it; we might try it; but the whole effect of this bill is going to be to raise American costs and American prices.

We cannot compel the foreigner to unionize his labor. We cannot compel the foreigner to pay minimum rates of wages. We cannot compel the foreigner to cut down his workday to 30 hours a week. We cannot compel him to join a code of fair competition. The effect of the bill, without some such protection as this, would be to hand over to the foreigner the entire American market.

Therefore, I am very glad that the Senator from Massachusetts is offering an amendment that will go as far as we constitutionally can go.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I rise to a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. GORE. We have a rule of the Senate which provides that a Senator shall not use language unbecoming a Senator. The Senator from Pennsylvania has referred to the eternal verities of mathematics. I submit, sir, that that is language unbecoming a Senator. [Laughter.]

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I rise not to discuss the amendment but only to make an observation.

If these powers are employed by the President, and foreign goods are further excluded from the United States, of course the chances of collecting the war debts will be just that much more minimized. So I hope those who are now voting for these new tariffs will not insist too heavily, as they have in the past, upon payment in full of the war debts, because the two policies will not go hand in hand.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Massachusetts a question. I did not fully understand his amendment. Does this amendment authorize the President to reduce duties as well as to increase duties?

Mr. HARRISON. No, Mr. President; may I say to the Senator that this amendment does not?

Mr. GORE. Would the Senator from Massachusetts be willing to commit to the discretion of the President the power and privilege, if we can do that, to reduce duties that are excessive, as well as to raise duties which he regards as insufficient?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, somebody else would want to talk about that.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I shall be glad to answer the Senator's inquiry.

The amendment proposed by me is simply to make effective the purpose of title I of this act. It is inconceivable that hours of labor can be reduced, and wages fixed, and prices of commodities established by a governmental agency and no power given to the same agency to prevent a flood of imports into this country. Without such an amendment, the whole act would be ineffective.

How is it possible to reduce working hours, increase wages, put more people to work, and fix the price of commodities so that wages will be higher, without some restriction or some control over the importations into this country that are to compete with labor and wages that are regulated under this bill? The purpose of the amendment is to give the President the same authority over these imports that he is assuming over domestic production and products.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, the Senator's observation involves an intimation that Congress cannot repeal the laws of economics, cannot repeal the laws of Nature, cannot repeal the laws of human nature, cannot suspend the laws of mathematics. In other words, he charges indirectly that Congress cannot achieve an impossibility.

I merely wish to challenge that statement. [Laughter.]

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, for fear that we may not have a record vote, I desire to be recorded as voting "no", and I want the RECORD so to show.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, adopting the expedient of the Senator from Tennessee, I should like to say, for the purposes of the RECORD, in case there shall not be a record vote, that I intend to vote for the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts to the committee amendment, and then to vote against the committee amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts, as modified, to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment, as modified, to the amendment of the committee, was agreed to.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, perhaps I misunderstood something here. What did we amend? [Laughter.] I understood that the Senate committee amendment authorized the President to declare embargoes.

Mr. HARRISON. This was an amendment to the so-called "Reed amendment" that was recommended by the Finance Committee, giving to the President the right to keep commodities from importation into this country where the domestic prices have gotten so high as to cause an unjust competition.

Mr. LONG. That is all?

Mr. HARRISON. That is all.

Mr. LONG. That is all right.

Mr. HARRISON. Now, may I make an inquiry? There is one amendment remaining—the oil amendment.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry: Do we not have to vote on the committee amendment as amended?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the adoption of the committee amendment as amended by the modified amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, on that I desire to be recorded also as voting "no."

Mr. CLARK. I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. TYDINGS. I should like to be recorded as voting "no" on the amendment as amended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays are demanded. Is the demand sufficiently seconded? [A pause.] The demand is not sustained.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President——

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, if there is going to be some politics played, I submit that I have been going along in this matter in the hope that we might get together and get this bill out of the way. If there is a disposition on the other side to play the game of politics now, we might just as well know it, and we can have a record vote on the matter. It was declared by the Presiding Officer that the demand for the yeas and nays was not sufficiently seconded.

Mr. LONG. I make the point of order that the vote has been cast and declared, and we cannot have the yeas and nays.

Mr. CLARK. I made the request for the yeas and nays before the question was even put.

Mr. TYDINGS. I call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, no one on this side desires to obtrude politics into this situation or any other. This is a very important amendment. It has been offered and debated. I think a sufficient number of hands were raised to secure a yea-and-nay vote. I think the Senator from Mississippi is willing to have a yea-and-nay vote. I ask at this time for a yea-and-nay vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. As many as favor a yea-and-nay vote——

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I submit that there was a request for a yea-and-nay vote, and there were not a sufficient number of hands raised to get a yea-and-nay vote, and it was so declared by the Presiding Officer.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, that is not the point at all. I do not want to raise any technical parliamentary question; but the Senator, in frankness, ought to be willing for the Senate to express itself by a vote. I am sure he is fair enough to do that.

Mr. HARRISON. If there is a disposition to get along with this bill, as I thought there would be, there would be no necessity for that, when I had understood we had pretty well agreed to this proposition.

Mr. McNARY. There is a disposition to get along with the bill.

Mr. HARRISON. No; the disposition is to try to put some Members on record on this side who have stood against high tariff rates; and this is a high tariff. This would go to the matter of an embargo. I voted against the proposition in the Committee on Finance; but I am clearly convinced that if this proposal is to increase the purchasing power in this country and lift the prices of things, which is the intention of the legislation, some commodities from other countries might sneak in here because of the high domestic cost of those commodities, and there may be a necessity for the President to take some action to restrain importations.

So we have worked here in order to try to get together on that question. I thought the amendment of the Senator from Pennsylvania was too drastic. I voted against it in the committee; but I have had an expert here trying to work out the matter in a modified form, using the Tariff Commission as a means of ascertaining these differences in cost, and so forth. Everybody was for the proposition except a few who are not going to call for a yea-and-nay vote, and a few who are calling for it in order to put somebody on record on the matter, which, in my opinion, is pure political stuff.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment, as amended.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I have no desire to embarrass the Senator who is in charge of the bill, nor to suggest the absence of a quorum in order to secure a roll call. I think, however, that on this important measure every Senator should be recorded. I am astonished that the Senator should say that there is any partisan feeling. We on this side of the aisle have gone along splendidly, using every effort to speed the progress of the bill. I have asked only for this one thing, that we may have a record vote.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. HARRISON. All right; let us give the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry: Are we voting over again on the Walsh amendment? Is that what we are voting upon?

Mr. WALSH. We are voting upon the committee amendment, as amended by myself.

Mr. LONG. Authorizing embargoes on foreign products? All right; that is what I want to know.

The legislative clerk resumed the calling of the roll.

Mr. McADOO (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the senior Senator from Vermont [Mr. DALE] to the senior Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER], and vote "yea."

Mr. STEPHENS. On this vote I have a general pair with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. ROBINSON], which I transfer to the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS], and vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. LEWIS. I desire to announce that Mr. BACHMAN, Mr. BONE, Mr. BULOW, Mrs. CARAWAY, Mr. DILL, Mr. GEORGE, Mr. MCCARRAN, Mr. OVERTON, Mr. PITTMAN, Mr. REYNOLDS, Mr. VAN NUYS, and Mr. WHEELER are absent on official business.

Mr. HEBERT. I desire to announce that the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WALCOTT] is necessarily absent. If present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I desire to announce the following general pairs:

The Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS];

The Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN] with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WALCOTT]; and

The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN] with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS].

The result was announced—yeas 59, nays 12, as follows:

YEAS—59

Adams	Copeland	Kean	Robinson, Ark.
Ashurst	Dickinson	Kendrick	Russell
Austin	Dieterich	Keyes	Sheppard
Bailey	Duffy	La Follette	Shipstead
Bankhead	Erickson	Lewis	Steiwer
Barbour	Fess	Lonergan	Stephens
Barkley	Frazier	Long	Thomas, Okla.
Bratton	Goldsborough	McAdoo	Thomas, Utah
Brown	Hale	McNary	Townsend
Bulkley	Harrison	Metcalf	Trammell
Byrnes	Hastings	Murphy	Vandenberg
Capper	Hatfield	Neely	Wagner
Carey	Hayden	Nye	Walsh
Connally	Hebert	Patterson	White
Coolidge	Johnson	Reed

NAYS—12

Black	Gore	McKellar	Smith
Byrd	King	Norris	Thompson
Clark	McGill	Pope	Tydings

NOT VOTING—25

Bachman	Cutting	Logan	Schall
Bone	Dale	McCarran	Van Nuys
Borah	Davis	Norbeck	Walcott
Bulow	Dill	Overton	Wheeler
Caraway	Fletcher	Pittman
Costigan	George	Reynolds
Couzens	Glass	Robinson, Ind.

So the committee amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I returned to the Chamber a moment ago from a committee meeting and voted in the negative upon the question last presented. Not knowing the parliamentary status of the matter, I supposed that an opportunity would be afforded, after disposing of the substitute, to vote upon the provision dealing with embargoes as reported by the Senate committee. The substitute is objectionable but has some merits not possessed by the provision reported by the committee.

I am opposed to the substitute and also to the Senate provision and regret that no opportunity is afforded to have a direct vote upon the Senate provision which authorizes embargoes. I regret that Democrats are giving support to embargo measures. That party has been opposed to prohibitive tariffs and embargoes and has favored policies promotive of international trade. The Democrats have denounced the extreme protective policies of the Republican Party and tariff duties which have menaced our foreign trade and commerce and seriously injured not only the agriculturists of the United States but also all branches of industry. In the face of this record we abandon our views and signify our willingness to have erected walls to prevent commodities from other countries entering the United States. I wonder if the Democratic Party is forgetting the principles for which it has battled so courageously in the past.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I just want to make a moment's comment, which I would have made before the vote had it not been for fear that it might have been interpreted as delaying the vote.

I want to compliment the Democratic Party. It is a glad moment in my life when I see my party lining up and coming over to the good old Louisiana sugar-tariff standpoint, for which we have contended so long. The party is getting sensible on this question.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I will ask that we now recur to page 14, the oil regulation provision, and I ask the attention of the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS].

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BYRD in the chair). The clerk will state the committee amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 14, after line 5, the committee proposes to insert the following section:

OIL REGULATION

SEC. 9 (a) The President is further authorized to initiate before the Interstate Commerce Commission proceedings necessary to prescribe regulations to control the operations of oil pipe lines and to fix reasonable, compensatory rates for the transportation of petroleum and its products by pipe lines, and the Interstate Commerce Commission shall grant preference to the hearings and determination of such cases.

(b) The President is authorized to institute proceedings to divorce from any holding company any pipe-line company controlled by such holding company which pipe-line company by unfair practices or by exorbitant rates in the transportation of petroleum or its products tends to create a monopoly.

(c) The President is authorized to prohibit the transportation in interstate and foreign commerce of petroleum and the products thereof produced or withdrawn from storage in excess of the amount permitted to be produced or withdrawn from storage by any State law or valid regulation or order prescribed thereunder, by any board, commission, officer, or other duly authorized agency of a State. Any violation of any order of the President issued under the provisions of this subsection shall be punishable by fine of not to exceed $1,000, or imprisonment for not to exceed 6 months, or both.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I offer an amendment proposing to strike out a portion of subsection (c), on page 14, lines 20 to 25, inclusive, and a portion of line 1, on page 15. I will ask that the clerk read the substitute for those lines.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. The Senator from Oklahoma proposes to strike out, on page 14, lines 20 to 25, inclusive, and line 1 on page 15, ending with the word "State", and to insert in lieu thereof the following:

(c) The President is authorized to prescribe regulations to supplement State conservation laws regulating the production of crude petroleum, to allocate equitably the national market demand for crude petroleum and the products thereof among the oil-producing States and also between domestic production and importations, and to prohibit the transportation in interstate commerce of crude petroleum and the products thereof produced or withdrawn from storage in violation of any State or Federal law or the regulations prescribed thereunder.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, this amendment embraces but 10 lines. It contains four separate and distinct propositions, which I can explain in a very few moments.

The first part of the amendment proposes to give the President power, not directory, not mandatory, but permissive, to prescribe regulations to supplement State conservation laws regulating the production of crude petroleum. That is the first proposal.

Some States have made provision by law for controlling the production of oil in such States. My State has such a provision on its statute books, Texas has such a provision, and other States have provisions of that character.

Some States do not have any law even attempting to protect and regulate the production of petroleum within such States. This amendment proposes to give the President power to supplement existing law in States which have undertaken to control the production of petroleum.

The second part of the amendment proposes to give the President power to allocate equitably the national market demand for crude petroleum and the products thereof among the oil-producing States. It simply provides that if the States cannot get together and allocate among themselves satisfactorily the correct amount of petroleum to be produced, but fail in that endeavor, the President will have the power to step in and say to the several States, "You can produce so much, and no more."

The third power conferred, which is permissive, is that the President may allocate production of petroleum and petroleum products between domestic production and importations. That means that if some person, firm, or company proceeds to bring into this country a flood of oil sufficient to run down the price and interfere with the prosperity of the oil industry and thereby demoralize, if not destroy, vast sections of this country, the President may step in and say to such importing concerns, "You are importing too much oil. You must act within reason and with regard to the interests of the oil producers in this country." The President will have the power to make an appropriate order and to enforce such order if made.

The fourth provision of the amendment would give the President permissive power to prohibit the transportation in interstate commerce of crude petroleum and the products thereof produced or withdrawn from storage in violation of any State or Federal law, or the regulations prescribed thereunder.

Mr. President, in some of the oil-producing States there are individuals, firms, and companies who will not obey the laws passed by the States and will not obey the regulations prescribed under and by the authority of law. In my State we have a corporation commission. The rules, regulations, and orders of our commission have been violated. Other States have regulatory bodies, and such commissions have the same trouble we have in Oklahoma.

We have no effective Federal law and some of the oil producers will not obey either State law or State regulations. The oil business is prostrate and thousands of oil producers are bankrupt. Today oil is selling in many places for from 10 to 18 cents per barrel and the average price throughout the country is 25 cents per barrel. Prosperity cannot return to our country when the third largest industry is in such deep distress.

Mr. President, I represent a State of tremendous oil resources and a State in which probably a larger proportion of citizens are interested in the production of oil than in any other State in the Union. Not only this, but I represent a State where the oil interests are peculiarly those of the small landowner and the small independent producer, and the welfare not only of my State but the people of the State individually are sorely affected by the chaotic and unstable conditions that have existed in the oil industry for many years last past.

Naturally I am keenly interested in the subject matter. In the study of the oil problem I have gathered data from many sources and I have come to the conclusion that had the warnings and advice given the country, the Federal Oil Conservation Board, and the Congress, been heeded, and followed, the present ills of the oil industry could all have been easily avoided and the industry would not be in the deplorable condition in which it today finds itself.

I find that there has been an overproduction of oil in the United States of America as a whole since about 1920, and the conditions which brought about this overproduction of oil and the remedy therefor was laid before the directors of the American Petroleum Institute many years ago. The facts that we all now know to be true were denied and all remedies offered to cure the ills of the industry were opposed by the representatives of major oil companies. These large oganizations felt that they profited from the misfortunes of the smaller and independent people in the oil business. These companies that did not want to see stability in the oil business exerted all their influence and power to frighten the smaller producers and landowners and to make them believe that they should resist anything in the nature of new legislation or Government control of the industry. We have now reached the point where the oil industry is on the verge of collapse, and we all recognize that even a prohibitory import duty would not be sufficient alone to take care of the situation, nor is it possible for the States either acting jointly or severally to correct these evil conditions.

I am reliably informed that the records of the American Petroleum Institute will show that the conditions that have confronted the oil industry for several years were foreseen and could have been guarded against. I also know that the records will show that these facts were laid before responsible agents of former administrations as early as 1924.

The period of loss and chaos, so harmful to the small producers of oil, and which has been a tremendous factor in bringing about the present instability of all business in this country, could have been corrected and would have been corrected except for these big interests in the petroleum industry who believed they could profit from the hardships of the smaller landowners and independent operators. After this matter was brought to the attention of the Federal Government any change in the methods, procedure, and policies of the industry was strenuously opposed by the large oil interests and the men who argued and pleaded for a measure of Government regulation were met with ridicule, sarcasm, and opposition. The records of the Conservation Commission will disclose that there was abundant proof before that body that action should have been taken, and my conclusion is that the agents dealing with this matter for the administrations of both President Coolidge and President Hoover were intimidated from taking any action in this matter for fear of arousing the opposition of rich and powerful interests.

I have before me literature from the files of the Federal Oil Conservation Board representing the testimony offered by different men in the petroleum industry to the officers of the Federal Government and to the Federal Oil Conservation Board. I am advised that as early as 1920, and perhaps sooner, one man of the petroleum industry who has been the leader in this effort toward reform worked patiently for several years with the men of the oil industry to induce them to bring about necessary reforms and conditions in the oil business which would be such as to make it safe for the small capitalist and the small producer. After every suggestion of reform had been rejected by the representatives of the large companies that then controlled the oil industry an appeal was made to the Federal Government. The facts relating to the oil industry were summed up in a letter under date of August 11, 1924, from Henry L. Doherty to President Coolidge, which is as follows:

AUGUST 11, 1924.

Subject: Conservation of petroleum oil.

The PRESIDENT,

Executive Mansion, Washington, D.C.

SIR: For a long time I have viewed with great alarm the rapidity with which we are depleting the petroleum oil reserves of this country.

Under our present system we are bound to become a pauper nation so far as oil is concerned before the oil resources of many other countries have been seriously drawn upon.

When I became thoroughly convinced, several years ago, that many, and probably most, of our oil pools could be located and mapped out by surface observations without putting a drill into the ground, I realized that this might mean the early and premature exhaustion of our American oil reserves.

Developments in the science and practice of oil production since then have increased the fears that were born in my mind at that time, and the developments of the past 18 months have convinced me that remedial measures must be adopted at once. I therefore conceived it to be my duty to evolve practical plans for conservation and to find some agency sufficiently powerful in influence to put these plans, or such better ones as may be evolved by others, into operation with the least possible delay.

I have been forced to the conclusion that only through the efforts of our Federal Government can the oil problem be solved, for time is the essence of this problem, and there will be no satisfactory solution unless it is done promptly.

After reaching the conclusion that there was no other agency capable of handling this problem other than our Federal Government, I was still at a loss to know how to proceed. As no branch of our Federal Government is charged with the specific responsibility of conserving our natural resources, and also on account of the magnitude and importance of the problem, I felt I was justified in addressing you upon this subject. In my opinion, it has gotten beyond a mere departmental problem and has become a real administration problem of the first magnitude. When I decided to put this problem up to our Federal Government I did not believe the Federal Government had jurisdiction over it, but I am now convinced the Federal Government has this power.

The United States Geological Survey estimates the entire recoverable oil reserves of this country at 9,000,000,000 barrels. This is based on our present wasteful methods of operation. Last year we took from the ground approximately 750,000,000 barrels. This represents depletion at such an alarming rate as to terrify anyone who will give these figures 5 minutes of sober thought. Many industries are absolutely dependent upon petroleum oil, and oil is a prime war necessity.

Conservation measures should have been adopted long ago, for the ultimate result has been obvious for many years, but it has been only recently that the rate of depletion has increased so rapidly as to become a matter of acute alarm as to whether conservation measures can be adopted quickly enough to avoid embarrassment. Unless something is done we must soon face an enormous deficit in oil production as against our current consumption.

Oil is not only a war resource but the mere possession of an abundance of it is a serious discouragement to any other nation to become involved in war with us. A deficiency of oil is not only a serious war handicap to us but is an invitation to others to declare war against us.

If war must come again, it is apt to be in every instance a world war. If our oil supply is deficient, we will not be so eagerly sought by other nations as an ally, and those countries having an abundance of oil will be so sought. If we become involved in such a war we may not have a single country as an ally which has an abundant supply of oil. Even if we do have allies able to supply oil, nevertheless our oil supply will be at the risk of ocean transportation.

The shocking depletion that has characterized our oil reserves is not due to the ease with which we can locate new pools, but is due primarily to the fact that under our present unfortunate laws each pool, as discovered, must be immediately devastated. No other property, or product from property, is subject to similar laws except wild birds and animals—and what has happened to our wild birds and animals is rapidly happening to our oil.

Practically every evil of the oil business, and everything about which the public complain, is due to the fact that oil does not follow the usual law of property rights, but belongs to the man who can capture it. Other mineral products are located and blocked out, but are only taken from their ground reserves as the market needs them. The discovery of an oil pool means that every landowner or lessee can take as much oil from this common pool as he can get, and there is always a frenzied scramble to bring the oil to the surface before somebody else can get it, regardless of whether the market needs it or not.

Under present conditions oil must be consumed practically as fast as it is found, whether it is needed or not. Therefore the exhaustion of our oil resources is not based on our market needs for oil but on the rapidity with which our remaining reserves can be uncovered.

Our present methods are necessarily wasteful. In some cases we do not recover more than 10 percent of the oil in the sand, and practically all of the natural gas that accompanies it is wasted. This natural gas, which is largely wasted, is sometimes of a total energy value in excess of the oil recovered.

For 4 years we have been continually producing more oil than is being used, and this in spite of the fact that a large quantity of oil is being used for purposes which could be as well supplied with other cheaper and more abundant fuels. In other words, we are producing and selling large quantities of oil which is simply displacing, on an energy basis, the equivalent amount of coal. The oil is a total loss to those industries which must have oil and which cannot use coal or other forms of fuel.

In spite of the fact that we now have a large overproduction of oil, nevertheless should the army of geologists now at work in the field prospecting for oil succeed in locating enough additional pools to increase our production by 1,000,000 barrels per day, you would see our consumption increase correspondingly. The amount of oil that can be tanked is almost microscopical in relation to the amount that represents the real overproduction. Practically all of this overproduction must be forced to a price where it can displace other fuel and is as much of a loss to those purposes which can only use oil as it would have been had the oil been burned at the mouth of the well.

Our production has for several years been so high that no attempt is made to refine all of our oil. There is as much lubricating oil and waxes run to our fuel tanks and sold and burned as fuel oil as is recovered. What is the excess by-product of today may become the much-sought-for primary product in the near future.

I will undertake to convince any intelligent and unprejudiced commission—

First. That our present methods are viciously wasteful in every way.

Second. That the first step in conservation must be to provide that ownership shall be determined otherwise than by capture.

Third. That if our laws are changed to make oil and gas conform to the laws governing all other property its division among the different landowners can be made with a greater relative degree of equity than now prevails.

Fourth. That if we can develop our pools without undue haste we can recover at least double as much oil as we do now and raise much more of it to the surface without the cost of pumping by merely preventing unnecessary waste of gas.

Fifth. That we can greatly prolong our supply of natural gas to the cities now being supplied.

Sixth. That this country could, if necessary and under normal peace conditions, adjust itself without much hardship to the use of petroleum oil to not more than half of that produced in 1923.

While I have claimed above that we could recover double as much oil as we do now, I think it is reasonable to presume that if we could work methodically and scientifically, instead of being governed primarily by haste, possibly we might in many instances recover all of the oil in the sands instead of recovering from 10 to 35 percent, as is now estimated by the Bureau of Mines. I further think that I can show the omount of oil we do recover under present methods is overestimated rather than underestimated. If we can curtail our consumption by one half and increase our production by two, it will increase our oil reserves for a period four times as long as under our present methods.

If the laws governing the production of oil are made to conform with the laws pertaining to all other property, we will, by the very nature of things, develop our oil pools in the same manner as other mineral resources. That is, we will always have large bodies of oil located and blocked out, and in event of war we can draw on these ground reserves very quickly to supply either our increased needs occasioned by war or to take the place of oil which at that time was being imported from foreign countries.

No conservation plan can succeed that does not abolish the system we now work under, whereby oil belongs to the man who can capture it, and while I think the abolishment of this system will give all the relief we need, nevertheless, if it does not, we can adopt other conservation measures as their need is demonstrated.

I am satisfied that Congress has power under the Federal Constitution to pass laws specifying how oil shall be produced. Section 8 of the Constitution provides: "The Congress shall have power to * * * provide for the common defense * * *." To provide for the common defense, it is essential that our oil be conserved. I am satisfied that Congress not only has power to enforce conservation, but that the Federal Government is charged with the responsibility of doing whatever is necessary to "provide for the common defense." However, I would not recommend that Congress legislate to specify how oil shall be produced, except that the separate States refuse or fail to do so.

If the separate States would pass legislation providing for oil districts, similar to the laws that have been passed and sustained by our courts for irrigation and drainage districts, this would make possible the handling and conserving of an oil pool under the same conditions as now pertain to other mineral bodies.

What I would recommend is that you should delegate to a committee of lawyers the formation of uniform legislation for every State providing for the conservation of oil; that you would then call a conference of Governors and request them to pass this uniform legislation in their States, and say that unless it is done by a certain date that you will be compelled to request Congress to pass legislation taking jurisdiction of oil production throughout the United States.

I am aware of the fact that you have appointed a Commission to consider means to insure a supply of oil for our Navy, and I have discussed certain features of this matter with Dr. George Otis Smith, chairman of this Commission. I have told him that, in my opinion, it is easier to solve the entire oil problem than it is to simply provide oil for our Navy under the present system. I have also told him that the setting aside of naval reserves will prove entirely inadequate and will also be demonstrated a colossal failure if the emergency arises whereby they must be called upon. Teapot Dome would have proved a terrible disappointment, and any unknown deposits of oil hundreds of miles from tidewater would in case of war prove more of a liability than an asset. The people who talk so glibly about our naval reserves or our shale beds as a source of oil in case of war may see a war come and go before either succeeds in giving a substantial contribution to our needs for oil.

While the country can adjust itself to the utilization of a smaller amount of oil if worked out under normal peace conditions and in an evolutionary manner, it cannot, however, adjust itself to the use of less oil in a revolutionary manner, as would necessarily be required should we become engaged in war, without seriously handicapping our industrial efficiency in prosecuting the war. If war comes, our Navy must be provided with oil. Under present conditions this oil can only be provided by taking it away from the industries that are now getting it; but under the conditions I recommend, every oil pool will then represent a large ground reserve which can be drawn on very quickly, and, if this policy had been in vogue for a long enough period before the war, we should then have a large enough ground reserve of oil to carry us through a long war.

I thoroughly believe, and respectfully represent to you, that this oil problem is one of the most important matters needing your attention. I also think a declaration from you that you intended to take steps to conserve oil would immediately be commended by a very large number of our most intelligent citizens and, when accomplished, would for all time thereafter be regarded as a great credit to you.

On the other hand, if the public some day in the near future awaken to the fact that we have become a bankrupt nation so far as oil is concerned, and that it is then too late to protect our supply by conservation measures, I am sure they will blame both the men of the oil industry and the men who held public offices at the time conservation measures should have been adopted.

The men in the oil business who appreciate the seriousness of this situation feel that they cannot be blamed, as they are compelled to work under the laws made by the courts and the State legislatures. They also feel that it is up to the Bureau of Mines or the United States Geological Survey to say when conservation measures should be adopted and what these conservation measures should be.

I am an oil producer myself and therefore am unavoidably a party to this vicious system. I intend to do all I can to reform this system, but, failing in that, I want to frankly admit that I intend to make a record to which I can point whenever the inevitable time arrives when an indignant public asks for an explanation.

Every business and industry is controlled largely by its conservative and standpat element. Governmental changes largely come from the radical and irresponsible element. Every industry fears to invite Government interference for fear of the radical and irresponsible element and the impractical reformer. For 50 years our banking business was carried on under laws which had no merit and were vicious in their effect, causing frequent but irregular money stringencies, which often climaxed into business panics that caused widespread depression and unemployment. The laws under which we then operated were never passed in the interest of the banking business or labor, but were passed to force the sale of Government bonds under the stress of war and when bonds could be sold in no other way. Many bankers knew the vicious effect of these laws, but they not only did not recommend rational laws, but endeavored to prevent all agitation for rational laws for fear of the radical and irresponsible members of our legislative bodies, and believed any change might be for the worse rather than for the better.

Repeated efforts were made of a statesmanlike character during every succeeding administration after the Bryan silver issue of 1896 to change these laws, but they did not succeed; not simply because they were not supported by the bankers, but because through fear they were secretly opposed by many bankers. Had the mass of our bankers had their way we would still be working under our old banking system. The Federal Reserve System was created by statesmen or politicians, as you may choose to call them. If it had not been for the firm determination of the first Wilson administration to pass a reserve bank law, I do not think we would yet have had such a law. Without our Federal Reserve Bank System I know we would never have gone through the war without much more serious hardships than we experienced.

I am satisfied the attitude of the men in the oil business will be no different than the attitude of the bankers except in degree, and that for the worse rather than for the better. You need only recommend to a group of oil men that they should themselves seek legislation and the mere suggestion will throw them into a panic. Many of the oil men are afraid of our Government. They see all the foreign governments stand firmly behind and support their oil industry and yet many oil men feel that they can expect only chastisement at the hands of our Government. They see the radical element in foreign governments demanding even that which is unfair but in favor of their country's oil industry. They see these foreign governments trying to help their oil interests reach the goal, but they see the politicians of our Government regarding our oil industry merely as a political football. Everybody takes a kick at it, in spite of the fact that American oil men have blazed the trail for the whole world, and no matter where oil is produced, and no matter what language is spoken, or no matter what diseases men die of, whether in the Arctic or the Tropics, it is there you will find the American oil man, and not as the workman, but as the expert or the boss on the job. If the problem I have presented to you is to be solved, I fear it will have to be done by our Federal Government without much help from the men in the oil industry, and with the determined opposition of some of the men in the oil industry.

There are three members of your Cabinet that I think are charged with a particular responsibility in this matter. I refer to the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of the Interior. There are two scientific departments of our Government that also have a particular responsibility in this matter. I refer to the Bureau of Mines and the United States Geological Survey. The Bureau of Standards is also capable of contributing much of value to this problem.

I will send you under separate cover 6 extra copies of this letter so you can, if you wish, give them to the 3 Cabinet officers referred to and to the 3 scientific bureaus. I do not expect any one of the three scientific bureaus to agree with all that I say; for if they felt as I do, they would have already had these statements before you. I have nothing but admiration and praise for the high standing of all of these scientific bureaus; and if you must choose between my opinions and theirs, I would naturally expect you to be guided by their opinions. However, I prize my reputation for scientific accuracy as highly as they do, and if after full conference they cannot agree with me on this matter, I will stake every shred of my professional reputation that I am right and they are wrong, in spite of their number and their standing in the scientific world.

There is not one of these bureaus that does not know of my work in engineering problems—or, if they do not, they can easily acquaint themselves with it. Whether they disagree with these views now or continue to disagree with me, I know they will not dismiss my views as those of a man who has the habit of merely seeing ghosts which are entirely devoid of either form or substance.

This will seem a long letter to you, and it is, but it is short in relation to the importance of the subject of which it treats.

It is probably unnecessary, but it may be well for me to state that I will not show this letter to anyone or state that I have written such a letter unless I first ask your permission to do so.

Respectfully yours,

HENRY L. DOHERTY.

Mr. President, this amendment was thoroughly discussed before the Finance Committee. I will not consume additional time in support of the proposal. I do, however, ask permission to insert in the RECORD copies of letters, telegrams, and editorials following the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, permission is granted.

The matters referred to are as follows:

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER FROM ONE OF THE MOST NOTED CONSTITUTIONAL LAWYERS OF THE COUNTRY

* * * * * * *

Recently the Secretary of the Interior held conferences with the Governors, and other representatives, of the several oil-producing States, and with representatives of the oil industry, in an effort to bring about a mutual agreement for controlling production. My observation is that it all amounted to nothing. Texas and Oklahoma are periodically at war with each other in the matter, and with the oil producers in their respective territories. The petroleum industry, or some parts of it, are not only ruining the industry from a commercial standpoint, but are taking from the Government a property which it owns. Bear in mind that I claim that the Government can overcome this condition by a wave of the hand, so to express it.

In support of my position allow me to point out that the Constitution was adopted by the people of the several States, expressly to provide for the common defense, etc. In it they imposed upon Congress, among others, two mandatory provisions, i. e., "To raise and support armies", and "To provide and maintain a navy", and in connection therewith empowered Congress "To make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers."

Obedient to this command, Congress did "raise" armies and did "provide" a Navy, but is continuously confronted with the problem of supporting the former and maintaining the latter, equally mandatory injunctions. The people did not reserve or withhold to themselves anything which would make it impossible for Congress to carry out these provisions. It was not the intention that the provisions should later be emasculated by individual enterprise.

The Navy visualized by the people was one sufficient for defensive purposes. This is equally true of the contemplated armies. At the time, wooden ships with no propelling force other than wind were visualized. Today a battleship cannot leave its moorings without the aid of petroleum; without it the Navy could not function; without it the three most important branches of our armies and Navy, namely, airplanes, tanks, and submarines, would be powerless. Today over 90 percent of the horsepower of the Navy (ships) is provided by the use of petroleum, to which must be added 100 percent for the horsepower of submarines, tanks, and airplanes. However, the Constitution is not rendered impotent, nor is the Government, by being confronted with a demand for petroleum instead of wind, for the United States Supreme Court has held that while the Constitution does not change, it meets and provides for all the changes which occur in our national life. By the Constitution the Government gained a right and interest in the property of all individuals, which might be necessary to enable it to function within the provisions and limitations of the Constitution. Our Supreme Court has held that all privately owned property is a qualified ownership and does not carry dominion with it.

The interest which the Government acquired in petroleum, which in my opinion is a property, was the right to have petroleum when and as required by it to support and maintain its armies and its Navy. During the entire history of the petroleum industry the producers of petroleum have been taking from the Government that which was given it by the people, namely, the power to maintain its armies and Navy. They have been engaged in the production of petroleum by the pursuit of methods wantonly wasteful. If petroleum is today being produced by wasteful methods to such an extent as to impair the right of the Government to have an adequate supply of petroleum when it requires it, the Government has the right to institute proceedings to restrain not the production of petroleum per se but the wasteful production of petroleum.

Under the eighteenth section of article 1, the Congress has the power to enact laws to restrain waste, if congressional action was thought to be better than for the Government to proceed by injunction.

An Oklahoma statute defines waste in the production of petroleum to exist when the supply or production thereof exceeds the reasonable market demand. Our Supreme Court has upheld this statute. True, this statute is an exercise of a police power, but measuring waste by reasonable market demand was not held by the Court to be an exercise of the police power to restrain waste, but market demand was sustained as a general measure of what constitutes waste.

In case of a war, and that is what these provisions of the Constitution contemplate, armies and a navy which did not have an adequate supply of petroleum would be at the mercy of armies and a navy which did have. Petroleum, though an unknown, is a fixed quantity. It is a question of time only when this country's deposits will be exhausted. True, South America is known to have large deposits available in times of peace, but if this country were engaged in a war with a European power, every barrel of oil obtained by us from South America would mean either a naval or an aerial engagement, because the easiest way to win the war against us would be to prevent us from having an adequate supply of petroleum. Nothing of this sort was contemplated by the Constitution.

The Government, of course, has the right to take with compensation any property of the individual which it requires, but this problem does not present that condition. The Government already owns the right to have petroleum preserved for it; that is to say, that it shall not be so wastefully produced as to impair the Government's right. The question of a taking and/or compensation is not involved.

If no other methods than those now pursued in the production of petroleum were known, the Government could not be heard to say that the methods were wasteful. Present methods leave in the ground 80 percent, approximately, of the recoverable petroleum. Improved methods which require the restoration to the ground of the natural gas make approximately 100 percent of the petroleum recoverable. The Bureau of Mines, I believe, will support this statement. If the Government should enjoin one operator from continuing the wasteful production of petroleum, the power of the Government would, undoubtedly, be recognized by the entire industry, and the matter of overproduction would be, at least to the extent of controlling waste, in the hands of the Government.

* * * * * * * *

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The following communication was received this morning:

THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, June 7, 1933.

Hon. ELMER THOMAS,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR THOMAS: I am sending you a copy of an interesting telegram which has just reached me. I thought you would like to read this just for the slant on the situation that it gives. This, of course, is only one of many, many telegrams and letters from the principal oil-producing States which have come to me during the last few weeks.

Sincerely yours,

HAROD L. ICKES,
Secretary of the Interior.

[Telegram]

MEXIA, TEX., June 7, 1933.

Secretary of the Interior ICKES:

We notice in the press Senator MCADOO has introduced a measure to investigate the oil business. Unless some relief is given immediately to the law-abiding small independent producers, few will be left to tell the tale. With oil prices averaging below 25 cents a barrel, it does not take any further investigation to tell this means ruin not only to the little fellow but fast and certain waste and dissipation of one of the Nation's greatest natural resources. We plead for help before it is too late. Our State authorities in charge of oil have proven themselves totally unequal to regulate and give us any relief. From here it seems to us many suggestions and much lobbying has been done in Washington by a certain group to delay any action looking to Government control until Congress has adjourned, thereby defeating the cause.

E. L. Smith Oil Co., Inc., E. L. Smith, president; J. K. Hughes Oil Co., J. K. Hughes, president; Prendergast Smith; National Bank, Mexia, Tex., Jack Womack, president; City National Bank, Mexia, Tex., Blake Smith, president; Farmers State Bank, Mexia, Tex., John H. Sweatt, president.

The small oil producers are supporting this amendment. The following resolution is self-explanatory:

Whereas the delegates to the stripper-well conference, composed of representatives of oil and gas associations and individuals from the States of Kansas, Texas, and Oklahoma, convened in the city of Oklahoma City, Okla., on the date of May 24, 1933, and acting as a committee of the whole, adopted the following resolution:

"Whereas because of ruthless and uneconomic overproduction of crude oil the price structure has collapsed and thousands of wells of the stripper class, numbering more than 300,000, are on the threshold of being abandoned; and

"Whereas there is pending before the Congress of the United States a bill known as "the Marland-Capper bill", the purpose of which is the conservation of crude petroleum and to preserve the same as a national resource, not only for the future welfare of the Nation but as a very vital item in national defense; and

"Whereas Federal intervention is welcomed as a means toward correcting the evils and corrupt practices which have driven the oil industry from a secure and profitable business into a state of chaos and bankruptcy; and

"Whereas failure to delay the imposition of Federal control at this critical period will render definite and certain the loss of a valuable natural resource in the form of the stripper-well production, essential to the future welfare and prosperity of many individuals, cities, and towns, and State governments who are directly or indirectly dependent on the prosperity of the petroleum industry: And now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the stripper-well conference go on record in an affirmative manner, endorsing the Marland-Capper bill in its entirety; and be it further

"Resolved, That copies of this resolution be forwarded to the Secretary of the Interior, Secretary of War, to the United States Senators and Representatives of the States wherein petroleum is produced, and to the Chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, and to the press for publication, with the admonition to all that the vigorous administration of the bill, if enacted into law, will elevate the industry from bankruptcy to peace and prosperity and contribute in a large degree to the general recovery of all business in the entire Nation."

NORTH TEXAS OIL & GAS ASSOCIATION.
OKLAHOMA STRIPPER WELL ASSOCIATION.
KANSAS STRIPPER WELL ASSOCIATION.
SOUTH OKLAHOMA OIL & GAS ASSOCIATION.

The following is a sample of hundreds of letters received:

THE PETROLEUM CO.,
Los Angeles, Calif., May 29, 1933.

Hon. ELMER THOMAS,
United States Senate, Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR: Enclosed please find an editorial that appeared in the Los Angeles Saturday morning Times in regard to the crude-oil situation here.

Of course, you know the same conditions prevail wherever crude oil and natural gas is being produced, with Texas as the greatest violator of them all, having the greatest potential production and no effective State control, with the Governor wiring Secretary Ickes that it is necessary for Federal control and that she will support it.

That is due perhaps to the fact that there are political factions in Texas that want the oil-and-gas industry for a political plaything. * * *

I spent most of the month of April in east Texas, and at Austin, and know whereof I speak, and am inclined now to think that the Marland-Cooper bill is slated to stay in committee until Congress adjourns, unless you Members of the Senate who are in favor of this bill will see that such a thing does not happen.

This bill must come out of committee; it must be passed with 1-man Federal control; otherwise there is not even a living in the crude-oil and natural-gas business for the small independent operator, whose small wells are now absolutely worthless to him or the community in which he operates.

With highest regards and the hope that in the passage of this bill you will please and help your constituents, as well as your friends in California, I am,

Very truly yours,

M. H. MOSIER, President.

The editorial referred to is as follows:

FEDERAL OIL CONTROL

Since the oil industry is not permitted by the antitrust laws to organize so as to regulate itself effectively, and since State regulation has largely broken down, regulation by the Federal Government, as proposed by President Roosevelt, seems to be the only alternative to continued chaos and waste.

Federal regulation may succeed if it is kept free from politics. Unfortunately State regulation has not been so kept, particularly in Texas, where the readvent of the Fergusons to power resulted in a virtual removal of restrictions in the east Texas field—with the result that crude prices there fell promptly to 10 cents a barrel. The Fergusons went into office pledging a more "liberal" oil policy and the pledge has been kept. It is to be hoped the oil operators who favored this policy are satisfied; it is not likely that anybody else is.

The other oil States cannot compete with Texas crude at 10 cents.

What overdrilling and overproduction have done to the east Texas field—the greatest producing field in the world just now—are plainly evident in the announcement that within 60 days, if production is not shut down or greatly curtailed, the wells will have to be put on the pump because of the failure of gas pressure. Since this costs $5,000 per well for equipment, an investment that cannot pay for itself at present crude prices, an automatic shutdown of a considerable part of the field is in prospect. In some quarters it is said the Texas Oil Commission is deliberately trying to bring this situation about to solve the overproduction situation. It is a heroic remedy to throw away ultimate assets to help a temporary situation.

In this situation alone there seems to be sufficient justification for Federal interference—either that, or for throwing all the restrictions, including the Sherman and Clayton Acts, out of the window and letting nature take its course. The oil industry can be regulated in either of two ways—"the good old rule, the simple plan, that he shall take who has the power and he shall keep who can," or by a Federal arbitrator, and both plans have serious defects.

Either is preferable to the present planlessness, however. The oil industry has all, or most, of the characteristics of what economists call a "natural monopoly", which means that, if let alone, it will tend to gravitate into a single powerful control which, if benevolent, would work out to the public interest, and if grasping would require the intervention of Government to protect the public.

But it has not been let alone. It has been treated like two cats with tails tied together and hung over a clothesline.

At a meeting in Washington a few weeks ago, the majority of industry representatives voted for Federal control. A minority held out for no control whatever and a removal of all restrictions, voluntary or State-imposed, except the antitrust laws, which is precisely the situation that brought about the present mess and made control measures necessary.

These "independents", it seems probable, have never examined their own program with a really critical eye, or they would discover that it is mainly composed of unintelligent self-interest. Some of the "independents" want the major companies to continue to curtail overproduction, while they remain free to produce and sell at the increased prices curtailment makes possible. That this would soon result in the abandonment of curtailment and a flood of oil that would drown them is apparently not realized by most of the group.

This is not to say that the independents have no genuine complaint. Some of them unquestionably have been shabbily treated under various forms of control, and the major companies, or some of them, are probably not guiltless of promoting some of this unfairness. But this is not an argument against the principle of control—it is merely an argument against some control methods.

Under Federal supervision there is at least a probability that unfairness may be eliminated. The Federal supervisor will be very much in the public eye; he will be less likely to be influenced by local considerations; and if the act is properly drawn, it will provide a right of court appeal from injurious and oppressive orders—indeed, the Constitution being what it is, such a right probably will exist no matter what the statute says. Property cannot be taken for public use without due process of law.

Further justification for Federal control lies in the fact that oil is an irreplaceable natural resource, in which conservation is important. It cannot be said what future generations will use for fuel or lubricant, though probably the ingenuity of chemists will provide a substitute for petroleum when it is needed, but no good substitute is now known; so it is sensible to make wise use and prevent waste of what we have.

Mr. CAPPER. Mr. President, I desire to speak briefly in support of the amendment offered by the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS], which proposes to give the President powers during the emergency to regulate the production of petroleum, to allocate production among the oil-producing States, and if necessary to prorate among the oil pools.

Nearly 3 months ago, as I remember, the Secretary of the Interior, with the approval, as I understood, of President Roosevelt, called a conference of representatives of the Governors of the oil-producing States, of the major group of oil companies, and of the independent producers. This conference was presided over by Gov. Alfred M. Landon, of Kansas, himself an independent oil producer, who, I believe, has a very complete and intelligent understanding of the problems of the oil industry.

That conference, while admitting that control of the oil industry is essential for the welfare of both the industry and the country as a whole, especially as a conservation measure, declined to take the responsibility of recommending Federal control of production. It did make other recommendations, the more important of which are included in the pending measure as it came from the Senate Finance Committee. But the Governors' conference in effect recommended that the control of production be left to the States and to the industry for a reasonable period, say 2 or 3 months, before asking for Federal control.

Nearly 3 months have elapsed since that conference met. Nothing has been done to correct the situation, particularly as it is affected by uncontrolled production from the flush fields. It s apparent to me, and to most of those who have made a study of the situation, that if there is to be any effective control of petroleum production in time to save the economic lives of the smaller producers—I refer especially to the stripper-well production—and in time to conserve the oil reserves and prevent the ruin of the entire industry except possibly some of the larger companies which can afford to stand the gaff for another year or two and depend upon acquiring control of oil reserves and storage oil at cheap prices at the present time—if there is to be any effective control of oil production, it will have to be control exercised by the Federal Government, or some agency of the Federal Government.

If it were possible even to preserve the industry in status quo while a plan for control could be worked out, I might not favor simply giving the President power to control the situation. The more constitutional and logical way probably would be through a compact of the oil-producing States. But, Mr. President, there is no time for consideration of such a program.

The oil industry practically has collapsed. Oil is selling at ruinous prices. The States cannot control the situation, either singly or by concerted action. It is very evident that the industry cannot take care of the situation.

So it seems to me, Mr. President, that the only course of action remaining is to give the President power to regulate the production of oil. In effect, that power is no broader than the power we are giving him over other industries.

This problem is slightly different in a few respects. The proposed grant of authority over the production, refining, transportation, and sale of petroleum and its products undoubtedly takes those powers from the States which produce oil. But it is taking those powers in the national interest, and in the interest of a natural resource whose conservation is of vital importance to the welfare of the Nation as a whole.

It is necessary only to point to the production figures to show the need of control, somewhere, of the agencies of oil production. At the March conference there was a general agreement—except among a group who insist upon the right to produce without reference to either consumptive demand or any principle of conservation—that the actual consumptive demands of the United States do not exceed what could be served by the production of 2,000,000 barrels of crude per day.

Mr. Harold Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, who appeared before the Senate Finance Committee on this matter, reports that the total production, exclusive of imports, is close to 3,500,000 barrels a day. Neither the country nor the industry can afford to tolerate that situation.

Under these circumstances, Mr. President, it seems to me that there is only one sensible thing to do. That is to give to the President the necessary powers to try to save this great industry, second only to agriculture, from destroying itself and imperiling the national defense at the same time.

It certainly is not in the public interest to allow the oil reserves to be depleted in the criminally prodigal manner in which they are being depleted.

It certainly is not in the public interest to ruin the small producers and refiners as these are being ruined today by overproduction of the flush pools.

There are certain big oil interests that stand to consolidate what already is too close to a monopoly of the oil reserves, through purchasing storage oil and oil leases at bargain-sale prices under present conditions, and that will not be in the public interest.

Mr. President, I sincerely hope that the amendment will be adopted, and that the suggested emergency powers be given the President to handle this situation.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I hope this amendment will not be adopted. We do not need this amendment. Let us go along with the bill and try to pass it. If we mess it up with this kind of an amendment, it is going to dump the cards. I hope the amendment will be voted down.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Oklahoma to the amendment reported by the committee. [Putting the question]——

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment is rejected.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I was trying to get the floor to ask for a record vote.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Oklahoma demands the yeas and nays. Is the demand seconded?

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will report the next amendment.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Title II—Public works and construction projects: Federal emergency administration of public works", on page 16, line 1, before the word "of", to strike out "administrator" and insert "board."

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I understood that a number of Senators are interested in offering a motion to strike out title I. I desire to ask the Senator from New York whether under any unanimous-consent agreement such a motion would be in order later on.

Mr. WAGNER. I understand not; but I ask, as a parliamentary inquiry, whether title I has been disposed of, including all amendments to it which have been offered?

The VICE PRESIDENT. There is nothing pending to title I.

Mr. WAGNER. If we go to title II, I want to inquire whether or not any Senator may thereafter offer an amendment to strike out title I?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks, under the custom of the Senate, Senators can do anything they want to with reference to offering amendments to any portion of the bill, but in other parliamentary bodies when title I is passed it is passed for good, and that would be the Chair's holding at the present time that the Senate is through with title I.

Mr. LONG. Is it the ruling of the Chair that we are through title I?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Yes.

Mr. LONG. So far as I am concerned, I have no motion to offer.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senate is on title II now.

Mr. McNARY obtained the floor.

Mr. LONG. I do not wish to make a motion myself, but I see the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] is not here.

Mr. HARRISON. May I state to the Senator——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Just a moment. Let the Senate be in order and proceed in order. The Senator from Oregon has the floor. Does he yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. McNARY. I will not yield to anyone for a moment.

Mr. President, I uniformly go along with the rulings of the Chair, but I am not in a position to coincide with the view that we have passed title I finally. I think a motion may still lie to expunge title I from the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The custom of the Senate is not to foreclose any amendment to any portion of the bill during its consideration, so that the Senator from Oregon is correct, and at any time any Senator desires to go back to any portion of the bill he has a right to do so.

Mr. McNARY. I have not any personal desire in the matter, but I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Oregon suggests the absence of a quorum. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Coolidge	Kendrick	Robinson, Ark.
Ashurst	Copeland	Keyes	Robinson, Ind.
Austin	Costigan	King	Russell
Bachman	Cutting	La Follette	Schall
Bailey	Dickinson	Lewis	Sheppard
Bankhead	Dieterich	Lonergan	Smith
Barbour	Duffy	Long	Steiwer
Barkley	Erickson	McAdoo	Stephens
Black	Fess	McGill	Thomas, Okla.
Bone	Frazier	McKellar	Thomas, Utah
Bratton	George	McNary	Thompson
Brown	Goldsborough	Metcalf	Townsend
Bulkley	Gore	Murphy	Trammell
Bulow	Harrison	Neely	Tydings
Byrd	Hastings	Norris	Vandenberg
Byrnes	Hatfield	Nye	Van Nuys
Capper	Hayden	Overton	Wagner
Carey	Hebert	Patterson	Walsh
Clark	Johnson	Pope	Wheeler
Connally	Kean	Reynolds	White

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BYRD in the chair). Eighty Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I move to strike out title I.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, the bill in its present form again illustrates the new practice in legislation, against which I have heretofore protested, of loading down a meritorious measure with indefensible and totally unconnected matter. There is no logical or reasonable connection on the face of the earth between the meritorious and desirable provisions of title II, for improving the unemployment situation by a public-works program, and the provisions of title I, for the emasculation of the antitrust laws, the imposition of embargoes, the establishment of an industrial dictatorship, and the requirement that citizens of the United States may be required to obtain a license from some bureaucrat in order to conduct a legitimate business in a free country. In company with other Senators, I would willingly and gladly support the beneficent provisions of title II, if given the opportunity, but I cannot do so while it is loaded down with the vicious and obnoxious provisions of title I. It is for the purpose of divorcing these two independent propositions and allowing an unhampered opportunity for voting for the public works bill that my amendment to strike out all of title I is directed.

Mr. President, from the time of my very earliest recollection I have considered myself a militant member of the Democratic Party. I am a Democrat by inheritance, by association, by training, and by conviction. As a boy of tender years I was present on the memorable occasion when William L. Wilson, of West Virginia, closed his stirring plea for a Democratic tariff bill in the Fifty-third Congress 40 years ago, and while I was too young at that time to retain a definite mental picture of Mr. Wilson, I still retain a vague remembrance of seeing his frail figure lifted on the brawny shoulders of my father, John De Witt Warner, William J. Bryan, and several others of his husky followers and carried in triumph around the hall.

Further along, Mr. President, I can clearly remember debates in this Chamber and in the Chamber at the other end of the Capitol which are written in letters of fire in my memory. I was a witness to the question between Speaker Reed, of Maine, and Minority Leader Bailey, of Texas, which led to a challenge to a duel on the part of the one and a refusal on the part of the other. In the House I heard repeated debates between the two renowned triumvirates of congressional debaters—Joseph G. Cannon, William Peters Hepburn, and Charles G. Grosvenor on the one hand and John Sharp Williams, David A. De Armond, and my own father on the other. I have heard the gospel of democracy expounded in the days of our ascendancy by Champ Clark and Oscar Underwood as responsible leaders of a great House majority.

In this Chamber, Mr. President, I sat in the gallery as a lad entralled by the eloquence of John W. Daniel, "the lame lion of Lynchburg", and of George Graham Vest, "the little giant from Missouri." I heard the sage wisdom of those old nestors of the Confederate service—Cockrell, of Missouri, Morgan and Pettus, of Alabama, Blackburn, of Kentucky. I heard the patriotic and sagacious advice of William J. Stone, John W. Kern, and Ben Shiveley. I thrilled to the fiery eloquence of James A. Reed.

In addition to this, Mr. President, I have heard the distinguished Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] the majority leader in this body, and the eloquent Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], Chairman of the Finance Committee, speak in tones of thunder demanding strict enforcement of the antitrust laws of the United States.

In addition to these eloquent pronouncements ex cathedra, Mr. President, I had thought that I had studied the messages and pronouncements of our great party leaders—the acknowledged patron saints of the party—to some advantage. Familiarity with the principles promulgated by Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson, and other great leaders had impressed upon my mind the idea that it was by no means difficult for one to identify himself as a Democrat through communing with the works of these masters, and that by the same token it would always be easy for a Democrat to give the reason for the faith within him by reference to these august sources.

Moreover, Mr. President, I witnessed the Democratic National Convention at Kansas City in 1900, and have attended every subsequent national convention. I listened to memorable oratorical struggles in this Capitol, on convention floors, and on the hustings as to what constituted the fundamental principles upon which we all must stand. When I came to this body, Mr. President, I have no hesitation in saying that I thought I myself knew something of Democratic doctrine. I had been trained in a good school. By strict adherence to the old faith and by vigorous denunciation of certain practices of the party then in power, it was possible for me to come to the Senate. But if title I of this measure is the kind of legislation to which a believer in fundamental Democratic principles may properly subscribe, then I am incapable of understanding the English language or realizing the effect of legislative pronouncements.

Mr. President, for 40 years the Democratic Party has stood, without variation or shadow of turning, for the strengthening of the laws against trusts and monopolies and for their rigid enforcement.

Forty-one years ago that masterful man, Grover Cleveland, was elected President in a landslide as great for its day and time as that of 1932 upon a platform which declared in part:

> We recognize in the trusts and combinations, which are designed to enable capital to secure more than its just share of the joint product of capital and labor, a natural consequence of the prohibitive taxes which prevent the free competition which is the life of honest trade; but we believe their worst evils can be abated by law, and we demand the rigid enforcement of the laws made to prevent and control them, together with such further legislation in restraint of their abuses as experience may show to be necessary.

Cleveland's administration came to grief, not upon the antitrust issue but upon a party strife over the money question. Four years later, in 1896, William J. Bryan led the party upon a platform which contained the following forcible declaration on the subject:

> The absorption of wealth by the few, the consolidation of our leading railroad systems, and the formation of trusts and pools require a stricter control by the Federal Government of those arteries of commerce. We demand the enlargement of the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission and such restriction and guaranties in the control of railroads as will protect the people from robbery and oppression.

By 1900 the country was beginning to feel the vicious effects of the failure of the McKinley administration to enforce the antitrust laws, and in Bryan's second campaign the Democratic Party declared:

> We pledge the Democratic Party to an unceasing warfare in Nation, State, and city against private monopoly in every form. Existing laws against trusts must be enforced and more stringent ones must be enacted, providing for publicity as to the affairs of corporations engaged in interstate commerce, requiring all corporations to show, before doing business outside the State of their origin, that they have not water in their stock and that they have not attempted, and are not attempting, to monopolize any branch of business or the production of any article of merchandise; and the whole constitutional power of Congress over interstate commerce, the mails, and all modes of interstate communication shall be exercised by the enactment of comprehensive laws upon the subject of trusts.

In 1904 the party somewhat changed its position on the money question by permitting Alton B. Parker to remain its nominee after the sending of his famous gold telegram, but its position upon the question of monopoly remained unaltered. So we find in the platform of 1904 the following:

> We recognize that the gigantic trusts and combinations designed to enable capital to secure more than its just share of the joint products of capital and labor and which have been fostered and promoted under Republican rule, are a menace to beneficial competition and an obstacle to permanent business prosperity. A private monopoly is indefensible and intolerable.
>
> Individual equality of opportunity and free competition are essential to a healthy and permanent commercial prosperity and any trust, combination, or monopoly tending to destroy these by controlling production, restricting competition, or fixing prices should be prohibited and punished by law.

In 1908, in the third Bryan campaign, the party declared:

> A private monopoly is indefensible and intolerable. We, therefore, favor the vigorous enforcement of the criminal law against guilty trust magnates and officials, and demand the enactment of such additional legislation as may be necessary to make it impossible for a private monopoly to exist in the United States.

By 1912 the Supreme Court had handed down its famous decision designed to hamstring the Sherman Act by its "rule of reason", and in the triumphant campaign of 1912 Woodrow Wilson ran upon a platform pledging the party to close the gap thus created. I quote from the Baltimore platform:

A private monopoly is indefensible and intolerable. We, therefore, favor the vigorous enforcement of the criminal as well as the civil law against trusts and trust officials, and demand the enactment of such additional legislation as may be necessary to make it impossible for a private monopoly to exist in the United States.

We condemn the action of the Republican administration in compromising with the Standard Oil Co. and the Tobacco Trust and its failure to invoke the criminal provisions of the antitrust law against the officers of those corporations after the court had declared that from the undisputed facts in the record they had violated the criminal provisions of the law.

We regret that the Sherman antitrust law has received a judicial construction depriving it of much of its efficacy, and we favor the enactment of legislation which will restore to the statute the strength of which it has been deprived by such interpretation.

Little did anyone think, in that convention in 1912 which nominated Woodrow Wilson for the Presidency and adopted that platform, that the time would come when a Democratic President would recommend and a Democratic Congress would enact a provision for compelling the emasculation of every law which has ever been placed on the statute books for the control of the trusts and monopolies.

In 1916, in the second Wilson campaign, the party boasted of its accomplishment in the enactment of the Clayton Act and the creation of the Federal Trade Commission, as follows:

We have created a Federal Trade Commission to accommodate the perplexing questions arising under the antitrust laws so that monopoly may be strangled at its birth and legitimate industry encouraged. Fair competition in business is now assured.

In 1920, when Governor Cox was the nominee of the party, this principle was again enunciated, as follows:

The Democratic Party heartily endorses the creation and work of the Federal Trade Commission in establishing a fair field for competitive business, free from restraints of trade and monopoly, and recommends amplification of the statutes governing its activities, so as to grant it authority to prevent the unfair use of patents in restraint of trade.

John W. Davis in 1924 was nominated upon a platform which declared:

We declare that a private monopoly is indefensible and intolerable, and pledge the Democratic Party to a vigorous enforcement of existing laws against monopoly and illegal combinations and to the enactment of such further measures as may be necessary.

I call the attention of the Senate to the fact that in every one of these platform declarations there was never a murmur or suggestion of the repeal or emasculation of the laws against trusts and monopolies; but there was a demand in every one, on every occasion, for the strengthening of those laws and the enactment of such further laws as might be necessary.

In his gallant fight of 1928, Alfred E. Smith repeatedly stressed the outright declaration of the party upon this question:

During the last 7 years, under Republican rule, the antitrust laws have been thwarted, ignored, and violated, so that the country is rapidly becoming controlled by trusts and sinister monopolies formed for the purpose of wringing from the necessaries of life an unrighteous profit. These combinations are often formed and conducted in violation of law—encouraged, aided, and abetted in their activities by the Republican administration—and are driving all small tradespeople and small industrialists out of business. Competition is one of the most sacred, cherished, and economic rights of the American people.

"Competition", said the Democratic platform of 1928, "is a sacred right." I am sorry my friend from New York, Mr. WAGNER, is not here in order to be reminded of the platform adopted by a convention to which he was a delegate, recommended to the convention by a committee on resolutions of which he and I were both members.

We demand—

That was the position of the Democratic Party 5 short years ago—

We demand the strict enforcement of the antitrust laws and the enactment of other laws, if necessary, to control this great menace to trade and commerce, and this to preserve the right of the small merchant and manufacturer to earn a legitimate profit from his business.

Not a word there, Mr. President, of the syndicalism which is to be set up under the terms of this act.

And now, Mr. President, we come to the platform of 1932, upon which President Roosevelt and the Democratic Party swept this Nation from ocean to ocean. That great document, with the force and succinctness which distinguished it, laid the blame for this depression squarely at the door of the Republican administrations since 1920 for their failure to adequately enforce the antitrust laws. I quote from the platform upon which President Roosevelt, Vice President Garner, all of the House of Representatives, and a large number of Senators were elected:

In this time of unprecedented economic and social distress, the Democratic Party declares its conviction that the chief causes of this condition were the disastrous policies pursued by our Government since the World War of economic isolation, fostering the merger of competitive businesses into monopolies and encouraging the indefensible expansion and contraction of credit for private profit at the expense of the public.

Now, this was the platform upon which the Democratic Party went to the country in the last election, upon which we received from the people the mandate under which we are now operating:

We advocate strengthening and impartial enforcement of the antitrust laws to prevent monopoly and unfair trade practices, and revision thereof for the better protection of labor and the small producer and distributor.

Mr. President, I have gone back 40 years to read the platform declarations of the Democratic Party. If I wanted to be tedious with the Senate to any greater extent than I have been, I could have quoted from the declarations of the Republican Party to almost the same extent. I could have quoted from the declarations of the Progressive Party in 1912. I could have quoted from the party headed by the distinguished father of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] and by the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] in 1924 to the same effect. No party has ever dared, since the Sherman antitrust law was placed upon the statute books, to go to the people except upon a declaration in favor of the preservation and strengthening of the antitrust laws of this country.

Mr. President, I believed in my heart when I ran upon that platform before the people of Missouri last fall that the declaration of that platform stated but the simple truth. I had no doubt that it set forth baldly and without equivocation the policy which would govern the party if it were intrusted with power. I have never been of the number of those who believe that a platform is simply an entrance for getting into office. On the contrary, I have been taught from my youth up that a platform is a declaration of principle upon which honest men should stand during the period of their candidacy and upon which they are in honor bound to remain standing after their election. Title I of this bill, Mr. President, is a flat, open, and sweeping repudiation of the platform declarations of 40 years. It is a repudiation of the last national platform, of the State platform upon which I ran in Missouri, and of the personal platform upon which I was nominated.

Mr. President, like many another, in the years since my graduation from college, I have been so unfortunate as to lose almost all of the familiarity with the Latin language which I acquired as a student. But there still comes back to me occasionally across the years a fugitive memory of some Latin quotation which I heard my father use when I was a little boy. One quotation which he was fond of using was from Virgil: "Facilis descensus Averno"—easy is the descent into hell. Now, mark you, Senators, in title I of this bill, how the initial premise of the destruction of the antitrust laws inevitably leads to other excesses abhorrent to our institutions and obnoxious to the tenets of the Democratic Party.

Assuming the premise of the destruction of the antitrust laws for the purpose of price fixing designed to artificially jack up prices and you have no logical answer to the demand for embargoes to absolutely exclude the goods of foreign nations from entering at this artificial level. And then, Mr. President, the fact that we have emasculated our antitrust laws and that we have constructed another Chinese wall around our boundaries in the form of embargoes is used to enforce the demand that any citizen engaged in legitimate business may be prohibited from continuing it unless he can obtain a Federal license from an administrator appointed by the President. Having once started on the downward path by the reversal of our antitrust policy there is no logical stopping point short of a Federal dictatorship of every character and description of business, with an appointive officer possessing despotic power over every means of earning a livelihood, with power so sweeping as to wipe out every vestige of distinction between interstate and intrastate business. "Facilis descensus Averno."

In the language of a distinguished lawyer of my own State, the proposal for the suspension of the antitrust laws "will usher in and substitute for the reign of law the rule of men only. Not the equal power of law but the arbitrary will of the man with cash will govern."

Mr. President, the purposes of the antitrust legislation were perhaps never better stated than in the luminous language of that great jurist and statesman, the late Mr. Justice Harlan, when he said:

> All who recall the condition of the country in 1890 will remember that there was everywhere, among the people generally, a deep feeling of unrest. The Nation had been rid of human slavery—fortunately, as all now feel—but the conviction was universal that the country was in real danger from another kind of slavery sought to be fastened on the American people, namely, the slavery that would result from aggregations of capital in the hands of a few individuals and corporations controlling, for their own profit and advantage exclusively, the entire business of the country, including the production and sale of the necessaries of life. Such a danger was thought to be then imminent, and all felt that it must be met firmly and by such statutory regulations as would adequately protect the people against oppression and wrong.

That situation, Mr. President, was the occasion for the passage of the Sherman antitrust law, later strengthened by the Clayton antitrust law, which is to be repealed tonight if a vote is taken on this bill.

To the repudiation of that doctrine, to the reversal of the whole policy of our Government for nearly 50 years, I find myself totally unable to agree. To my mind, title I is as revolutionary as anything which has happened in Russia.

Let me add just one word in conclusion, and that is to invite the attention of the Senate of the spectacle which will be presented by the United States after solemnly proclaiming to the world that the hope of civilization lies in the success of the pending economic conference and the negotiation of trade agreements for the reopening of the normal channels of world trade, calmly slapping every other nation in the face by the imposition of embargoes.

Mr. President, it is enough to make a Democrat sick at heart when, instead of the bill promised by our national platform for a reduction of the prohibitive robber tariffs, we find the place of that bill being filled tonight, on the eve of adjournment, by a measure for the imposition of absolute embargoes!

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, I shall support the motion of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK]. While the temptation is very great to make a long speech, or to enter into an exhaustive discussion of this revolutionary proposal, I assure my colleagues that I will be satisfied simply to state in brief terms why I will vote for the motion to strike out title I, and if it is not stricken out, why I will have to vote against the bill itself.

It is disheartening, as well as very disappointing, that, under the name of emergency, we are led to take such steps as we are to take when we enact this proposal. The Senator from Missouri has quoted from the platform of his party, representing the thought in this country for a period of 40 years, directly pronouncing in unambiguous terms the policy of that party, which is now to be entirely repudiated. When we realize that that view represents the sentiment of a great proportion of American citizenship, not only in the Senator's party, but in other parties, and then when we see this double somersault in a month's time, in repudiation of everything that has been announced upon this subject for 40 years, I say it is disheartening; disappointing is too mild a term. It causes mental distress.

Mr. President, this proposal is not unlike the proposal for the relief of agriculture recently presented to the Congress. That was another revolutionary move. It matters not what the American people have stood for heretofore, it does not matter what is the genius of American institutions of which we are so proud; here, in a day's time, we can repudiate all that we have defended for 150 years and do it without blinking.

The only defense is that there is an emergency. Under the plea of "emergency" we would be justified, according to that argument, in suspending the Constitution of the United States. Men would claim that that would be our right and our duty if they could put it on the basis that there was an emergency.

I could not vote for the agricultural proposal for the same reason which prevents me from voting for title I in this bill. I have sympathized with the efforts of the administration to meet this great problem. I was in sympathy with the last administration in its constructive program, representing step after step to pull us through this economic world break-down. Many of the proposals—many of them drastic—I have supported with sympathy because they seemed to be the only way out. I voted for the economy program, and would do so again, in the belief that that was the only possible way for us to secure any substantial economy. I voted for the emergency bank bill, not believing that it would do all its proponents thought it would do, but that it would help. I do not include what is known as the "Glass bill", because that was a measure which we supported at the last session and supported at this session, not primarily as an emergency measure, but I think it is a piece of wise, constructive legislation, and I shall regret exceedingly if it fails to become a law.

I voted for the reforestation bill with some hesitation, knowing that Government operation is wasteful, extravagant, and inefficient, but the unemployment problem was great, and that seemed to afford an opportunity to relieve it in a degree, and for that reason I supported that measure.

I supported the railroad bill, together with my friend the chairman of our committee and the ranking member of the committee, not because it was, as permanent legislation, wise, but because it seemed to be essential, and I hope that when it is reported tomorrow from the committee on conference it will be accepted without much delay.

Mr. President, I cannot, however, vote for such legislation as that now proposed. I gladly supported a bill looking to the relief of home owners, which was presented here by my colleague the junior Senator from Ohio [Mr. BULKLEY]. I do not believe that the situation is such that we are under any command to abandon everything that is American and go to the extent, on the one side, of sovietizing, as in Russia, and, on the other hand, to fascism, as in Italy. I see no need for any such extravagant legislation as that.

Mr. President, I have simply been amazed at the urgent messages which have come to me, not only from my own State but from other parts of the Nation, urging me to support this legislation. They come from the highest-minded business men of my State and of other States. They come from the most progressive and aggressive labor organizations of my State. Both sources of the messages are for the bill for opposite reasons. Business has but one objective in supporting the legislation—to be free of the antitrust legislation. The messages from business men remind me that for the last 20 years there has been urgency of relief, in a degree, from the inhibitions of the antitrust legislation. Amendments to the antitrust laws have been offered from many sources, but never has there been any concrete proposal in the form of an amendment which could meet with the approval of either the House or the Senate. It has been impossible to get through an amendment of antitrust legislation which would afford any relief.

Now comes what appears to be an open way to reach what the country has been unable, in its legislative branch, to accomplish; and business men are urging me, for no other reason under the sun than that the bill contains provisions which would permit agreements resulting in a release from the inefficiency of the antitrust legislation, to support this measure as wise, constructive legislation. They do not seem to realize that the forces which have prevented amendments will prevent agreements. Yet in the face of that they are insisting that I should join in affording the opportunity by my vote of doing what they ought to know cannot be done.

On the other hand, labor is urging me to support this measure because they hope that union forces will be more effective; that they can secure a shorter work week and a shorter workday. I am very frank to admit that I think that that is a possibility through the legislation, but that is only one item. I have insisted, and I now insist, that we will be compelled, because of the methods of mass production, ultimately to adopt a shorter workweek. I think that is absolutely essential. But I cannot see how it can be done by a rigid law. I would not vote for a shorter workweek that would be inelastic, without any exceptions covering emergencies; but I would vote for an opportunity for industry, representing management and labor, to get together and work out the shorter workweek, and that is the way it ought to be done. That, I think, is capable of accomplishment under the agreements which may be entered into under this legislation.

Labor, however, will want to adopt the closed-shop principle, which they believe is in their interest. Labor has insisted right along for the recognition of the democratization of industry, and that is coming to be a policy which is more favorably discussed from day to day. The time will probably come when any industry doing interstate business will be required to have on the directorate of that industry a representative of union labor. That is an objective toward which labor is leaning in order that it might have a voice in the management of industry.

Labor, on the one side, is looking through this legislation to get better results from the standpoint of unionization, not only to secure the shorter workweek but also a more perfect unionization that will reach to the closed shop, including the next step, the democratization of industry. That is an objective of labor, and labor is not in favor of the abolition of the antitrust legislation. While industry is for relief from antitrust legislation, it is not for the closed shop or the democratization of industry.

Here are the two great forces in this battle of the ages going now into voluntary agreement, the one thinking it is going to get this side and the other thinking it is going to get the other side, and both in a degree will be unsuccessful, if, perchance, agreements cannot be reached, and licenses must be resorted to; and that is precisely what will take place.

Mr. President, never in the history of any civilized country, outside of Russia and Italy, has there been such a proposal as this one. First it deals with codes, indeterminate, undefined, with nothing definite. Nobody knows what will be in the codes. The President himself cannot know what will be in them.

Second, regulations and rules; third, agreement; fourth, licenses; all burdening American industry, whose chief function is to employ American labor.

The code is what? Whatever the President may see fit. What will he see fit to make it? He does not know, and no one else knows. When it is once made, as an experiment, then he may modify it, not simply alter it, but he may entirely repudiate it. Listen to this language:

> The President may, as a condition of his approval of any such code, impose such conditions (including requirements for the making of reports and the keeping of accounts) for the protection of consumers, competitors, employees, and others, and in furtherance of the public interest, and may provide such exceptions to and exemptions from the provisions of such code, as the President in his discretion deems necessary to effectuate the policy herein declared.

What is the code to be? What the President may see fit to make it. When he makes it, what can he do? He can exempt from the operation of the code anyone that he desires or sees fit to exempt. In other words, blanket authority so broad in character is conferred that nobody, including the President, knows what it will be, and to make it more uncertain there is written in the provision authority to make exceptions to it and exemptions from it. That is to be the law.

The next step under the measure is:

> After the President shall have approved any such code, the provisions of such code shall be the standards of fair competition.

The code which is indeterminate, indefinite, which may be or may not be what it purports to be and from the provisions of which, when promulgated, exemptions may be made, is to be established as the standard, and anybody violating the standard is subject to penalty. Never in a civilized country would one expect to find such a provision as that written into the law; and yet it is being written into law under an administration whose party has always, from the beginning, stood for no encumbrances on the individual, especially upon his liberty to act and to do the things which his ability and talents would justify.

When this indeterminate standard is made, then the courts of the country are authorized to enforce these regulations; and the courts, under the appointment of the President, would probably feel impelled to effect prosecutions, if prosecutions should be necessary.

That is not all; listen to this, my colleagues:

> (d) Upon his own motion, or if complaint is made to the President * * * the President, after such public notice and hearing as he shall specify, may prescribe and approve a code of fair competition for such trade or industry or subdivision thereof, which shall have the same effect as a code of fair competition approved by the President under subsection (a) of this section.

Mr. President, the difficulty of legislation of this kind is its uncertainty, its indefiniteness; and yet we are to give this uncertain thing, not yet hatched out, the force of law, making it a standard, for the violation of which the penalty of law is to be imposed.

After the code shall be adopted, then come these agreements. What are included in the agreements? Will they represent what can be agreed upon by the conflicting parties to the agreement? The agreement is in reference to prices and production.

The Socialists have always claimed that there is no possible way to maintain the stability of prices without making a contact somewhere between what is produced and what is consumed; that unless production can be kept within the limits of consumption, there is not any such thing as stability of prices. With unregulated production in industry, overproduction cannot be prevented; and when overproduction has reached the point where men can lose their employment because business cannot go on, then is reached the point of underconsumption rather than of overproduction. Socialists advocate, as a fundamental principle, the regulation of production. In similar manner this socialistic agreement is provided for, under which industry in any particular line is permitted to agree as to how much it will produce, under what conditions it will produce, and at what price it will sell its product. Then in some way production may be regulated to the point where it can be kept within the limits of consumption. That is the basis of the argument for the agreements provided for. The agreements, however, will be broad enough, after determining how much production there shall be, to provide what the price shall be, and there we have the price-fixing element.

Not only that, but we have the wage element. The first thing we know we will be called upon not only to legislate to maintain a minimum wage, but we will be called upon to direct and control contracts between industry and labor, not only as to the hours of work, but as to the terms of employment and as to the price paid for labor. What has become of the proud boast of America that an individual can organize his industry, employ his own labor, and sell his product in the market? In order that he may do that under this proposed legislation, he will have to have the aprpoval of the President of the United States, and will have to comply with whatever terms the President may see fit to prescribe, otherwise he may not continue in business.

If, Mr. President, the agreements provided for shall be entered into, no matter what their terms may be, no matter what the President may require before giving his approval, then if they shall be violated the business must either stop or else the proprietor of the business must secure a license from the Government of the United States.

Mr. President and Senators, I think no one ever dreamed that we in the United States should reach the point where no man could enter into a business of an interstate character without first coming to Washington and securing a permit, and then, after securing such a license, would not be able to continue in business unless agreeing to produce only so much, so that his output should be limited. If anybody had ever suggested such a thing happening in America, it would have been thought that he was of unsound mind, that there was something the matter with his brain. Yet here we are facing that very thing today.

When the suggestion was made that no one should be allowed to practice medicine without first obtaining a license, and that no one should be allowed to be admitted to the bar without obtaining a license, there was an outcry against it. Now, however, we are listening to arguments that there ought to be a tax on the lawyer as such and a tax on the physician as such, and the time is coming when if an individual desires to enter into some business he will have to pay a tax for the privilege of going into that business, and when he does go into the business he will have to conduct it under the direction of some bureau in Washington or else lose the privilege of continuing in business. That is the point to which America has come today on the ground of an existing emergency, and, as my friend from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] suggests to me, under the auspices of the party of Thomas Jefferson.

Mr. President, I am delighted that the very distinguished junior Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] is at the present moment presiding over the Senate. I have always maintained that Thomas Jefferson was the greatest exponent of individual liberty and of free government the world has ever known. I have said publicly on the platform and in writings that he was the finest exponent of local self-government, of the rights of the States and of the liberty of the citizens, who ever lived at any time in this or any other country. Thomas Jefferson announced principles antagonistic to those of Alexander Hamilton, but I have never in my life depreciated the value of the principles advocated by Thomas Jefferson.

I took it as a great honor to be invited years ago to become one of the board of governors in charge of the restoration of Jefferson's famous home at Monticello, and I had hoped to be able to introduce and have passed by this body a joint resolution providing that the Federal Government should participate in that restoration to the extent at least of rebuilding the shops on one side of the quadrangle which had been allowed to fall into decay, the others all having been restored, but under the force and stress of economy it has not been thought wise to do that. Recently I had the great privilege of looking over the plans of the famous architect of Monticello. As the Senate knows, that architect was Thomas Jefferson himself, and those plans are preserved and are extant today.

I cannot allow anyone to depreciate the value to America of the man who proclaimed liberty as one of the cornerstones of American Government. Alexander Hamilton represented the other foundation stone—Jefferson, liberty on behalf of the individual; Hamilton, authority on behalf of order. Jefferson's ideas, too far unrestrained, might lead to anything; Hamilton's, too far restrained, would lead to despotism. It took both of them to lay the foundation that underlies the ark of American Government as we now know it—the one foundation, liberty, and the other, authority. If we weaken one of them, our structure is gone. While Hamilton represented power, Jefferson represented liberty unrestrained by power. Jefferson feared Hamilton. Hamilton feared Jefferson. Either by himself would have been dangerous, but both of them, held together by Washington, gave to us the structure we now have built upon authority, on the one hand, in behalf of order, and liberty; on the other hand, in behalf of the individual citizen.

Jefferson was much more of a publicist than Hamilton. Hamilton wrote, it is true, but not so copiously as Jefferson. Hamilton was not the letter writer that Jefferson was, although I think that in the few letters he wrote he represented as fine a type of talent as there was in America.

I agree that his was probably the most constructive mind North America had produced. Jefferson wrote on all subjects. He not only penned the Declaration of Independence, but he wrote his famous autobiography, the wonderful work Anas, which is virtually a history of Virginia, and then his 20 volumes that have been published, representing a discussion of a wider range of governmental subjects than can be credited to any other man of his day.

Mr. President, Senators will recall that when the Constitution was being considered Jefferson was in France and did not happen to be a member of the convention, but his splendid representative, James Madison, was in the convention. Jefferson, from France and when he came home, was very copious in his expression on behalf of the new form of government.

Men overlook the fact that Hamilton did not emphasize liberty as did Jefferson. Jefferson did not emphasize power as did Hamilton. Hamilton would have kept out of the Constitution some of the elements of liberty; but, in accordance with the Jefferson idea, represented by Madison and others, the elements of liberty were written in the first 10 amendments to the Constitution, known as the "bill of rights".

The fundamental philosophy of Hamilton might be regarded as the constructive element in the Constitution, but the fundamental philosophy of Jefferson is contained in the first 10 amendments to the Constitution. That is the finest bill of rights, outside of the old Virginia bill of rights, of which we have any knowledge. It might be of value—and I am not doing more than simply refreshing the memory of Senators who are sitting by me—to remember that the original Bill of Rights, the finest document of its kind that ever came from the pen of any man, was the Virginia bill of rights that was written by the famous George Mason, an intimate friend of Jefferson. Those two men thought alike on that subject. Therefore the Bill of Rights, which comprises the first 10 amendments to our Constitution, represents the philosophy in government of Thomas Jefferson; and he emphasized this all the way through from the days the Constitution went into effect until 1826, when he left this world.

Mr. President, I know how perfectly futile it is for anybody to quote Thomas Jefferson on an occasion such as this today. The very distinguished and able Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE] took the time to quote from Jefferson today, and also took the time to refer to four decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States.

I wondered whether the distinguished Senator realized the futility of quoting such authority—Jefferson, the founder of American Democracy, the Supreme Court, the interpreter of the laws of the Nation—on an occasion such as the present one. They do not have any effect at all, not the slightest, because now we are operating under the fetish that this is an emergency; and it makes no difference how drastic, how revolutionary, how totally abdicating it is for the American Congress to turn everything over to the President and allow him to do the most indefinite things—nobody knows just what, not even including the President himself.

Being dominated by that situation, we are going to pass the bill without blinking; and when we are asked what we are doing, the reply will be, "I do not know." When a Senator is asked, "Where are you going?" his reply will be "To hell!" [Laughter.] That is the answer that came to me two or three times today from Senators. That is the spirit in which we are operating today.

Mr. President, Jefferson in 1792, just 3 years after the Constitution went into effect, wrote in his famous annals his interpretation so far as the Jeffersonian philosophy goes:

I told Washington that the Hamilton Party had now brought forward a proposition far beyond every one ever yet advanced and to which the eyes of many were turned, as the decision which was to let us know whether we live under a limited Government or under an unlimited Government.

Then he went on to comment upon what he feared in the centralization of power from giving too much authority to the President of the United States.

In 1800, 8 years later, he wrote to his famous friend, Gideon Granger:

You have seen the practices by which the public servants have been able to cover their conduct, or, where that could not be done, delusions by which they have varnished it for the eye of their constituents.

Notice this from the pen of Jefferson to his friend Granger:

What an augmentation of the field for jobbing, speculating, plundering, office building, and office hunting would be produced by an assumption of all the State powers into the hands of the General Government.

Someone on the Democratic side of the Chamber this afternoon called attention to the drift away from the States into supreme authority on the part of the Federal Government. One of the things about which Jefferson was very fearful was the intrusion of the judiciary. He wrote copiously upon that subject, merely because the tenure was for life, and it was independent of the people.

While I think Jefferson was unduly afraid, I think it is worth while to quote what he said back in 1821, just 5 years before he died. This was to his friend Mr. Hammond. Referring to the Federal Government, through the judiciary, usurping the rights of the States, he said:

To this I am opposed; because when all government, domestic and foreign, in little as in great things, shall be drawn to Washington as the center of all power, it will render powerless the checks provided of one government on another, and will become as venal and oppressive as the government from which we originally separated.

That is the language of Jefferson in 1821, when he was ripe in old age and matured in judgment, that this sort of thing of centralizing everything in Washington would lead to corruption and jobbery.

Mr. President, if I should say these things, people would ridicule me. I am reading from Jefferson; and I do not believe we are justified in ridiculing Jefferson. He was afraid that this movement to centralize power would entirely obliterate liberty; and this is what he said to his friend, John Taylor, in 1798:

It is a singular phenomenon that while our State governments are the very best in the world, without exception or comparison, our General Government has, in the rapid course of 9 or 10 years, become more and more arbitrary and has swallowed more of the public liberty than even that in England.

That was said by Thomas Jefferson in 1798. His fear is my fear, and ought to be the fear of other Senators, that when we once open the door for legislation like this it will be difficult, if not impossible, for us ever to close it again.

This is what he said to his friend Gordon the very year that he died, in 1826. The letter was written in January, and Senators will all recall that he died on the 4th of July 1826, the very day on which John Adams died. This is what he said:

It is but too evident that the branches of our foreign department of Government—executive, judiciary, and legislative—are in combination to usurp the powers of the domestic branch, all so reserved to the States, and consolidate themselves into a single Government without limitation of powers. I will not trouble you with details of the instances which are threadbare and unheeded. The only question is, What is to be done? Shall we give up the ship? No, by heavens, while a hand remains able to keep the deck.

This was the language of the old apostle of liberty, the writer of the Declaration of Independence, in the very year in which he died.

The other day we passed the agricultural bill, putting into the hands of an appointive officer the details of the farm. I want my good friend the distinguished Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] to listen to this. I am reading this especially for the benefit of my friend from South Carolina. This is from Jefferson's autobiography, penned in the last days of his life:

Were we directed from Washington when to sow and when to reap, we should soon want bread.

Let that soak in! [Laughter.]

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Delaware?

Mr. FESS. I yield.

Mr. HASTINGS. I desire to inquire of the distinguished Senator, who is a student of the life of Jefferson, whether he intends to intimate to the Senate and to the country that title I of this bill in any way violates any of the teachings of Jefferson.

Mr. FESS. It violates all of them. [Laughter] There is not any that is exempt; and that, Mr. President, is the disheartening thing to me: There is absolutely no consistency in the face of an emergency.

Mr. HASTINGS. Does the Senator think it would be possible to get the Democratic administration to admit that fact?

Mr. FESS. They will all admit it. They admit it here but say it is necessary. There is not a Democratic Member on this floor who wants to vote for this thing—not one.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. FESS. I do.

Mr. WALSH. I will state to the Senator that I intend to vote for the bill; and I think it gives the most promise of improved conditions of any measure yet presented.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, I did not say there would not be a Democratic Senator who would vote for the bill. I know that almost every Senator on the Democratic side will vote for it, though there are some who will not. I said there was not a Democratic Senator here who wanted to vote for it. There is not a Democratic Senator in this body who does not apologize for voting for it.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FESS. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I not only want to vote for this bill, but I am so anxious to do it that I wish the Senator would desist and let us do it. [Laughter.]

Mr. FESS. Well, Mr. President, I want to be kind to all of my Democratic friends and especially to my Democratic friend from Kentucky, who wrote the prohibition law in the House and who now is out espousing the repeal of the prohibition law. [Laughter.] I can see how a Senator like the Senator who is interrupting me can change as easily as a chameleon can change, if the public sentiment seems to be that way.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, that statement is not justified by anything in my record either in the House or in the Senate.

Mr. FESS. Then I withdraw it. I will not say anything to offend the Senator.

Mr. BARKLEY. I thank the Senator.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote!

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, I promised my friends on the other side that, while this subject is such that one could talk for 3 hours on it, I would take only time enough to say why I cannot support the bill. I have said that, and I am ready to quit.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, we have all listened with admiration and general approval to the political principles announced in the able speech of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK]. The Senator from Missouri, however, as it seems to me, omitted to state the circumstances and the conditions under which these sound political principles were enunciated.

No one will contend that if a plague spreads through a community, the same governmental agencies and the same governmental restraints and the same governmental rights should be applied as in normal times. A mild conflagration does not call for the exercise of the destruction of property to prevent its spread that a sweeping conflagration requires.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WALSH. I would rather not.

No one will claim that if an earthquake rocks the land and destroys life and property the militia should not be called on to augment the police force and to restrain personal liberty and check the abuses that that new condition creates.

The trouble with the able Senator's speech is that he argues now for the same political philosophy that was appropriate when America was prospering, when greed and selfishness were rampant in the exploitation of the natural resources of our country, and when our political party was pleading for laws and regulations to restrain the excesses and economic errors that have resulted in the chaos and economic destruction of this hour.

The trouble with the Senator's philosophy, and with the philosophy of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FESS], is that they have failed to realize the present conditions in America, and that these conditions cannot be corrected by reciting old political maxims, or resorting to the political philosophy of normal conditions.

What are the conditions in America today?

The Senator from Ohio states that under this bill no man can expect or hope to engage in business without a license from the Government. Omit this bill: Does not the Senator from Ohio know that no man in America today can engage in business except the sweatshop or industrial scalping business? Does he not know that this depression has destroyed legitimate business; that the legitimate producer is ruined? Does he not know that wages have gone down and down and down, and does he not know that hours of labor have increased and conditions of employment become intolerable? Does he not know, that in competition with our great industries sweatshop after sweatshop has sprung up, and men and women are toiling long hours for a few pennies? That unemployment is bad, but employment that means slave conditions is intolerable? Is this condition one to be met with the recitation of the political philosophy of the past?

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WALSH. I prefer not to be interrupted.

Mr. CLARK. The Senator is asking me a question, and I should be glad to answer it.

Mr. WALSH. I have not asked the Senator a question. [Laughter.]

Does this condition permit the recitation of the political principles of bygone times, when we were dealing with a prosperous people and a prosperous nation; when wealth was accumulating, and was gradually and steadily being concentrated in the hands of a few? Very properly our party raised its voice in protest, and raised its voice in condemnation of the political philosophy that was making for the ruin and desolation that surrounds us today.

Mr. President, can you imagine a worse economic condition in all the history of our country than exists today? I fail to find any record of a condition approximating the deplorable economic chaos that has come about as a result of the depression of the past few years. What efforts have been made to change these conditions? What philosophy has been employed?

"Leave it alone."

"Do not touch it."

"Nature will remedy conditions."

"Wait! Wait!"

"Laissez faire! Laissez faire!"

"Do not act. Do not act."

"Just reiterate the old political philosophies of the past, and do not make any change."

"Time, and time alone, will remedy matters."

We waited until the 4th day of March; and what happened? Down and down and down we slipped. Since the 4th of March, thank God, under the leadership of a President who has promulgated a political philosophy to meet new conditions, to meet the problems of this depression, a ray of hope and of promise and of new opportunities has at last appeared upon the horizon.

What is proposed here?

It is proposed in this measure to increase the miserable, contemptible wages that American men and women are obliged to work for at the present time. It is proposed in behalf of our people to give the support of the Government to the legitimate, honest producer and manufacturer, and to prevent him and his investment from being ruined by ruthless, unconscionable competition upon the part of those who resort to sweatshop methods and miserable wages—to those who take advantage of the suffering and destitution of the people.

What a remarkable fact it is that industry has asked for this measure! What a remarkable fact it is that the labor organizations have asked for this measure. Why?

Industry has asked for it because it realizes that in certain particulars the once-necessary antitrust laws, under present conditions, were resulting in giving the advantage in business to the ruthless competition which was forcing down prices below the cost of production, and was forcing down wages, and resorting to sweatshop methods.

Labor has asked for it, realizing that against this condition the only hope it had of a living wage, of the enjoyment by the working class of the frugal comforts of life, was for the Government to step in and become, as it proposes to do in this bill, a partner with business—to become a protector of the worker and the decent employer.

I agree that under normal times this measure would be unthinkable; but these are not normal conditions or times. That is the trouble with the philosophy of the Senator from Missouri. That is the trouble, for we agree with every platform policy that he has read, and every political principle he has enunciated. We are not dealing with a prosperous era. We are not dealing with the ordinary conditions in America. We are dealing with an economic war—a war that has gone on for 3 years, that is still going on, that threatens serious consequences, that threatens possibly the very destruction of our political institutions.

"Oh, leave conditions alone! Leave them alone! Leave them alone!"

That is what we heard for 3 years. No! Under the new leadership of the present President of the United States it is proposed that industry, capital, and labor shall join hands under the direction of our Government, and that we shall find out what is the trouble with business conditions, that we shall give support to legitimate industry, that we shall fix maximum hours of labor, that we shall fix minimum wages, that we shall give workingmen a decent living, that we shall end unemployment to a degree by spreading out the opportunities of employment through shorter working days.

This bill is not a bill in favor of any class. This bill primarily is a bill to relieve unemployment, to remove and to end the economic debacle that has gone on in this country for the past 3 years. Why have we voted for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation? Why have we voted for measure after measure to prevent the financial ruin of banks and of railroads and of insurance companies and the loss of the savings and homes of our people? Now we propose to grant this extraordinary, this extreme power; and I concede that the danger is not so much in the enactment of the powers granted here as in the administration of these powers. I am not unmindful of the fact that the situation is fraught with grave danger; but the situation deserves and is entitled to and necessitates desperate means.

I am willing and ready to vote for this measure. I welcome it because I believe it is the measure of all others that gives the most hope of ending the most fundamental causes of conditions at the present time; namely, unemployment, low wages, long hours of labor, and ruthless competition in the industrial field.

Mr. President, I conceive that we are granting extraordinary and most unusual powers to the President of the United States, and it is regrettable that it becomes necessary to enact such legislation, but I do not deem that I am violating a single, solitary Democratic principle for which I have stood and fought through all these years by meeting this extraordinary situation through the granting of extraordinary powers to the Chief Executive of our country.

I sincerely believe that the partnership between capital and labor is extreme and tremendous, but in the expectation that minimum hours of labor will be fixed, because producers will not be in competition with the ruthless capital producers of this country, because I believe it is fundamental and necessary to recovery, I am going to vote for this measure without any apology. I submit that this bill will give legitimate industry an opportunity to free itself from the forces which are dragging it down, and it will give the working men and women of this country freedom from industrial slavery, and it will help to spread employment to a few million more people. This hope and promise makes it one of the best pieces of legislation we have adopted during this session.

Mr. President, for these reasons I think that title I should remain in the bill, and I intend to support it.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I want to detain the Senate for just a moment in response to what the Senator from Massachusetts has said. Evidently the Senator was out of the Chamber or asleep a few minutes ago when I read from the last platform upon which the Democratic Party appealed to the country hardly 6 months ago.

The Senator is undertaking to make it appear that the principles for which the Democratic Party has stood for the last 40 years, beginning with 1892, were shopworn maxims, useful and proper in times of great prosperity, but not to be relied on or followed in times of depression or hard times.

I will ask the Senator to let his mind go back to June 1932, and I should like to ask him if that was a tune of great prosperity or if that was a time of depression. I should like to ask him if the Democratic Party in convention assembled at Chicago no longer ago than last June believed that the principle underlying antitrust legislation was a shopworn maxim or had outlived its usefulness. I should like to ask the Senator from Massachusetts whether he himself, as a member of the platform and resolutions committee at the Chicago convention, which stood up and offered a platform plank in favor of the strict regulation or prohibition of trusts and monopolies, believed that that doctrine had outworn its usefulness or that it was necessary and desirable, in view of the depression which now exists, to suspend and emasculate those laws and sign a blank check for a Presidential appointee to do as he pleased with every industry and business in the United States.

The Senator did not. He was one of the majority on the committee who signed the report in this language, and I am going to read it again to refresh the memory of the Senator from Massachusetts:

> In this time of unprecedented economic and social distress—

Does that sound as if that were a time of great prosperity? Does that sound as if the Democratic Party thought that a principle which applied in other times was no longer applicable, or does that indicate that the Senator from Massachusetts himself thought so when he signed that majority report? I read:

> In this time of unprecedented economic and social distress the Democratic Party declares its conviction that the chief causes of this condition were the disastrous policies pursued by our Government since the World War, of economic isolation, fostering the merger of competitive businesses into monopolies and encouraging the indefensible expansion and contraction of credit for private profit at the expense of the public.

Mr. President, that was what the Senator from Massachusetts thought last June when he signed the majority report. Further, he evidently agreed with the following plank, because he did not present any minority report to this language:

> We advocate strengthening and impartial enforcement of the antitrust laws, to prevent monopoly and unfair trade practices, and revision thereof for the better protection of labor and the small producer and distributor.

It was on that proposition, Mr. President, that we went to the country. It was on that declaration that we won the election, and I dare assert without fear of successful contradiction that if the Democratic Party had placed in its platform at Chicago last June a declaration in favor of the emasculation of the antitrust laws, a declaration in favor of setting up a dictatorship over industry, a declaration in favor of the signing of a blank check, which could be filled in at the whim of an administrator to be appointed by the President, we would not have carried a single doubtful State of the Union.

I recognize, as fully as does the Senator from Massachusetts, the need for remedial legislation in the control of industry. I supported the bill introduced by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK] for a 30-hour week. I would welcome an opportunity to assist in writing into the statutes of the United States other remedial legislation having to do with the minimum wage and the betterment of the conditions of labor; but the necessity for improvement in these conditions is no excuse for the emasculation of the antitrust statutes, which is the primary object of this legislation.

For 50 years it has been the policy of the United States to make it a crime to indulge in price fixing, and under a Democratic administration we have arrived at the point where it is actually to be made a crime not to indulge in price fixing.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I want to take about 3 minutes to make a record as we pass this bill. I am glad that I went on record the day we met here against the policy of this administration to legislate by administrative and executive decree. Now, on the eve of the party's execution, I want to have an opportunity to send out under frank a statement of my record.

I voted against the system of legislative decree under the economy bill. I voted against the system of legislative decree under other bills. I intend to vote against the system of legislative decree under this bill.

I had not read the pending bill until yesterday. I was so astounded that I could not formulate expressions with which to explain it. But what has astounded me has been the silence with which this bill has been accepted. I expected to see forces arise to fight this legislation which have remained silent. I cannot understand how so many voices have been stilled. There is nobody here who amounts to anything who thinks we are doing a very good thing. I do not indict anybody. Every man can take exception to my statement, and he will not be included when he rises and excepts himself from what I am saying. But there is hardly anyone here who thinks we are doing anything good. There are many here who fear we are courting disaster, and many here who think that we are probably taking a good party—and we hope not the country with it—to its fatal hour of doom.

The Democratic Party dies tonight, Mr. President. We will bury it. We will continue to operate under that emblem, and I will continue to be under the emblem myself. But let us not be talking about the times and about changed conditions. We were all at Chicago. We wrote the platform in which we said we would not emasculate the antitrust laws, but that we would strengthen them. We wrote the tariff plank in the platform. I was not one who was going to remain bound by that, but the party was to be bound by it and by all the things in the platform. But we are burying them here tonight.

Forty-one billion was the income of industry, so a Senator told me in the cloakroom a moment ago, and $11,000,000,000 was the income of agriculture. Of $62,000,000,000 of national income, eleven billion went to agriculture and forty-one billion went to industry. More than 40 percent of the people of the United States live on the farms, and they receive slightly more than 22 percent of the national income upon which to support over 40 percent of the population. We are now guaranteeing that the antitrust law can be emasculated, that the clothing men can get together, and that the shoe men can get together, and raise the prices of the commodities of industry without anything whatever to take care of the population on the farms, who must go lower and lower and receive a smaller percentage of the world's and the Nation's income when this bill shall have been enacted.

Mr. President, I am glad to say, in closing, just so that the record may be made, that I wanted to vote with the administration every time I could. There were differences between my colleagues and myself as we began this session. There were differences as to my stand as we went along. But as we go tonight to cast this vote, my vote may not show, as the others will show, but in our heart of hearts we have but one mind as we pass this damnable and iniquitous legislation tonight.

Mr. SCHALL. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator whether he does not think the principal argument of the Democrats in the last campaign would be apropos now in reference to this bill, "It could not be worse."

Mr. LONG. I do not think the times have changed at all. As I said, we are burying the platform, as we Democrats usually do within a few months after every victory.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] to strike out title I.

Several Senators asked for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. WHEELER (when his name was called). On this vote I have a pair with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], but I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS] and vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. LEWIS. I should like to attract the attention of the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. HEBERT] while I announce the general pairs of the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WALCOTT], of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN] with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS], of the Senator from California [Mr. MCADOO] with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. DALE], and of the Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER] with the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. KEYES]. If there are some other Senators, who are paired, whose names I have omitted, I will thank the Senator from Rhode Island to announce them.

Mr. HEBERT. Mr. President, in that connection, I should like to announce the pair on this question between the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] and the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY]. If present, the Senator from Idaho would vote "yea", and the Senator from Arkansas would vote "nay."

I also wish to announce the temporary absence from the Chamber of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. CAPPER]. If present, the Senator from Kansas would vote "nay" on this question.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana (after having voted in the negative). I understand the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STEPHENS], with whom I am paired, would on this question vote as I have voted. I therefore let my vote stand.

The result was announced—yeas 31, nays 49, as follows:

YEAS—31

Austin	Dickinson	Hebert	Reynolds
Bailey	Dill	Kean	Schall
Barbour	Fess	Long	Smith
Black	Goldsborough	McGill	Townsend
Byrd	Gore	Metcalf	Tydings
Carey	Hale	Overton	Vandenberg
Clark	Hastings	Patterson	White
Connally	Hatfield	Reed

NAYS—49

Adams	Barkley	Bulkley	Copeland
Ashurst	Bone	Bulow	Costigan
Bachman	Bratton	Byrnes	Cutting
Bankhead	Brown	Coolidge	Dieterich
Duffy	La Follette	Nye	Thompson
Erickson	Lewis	Pope	Trammell
Frazier	Lonergan	Robinson, Ark.	Van Nuys
George	McCarran	Robinson, Ind.	Wagner
Harrison	McKellar	Russell	Walsh
Hayden	McNary	Sheppard	Wheeler
Johnson	Murphy	Shipstead
Kendrick	Neely	Steiwer
King	Norris	Thomas, Utah

NOT VOTING—16

Borah	Dale	Keyes	Pittman
Capper	Davis	Logan	Stephens
Caraway	Fletcher	McAdoo	Thomas, Okla.
Couzens	Glass	Norbeck	Walcott

So the motion of Mr. CLARK to strike out title I was rejected.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, may we now proceed to title II?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The next committee amendment will be stated.

The next amendment was, on page 16, line 12, after the word "appointed", to insert:

Provided, That no officer or employee receiving a salary in excess of $5,000 per annum shall be appointed or designated under this title except with the advice and consent of the Senate; but the provisions of section 1761 of the Revised Statutes shall not apply to the members of the Board or to any person so appointed or designated. The Board shall consist of three members to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and each member of the Board shall receive compensation at the rate of $10,000 per annum.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 17, line 1, before the word "may", to strike out "Administrator" and insert "Board", and in line 10, after the word "title" and the period, to insert the following sentence: "The Board shall not fix the compensation of any expert, officer, or employee appointed by it at a rate in excess of $5,000 per annum", so as to read:

(b) The Board may, without regard to the Civil Service laws or the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, appoint and fix the compensation of such experts and such other officers and employees as are necessary to carry out the provisions of this title; and may make such expenditures (including expenditures for personal services and rent at the seat of government and elsewhere, for law books and books of reference, and for paper, printing, and binding) as are necessary to carry out the provisions of this title. The Board shall not fix the compensation of any expert, officer, or employee appointed by it at a rate in excess of $5,000 per annum.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 18, line 5, after the word "The", to strike out "Administrator" and insert "Board"; in line 13, after the word "waters" and the comma, to insert "construction of sewage-disposal plants."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COPELAND. May I ask the Senator if paragraph (c), which reads:

Any projects of the character heretofore constructed or carried on either directly by public authority or with public aid to serve the interests of the general public—will include the improvement of the historic battlefields?

Mr. WAGNER. I did not hear the inquiry of my colleague.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is impossible for the Senate to transact business until it is in order.

Mr. COPELAND. I should like to inquire of my colleague if subsection (c) of this section, in his opinion, would cover the improvement of battlefields and the erection of historic monuments which are maintained by the public?

Mr. WAGNER. It would.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I should like to inquire whether the clause reading, "(a) Construction, repair, and improvement of public highways and parkways, public buildings, and any publicly owned instrumentalities and facilities", would include a water-supply system?

Mr. WAGNER. It would.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I should like to inquire of the Senator from New York—it may be that there has been an agreement and I do not know about it—if we are confined to the consideration of committee amendments at the present time?

Mr. WAGNER. I understand that we are first to dispose of committee amendments and that then general amendments may be offered.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator intends to proceed with the committee amendments in title 2 and then take up general amendments in title 2?

Mr. WAGNER. It is the intention then to take up amendments to title 2.

Mr. NORRIS. I have an amendment to which I should like to call the attention of the Senator. On page 18, line 14, the bill now reads:

Development of water power, transmission of electrical energy.

I should like to have the Senate consider an amendment I desire to offer at that point, after the word "transmission" to insert the words "generation and distribution."

Mr. WAGNER. I think that would be a desirable amendment.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I appreciate the efficiency of the clerk, and all that, but we are entitled to know about what is going on here. I have an amendment—I think it is an amendment to the committee amendment—and I want to submit a parliamentary question as to that. We have adopted an amendment in line 7, on page 19, relative to the authorization for the building of battleships and aircraft required by the Navy.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. We have not as yet reached that.

Mr. HARRISON. Let me say to the Senator that we have not as yet come to that amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That provision of the bill has not been reached.

Mr. TRAMMELL. There is so much confusion and the clerk reads so rapidly I could not keep up with what was going on.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The next amendment of the committee will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 24, section 202, in line 24, after the word "amended", it is proposed to insert:

, and paragraph (3) of such subsection (a) shall for such purposes be held to include loans for the construction or completion of reservoirs and pumping plants.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment to the committee amendment, which I ask may be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. In the committee amendment on page 19, line 2, after the word "completion" it is proposed to insert the following:

of hospitals the operation of which is partly financed from public funds, and.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, by way of a very brief explanation of this proposal——

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, if the Senator will desist, I do not think there would be any objection to letting the amendment go to conference.

Mr. ASHURST. How would the provision read with the amendment?

Mr. REED. The provision would read:

Shall for such purposes be held to include loans for the construction or completion of hospitals the operation of which is partly financed from public funds and of reservoirs and pumping plants.

I should like to say, by way of explanation, that the case I have in mind is that of the Robert Packer Memorial Hospital, at Sayre, Pa. It is comparable only with the hospital of the Mayos in Rochester, Minn. It stands, as I think the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND] will agree, as one of the outstanding diagnostic centers in the United States. Very recently one of its main buildings was destroyed by fire. The community has raised a part of the necessary fund. The hospital is entirely self-liquidating, with the exception of some $80,000 a year which it receives for charity patients in the State of Pennsylvania. It pays its entire cost of operation from its receipts, and it will be able from its income to repay a loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. I hope very earnestly that the amendment may be accepted.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. Does the Senator object to his amendment's coming in after the words "pumping plants"?

Mr. REED. I think it should come before those words, in view of the language "partly financed from public funds." I think grammatically that is the better place for it. We do not want to have the words used in my amendment qualify the pumping-plant provision.

Mr. CONNALLY. That is exactly what I have in mind. I do not want the Senator to confuse the reservoirs and pumping plants with public hospitals.

Mr. REED. I knew that the Senator did not, and that is why I suggest that my amendment precede the words "pumping plants", so that the qualifying sentence will apply only to hospitals.

Mr. CONNALLY. I do not want reservoirs and pumping plants to be restricted in connection with hospitals. I want this language open for reservoirs and pumping plants.

Mr. REED. It would be. If the Senator will look at the amendment, he will see that it does just that.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Pennsylvania to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CONNALLY. I offer an amendment to follow the amendment just offered by the Senator from Pennsylvania.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment to the amendment of the committee will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the end of the amendment just agreed to it is proposed to insert the following:

To more effectually carry out the purposes of this act the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is further authorized to lend to persons and corporations engaged in manufacturing, until December 31, 1934, upon the security of their raw or finished product in storage or on consignment or upon their solvent customers' notes, acceptances, or accounts: Provided, That no such loan shall exceed 75 percent of the value of the security offered, and shall be for no longer period than 6 months: Provided further, That such loans may be made to persons and corporations from time to time but the aggregate thereof to any one person or corporation shall not exceed $100,000 at any one time: And provided further, That the said Reconstruction Finance Corporation may establish a revolving fund of not exceeding $200,000,000 to be used for said purposes.

Mr. CONNALLY. I modify the amendment so that it will come in after the words "pumping plants."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment as offered by the Senator from Texas to the amendment offered by the committee.

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, let us vote on the pending proposal first.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will say that there is an amendment pending to the committee amendment at the present time.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, this amendment is offered at the present time simply for the purpose of making the Reconstruction Finance Corporation loans available to certain manufacturing concerns that cannot obtain credit elsewhere. I do not care to argue the amendment but submit it for a vote.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator from Texas if the amendment authorizes the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to lend funds to any manufacturer upon adequate security. Is that the purpose?

Mr. CONNALLY. That is the purpose.

Mr. BYRNES. And the Senator would restrict it only to manufacturers?

Mr. CONNALLY. It is restricted to property which they have in the way of credit and raw material.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Texas to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Senator from New Jersey proposes, on page 19, line 3, after the word "plants", to add a new subsection to read as follows:

(f) Construction, repair, or improvement of buildings, institutions of higher learning, including those not operated for profit.

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President, I may say that there are probably 100 privately owned and privately operated institutions of higher learning in the country. It seems to me only fair that those institutions of higher learning should have some part in availing themselves of this legislation. I point, for instance, to the University of Princeton, which is privately owned and is excluded at present from availing itself of the law, while the University of Pennsylvania can take advantage of it because it does receive public support. I do not think I need dwell at any length on the subject, but it seems to me there can be no objection to the amendment. It refers only to institutions of higher learning operated without profit.

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARBOUR. Certainly.

Mr. NYE. Does the language of the amendment, "institutions of higher learning", include State normal schools and like institutions?

Mr. BARBOUR. I should be glad to have it do so.

Mr. NYE. Would the Senator object to modifying his amendment to include the term "normal schools"?

Mr. BARBOUR. If that is added so as not to exclude universities.

Mr. NYE. I would not, of course.

Mr. BARBOUR. Then I have no objection to the modification.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment as modified to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment, the effect of which has already been adopted and the committee was favorable to it, but it was omitted through an oversight, I believe. It provides for loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for the construction of quarters for Army, Navy, and Marine Corps officers. The housing shortage in several places in the country is being benefited by loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and the amendment will provide for the construction of projects for housing of families of officers of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, the Senate has already approved an identical provision in another act which we passed. However, I personally have no objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 19, line 3, after the word "plants", insert:

and construction of projects for housing of families and of officers of the United States Army, Navy, and Marine Corps.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment to the amendment. [Putting the question.] The Chair is in doubt.

Mr. TYDINGS. I ask for a division.

On a division the amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 19, line 3, after the word "plants", insert the words "and roads."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from North Carolina to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I wish to ask the Senator a question. I had the intention of offering an amendment at this time and place to read as follows:

Toll roads which have the approval of State legislatures.

I ask the Senator from North Carolina whether his amendment includes toll roads?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I should like to ask the Senator to eliminate "having the approval of State legislatures." I hope the Senator will grant that request. I am sure I would do so if he asked it of me.

Mr. AUSTIN. If the distinguished Senator will include "toll roads" in his amendment I shall be glad to strike out the words "which have the approval of State legislatures." Would the Senator modify and perfect his amendment by including toll roads?

Mr. REYNOLDS. In answer to the inquiry of the Senator from Vermont I have no objection to the addition of the word "toll."

Mr. AUSTIN. That is satisfactory.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will report the amendment as modified.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 19, line 3, after the word "plants", insert "and toll roads."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, may I have the attention of the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER]? I want to ask for an interpretation. Is the Senator certain that the widening of public streets is included?

Mr. WAGNER. Certainly.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator is certain of that?

Mr. WAGNER. There is no doubt about it.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, in connection with my inquiry of the Senator from New York respecting the widening of streets, the problem is so definitely important in the city of Detroit, his answer being entirely satisfactory, that I want further to identify the colloquy by asking permission to print in the RECORD the telegram which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The telegram is as follows:

DETROIT, MICH., June 8, 1933.

HON. ARTHUR H. VANDENBERG:

Urgently request you introduce amendment to industrial control bill enabling Detroit to complete widening of Woodward Avenue. This project will furnish employment relief immediately to thousands of workmen and stimulate new building amounting to millions. Work could start as soon as financing is provided.

DETROIT BOARD OF COMMERCE,
HARVEY CAMPBELL.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 19, line 3, after the semicolon, insert the following:

and for the construction of dry docks or graving docks, their works, and accessories.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, there was an order agreed to by the Senate that we would consider committee amendments first. I think we ought to dispose of committee amendments before we consider individual amendments.

The VICE PRESIDENT. This is an amendment to the committee amendment.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I am following the precedent that has been prevailing here for the last 20 minutes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Florida to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] a question. Is there any doubt in the Senator's mind under the clause respecting public improvements or the construction of such as plants and development as the Supreme Court of the United States has by decision ordered for the drainage district of Chicago and for the construction of public works as ordered by that court?

Mr. WAGNER. There is no doubt that under this bill authority is given to extend loans for that particular public project.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I should like to inquire of the Senator from New York, under the phraseology on page 18, lines 8, 9, and 10 "construction, repair, and improvement of public highways and parkways, public buildings and any publicly owned instrumentalities and facilities," whether jails, prisons or other similar public institutions would be included?

Mr. WAGNER. They would be.

Mr. BARKLEY. So, if there is a city, county, or State that desires a fund for that purpose, it is not necessary to include it specifically in the bill?

Mr. WAGNER. No; it is not. They would be eligible for a loan.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the next amendment of the committee.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, on page 19, in line 7, to strike out the word "therefor" and insert "by the Navy".

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I offer an amendment and I want a few minutes to explain it, unless the Senators in charge of the bill are willing to accept it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment offered by the Senator from Florida will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 19, line 7, after the word "Navy", insert the following:

And Navy housing projects and the construction of necessary improvements and facilities at naval shore stations, including naval air stations.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I have no objection to letting the amendment go to conference.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Florida to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the next amendment.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, on page 19, line 7, after the words "construction of", insert "aircraft, aircraft equipment, and technical construction for the Army Air Corps, and."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 19, line 16, after the word "naval", to insert "or military", so as to make the proviso read:

Provided, however, That in the event of an international agreement for the further limitation of armament, to which the United States is signatory, the President is hereby authorized and empowered to suspend, in whole or in part, any such naval or military construction or mechanization and motorization of Army units.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 19, line 18, after the word "this", to strike out "section" and insert "title"; and in line 20, after the word "commission", to insert "or committee", so as to make the additional proviso read:

Provided further, That this title shall not be applicable to public works under the jurisdiction or control of the Architect of the Capitol or of any commission or committee for which such Architect is the contracting and/or executive officer.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, I should like to have the attention of the Senator from New York. This particular proviso will prevent public funds from coming from this fund for the construction of the Library Annex, will it not?

Mr. WAGNER. I understand that is specifically provided for by separate appropriation.

Mr. FESS. No.

Mr. WAGNER. It was considered not to be a part of this particular public-works program. It has been dealt with separately right along, and it was thought we had better leave the procedure as it is now.

Mr. FESS. The Senator will recall that 5 years ago we appropriated a sufficient amount of money to purchase the site. We purchased the site, and 3 years ago we authorized $6,000,000 for the construction, but never have made the appropriation. I think that is one of the best examples we have of public construction, and we ought to have access to those funds to go ahead with it. I am afraid this amendment excludes the getting of money from this fund to construct the project that was authorized 3 years ago.

Mr. WAGNER. Those in charge of the public projects to which the Senator refers, I understand, suggested this amendment, and for that reason——

Mr. FESS. No; those who suggested the amendment did not want the application of the funds under the director of this fund, but wanted it under a committee of the Congress. What I am concerned about is whether the Senator would not accept an amendment making available these funds for this purpose under the Architect of the Capitol.

Mr. WAGNER. Suppose the Senator proposes such an amendment? We can then have it go to conference, and in the meantime we can adjust the matter.

Mr. FESS. Very well.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Are we considering only committee amendments now?

The VICE PRESIDENT. That is correct. Under the order of the Senate we are considering committee amendments only until we get through with the title and then individual amendments will be in order. The clerk will state the next amendment of the committee.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, on page 20, line 1, after the word "the", to strike out "Administrator" and insert "Board", so as to read:

SEC. 203. (a) With a view to increasing employment quickly (while reasonably securing any loans made by the United States) the President is authorized and empowered, through the Board or through such other agencies as he may designate or create, (1) to construct, finance, or aid in the construction or financing of any public-works project included in the program prepared pursuant to section 202; (2) upon such terms as the President shall prescribe, to make grants to States, municipalities, or other public bodies for the construction, repair, or improvement of any such project, but no such grant shall be in excess of 30 percent of the cost of the labor and materials employed upon such project; (3) to acquire by purchase, or by exercise of the power of eminent domain, any real or personal property in connection with the construction of any such project, and to sell any security acquired or any property so constructed or acquired or to lease any such property with or without the privilege of purchase.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 20, line 18, after the word "section", to strike out "207" and insert "209", so as to make the proviso read:

Provided, That all moneys received from any such sale or lease or the repayment of any loan shall be used to retire obligations issued pursuant to section 209 of this act, in addition to any other moneys required to be used for such purpose; and (4) to aid in the financing of such railroad maintenance and equipment as may be approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission as desirable for the improvement of transportation facilities.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KEAN. Mr. President, I offer an amendment on page 20, line 10.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment is not in order until after the committee amendments are disposed of. The clerk will state the next amendment of the committee.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, on page 21, line 25, after the word "the", to insert "highway departments of the"; on page 23, line 1, after the word "an", to strike out "aggregate amount of" and insert "amount not less than", and in line 2, after the word "expended", to insert "by such departments as agencies of the Federal Government", so as to read:

SEC. 204. (a) For the purpose of providing for emergency construction of public highways and related projects, the President is authorized to make grants to the highway departments of the several States in an amount not less than $400,000,000, to be expended by such departments as agencies of the Federal Government in accordance with the provisions of the Federal Highway Act, approved November 9, 1921, as amended and supplemented, except as provided in this title, as follows:

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I want to ask the Chair about an amendment on page 20, line 18. Was that amendment agreed to, striking out "207" and inserting "209"?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment to the committee amendment, on page 22, lines 2 and 3, to strike out in line 3 the words "as agencies of the Federal Government."

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I have no objection to the words being stricken out.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, does not that raise the same question as to whether the money has to go through certain operations of the Treasury?

Mr. HAYDEN. No; I have looked into the matter very carefully, and it does raise a question as to whether the contracts let are Federal or State contracts. There are many implications which I think should not be contained in the bill; and I, therefore, move to strike out the words "as agencies of the Federal Government."

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I offered that amendment in the Finance Committee. I have studied it with the Senator from Arizona, and I am inclined to think the amendment he offers is wise. Otherwise, there might be a question as to whether the Federal Government was responsible for the pay of the employees of the highway departments.

Mr. HAYDEN. I can say to the Senator that that very question has been asked, as to whether the entire highway departments would go on the Federal pay roll.

Mr. REED. We certainly do not intend that. Furthermore, there might be a question as to whether the contracts made by these highway departments were to be enforceable directly against the Federal Government; and we certainly do not intend that.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, while we are on this subject, may I ask the Senator who has the floor a question?

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. If the amendment suggested by the Senator from Arizona is adopted, would it not be necessary to reject the committee amendment at the bottom of the page?

Mr. HAYDEN. The amendment at the bottom of the page I do not quite understand. The matter can well go to conference, and can be straightened out there. That amendment deals with one particular kind of construction, railroad crossings, and there may be a reason for that; but, generally, we should not make the State highway departments agencies of the Federal Government.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, if I may take a moment more of the time, it seems to me the reason for accepting the amendment of the Senator from Arizona applies equally well to striking out the last four lines on the page. Those words ought to be stricken out, and the committee amendment at the bottom of the page should be agreed to.

Mr. HARRISON. I have no objection to that.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment was, on page 22, line 22, after the word "traffic" and the period, to strike out:

In carrying out the improvements to eliminate traffic hazards in connection with railroad crossings at grade, the State highway department shall constitute an agency of the Federal Government.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 23, line 16, after the word "States", to strike out the comma and "three fourths"; in line 19, after the word "supplemented", to insert "(which act is hereby further amended for the purposes of this title to include the District of Columbia)" and beginning with line 21, to strike out "and one fourth in the ratio which the population of each State bears to the total population of the United States, according to the latest decennial census", so as to read:

(b) Any amounts allocated by the President for grants under subsection (a) of this section shall be apportioned among the several States in accordance with the provisions of section 21 of the Federal Highway Act, approved November 9, 1921, as amended and supplemented (which act is hereby further amended for the purposes of this title to include the District of Columbia), and shall be available on July 1, 1933, and shall remain available until expended; but no part of the funds apportioned to any State need be matched by the State, and such funds may also be used in lieu of State funds to match unobligated balances of previous apportionments of regular Federal-aid appropriations.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I hope the language which was stricken out of the House bill will be restored. I think it is an unfortunate thing that any change is made.

This bill was sent up to us by the President with a view to relieving unemployment; and if the amendment suggested by the committee should be adopted, it would mean that a large part of this fund would be spent in the less populous portions of the country. Large, populous States like Alabama, California, Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Virginia, and West Virginia would receive a very limited portion of this money; while on the other hand in the West, where the population is less dense, a special appropriation of $50,000,000 is made in this bill for trails and roads in the forests.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Does not the able Senator from New York think the less populous States serve such States as New York?

Mr. COPELAND. Oh, I am not speaking about the matter from that standpoint. I am speaking about it purely as an employment proposal, an emergency proposal. That is the only thought I have in mind. It is not a question about our being glad to serve the other States. If we are providing here for road building to give employment, it ought to be, as I view it, in the language that the House presented; and I hope the committee will be willing to restore the language of the House bill in line 16 and lines 21, 22, and 23 of page 23.

I ask permission to have printed in the RECORD a statement on this subject.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

INEQUITABLE DISTRIBUTION OF HIGHWAY FUNDS IN PUBLIC WORKS BILL AS PROPOSED BY SENATE FINANCE COMMITTEE

When the President sent the industrial recovery-public works bill to Congress he provided, in section 204 of the bill, that $400,000,000 allocated to highways, as a direct grant to the States, not to be repaid to the Federal Treasury, should be distributed three fourths on the basis of the Federal Aid Act and one fourth on the basis of population. In changing the allocation from the regular Federal Aid Act to the compromise he recognized that greater consideration should be given to unemployment rather than to building up a system of highways for transportation alone. This allocation was passed by the House as submitted by the President.

The Senate Committee on Finance has failed to appreciate that the public works bill submitted by the administration was submitted, not because the Nation is in great need of public works but because there is a tremendous unemployment problem. The public works bill is simply a vehicle to carry the country's unemployed into reemployment, and this policy, insofar as it can be successfully translated, must necessarily be directed to, and predicated upon, unemployment and population rather than on other factors of theoretical desirability.

The Senate Finance Committee has seen fit to amend the allocation in section 204 so that the money will be distributed on the basis of the Federal Aid Act, which means that unemployment or population is only a secondary feature in the distribution of this fund, and that area and road mileage control the amount of money that each State gets. It failed to appreciate that there would be no such bill before the Congress as the $3,300,000,000 public works bill except for the tremendous unemployment and business stagnation.

The bill as submitted by the President helps 19 of the more densely populated States where unemployment is the greatest. These States are:

Alabama, California, Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Virginia, and West Virginia.

Under the amendment made by the Senate Finance Committee, these 19 States will receive but 44 percent of the $400,000,000 highway allocation in spite of the fact that they have within their borders 64 percent of the population of the country and 74 percent of the unemployed. The amount received by these 19 States divided by the number of unemployed means $15.96 for each unemployed person, while the amount received by the other 29 States which have but 36 percent of the population and 26 percent of the unemployed means that each unemployed person in those States will receive $57.06, or nearly four times the amount received by the unemployed in the more densely populated 19 States. The very purpose of the administration proposal, directed toward relieving unemployment where it is the greatest, is thus being defeated.

Under the allocation as proposed by the Senate Finance Committee the State of Massachusetts, for instance, will receive but $7.69 per unemployed worker while the State of Nevada will receive $362.24; New Jersey will receive $8.58 per unemployed worker while South Dakota gets $284.34; Pennsylvania will receive $12.65 per unemployed worker while New Mexico will receive $193.26; New York will receive $10.06 as against $160.76 for North Dakota; and so on down the list.

Ten of these States—California, Connecticut, Illinois, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, North Carolina—having 49 percent of the population and nearly 63 percent of the unemployed, will receive but 30.3 percent of the $400,000,000 or an average of $12.92 per unemployed person. The remaining 38 States, having 51 percent of the population and only 37 percent of the unemployed, will receive nearly 70 percent of the amount available, or an average of $50.89 per unemployed person.

It might well be remembered that while these 10 States receive but 30 percent of the allocation they contribute more than 77 percent of the taxes, on the basis of the 1931 tax returns.

There is some argument that the balance of the moneys made available in the bill are expected to go to the more densely populated States, and that therefore the road money should be turned into those States which have the least expectation of getting other public works. Let us assume that the whole $2,900,000,000 remaining after the highway fund deduction will be allocated to the States either by subsidy or by purchase of State and municipality bonds. On the basis of its unemployment, New York, for instance, should receive $389,000,000 of this amount. Nevada should receive $2,900,000 and Wyoming $4,900,000. It is more probable that Nevada and Wyoming will be able to spend those amounts than that New York will be able to spend the $389,000,000.

Another point: There must be deducted from the remaining public-works authorization the sum to be devoted on Federal projects which is estimated at $900,000,000. After eliminating this item, and the highway allocation, the direct cash contributions by the Federal Government for remaining public works would be reduced to a total of approximately $600,000,000, and this amount could only be availed of where the States or municipalities are able, through taxation, or otherwise, to raise the other 70 percent of the cost of these projects.

In the case of the road funds in the bill, there is no matching limitation of any kind, and these funds are given gratuitously to the States in recognition, presumably, of the feasibility of bringing these works into immediate contract stage. And here it might be pointed out that in addition to the $40,000,000 regular road program provided for, about 14 Western States will receive the bulk of the additional expenditure of $50,000,000 authorized for roads and trails in the national forests and the public domain by a proposed amendment of the Senate Finance Committee.

The point should be kept ever in sight that the bill is not intended to meet any problem other than the one of unemployment and there should be no other theory behind it.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, this committee amendment has been much better worked out for all the States than what my friend from New York offers, for I notice he mentions my State as an example. We would lose two or three hundred thousand dollars under this allotment.

I hope we will adopt the committee amendment, and vote down the other provision.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, if the entire public-works program provided in this bill were confined to highway construction, I think there would be great force in the argument made by the Senator from New York. However, Senators should remember that the great bulk of this program, it is to be hoped, is to be expended in the municipalities, in the counties, and in the States for carrying on there public-works projects other than highways. Therefore it seems to me that it becomes quite obvious that in the rural and more sparsely settled sections of the United States, their chief reliance for reemployment of labor and for the expenditure of money for materials must rest upon the highway section of this public-works program. That becomes especially important when we remember that in this bill there has been included the right to expend money upon the secondary roads.

Therefore, Mr. President, in view of the fact that the major portion of the money appropriated for this public-works program will no doubt be spent in the larger centers, and in view of the further fact that the chief expenditure in the rural communities and in the more sparsely settled sections of the United States will have to depend upon the $400,000,000 provided for roads, I think the Finance Committee, after most careful consideration, was completely and amply justified in striking out the provision passed by the House which required a three-fourths distribution under the Federal Highway Act and one fourth upon the basis of population.

Therefore, so far as I am concerned as a member of the committee, I hope the committee amendments will prevail.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, this matter is going to lead to considerable discussion. When it is brought to the attention of the Senate that the disparity is so great as to give about $8 per unemployed person in the State of New Jersey and about $360 per unemployed person in the State of Nevada, it can be seen that there is something to talk about on this particular amendment.

If I may have the attention of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], I want to plead with him to allow the Senate to recess now and take up this matter in the morning. We have been here now for 12 hours and 40 minutes, working on the most sweeping innovation that has been presented to the Congress of the United States in many years—a bill appropriating billions of dollars; a bill changing our method of handling the industry and commerce of the Nation.

The Senate has almost lost the capacity to think. Our action in passing upon amendments during the last half hour has shown it. We have shouted amendments through, or shouted them down, with scarcely any realization of what they meant. We talk about working laboring men long hours, and yet here, after 12 hours and 40 minutes, it is proposed to keep the Senate on until we finish the whole of title II. In justice to our work, and in justice to the country, I think it is high time that the Senate take a recess until tomorrow.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President——

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, may I join the Senator from Pennsylvania in expressing the hope that the Senator from Mississippi will agree to his proposal?

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I was just going to say that I did not anticipate there was any objection to these other committee amendments. If there is going to be a long controversy over this road item, we can carry it over until tomorrow; but is there any objection to adopting the two or three remaining Senate committee amendments? If there is no objection to them, let us act on them. Then we can start out in the morning on the individual amendments.

Mr. REED. Yes; if we can pass over the amendments on page 23, and take those in the morning, I see no reason why we should not agree to all the other Senate committee amendments to title II.

Mr. HARRISON. I ask unanimous consent that the road amendment there be carried over until tomorrow morning.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The clerk will continue the reading of the bill.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment was, on page 24, line 19, after the name "Territory of Hawaii", to insert "and the District of Columbia", so as to read:

(e) As used in this section the term "State" includes the Territory of Hawaii and the District of Columbia. The term "highway" as defined in the Federal Highway Act approved November 9, 1921, as amended and supplemented, for the purposes of this section, shall be deemed to include such main parkways as may be designated by the State and approved by the Secretary of Agriculture as part of the Federal-aid highway system.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I wish to add an amendment to the committee amendment by inserting after the word "Hawaii" a comma, striking out the word "and", and after the word "Columbia" inserting a comma and the words "and the Panama Canal Zone."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 25, line 2, after the word "under", to insert "this section or", and in the same line, after the figures "202", to strike out "or 204", so as to read:

(f) Whenever, in connection with the construction of any highway project under this section or section 202 of this act, it is necessary to acquire rights of way over or through any property or tracts of land owned and controlled by the Government of the United States, it shall be the duty of the proper official of the Government of the United States having control of such property or tracts of land, with the approval of the President and the Attorney General of the United States, and without any expense whatsoever to the United States, to perform any acts and to execute any agreements necessary to grant the rights of way so required, but if at any time the land or the property the subject of the agreement shall cease to be used for the purposes of the highway, the title in and the jurisdiction over the land or property shall automatically revert to the Government of the United States and the agreement shall so provide.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 25, after line 16, to insert:

(g) Hereafter in the administration of the Federal Highway Act, and acts amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto, the first paragraph of section 9 of said act shall not apply to publicly owned toll bridges or approaches thereto, operated by the highway department of any State, subject, however, to the condition that all tolls received from the operation of any such bridge, less the actual cost of operation and maintenance, shall be applied to the repayment of the cost of its construction or acquisition, and when the cost of its construction or acquisition shall have been repaid in full, such bridge thereafter shall be maintained and operated as a free bridge.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 26, after line 3, to insert:

SEC. 205. (a) Not more than $50,000,000 of the amount made available by this act shall be allotted for (a) national forest highways, (b) national forest roads, trails, bridges, and related projects, (c) national park roads and trails in national parks owned or authorized, (d) roads on Indian reservations, and (e) roads through public lands, to be expended in the same manner as provided in paragraph (2) of section 301 of the Emergency Relief and Construction Act of 1932, in the case of appropriations allocated for such purposes, respectively, in such section 301, to remain available until expended.

(b) The President may also allot funds made available by this act for the construction of public highways in Alaska, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment to the committee amendment by striking out, on line 4, page 26, the word "more" and inserting the word "less", so as to read "not less than."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 26, line 4, it is proposed to strike out "more" and insert "less", so that it will read—

Not less than $50,000,000—

And so forth.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I have thought we dealt pretty liberally with these park roads and park bridges and forest trails when we provided that there should be as much as $50,000,000 appropriated for that purpose. That represents one eighth of all the appropriation that is being given to the entire United States for our highway system; and yet the Senator from Arizona wishes to fix it so that that amount can be increased.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I am leaving it entirely in the discretion of the administration. My amendment simply fixes a minimum amount.

I will state to the Senator that there are four Federal road-building agencies—the National Park Service, the National Forest Service, the Indian Service, and the Bureau of Public Roads. They have submitted estimates for $112,000,000. I am asking that we leave the matter in the discretion of the President. It does not come out of the Federal-aid appropriation of $400,000,000, but is in addition thereto.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, there is some controversy about this item, and I hope it can go over. I understand there is to be an executive session; and I hope that after that we can take a recess until tomorrow morning.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Mississippi asks unanimous consent that this amendment go over until tomorrow. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

CHAIN STORES—PRICES AND MARGINS OF CHAIN AND INDEPENDENT DISTRIBUTORS: MEMPHIS GROCERY (S.DOC. NO. 69)

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, transmitting, pursuant to Senate Resolution 224, Seventieth Congress, first session, a report of the Commission entitled "Prices and Margins of Chain and Independent Distributors: Memphis Grocery", which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered printed.

LAWS AND RESOLUTIONS OF THE PHILIPPINE LEGISLATURE

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying documents, referred to the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs, as follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

As required by section 19 of the act of Congress approved August 29, 1916, entitled "An act to declare the purpose of the people of the United States as to the future political status of the people of the Philippine Islands, and to provide a more autonomous government for those islands", I transmit herewith a set of the laws and resolutions passed by the Ninth Philippine Legislature during its second regular session, from July 16, 1932, to November 9, 1932, and its special session of 1932, from December 7 to 9, 1932.

With reference to Act No. 4053 (H. No. 2516) the following is quoted from an opinion of the Attorney General of the United States, rendered February 14, 1933, prior to the approval of this act by the President of the United States:

4. Sections 6 and 7 are separable from the rest of the measure. If you approve the bill, sections 6 and 7 will be void and inoperative, but the other provisions of the bill will not be affected and will stand as valid legislation.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, June 7, 1932.

REPORT OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA COMMITTEE

Mr. KING, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred the joint resolution (S.J.Res. 60) making an appropriation for an investigation of housing conditions and rentals in the District of Columbia, reported it without amendment.

ADDITIONAL BILL INTRODUCED

Mr. FESS introduced a bill (S. 1864) granting a pension to Nettie Sonner, which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

AMENDMENTS TO NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY BILL—GENERAL MANUFACTURERS' EXCISE TAX

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, on behalf of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED] and myself, I submit several amendments intended to be proposed to House bill 5755, the pending national industrial recovery bill, which I ask may be printed and lie on the table. Two of the amendments pertain to a general manufacturers' excise tax.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendments will be printed and lie on the table.

THE TRUTH ABOUT COMPETITION

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article by Frank A. Fetter entitled "The Truth About Competition", appearing in the Annals.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[Reprinted from The Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, Philadelphia, January 1933. Publication No. 2553]

THE TRUTH ABOUT COMPETITION

By Frank A. Fetter

(Frank A. Fetter, Ph.D., LL.D., is a past president of the American Economic Association, has been professor of political economy in Indiana, Stanford, Cornell, and Princeton Universities, has written extensively on economics, including The Masquerade of Monopoly and Big Business and the Nation (in Facing the Facts), and acted as economic adviser for the Associated States, representing the public in the Pittsburgh-Plus complaint against the Steel Corporation.)

Ever since the passage of the Sherman Antitrust Act 42 years ago the policy of industrial competition in interstate commerce has been the center of a strenuous controversy. Particularly in the last few years a well-organized propaganda, backed by the National Association of Manufacturers and conducted largely by the aid of able corporation lawyers composing a committee of the American Bar Association, has laid down a terrific barrage of public argument against the Sherman Act preparatory to an advance upon Washington to cripple or destroy that legislation.

Powerful interests bent on weakening the operation of competition in large areas of business have given it an evil name. If it were a "natural person" instead of an abstract idea, she or he could sue and recover damages for malicious slander before any intelligent jury and honest court. Competition is not, as some would have us believe, a Dulcinea suffering imaginary wrongs, whom only some half-crazed modern Don Quixote would try to defend. Competition is the present established policy of our people and of our legal system in respect to business, and it cannot be abandoned "without a definite change in our economic philosophy."[1]

The Supreme Court of the United States has repeatedly declared that the existing law and the judicial decisions interpreting it are based upon the assumption that public interest is best protected from the evils of monopoly and price control by the maintenance of competition.[2] It, therefore, is highly important that at the very outset of any discussion of existing laws regulating business and of proposals to modify them, our ideas should be clear as to what is meant by the word "competition." What but confusion can result from proceeding in any other manner? And yet, sad to relate, the recent hostile critics of our present antitrust-law policy have not taken this simple and indispensable precaution in drawing their indictment against it.

THE NATURE OF COMPETITION

What does the word "competition" mean? It has a broad and general meaning and numerous applications. Competition in its most general sense is rivalry to excel in some activity or to attain some specific end. It goes on everywhere in the subhuman world between individuals and species of plants and of animals. It is unfortunate that the popular discussion of biologic evolution has so strongly flavored the word "competition" with the suggestion of a lethal struggle for survival—nature red in tooth and claw; for in civilized human affairs competition takes varied forms for varied ends, and never, save in war between nations or in individual crime, is competition in human affairs a struggle to the death. It is never waged without rules and limits.

Always, among social beings legitimate competition is carried on for some chosen purpose and always it is regulated. Otherwise it would be impossible to know which contestant excelled in the competition. The runner on a track team may not beat his competitors over the head with a club and then lope leisurely to the goal. That would prove only that he was a brute with a strong arm; whereas in a contest of runners the purpose is to see who, under equal and fair conditions, can run fastest. Without umpires and referees, football would not be a game but a riot. Contract bridge must be played according to rules, and not with a deck of marked cards. If card players were pulling aces out of their sleeves, what test would that be of the merits of the several "systems of play" or of the skill of individual players?

In short, in every sort of civilized competition there are "the rules of the game" which must either be observed through a spirit of courtesy or be enforced by judges and impartial officials. Without rules administered and enforced, there is no true competition of a specific sort, but merely a meaningless anarchy of selfish individual action.

Every word of this is essentially just as true of competition in business. True business competition must be an orderly process carried on within the established system of civil law and the accepted morals and codes of conduct. A large part of municipal law is concerned with defining the acts that are criminal, fraudulent, negligent, unfair, or against public policy. The police powers of government are exerted to regulate traffic, weights and measures, sanitation, housing, zoning, and many commercial relations. So familiar are most of these regulations that they usually are accepted as a part of the natural order of things, without recognizing that they are all artificial measures for controlling individual competitive behavior for the public good.

Now, what is the particular nature and purpose of economic competition? It is the process in which individuals and legally incorporated groups are given the chance to earn their livings in our social order by producing desirable things and performing useful services and selling them for all that other folks are willing and able to pay for them. More and better goods, lower prices made possible by the steady march of science and technological invention, material progress constantly shared by the masses of the people—this is the ideal social purpose of competition. Economic competition must be carried on according to the rules of the game, in fair and open commerce, to insure that purpose. Competition is an essential part of the system of individualism and capitalism. Where competition ends, monopoly and special privilege begin, unless the public protects itself by authoritative price fixing.

DISTORTED PICTURE OF COMPETITION

To restate these elementary notions would be superfluous were they not so constantly ignored and denied in much of the current discussion. Those who quarrel with the accepted philosophy of competition because of some inconvenience or disadvantage which they are suffering—or think they are—in their private business, and who are urging that our present antitrust laws be changed, always paint a very different picture. They rarely halt to inquire whether the troubles of which they complain result from violation of the established rules of the game or from failure to enforce those rules, but they assail the contest and the rules as causing all the evils.

We need seek no further for evidence of the truth of these statements and for examples of this state of mind than the addresses and writings of Mr. J. Harvey Williams. His views fairly represent an influential section of business opinion, though excelling in the sincerity, the zeal, and the ability with which he expresses those views. We find him denouncing, under the accusatory title of "The Reign of Error", the "conditions of destructive competition", and "the blind type of competition that is imposed by the Sherman law";[3] declaring that "destructive competition is wellnigh universal";[4] deploring "the ferocity of this competition";[5] and attributing this to the Sherman law which "enforces a reign of cutthroat competition."[6] These phrases are used again and again by him and his associates with the implication or the assertion that they express the ideal and the practical result of our present antitrust laws.

Mr. Williams compresses his understanding of the present theory of our law into this sarcastic phrase: "Cutthroat competition is the life of trade."[7] The attentive reader will have his doubts aroused, however, by the implication that any reduction in the prices of one's competitor is "cutthroat competition."[8] Indeed, it becomes very doubtful whether such critics of our antitrust laws really see any difference between cutthroat competition and any regular and legitimate bidding for trade by their competitors.

The evils complained of are usually not pictured as the accidental and unintended effects of the law (although elsewhere they recognize that they result from its weak and inconsistent enforcement). Critics of this school caricature the present situation thus: "The philosophy of America deems it to the public interest * * * to squander our natural resources for a mess of pottage."[9] "The economic philosophy underlying the law [is] the fetish that the consumer is entitled to his cut-rate bargain before either capital or labor efficiently conducted is entitled to its fair wage."[10] "The law encourages the selfish or inefficient."[11] Of course, such results are the very opposite of what the law was intended to accomplish. No wonder that this crusader for a new deal exclaims, with righteous indignation: "Repeal, not amend the Sherman Act. Oil and water will not mix."[12]

But the reader of these opinions needs to be warned that by a peculiar use of words "the consumers", who are getting these "cut-rate bargains" by the evil operation of our present laws, are not ultimate consumers, as commonly meant by the word "consumers", but are monopolistic trusts buying equipment from a smaller producer such as Mr. Williams' company. Elsewhere Mr. Williams concedes, however, that the creation of these great trusts would have been impossible if the Sherman Act had been enforced as it plain terms require. So we have this strange accusation against the Sherman law and its whole underlying philosophy; that the law is to blame for an outrageous situation that has resulted from its nonenforcement and its violation in letter and in spirit. The law has caused this great injustice because it has not been obeyed. This is a pretty mess of reasoning, which we should try to disentangle.

MONOPOLY THROUGH MERGERS

It is a pleasure to turn from complete disagreement with so sincere an antagonist to partial agreement. I believe that Mr. Williams and his group are about half right, though I hasten to recall the familiar adage that the most mischievous errors are half truths. A single sound premise, together with an unsound one, may, and often does, breed a monstrous conclusion.

---

[1] Williams, J. H., in Atlantic Monthly, 147: 795, June 1931.

[2] Trenton Potteries case, 273 U.S. 392 ff.

[3] Atlantic Monthly, 147: 788.

[4] Ibid., 789.

[5] Magazine of Business, 55: 102.

[6] Atlantic Monthly, 147: 789; see also Magazine of Business, 55: 155.

[7] Atlantic Monthly, 141: 418.

[8] Magazine of Business, 55: 155.

[9] Atlantic Monthly, 141: 412.

[10] Ibid., 141: 846.

[11] Ibid., 851.

[12] Ibid., 847.

It is always well to get an advocate's personal equation in an issue of public policy before weighing the force of his arguments, for in such matters the opinions of men are often but the rationalization of their own environment. Mr. Williams has full right to speak as the mouthpiece of a certain large group of men of affairs charged with the management of comparatively small businesses. They are small only "comparatively", for in this day of billionaire combinations other highly useful and important corporations with modest assets of, say, six or even sixty millions are only pygmies creeping about at the feet of industrial giants.

Now, in this rather precarious position, these comparatively small manufacturers have been doing a lot of thinking. It is not difficult to trace the course of their serious thoughts and to see that they have already gone halfway along the road, and with further thinking may eventually go the whole way and finally arrive at the truth. The first distressing fact that they have lately discovered is that they no longer have a really open market and a normal group of freely competing buyers for their own products. A business that could truly claim to be "the largest maker of drop-forgings and drop-forged tools in the United States and probably in the world" is a pretty helpless seller of its special products today in the face of great platoons of factories, marshaled as buyers under unified ownership. It is these big combinations which more and more constitute the buying public for such special industrial equipment. In the way of thinking already noted, the "trusts" are called the "consumers" of the products of the smaller manufacturer.

Mr. Williams awakes to the alarming truth that really big businesses have buying-monopoly power in their dealings with him, because they constitute the major part of the demand in many areas for the products of his business.[13] Then he realizes that this buying-monopoly power which is injuring him and his kind of business is the natural result of the selling monopoly that was brought about by merging large numbers of formerly independent plants into giant combinations. He fittingly calls this "virtual" monopoly, or again he calls it a condition of "semi-monopoly which, if it differs from the trust of 1890, does so only in respect to * * * enlightened instead of ruthless selfishness."[14] He and his friends in the National Association of Manufacturers had watched this process of merger with little concern, or even with hearty approval. Now his prophetic eye sees truly the inevitable outcome: "Eventually competitive units will be so few that there will be no alternative to this virtual monopoly, since two or three corporations in unregulated control of a Nation-wide field protect the public little better than one."[15]

That sets Mr. Williams to thinking again, and to doubting the professed motives for the formation of big business. He questions, as many others now do, "that efficiency is inherent in mere size."[16] He accepts the considerable body of evidence showing "that the majority of mergers have not been so successful as is popularly supposed."[17] With a flash of insight he glimpses the real motive of most mergers, and exclaims: "The prime motive underlying the whole merger movement has been to enable competing companies to exercise as a single corporation the stabilizing influence upon prices, production, and division of territory which the law forbids them to exercise by agreements as independent units."[18] In plain words, the prime motive for mergers has been monopoly, and the purpose has been to evade and defeat the Sherman law enacted to prevent monopoly.

While violently attacking the Sherman Act, these critics elsewhere recognize that the merger movement has been in conflict with the original purpose and the plain meaning of that act. They throw the blame upon the policy of the Supreme Court, which has permitted many combinations "to attain or approach the status of a trust which is clearly inhibited by the antitrust part of the Sherman Act."[19] Eager to abolish or to modify the Sherman Act, they become suspicious of the coolness of some elements of really "big" business toward such a plan. They discover discordant interests among business men and discordant opinions among their agents, the corporation lawyers. "It is a question whether existing conditions [as to the Sherman Act] are not welcome to the agents of big business as making them constantly bigger and more powerful through the elimination or absorption of their smaller competitors."[20] If these ideas and expressions involve many inconsistencies, it is probably because they reflect different moods and times rather than purely rational thinking at any time.

MONOPOLY THROUGH PRICE FIXING

Thus far we have followed the line of thought of these critics of the present situation with considerable sympathy and approval; but now we approach the point where they and we must part company. For what, at this point, do they propose to do? When intelligent men have discovered that the cause of their own troubles is the monopolistic power of "big" business resulting from mergers, we might expect them to urge the removal of this cause. When they see also that these trusts have been formed in spite of the Sherman antitrust law, and by reason of its negligent enforcement, we might expect them as good citizens to rally in defense of that law. But no, instead, they say in the same breath that the antitrust purpose of that law is excellent, and that it should now be abandoned as hopeless.

The regime of special privilege which giant combinations have created, these "virtual" monopolies which have so largely destroyed true competition in free and open markets, are now to be accepted and perpetuated to the injury not only of smaller business but of the buying public (the rest of us). Sauve qui peut. The public is to be left to its fate while antagonists of the Sherman law, intent upon their own safety, undertake the immense propaganda of the past few years—to do what? To create another kind of special privilege for themselves, the privilege of combining in trade associations in restraint of commerce, by conspiring to control production and to fix prices in their industries, for all buyers, trusts, and public alike.

Sugar-coat such a policy as they may, it means the creation of a multitude of other "virtual" and semimonopolies over a large part of the field of industrial prices. Its advocates even admit in unguarded moments that it is "price fixing", but excuse it on the ground that it "would operate chiefly to prevent demoralization when supply exceeded demand";[21] in plain words, that means whenever the competitive price is too low to satisfy the price fixers. They deny, of course, that this is monopoly; they call it, in carefully chosen words, merely charging "the highest price that will attract the largest profitable demand without inviting avoidable competition."[22] But inasmuch as the action of such a legalized conspiracy of sellers would make almost all effective competition "avoidable", the price resulting would be highly monopolistic. Of course, they disavow the desire to get an "excessive" price; they seek only the "right" price; that is, what is right in their own opinion.

Such an arrangement would, to be sure, give to trade associations greater bargaining power in selling to the large trusts, but these would still be able to look out pretty well for their own interests in the bargain. The rest of the people, however, the unorganized sellers of their goods and services, would then have two monopolistic masters, one scourging with whips and the other with scorpions. It is not a pleasant prospect.

SOME LEGAL OBSTACLES

To Mr. Gilbert Montague, the other speaker at this session, may safely be left the task of demonstrating as an expert in this special field of the law that this whole N.A.M.-A.B.A. plan with its ingenious devices for tinkering with the Sherman Act is nothing but an attempt to camouflage monopoly, and that it would meet the frown of the Supreme Court on constitutional grounds. Indeed, he has already performed this task on various occasions, with withering effects to these pet projects and illusions.

Mr. Williams consequently holds a very qualified opinion of this brand of corporation law, and has impatiently declared that the lawyers "have succeeded to date in perpetuating this goose, with its golden eggs of uncertainty, rigidity, and legal technicality beyond the time and training of the average business man to fathom."[23] He even pronounces this advice from the corporation lawyers as a "truly legal racket." Mr. Montague comes back with the retort courteous: "These misinformants apparently esteem their ignorance of these Supreme Court decisions as a specially high qualification for passing judgment upon the Sherman law."[24] Let us hope that this little controversy will be settled by the rule of reason. My own economic studies make me incline to the views of Mr. Montague on this phase of the question.

Mr. Montague, however, is a lawyer whose business it is to advise his clients, the trade associations and others, what he finds the law to be and what is best for their interests. In substance, what he shrewdly and competently says to them is this: The Sherman Act has not worked out so badly for you, after all. The lawyers have performed wonders in skillfully guiding the courts for 40 years so as to mollify if not wholly to modify the original purpose of the law. If we are not yet able to give you all you desire, nevertheless hope on. Things might be worse. We may even be able to get the courts to concede a little more. Let a sleeping dog lie.

But the members of the N.A.M. group say: "No, it's well enough for the big fellows, it has some features that even we halfway like, but on the whole we are getting the bad end of the bargain. We want a change." And then they get mad and call the practice of trade association law "a racket."

THE MENACE TO CAPITALISM

What is to be the conclusion of the whole matter? Who dares to predict with confidence, when on the one side are alined the accepted philosophy of our law, a great weight of trained economic opinion, and the masses of our people with their deep-rooted suspicion of monopoly; and on the other side are arrayed well-nigh irresistible industrial self-interest and financial power to affect public opinion and to dominate political action?

The truth is that capitalism is becoming more unwieldly and unworkable in geometric ratio as the field of competition is narrowed and as independent enterprises are merged into great monopolistic units, with resulting special privilege and autocratic price fixing. The truth is that capitalism is working pretty badly now for the public welfare in some respects, and its breakdowns

[13] Atlantic Monthly, 147: 791; North American Revue, 227; 568–569.
[14] Magazine of Business, 55: 102.
[15] Atlantic Monthly, 147: 792.
[16] Atlantic Monthly, 793.
[17] Magazine of Business, 55: 195.
[18] Atlantic Monthly, 147: 791.
[19] Magazine of Business, 55: 31.
[20] Atlantic Monthly, 141:424.
[21] Atlantic Monthly, 419.
[22] Pamphlet, A Cure for Our Sherman Act Troubles, by J. H. Williams, address delivered Oct. 20, 1931, p. 17.
[23] Ibid., 25.
[24] Magazine of Business, 55: 333.

are becoming increasingly disastrous. The truth is that business leaders are trying vainly to operate a capitalistic system by methods and business practices that are in conflict with its fundamental assumptions. The truth is that a large part of the industrial field is already in the possession of industrial oligarchies rather than of independent enterprisers. The truth is that capitalism is being destroyed by the capitalists—or by some of them—heedlessly bent on their own supposed advantage. The truth is that while we may temporize, the ultimate alternative to a regime of competitive prices is one of authoritative prices, whether of private monopoly or of public socialism. Is it going to be possible to save the system of individual freedom from its false friends, those very men who should have most at stake in its preservation?

The truth is that the sort of competition contemplated in our accepted philosophy is regulated and reasonable competition. The Supreme Court's announcement of its ambiguous "rule of reason" was not needed to make that clear, and served only to muddy the waters of discussion. The truth is that any competition is unreasonable that fosters and eventuates in monopoly, now a legal synonym for "restraint of commerce." The truth is that the Sherman Act reasonably interpreted and enforced would prohibit aggregations of industrial units with monopolistic powers, and would put an end to the very evils of which the opponents of that act now complain. The truth is that the Sherman Act, as well as the Clayton Act, is designed to prevent the very business practices that weaken and destroy regulated and effective competition. The truth is that so-called "cutthroat competition" which many business men so strongly denounce is but another name for the discrimination in prices to which they cling as an inalienable right. Open and uniform prices, placarded at the mill, are a necessary condition of free competition and open markets in this day of big business.

Industrial price methods are only a part of the larger corporation problem, but a very important part. The truth is that we have been heading the wrong way and have got off on a wrong road in our economic development. Our present course can lead only to general disaster, worse in the long run than the temporary and still comparatively superficial evils of the present depression.

Can the better part of the Nation be brought to realize these truths? Will the better part of the business world unite with earnest citizens and sincere public officials in the effort to get further needed legislation and effective enforcement of existing laws? That is at once the most truly conservative and the only truly progressive course to pursue. The political and legislative history of the next 4 years may record the answer to these questions.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, reported favorably sundry nominations in the Diplomatic Service.

Mr. POPE, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, reported favorably the nominations of Hooker A. Doolittle, of New York, and of Clarence E. Gauss, of Connecticut, to be secretaries in the Diplomatic Service of the United States.

TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry I report favorably the nomination of David E. Lilienthal, of Wisconsin, to be a member of the Board of Directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority for the term expiring 3 years after May 18, 1933, and the nomination of Harcourt Alexander Morgan, of Tennessee, to be a member of the Board of Directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority for the term expiring 6 years after May 18, 1933.

It has been reported to me that it is necessary for these appointments to be acted on at once, so that the Muscle Shoals project may be gotten under way. Therefore, I ask unanimous consent for the confirmation of the two nominations which I have reported.

Mr. McCARRAN. I object.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I did not understand the nature of the request.

Mr. SMITH. Objection has been made. I asked for immediate consideration of two appointments, as the Muscle Shoals project is being delayed for lack of organization of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. McCARRAN. I object.

THE CALENDAR

The VICE PRESIDENT. Are there further reports of committees? If not, the calendar is in order.

THE JUDICIARY

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Jim C. Smith to be United States attorney, northern district of Alabama.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Paul E. Ruppel, to be United States marshal, southern district of Illinois.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Rear Admiral William D. Leahy to be Chief of the Bureau of Navigation, with rank of rear admiral, term of 4 years, from the 1st day of July 1933.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

BUREAU OF INTERNAL REVENUE

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of E. Barrett Prettyman, of Maryland, to be General Counsel.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, we have recently confirmed a Commissioner of Internal Revenue against whose confirmation there were very serious protests. It is important to know whether this nominee, Mr. Prettyman, has had any connections with Mr. Helvering or with Mr. Arthur Mullen, and what his connections generally have been. I wish the Senator from Maryland would enlighten us.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I cannot speak as to Mr. Prettyman's complete experience, of course, but I think I can in substance give an answer to the Senator's question.

Mr. Prettyman is a Marylander, who has lived practically all of his life in Montgomery County, adjoining the District of Columbia. For a number of years he has practiced in that county, particularly in Washington. He is known as a very excellent income-tax lawyer. He has practiced before the Department. I do not think he has ever tried a case with or been directly or indirectly associated with either Mr. Helvering or Mr. Mullen in income-tax matters, so far as I know.

I know that I am not breaching any confidence when I say to the Senator from Pennsylvania that only a couple of days ago Mr. Prettyman came to my office and told me that he thought the office to which he had been appointed was the largest law office in the world in point of attorneys. He said he wanted to make a good record, and to eliminate, if possible, some of the reflection that has been thrown on the office under previous administrations, perhaps wisely or unwisely, justly or unjustly. He asked me if I would not stand back of him. He is not a political fellow in the general sense. He said he did not want to put anybody in the office who could not discharge the work, first of all, and he wanted a character of men who would help him to administer the office impartially and fairly.

I simply mention that conversation, which Mr. Prettyman did not know would reach the floor of the Senate, to show his aim to administer his new office in the best way possible.

Mr. REED. Is he in some firm of lawyers here in Washington?

Mr. TYDINGS. I do not think so. I think he practices in his own name. He may have associates, but there is no one in the firm that I know of besides himself. I think it is E. Barrett Prettyman, attorney at law.

Mr. REED. Approximately how old is he?

Mr. TYDINGS. He is about 45 years old, I should imagine. I may say to the Senator that Mr. Prettyman enjoys an exceptionally high reputation for integrity and stands high at the bar and also as a man.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I think I can say something about Mr. Prettyman. He is the son of the Reverend Forrest J. Prettyman, who was at one time Chaplain of the Senate. I would hardly have taken him to be 45 years old. I should say he is about 40 years old, from what I know of him. I am quite sure he is a very fine man and the kind of a man the Senate would like to confirm to this office.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, is Mr. Prettyman the attorney who represented the Senator from Michigan [Mr. COUZENS] in his case before the Bureau of Internal Revenue?

Mr. McKELLAR. I think he is. I think he was associated with the attorneys of the Senator from Michigan in the trial of his case before the income-tax people, and I should say that was indicative of his standing as a tax lawyer. While Mr. Prettyman is not infallible, I think he will do his utmost to administer the office in a way that will reflect credit on himself and on those who have sponsored his appointment.

Mr. REED. I hope it will not be assumed that my questions indicate a desire to cast any reflection on Mr. Prettyman. I have heard of no criticism of him. The position he is about to take over, however, is one of the most important positions in the Government. If it were in the hands of a man of dubious integrity there would be the possibility of great scandal; and I feel I was justified in making my inquiries.

Mr. TYDINGS. Let me say another thing to the Senator from Pennsylvania. Mr. Prettyman has been a Democrat, but he has been an independent Democrat in politics. As my colleague, Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH, knows, he has been a free lance for good government in his community as he saw it, and has not hesitated to fight the whole organization of his own county on several occasions. I simply mention that as showing his independence in looking at political questions.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. President, I might say, for the information of the Senator from Pennsylvania, that I have known of Mr. Prettyman and his family for a great many years. I think he is a man of ability in his profession, and a man of very high character. I feel quite sure that he will represent the Government well, and reflect credit on himself and those who recommended him for the appointment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

That completes the calendar.

RECESS

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, as in legislative session, I move that the Senate take a recess until tomorrow at 11 o'clock.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 11 o'clock p.m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Friday, June 9, 1933, at 11 o'clock a.m.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate June 8 (legislative day of June 6), 1933

AMBASSADOR EXTRAORDINARY AND PLENIPOTENTIARY

Robert P. Skinner, of Ohio, now Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Estonia, to be Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to Turkey.

ENVOYS EXTRAORDINARY AND MINISTER PLENIPOTENTIARY

Robert Granville Caldwell, of Texas, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to Portugal.

Francis White, of Maryland, now an Assistant Secretary of State, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to Czechoslovakia.

John Flournoy Montgomery, of California, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to Hungary.

Alvin Mansfield Owsley, of Texas, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to Rumania.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

Robert C. Bell, of Minnesota, to be United States district judge, district of Minnesota, to succeed William A. Cant, deceased.

DISTRICT JUDGE, DIVISION NO. 1, DISTRICT OF ALASKA

George F. Alexander, of Oregon, to be district judge, division no. 1, district of Alaska, to succeed J. W. Harding, term expired.

JUDGE OF THE UNITED STATES CUSTOMS COURT

William J. Keefe, of Iowa, to be judge of the United States Customs Court in New York City.

ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL

George C. Sweeney, of Massachusetts, to be Assistant Attorney General, to fill an existing vacancy.

UNITED STATES ATTORNEYS

Berthol J. Husting, of Wisconsin, to be United States attorney, eastern district of Wisconsin, to succeed Edward J. Gehl, appointed by the court.

Ralph J. Rivers, of Alaska, to be United States attorney, division no. 4, district of Alaska, to succeed Julien A. Hurley, term expired.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL

Joseph A. McDonald, of Alaska, to be United States marshal, division No. 4, district of Alaska, to succeed M. O. Carlson, appointed by court.

MEMBER OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION

Russell Hawkins, of Oregon, to be a member of the board of directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for the unexpired portion of the term of 2 years from January 22, 1932, vice Charles A. Miller.

MEMBER OF THE FEDERAL HOME LOAN BANK BOARD

Walter H. Newton, of Minnesota, to be a member of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board for the unexpired portion of the term of 2 years from July 22, 1932, vice H. Morton Bodfish.

PURCHASING AGENT FOR THE POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

Harrison Parkman, of Kansas, to be Purchasing Agent for the Post Office Department, vice Robert S. Regar.

SUPERINTENDENT OF THE UNITED STATES MINT AT SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.

Peter J. Haggerty, of San Francisco, Calif., to be Superintendent of the United States Mint at San Francisco, Calif., in place of Michael J. Kelly.

COLLECTORS OF INTERNAL REVENUE

J. Enos Ray, of Hyattsville, Md., to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Maryland, in place of Galen L. Tait.

Eugene Fly, of Jackson, Miss., to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Mississippi, in place of George L. Sheldon.

James W. Maloney, of Pendleton, Oreg., to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Oregon, in place of Clyde G. Huntley.

Charles M. McCabe, of Nashville, Tenn., to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Tennessee, in place of Hal H. Clements.

Sidney P. Osborn, of Arizona, to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Arizona, in place of Fred O. Goodell.

Harwell G. Davis, of Alabama, to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Alabama, in place of William E. Snead.

John P. Carter, of Los Angeles, Calif., to be collector of internal revenue for the sixth district of California, in place of Galen H. Welch.

John V. Lewis, of Oakland, Calif., to be collector of internal revenue for the first district of California, in place of John P. McLaughlin.

William E. Page, of Columbus, Ga., to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Georgia, in place of Josiah T. Rose.

Lewis Penwell, of Montana, to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Montana, in place of Charles A. Rasmusson.

David L. Lawrence, of Pittsburgh, Pa., to be collector of internal revenue for the twenty-third district of Pennsylvania, in place of Daniel B. Heiner.

Walter R. Thurmond, of Logan, W.Va., to be collector of internal revenue for the district of West Virginia, in place of Vernon E. Johnson.

COLLECTORS OF CUSTOMS

Warren Van Dyke, of Pennsylvania, to be collector of customs for customs collection district no. 11, with headquarters at Philadelphia, Pa., in place of A. Lincoln Acker.

James Houlahen, of Millvale, Pa., to be collector of customs for customs collection district no. 12, with headquarters at Pittsburgh, Pa., in place of Samuel H. Thompson.

William B. George, of San Diego, Calif., to be collector of customs for customs collection district no. 25, with headquarters at San Diego, Calif., in place of William H. Ellison.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate June 8 (legislative day of June 6), 1933

UNITED STATES ATTORNEY

Jim C. Smith to be United States attorney, northern district of Alabama.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL

Paul E. Ruppel to be United States marshal, southern district of Illinois.

GENERAL COUNSEL, BUREAU OF INTERNAL REVENUE

E. Barrett Prettyman to be General Counsel, Bureau of Internal Revenue.

PROMOTION IN THE NAVY

Rear Admiral William D. Leahy to be Chief of the Bureau of Navigation, with rank of rear admiral.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, JUNE 8, 1933

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Our Heavenly Father, in a world of changes and vicissitudes, we pray for wisdom to learn their lessons and to acquire their discipline. We seek Thee, O Lord, for in Thy presence there is a sense of the stability and the security of things good and helpful; give us the bright light of a happy assurance. As we lift our cheerful song to Thee this day, set Thy seal upon our lips and restrain us from magnifying the faults and the failings of others. Stimulate us with a patriotic desire to minister unto our country and to those whom the thorns of circumstances have injured. Almighty God, clear the way and diminish difficulties. May we walk all this day long with Thee, and let Thy revealed truth touch all hearts with thanksgiving and praise. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Horne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 5793. An act to revive and reenact the act entitled "An act authorizing Jed P. Ladd, his heirs, legal representatives, and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across Lake Champlain from East Alburg, Vt., to West Swanton, Vt.", approved March 2, 1929.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments, in which the concurrence of the House is requested, bills of the House of the following titles:

H.R. 4812. An act to promote the foreign trade of the United States in apples and/or pears, to protect the reputation of American-grown apples and pears in foreign markets, to prevent deception or misrepresentation as to the quality of such products moving in foreign commerce, to provide for the commercial inspection of such products entering such commerce, and for other purposes; and H.R. 5208. An act to amend the probation law.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills and a concurrent resolution of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 512. An act for the relief of Peter Pierre;

S. 690. An act for the relief of Charles L. Graves;

S. 723. An act to amend the act of March 13, 1924 (43 Stat.L. 21), so as to permit the Flathead, Kootenai, and Upper Pend d'Oreille Tribes or Nations of Indians to file suit thereunder;

S. 815. An act to provide for the survival of certain actions in favor of the United States;

S. 1126. An act for relief of M. M. Twichel;

S. 1561. An act providing for payment of $50 to each enrolled Chippewa Indian of the Red Lake Band, of Minnesota, from the timber funds standing to their credit in the Treasury of the United States;

S. 1742. An act granting consent of Congress to Ernest N. Hutchinson, Otto A. Case, and A. C. Martin to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across Deception Pass between Whidby Island and Fidalgo Island in the State of Washington;

S. 1745. An act granting the consent of Congress to the State of Oregon to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Umpqua River at or near Reedsport, Douglas County, Oreg.;

S. 1746. An act granting the consent of Congress to the State of Oregon to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across Yaquina Bay at or near Newport, Lincoln County, Oreg.;

S. 1747. An act granting the consent of Congress to the State of Oregon to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across Alsea Bay at or near Waldport, Lincoln County, Oreg.;

S. 1748. An act granting the consent of Congress to the State of Oregon to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across Coos Bay at or near North Bend, Coos County, Oreg.;

S. 1749. An act granting the consent of Congress to the State of Oregon to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Siuslaw River at or near Florence, Lane County, Oreg.;

S. 1774. An act to provide for extension of time for making deferred payments on homestead entries in the abandoned Fort Lowell Military Reservation, Ariz.;

S. 1780. An act to provide for the discontinuance of the use as dwellings of buildings situated in alleys in the District of Columbia, and for the replatting and development of squares containing inhabited alleys, in the interest of public health, comfort, morals, safety, and welfare, and for other purposes;

S. 1807. An act to provide for the exchange of Indian and privately owned lands, Fort Mojave Indian Reservation, Ariz.;

S. 1808. An act to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary in 1936 of the independence of Texas, and of the noble and heroic sacrifices of her pioneers, whose revered memory has been an inspiration to her sons and daughters during the past century; and

S.Con.Res. 2. Concurrent resolution providing for the printing, with an index, of the Constitution of the United States, as amended to April 1, 1933, together with the Declaration of Independence.

ADDRESS AT MEMORIAL EXERCISES OF SONS AND DAUGHTERS OF THE CONFEDERACY

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by including therein an address I delivered to the Sons and Daughters of the Confederacy at Fairfax Court House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Mr. Speaker, under leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include an address I delivered at Fairfax Court House on June 1, 1933, at the memorial exercises held by the Sons of Confederate Veterans and the Daughters of the Confederacy. The exercises, I may add, were presided over by a distinguished ex-Member of this House, the Honorable R. Walton Moore.

The address is as follows:

Seventy-two years ago tonight this quiet, peaceful village, at that time already rich in the history of the past, was the scene of the first armed conflict between the States, and gallant Capt. John Quincy Marr, for whom your camp was named, laid down his life for the Southland.

As a descendant of one whose blood was also shed for the Southland, I come to you this evening in the sunset days of your lives without one blush of shame for the ideals which you have cherished, without one pang of regret for the things which you have done, without one single apology for the sacred principles for which you have stood, with a heart full of love, with a conscience that approves of your every act and deed, with a mind believing as you believe, and with the knowledge that under every condition, in war and in peace, you have acquitted yourselves like men.

In the name of your progeny I thank you for the lessons of self-sacrifice you have taught us, for the God-given examples you have set before us, for the lofty ideals you have instilled in us, for the glorious heritage you have left us, and for the noble aspirations you have planted in our bosoms.

It has been asked, "Was the blood of the South shed in vain?" Such a question could only have emanated from a base and depraved mind—a mind devoid of all noble sentiment and shorn of all manly instincts and ideals. In answer I say: Two thousand years ago the blood of the Savior of mankind was shed on Calvary to free the world from the curse of sin—to provide a means whereby you and I, through faith and repentance, can triumph over sin and receive eternal life. His blood was not shed in vain. It will trickle down through the ages alleviating suffering, putting songs in the hearts of the dejected, restoring the broken in mind and body, providing rest for the weary, bringing faith to the skeptic, hope to the downtrodden, charity to the neglected, and peace and new life to countless millions.

From 1861 to 1865, nearly half a million men, the flower of the Southland, laid down their lives in defense of a principle that they held sacred and dear. Their blood was not shed in vain. It will trickle down through the ages bringing faith, hope, courage, strength, and inspiration to every son and daughter of the Southland until the stars no longer twinkle, the sun no longer shines, the earth has crumbled, and time shall be no more.

Upon an occasion like this I am beset with the temptation to recount your deeds of valor upon the fields of battle, to review again your prowess as warriors; but I refrain, for your deeds upon the battlefields will never die. They have been painted by the delicate hands of our artists upon convas, they have been chiseled into marble and granite by our sculptors, they have been recounted in thousands of volumes by our historians, they have been eloquently proclaimed by our orators, and they have been sung by our poets.

Oh, but you have other achievements to your credit—achievements not acquired upon the fields of battle—but achievements acquired after the storm of battle had ceased and you set about rebuilding the ruined South. It is of these achievements I would speak.

After the surrender you were met face to face with the greatest problems that ever confronted a people. Your homes—many of them—had gone up in flames; your livestock had either been consumed in the war or driven off by the enemy; your fields were grown up in briars, washed and gullied; your factories—those left standing—idle; your commerce ruined; your Southland due to the conditions prevailing before the war was in the crudest state of development; your labor system was overthrown and only the most unseeming elements existed out of which to construct a new one; and half a million men of your slim Caucasian population were dead or disabled in their prime. Then to add to your misery and distress the reconstruction governments brutally disregarding your welfare, and as if to wring from the prostrate body of the South the last drop of blood, weighed down the weakened States with debts until over $300,000,000 were robbed from the present and future.

"Can the South ever recover?" was the question that fell from thousands of lips during those dark days. Little did the propounders of such a question realize the mettle of which you are made, or the indomitable courage and strength of our women. While you came home penniless and in poverty, you came rich in energy and self-denial and went to work without a day's delay. Well have your efforts been crowned with success, and today, due to your fidelity and untiring efforts, the South, as if by magic, has arisen from the ash heaps of the sixties to its present position of grandeur and strength and stands abreast with the sister sections in wealth, in business advantages, and in economic possibilities.

May I not recount briefly some of your achievements?

By improving our soil, by building up our transportation system, by erecting factories, and developing our natural resources you have brought millions of people to the South, and today we have one third of the Nation's population. And I may add in passing that we are all proud of the fact that our southern population is the purest American stock we have.

You have developed and greatly improved our agricultural lands, and today with 35 percent of the farming area we are producing 40 percent of the Nation's farm crops.

From a few miles of railroad with scarcely no equipment you have developed our transportation system until it covers the Southland, east and west, north and south, with around 90,000 miles of roadbed.

You have developed our highway system, and today 222,738 of the 694,110 miles of hard-surfaced roads are in the South.

From an industry in which only a few thousand dollars were invested you have invested in our cotton mills millions of dollars, and today our southern cotton mills have practically two thirds of the spindles in America.

You have turned the attention of our people to manufacturing, and today we have invested in manufacturing plants billions of dollars and, in my opinion, the day is not far distant when the industrial East will be transplanted to our own Tennessee Valley.

You have developed our natural resources and found that we have the largest sulphur deposit in the world, and today we are producing 83 percent of the world's sulphur supply; and 99 percent of American sulphur comes from the South.

You have discovered that we have the largest known gas fields in the world, and today the South is producing 67 percent of American gas.

You have discovered that one half of the reserve oil is in the South, and today we are supplying 71 percent of the American production of crude oil.

You have developed our water power to over 2,000,000 horsepower, and we have yet undeveloped nearly 8,000,000 horsepower.

You have made wonderful progress in developing our deposits of iron ore, and today a southern city—Birmingham—is among the largest steel markets in the world.

You have erected sawmills that are daily cutting millions of feet of soft- and hard-wood lumber, and today 67 percent of the hardwood lumber comes from the South, and we have discovered that our southern hardwood sections are producing the finest-known texture of hardwood lumber.

You have developed our coal veins, and today we are shipping to our foreign and domestic trade millions of tons of the finest bituminous coal in the world, and we have discovered that we own one third of the Nation's coal area.

You have made wonderful progress along educational lines. In recent years, nowhere in this broad land of ours, save in the South, where the preceding lethargy was long and marked, has progress in education been amazing. Today our colleges and universities of higher learning offer our boys and girls the services of teachers as learned as any to be found in the northern and foreign universities, and our public schools are not only efficient but sufficiently numerous to bring an elementary education within reach of every boy and girl. As an indication of our progress in public education I call your attention to the fact that last year here in Virginia we spent practically three times as much for public education as the whole South spent in 1870.

In your march of progress, thank God, you have not forgotten our religious side. The church in the South has kept pace with our economic develpoments. You have held fast to the faith, and because of this fact today we find in the South the purest religion preached by the purest ministry to be found in the world. Here the infidel finds no audience, the agnostic no followers, and the higher critic is looked upon as one with more ego than piety. Yes; our mothers' prayers have followed us, and may they ever follow us, keeping us in the straight and narrow path that leads from this world by Calvary to the heights beyond.

Yes; you have accomplished great things, and the noonday has not yet arrived. The future never looked more inviting and hopeful. I know not what is beyond the mystic veil that separates the present from the future, but when I look into the future "as far as human eyes can see" I see our agricultural interests giving employment to innumerable thousands; I hear the whistle of our factories break the stillness of the morn, summoning myriads of men to honest labor; I see our workmen delving into the bowels of the earth and bringing forth unheard-of riches; I see the ships of diverse nations anchored in our harbors eagerly seeking the grain from our fields, the products from our mills, and the minerals from our mines; I see our employers paying a fair wage and our workmen giving in return an honest day's work; I see our public officials honestly trying to promote the public weal; I see a land where womanhood is honored, motherhood held sacred, children valued above sordid gold, and where the church is exalted above every other institution. Yes; I see a picture of the greatest country of all time, the South at its zenith.

Oh, but you have had assistance—noble, sacrificing assistance. I am not detracting from your achievements when I tell you that you did not accomplish these things single-handed. You accomplished them by and with the assistance of our southern women. Oh, what thoughts the mere mention of our southern women conjure up! Oh, what mental pictures pass in kaleidoscopic parade before the eye!

I see the parting between the southern mother and her soldier boy. Yes; soldier boy, whether son, husband, or brother. I see her with supreme effort close the floodgate of her heart, and bid her soldier boy goodby with a hidden tear in her eye, a secret prayer upon her lips, but a smile upon her face.

I see her during the long wait when her soldier boy was on the firing line intermittingly working and praying, praying and working—working for those left behind on her hands and to assist in supplying those in battle—praying for both and that God might give her health and strength to labor on for the cause.

I see her tenderly and eagerly nurse from the very jaws of death back to life those near and dear to her in order that they might return as quickly as possible to their posts of duty.

I see her without losing faith, hope, or courage, keep the home fires burning for five long, dark, and dreary years.

I see her as she meets her exhausted though unconquered and unconquerable hero and hears the news of the surrender; and I see plainly written upon her face the Bible she believes—"not my will but Thine be done." For her hero not a word of censure, but thousands of praise; not a look of despair, but a beaming countenance that speaks louder than words: "I am happy with you; we will work it out together; God liveth and all is well!" That night I see them around the fireside. Not all, perhaps, for some are sleeping upon the battlefields, but all that are left. There they sit in a semicircle! The mother, whose girlish beauty has ripened into motherly loveliness, has upon her lap a young southerner—the baby of the flock—and from the expression of joy I see in his eyes I know he would not exchange his seat for a kingly throne. I see on one side of her chair another young southerner, his head resting upon her shoulders, and on the other side I see a miniature of the mother, her tangled hair hiding a face radiant and beautiful. A little to the right I see her hero—the father of the flock—with his arms clasped around his firstborn, his tired and care-worn face, chamelionlike, reflecting the sadness and happiness that is in his heart. I see in the mother's hand a book. Yes, the book we all go to in time of trouble. She is reading, and all are eagerly listening to the words that fall from her lips. Power! Did you ever think of the power of a Godly woman? Did you ever think of her power to interpret the Scripture? It holds the young and the old; it satisfies the vivid imagination of childhood and the logic of maturity; it brings joy to the young and happiness to the old; it dispels the clouds and brings the sunlight. And that night the battle was won. Her faith, her hopes, and her prayers prevailed, and brought the needed strength and courage to her hero to face the future.

I see her during the days of the reconstruction, when the regime of the carpetbagger and scalawag hung like a pall over the Southland—hung for interminable years, it seemed, until God Himself became disgusted at their perfidy and brushed them off the stage—her faith in the future unshaken, preaching, teaching, and counseling that behind the cloud a brighter day awaited the Southland.

I see her during the years following the reconstruction encouraging the man of the South to plan for the future, to build for the future, and to live for the future.

Yes; and above all I see her presiding over our southern homes—the homes where the family Bible is read, where family prayers are daily offered, where men and women are made.

Oh, I know wonderful women have been produced in other lands. I am not unmindful that the Jews produced a Mary Magdalene, the Egyptians a Cleopatra, the Italians a Florence Nightingale, the French a Joan of Arc, and the English an Edith Cavell; but no nation, no people outside of the Southland ever produced a southern mother. When I contemplate our southern mothers my heart swells with pride, for I see a picture of the one who kissed away the pains from my cuts and bruises in childhood, whose counsel and advice I cherished in manhood, whose simple faith led me to the cross, and whose daily life was so clean, so sweet, and so pure that to me she was the godliest of the godly.

O southern women, blessed be thy name! Who knows how many of the factories that now give employment to untold thousands have been erected, how many railroads that now traverse our fair land in all directions have been constructed, how many coal mines have been opened up, how many sawmills have been started, how many fields have been planted, how many farms have been cleared, how many schools and churches have been built by thy vision, thy counsel, thy inspiration, and thy prayers?

Yes; you have accomplished great things, but ever remember you accomplished they by and with the assistance of our southern women. With such help, how could you fail?

The line of gray is rapidly thinning. Few of the war mothers linger longer with us. God, as if loath to give up such brilliant examples of strength, courage, and valor, faith, hope, and love, has kept you who remain with us far beyond the allotted three score years and ten. May He in His goodness and mercy continue to extend your years of usefulness and service, and may they be years of peace and tranquillity blessed with the conscious knowledge that when the last bugle sounds and you are marched into the presence of the Great Judge you will hear the benediction, "Well done thou good and faithful servant."

In a few years the future destiny of the Southland will be committed to the keeping of your descendants. With a courage strengthened by the examples set by you in rebuilding the Southland from poverty and ruin to opulence and grandeur, with a vision broadened by your prophetic eye that looked through the darkness of the reconstruction to the glories of today, with a faith made firm by the fidelity with which you have labored for our homeland, and with the remembrance that the blood that crimsoned the sod of Manassas and Chickamauga still courses through our veins, we accept the sacred trust, swear allegiance to the ideals for which you have always stood, solmenly declare that we still believe in the sacred principles for which you fought, in all seriousness vow that we will ever respect, honor, and observe the traditions of our people; earnestly pledge to devote our time, our wealth, our energy, and our strength to the work of carrying on the rebuilding of the Southland which you so nobly advanced, and lovingly dedicate our lives to the cause of perpetuating your memories through the countless ages yet to come.

May the God of our fathers witness our vows, and may we keep them inviolate!

HITLERISM

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks on my resolution concerning the German situation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, under leave to extend my remarks on my own resolution, House Resolution 148, asking our Government to issue strong remonstrances against the Hitler government because of its outrageous activities against the German Jews, I draw attention to the return to this country of Michael Williams, editor of the Commonweal and president of the Calvert Association, who spent 6 weeks in Germany investigating the reports of persecution of the Jews.

Mr. Williams is a member of the committee appointed by the American Committee on Religious Reports and Minorities for the express purpose of going to Germany to investigate conditions there. For approximately 2 weeks Mr. Williams interviewed members of the Hitler government in Berlin, leaders among the German and American business and professional men, as well as the leaders among those of the Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish faiths, respectively.

The statement of Michael Williams is a complete answer to the propaganda that the cruelties, if any, that exist in Germany, have been political cruelties, and that in the mighty political upheaval it was impossible to spare even the Jews.

The Nazi, with great cunning, has set in motion propaganda swollen with lies and chicanery in an endeavor to counteract the adverse world public opinion developed against Hitler, Rosenberg, Goebbels, and Goering.

But Mr. Williams affirms the truth of the reports that there was and still is in Germany a cruel persecution of the Jews which in its extent probably surpasses any recorded instance of persecution in Jewish history; for in their barbaric and inhuman intent absolutely to eliminate the Jewish portion of the German nation the Nazi government has deliberately proceeded to write into the fundamental law of the land measures outlawing all of the Jewish faith, without distinction between criminals and the law-abiding, patriotic citizens. Already the recorded cases of physical violence are at least 3,000 in number. This is aside from the more than 300 deaths which have resulted from outright killings to deaths brought about from injuries and shocks produced by physical violence. Equally heart-rending and sad, indeed, is Mr. Williams' further observation that under the present Hitler regime there is no future at all for the hundreds of thousands of young Jewish men and women in Germany.

EVEN THE CATHOLICS ARE PLACED UNDER THE HITLER BAN

Hitler, so we are informed by dispatches from Berlin under date of June 13, has warned the Catholics not to hold meetings. The Catholics will not forget for many days to come the suppression of the Congress of Catholic Journeymen and Apprentices in Munich last Sunday, June 11. This was a severe blow at religious freedom. Hitler has given many excuses concerning the dispersing of the devout Catholics who gathered in Munich last Sunday. These excuses will not wash. The Bavarian political police ruthlessly dispersed these Catholic communicants and caused much sorrow and suffering.

The suppression of this meeting is but one of the many evidences of the treachery of Hitler and his gang. It may be deemed a forerunner of what may follow. What has been meted out to the Jews may, in a less degree—because the Catholics are greater in number—be the portion of the Catholics.

Well might we agree with what Senator ROBINSON said in the Senate last Saturday, June 10, that the German spectacle is "sickening and terrifying." Especially pertinent is his comment when we read the brutal statement of Rosenberg, Hitler's lieutenant, that he will not rest until he sees the head of a prominent Jew on every telegraph post from Berlin to Dresden.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATION BILL—1934

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 4589) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of such District for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, and for other purposes, and I ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri calls up a conference report and asks unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4589) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of such district for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 10, 11, 17, 20, 21, 23, 24, 25, 30, and 33.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 5, 8, 12, 13, 14, 16, 18, 19, 26, and 27, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 7: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert "Director of the Bureau of the Budget"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 29: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 29, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "$1,300,000, to be immediately available"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 31: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 31, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "Director of the Bureau of the Budget"; and the Senate agree to the same.

The committee of conference report in disagreement amendments numbered 9, 15, 22, 28, 32, and 34.

CLARENCE CANNON,
THOMAS L. BLANTON,
J. P. BUCHANAN,
Managers on the part of the House.

ELMER THOMAS,
WILLIAM H. KING,
HENRY W. KEYES,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4589) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of such District for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference report as to each of such amendments, namely:

On no. 1: Appropriates $5,700,000, as proposed by the House, instead of $6,250,000, as proposed by the Senate, as the Federal contribution.

On no. 2: Strikes out the proposal of the Senate to appropriate $40,494 for the executive office and fix the salary of the two civilian Commissioners at $9,000 per annum each, and restores the House provision appropriating $38,794 and leaving the salary of the two civilian Commissioners to be fixed by the Classification Act of 1923, as has been provided in previous acts beginning with the fiscal year 1925.

On nos. 3 and 4: Restores the language of the House providing for the installation and modification of electric traffic lights and appropriates $45,000, as contained in the House bill, in lieu of $10,000, as provided in the Senate bill.

On no. 5: Appropriates $265,000 for personal services under the Public Library, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $260,000, as proposed by the House.

On no. 6: Appropriates $60,000 for personal services under the office of the register of wills, as proposed by the House, instead of $63,509, as proposed by the Senate.

On no. 7: Provides that the expenditure of additional funds from the gas-tax fund for additional street and road improvements and repairs must be approved by the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, instead of by the President, as provided by the House, and by the Commissioners, as provided by the Senate.

On no. 8: Appropriates not to exceed $1,500,000 additional from the gas-tax fund for street and road improvement and repair, as proposed by the Senate, instead of not to exceed $1,040,000, as proposed by the House.

On no. 10: Restores the House provision prohibiting the use of appropriations for the operation of a testing laboratory of the highways department.

On no. 11: Restores the House provision prohibiting the use of appropriations for the operation of a high-temperature incinerator for the disposal of combustible refuse in the southeast section of the city.

On no. 12: Appropriates $97,167, as provided by the Senate, for personal services, public playgrounds, instead of $95.000, as provided by the House.

On no. 13: Appropriates $5,225 for the maintenance of bathing pools, as provided by the Senate.

On no. 14: Appropriates $5,432,760, as provided by the Senate, instead of $5,427,360, as provided by the House, the additional $5,400 being for three additional teachers for sight-conservation classes.

On no. 16: Provides $32,000, as proposed by the Senate, for maintenance and instruction of deaf and dumb persons admitted to the Columbia Institution for the Deaf, instead of $31,500, as proposed by the House.

On no. 17: Appropriates $7,500, as proposed by the House, for Americanization work, instead of $9,500, as proposed by the Senate.

On nos. 18 and 19: Appropriates $6,000 for the purchase of furniture for the Logan School, as proposed by the Senate.

On no. 20: Strikes out the proposal of the Senate to appropriate $50,000 from unexpended balances for the improvement of school grounds.

On no. 21: Strikes out the proposal of the Senate to make available for repairs and improvements to school buildings $25,000 from unexpended balances for buildings and grounds for the fiscal years 1932 and 1933.

On no. 23: Appropriates $103,000, as proposed by the House, instead of $104,530, as proposed by the Senate, for personal services under the Metropolitan Police.

On no. 24: Strikes out the proposal of the Senate permitting officers and members of the fire department to become members of any organization which does not permit the use of the strike for any purpose.

On no. 25: Appropriates $41,000, as proposed by the House, instead of $43,932, as proposed by the Senate, for repairs to apparatus of the fire department.

On no. 26: Makes available the unexpended balance of not exceeding $54,000 for continuing construction of buildings and other improvements at the workhouse and reformatory, as proposed by the Senate.

On no. 27: Appropriates $59,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $55,000, as proposed by the House, for maintenance of the Tuberculosis Hospital.

On no. 29: Appropriates $1,300,000 for emergency relief in the District of Columbia, instead of $1,250,000, as proposed by the House, and $1,500,000, as proposed by the Senate, provides that such appropriation shall be immediately available, and eliminates the language proposed by the Senate making the appropriation available for expenditure without regard to monthly or other apportionment.

On no. 30: Restores the House provision appropriating $1,000,000 for reimbursement to the United States in compliance with the act of May 29, 1930.

On no. 31: Provides that the expenditure of $635,000 additional from the water fund must be approved by the Director of the Bureau of the Budget instead of by the President, as proposed by the House, and by the Commissioners, as proposed by the Senate.

On no. 33: Corrects a section number.

The committee of conference report in disagreement the following amendments:

On no. 9: Relating to the construction of the Calvert Street Bridge over Rock Creek and the paving of Constitution Avenue from North Capitol Street to Second Street NW.

On no. 15: Relating to the filling of teaching vacancies in the public schools.

On no. 22: Relating to the construction of additional school buildings.

On no. 28: Appropriating $5,100 for maintaining the War Veterans' Service Office.

On no. 32: Relating to the increase in salary of any officer or employee of the District of Columbia by reason of the reallocation of the position of such officer or employee to a higher grade.

On no. 34: Permitting the transfer of funds between subheads of appropriations for the Public Library, public playgrounds, health department, and public welfare.

CLARENCE CANNON,
THOMAS L. BLANTON,
J. P. BUCHANAN,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, this bill is of particular interest for the reason that it is the first general appropriation bill to be enacted under this administration. On that account it is especially gratifying that it carries out two important pledges. In the first place, it reduces expenditures 25 percent; and, in the second place, it balances the District budget. The current appropriation bill carries an appropriation a little in excess of $41,000,000. This bill provides for a total expenditure a little in excess of $30,000,000, a retrenchment of slightly more than the 25 percent which was promised.

This retrenchment, Mr. Speaker, is for the benefit of the taxpayers of the District of Columbia and the Federal taxpayers alike. It plays no favorites. It reduces the amount of the Federal contribution only in proportion to the savings in the bill. The Budget reduced the estimates of the bill 26.8 percent, and naturally we made a corresponding reduction in the Federal contribution of exactly that proportion. The last Federal contribution was $7,775,000, and reducing that by 26.8 percent we have the Federal contribution provided in this bill of $5,700,000. Numerous newspaper statements to the contrary notwithstanding, we have not reduced the Federal contribution a dollar, except in proportion to the reduction of expenditures in the bill.

And we have provided for a similar saving to the taxpayers of the District. We have eliminated from this bill the provision heretofore carried in all recent District appropriation bills, prohibiting a reduction of the local tax rate, and have specifically requested in our conferences with the representatives of the District government, that the reductions provided in the bill shall be reflected in a reduction of the tax rate in the District. The present tax rate—and the rate levied for a number of years in the District—is $1.70. The economies invoked in this bill make it possible to reduce that tax rate to $1.50, and on the initiative of the committee, as approved by the House, we have suggested—and we trust the Commissioners will find it practicable—that the Board of Commissioners, under the authority conferred by this bill, reduce the local tax rate from $1.70 to $1.50.

The retrenchments made in the bill are temporary, insofar as they affect the maintenance of the water system, the highways, and the construction of school buildings. Other than that, it is our hope and expectation that these retrenchments will be largely permanent. There has been an unprecedented expansion in the cost of District government. It has increased at a rate unequalled in any other appropriation bill, even in the last 10 years of hysterical expansion of governmental activities and mushroom growth of governmental expenditures.

For the years 1919 and 1920, when the city was still filled with Federal war workers, when war-time prices were still in effect, and the cost of every local department might have been expected to reach the maximum, the bill carried only $15,000,000.

In the decade that followed the close of the war the costs of the District government, instead of returning to pre-war levels, skyrocketed to the incredible amount of $50,000,000—three and a half times the amount expended at the war peak. Even in this bill we are appropriating more than twice the amount spent for the same purposes in 1920.

It is to be hoped that for sometime to come the expenditures for purposes other than those indicated can be largely limited to the amounts provided in this bill.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the distinguished leader from New York.

Mr. SNELL. I have listened with much interest to the gentleman's statement, and I think it is commendable. Has there been any large deduction, or has there been a general cut all along the line in expenditures?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. It has been a general reduction all along the line. It is, in effect, a blanket reduction. Of course, some items have been cut lighter than others, but there have been no reductions which, in our judgment, will in any way curtail unduly the legitimate activities of the District government.

Mr. SNELL. As I understood the gentleman's explanation, the Federal Government is contributing to the District the same amount proportionately as it did last year.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Precisely. The Federal Government is contributing in proportion exactly the same amount it contributed last year. There has been no reduction in the proportionate contribution of the Federal Government to the District.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to my colleague on the committee.

Mr. TABER. If the gentleman will yield, the expenditures in the current bill are something like $7,775,000 out of the Federal Treasury, while this bill carries $5,700,000.

Mr. SNELL. The gentleman did not understand my question. I said proportionately to the whole bill we are contributing as much as we did last year.

Mr. TABER. Oh, yes.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. We have reduced last year's bill 26.8 percent and we reduced last year's Federal contribution 26.8 percent.

Mr. SNELL. That is what I understood.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Certainly, even the most enthusiastic partisan of the District could not expect us to pay a larger share than we paid last year, in view of the many statements in conference that the amount of the Federal contribution in the last bill was eminently fair and eminently satisfactory. Furthermore, Mr. Speaker, to be certain that there would be no injustices in this bill, we have provided, at the suggestion of the chairman of the committee, Mr. BUCHANAN, two provisions which made it possible, if extraordinary occasion should arise, to increase the amount available under the bill to the extent of $2,135,000—that is, in event unemployment conditions in the District justified it.

Mr. BUCHANAN's amendments provide that this amount can be allocated from the gas and water funds and expended, as provided by law, when in the judgment of the Director of the Budget unemployment in the District increases to a point where additional funds are required for public work to meet emergency conditions.

But I wish to take advantage of the opportunity to emphasize the terms of the section authorizing this additional expenditure only in such emergency. If, as it is expected, there is no increase in unemployment in the District, these additional funds are not available, and the Director of the Budget alone is authorized to determine when there shall have been such increase in unemployment over present conditions as to justify recourse to these additional funds.

I might say in this connection, speaking personally, that the provision which is being reported to the Senate in an amendment to the industrial recovery bill providing a large fund for expenditures on highways in the District of Columbia is wholly unjustified. If this amendment should be adopted, it is estimated there would be available for highways here in the District an amount aggregating approximately $2,000,000 in addition to the amount provided in this bill. I am wholly at a loss to see how that amount of money could possibly be expended when we have here in our highway fund already more than we need for District purposes.

Mr. COLLINS of Mississippi. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield.

Mr. COLLINS of Mississippi. Amendment no. 15 relates to the filling of teacher vacancies in the public schools. Under the agreement reached by the conferees, will teacher vacancies come from lists of eligibles? In other words, was the Senate provision accepted?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. It was agreed to without amendment. There are two classes of teachers provided for in this amendment. One provides that as vacancies occur teachers who have heretofore done special work, such as giving what is known as the "IQ" tests, shall be taken from such special work and transferred to regular class work. Second, it is provided that if it becomes necessary to appoint other teachers, they shall be drawn from lists prepared by examination, and shall go in as temporary teachers at the basic pay. In other words, they cannot be appointed temporarily and demand permanent appointment later on because of such service.

Mr. COLLINS of Mississippi. To what extent is the transfer or interchangeability of funds permitted in this bill?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Of course, under the economy bill provision was made for the transfer of funds between items—that is, funds could be increased not more than 15 percent or reduced not more than 12 percent. In this bill we provide for the same transfer within services, but provide that it shall be done only at the express direction and authorization of the Director of the Budget.

Mr. GOSS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield.

Mr. GOSS. As to amendment no. 9, the Calvert Street Bridge——

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The House made no provision for the Calvert Street Bridge.

Mr. GOSS. But the Senate has; and is it the gentleman's intention to concur with the Senate?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. It is our intention to ask that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. GOSS. In line 19 it reads "without reference to section 3709". That is the section that puts it without the lowest bidder, is it not, on the engineering work?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. That has to do with personal services.

Mr. GOSS. As I understand it, some years ago a drawing was made, not working drawings, but drawings for a stone bridge.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. That is true.

Mr. GOSS. Then the Commissioners forgot they ever had that drawing made, although that drawing was made and approved by the Fine Arts Commission. Is that right?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Unfortunately no record is kept of lapses of memory on the part of public officials.

Mr. GOSS. Then they went ahead, without the approval of the Fine Arts Commission, and entered into a contract with some steel-bridge company to make up a set of working drawings, costing how much?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The total costs of the plans, as I recall it, was $70,000.

Mr. GOSS. Now, if you will look on page 20, it says that the Commissioners shall have made a restudy and reinvestigation to determine which particular type of bridge is the most economical. Under this language, it seems to me, although we have had two plans drawn up, one of which has not been accepted by the Fine Arts Commission, they could still have another plan drawn up, even without going to the lowest bidder, and perhaps have a third bridge. Is that correct?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. In the discussions before the committee and the conferees there seemed to be a general understanding that if this item was agreed to we would construct the bridge provided for in the last plans.

Mr. GOSS. Does the gentleman mean the steel bridge?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The steel bridge. However, as will be noted, there is a provision that the type of bridge shall be subject to approval by the Fine Arts Commission.

Mr. GOSS. But you go farther than that.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. It would be quite possible for the Fine Arts Commission to order a masonry bridge, but if the investigation provided for here is made, it is the intention that it should be handled by personnel in the engineering department and at no additional expense to the Government.

Mr. GOSS. But any other money can be spent for these plans, in view of the fact that you are waiving section 3709, which is the lowest-bidder section; can they still go ahead and have other plans drawn without approval of the Fine Arts Commission, and spend a lot more money?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The plans have already been drawn and another type of bridge cannot be substituted without the approval of the Fine Arts Commission.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to make acknowledgment at this time of the valuable assistance rendered by the members of the minority on the committee of conference in the preparation of this bill. It would have been all but impossible to have kept within the Budget on many of these items had it not been for the counsel and advice and the active aid and cooperation of the members of the minority, the gentlemen from New York [Mr. TABER and Mr. BACON]. I desire at this time to make acknowledgment and express appreciation of their invaluable services to the committee and the country. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON].

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, this House and the Nation owes a debt of gratitude to our distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON], Chairman of the Subcommittee on Appropriations that held the House hearings and framed this bill [applause]; to my colleague from Texas, Judge BUCHANAN, the able, efficient, patient, and dependable Chairman of the most important Committee on Appropriations [applause]; and also to our able and courageous friends on the committee from the minority side, the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. BACON], who are absolutely dependable and have rendered signal service to the country [applause], for forcing such a bill as this to come out of conference. It is the first time in many years that any kind of just treatment has been accorded the overburdened taxpayers of the United States in a District appropriation bill. The courage and good common sense of the above gentlemen forced out of this bill much injustice against the whole people that has remained in previous bills.

I hold in my hand this bill as it came amended from the Senate in the last Congress, when we killed it on the night of March 3, 1933. The Senate by amendment provided that the United States Government should pay a lump-sum contribution of $9,500,000 to the people of Washington to help them pay their civic expenses. That was $3,000,000 more than the House had voted its willingness to pay. On that bill the Senate had placed 173 additional amendments, ranging in amounts from $1,000 and $2,500 on up to $3,000,000.

At the conference between the House and Senate there were seven United States Senators seated around the table, headed by the arrogant former Senator Bingham, of Connecticut, who, thank goodness, has gone home and now no longer browbeats us. Our five House conferees, in trying to reach an agreement, receded and concurred until we were sore and discouraged. On the gratuity they were asking for Washington people from the American taxpayers we stood pat, and said that they must come down $3,000,000. The Senate conferees refused, and a deadlock ensued. Concerning the situation the Washington Star that afternoon stated:

All hope of passing the District appropriation bill at this session appeared to be gone when Senate and House conferees reached a deadlock late this afternoon over the amount of the Federal contribution and broke up without any plans for a further meeting.

The House, in passing the bill several weeks ago, cut the Federal share to $6,500,000. The Senate placed it at $9,500,000.

That night, through the insistence of Senator Bingham, a majority of the House conferees, rather than have the bill die, as Congress was to adjourn sine die the next day, went over to the Senate on a compromise, and agreed on a conference report. As one of the conferees, I gave notice that I would use every parliamentary means within my power to defeat the conference report and kill the bill, so that we might pass a proper bill in the impending special session that we all knew would be called.

The conference report was called up that night in the House, and if you will look on pages 5607 to 5618 of the RECORD for March 3, 1933, you will see what happened. After debate we killed the bill by voting down the conference report by a vote of 102 to 14. So that bill died when Congress adjourned the next day.

In reframing this bill in the present Congress we allowed only $5,700,000 as the Federal contribution. The President's Budget approved this amount. And after debate in the House, with all of us under fire from the bitter and revengeful newspapers of Washington, the House approved such sum, and when the bill went to the Senate it carried $5,700,000 as the amount the Government would contribute to Washington expenses. The Senate promptly increased it with the other numerous amendments it added to the bill.

Weeks ago we House conferees tried to get together with the Senate. We made many concessions. But respecting fundamentals in many important Senate amendents we refused to yield. Among them was this lump-sum item which we had insisted that they reduce $3,300,000, and the other was an item of $1,000,000 which the District owed the Federal Goverment for money advanced, and which the Senate sought to relieve the District of paying. We refused to yield on these items, and on others almost as important.

Until last night the bill was in a deadlock. But instead of having an arrogant, autocratic Bingham of Connecticut presiding at the head of the conference table we now have an able, fair-minded Democratic Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS], to whom, as well as to the rest of the courteous Senators we met there in conference, I take off my hat and commend them. They have at heart not only the interests of the people of the District of Columbia but also as well the interest of the people living in the 48 States of the Union. Last night we signed up the agreement with them without our yielding on the important matters mentioned above, and thus we got the bill out of deadlock.

We have brought in here a bill that has saved approximately $6,000,000 over the old bill we killed on the night of March 3, 1933.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. The gentleman in listing the names of the members upon the Appropriations Committee who were entitled to credit in saving the Government this money left himself out, I assume due to his modesty, but he also is entitled to a great deal of praise for what has been done in this regard.

Mr. BLANTON. I thank my friend, but I give due credit to my friends on the committee whose names I mentioned, because they are not afraid to stand for the right, even when Washington newspapers are bombarding us with attacks. Our great Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations is not afraid of man, devil, or newspaper. He does what he thinks is right regardless. And the able chairman of our subcommittee, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON], knows every detail about the business and affairs of the District of Columbia, and no one can take advantage of him.

And we can always depend upon our minority colleagues, Mr. TABER and Mr. BACON. And I want the country to know just how valuable have been the services of our able majority leader, the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS], who has fought valiantly to reduce expenses and help to balance the Budget. The appropriations for four different departments of government are in charge of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OLIVER], and I serve under him on his subcommittee, and he knows more about the intimate details of these departments than the various bureau chiefs who come before us to sustain their estimates. If you will read his effective speech on the night of March 3, you will see that he aided very materially in killing the former bill.

I wonder if the people back home realize just what it means to us who make fights here in their behalf. We become targets for vicious darts, striking at us from every direction. We are ridiculed by the press. We are misrepresented. We are regularly misquoted. Everything we do is misconstrued. Special-feature writers are designedly hired to break us down. Have you been reading Hearst's Washington Herald every day since last March 3? If you have, you undoubtedly noticed the special attack upon me it has carried daily, written by Hearst's feature expert, Edward T. Folliard. He has numbered each one consecutively. He not only attacks me but he attacks my home city of Abilene and my district and my State, with no purpose whatever except to break me down, if possible, because I have stood firm against this lump-sum-contribution steal the District takes from the Government each year, and I have fought against the many attempts of the District to get its long, hairy arms into the Federal Treasury for hand-outs so often.

In yesterday's Herald feature-expert Folliard had his sixty-fifth daily attack upon me. He had become desperate, for he believed that there was little hope for the House and Senate conferees to reach an agreement. So he tried to say something that would prejudice the conferees against me. He began by saying, "This is the sixty-fifth of a series of articles." And as usual this Herald attacked me, from which I quote:

When the District appropriation bill came up in the House 2 months ago it was passed as it stood, all proposals to change it being howled down.

To a suggestion that the bill be changed, Representative TOM BLANTON (D.), of Texas, said:

"Now, this is the President's Budget. This is not our Budget. This is not from the Committee on Appropriations; it is from the President of the United States."

The Herald and other Washington newspapers suggested that the chances were that Roosevelt, busy as he was, knew nothing about the blunders that crowded the District appropriation bill.

But TOM BLANTON, who dominated the House when the District bill was up, declared:

"Who am I, to say the President is wrong."

And the House, as if hypnotized, approved of the bill as it was, blunders and all.

I feel encouraged to know that I survived the sixty-fifth consecutive daily attack this Herald made on me yesterday, and that nevertheless we conferees got together and agreed on the bill without the House yielding on any fundamental matter of importance.

Many Senators once served in the House. We now have in the House some former Senators. Yet this is the way the Herald sized the situation up in an editorial on May 17, 1933, to wit:

THE SENATE TO THE RESCUE

It is not often in vain that the people of the District of Columbia put their confidence in the United States Senate.

For many years this body, by its superior enlightenment, has stood between the defenseless citizens of the Capital and the narrow-minded, if not, indeed, vindictive, action of the other branch of Congress.

If the House had been in favor of giving the District $9,500,000 out of the Public Treasury, and the Senate had been for reducing the amount, the above editorial would have been headed "The House to the Rescue", and it would have been the House with the "superior enlightenment", and it would have been across the Capitol from the House where "narrow-minded and vindictive action" existed.

It is such barbed darts as the above that we must stand when we make fights here for the people. It would be far easier for us to "seek the path of least resistance", and then we would never be attacked and we would never be troubled by opposition politically.

Mr. BYRNS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. I yield.

Mr. BYRNS. The gentleman has paid a very high compliment to the several members of the Appropriations Committee, all of which every Member of the House knows is deserved. Of course, the gentleman is too modest to speak of his own efforts upon that committee, but I want to say that I served with the gentleman for 2 years upon that committee, and there is no more vigilant member of the committee in the interests of the people and in the interest of saving money for them than the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON]. We all know that the gentleman, in the course of his service, has saved multiplied millions for the people and that he gives close and valuable attention to all legislation. [Applause.]

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my friend from Tennessee for that statement. Coming from our Democratic majority leader I would rather have that statement than to have four full pages in the Herald each day for the next 20 years. [Laughter and applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 10 additional minutes.

Mr. BLANTON. I am deeply grateful to the gentleman. Now, I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. PARSONS. I wonder if the gentleman has at his command the amount of money that the Federal Government has contributed to the District during this 133 years.

Mr. BLANTON. It would take an adding machine to count it; it would run up into so many millions of dollars that it would be hard to count.

Mr. PARSONS. I think the gentleman should have that information inserted in his remarks.

Mr. BLANTON. There used to be a distinguished Member here, Chairman of the District Committee. It was Ben Johnson of Kentucky. He was a wonderful chairman and he did some hard work on the committee.

He said years ago that in all fairness the District of Columbia owed the people of the Federal Government at least $561,000,000.

That was away back in Ben Johnson's time, and only God knows just all they have gotten since.

Mr. PARSONS. I think the gentleman should have those tables prepared and inserted in the RECORD so the country may have the information.

Mr. BLANTON. If you will take the trouble to get the index and look back at the 40 or 60 speeches I have made on this subject, you will see those figures clearly stated. I will, later on, under an extension of remarks, put in the RECORD a full report on the fiscal affairs of the District and Government.

Mr. BOYLAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. Yes.

Mr. BOYLAN. The gentleman says 40 or 50 speeches; it would come nearer to the fact to say five or six thousand speeches. [Laughter.]

Mr. BLANTON. The distinguished Representative from New York [Mr. BOYLAN] not only runs the affairs in that great New York metropolis of 6,000,000 people but he also runs some affairs here in Washington, because the other day he did something that nobody else on earth could do. He made the street-railway corporations put in a crossing to keep him from getting run over when he gets off the car at the New House Office Building. [Laughter.] I want to say to him that I represent the people of my district. They sent me here to represent them. I represent about 400,000 people in 19 big counties. It takes a whole day to go across my district. They look to me to represent them, and they expect that when they ought to be heard on the floor of the House that I will get up here and be heard, and I am. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. BOYLAN. I should like to say that the people of his district are fortunate in having so able a Representative as you, sir, and I trust that they will keep sending you here for years. [Applause.]

Mr. BLANTON. After that nice remark I am not going to impose on my friend any further, and I yield the floor. [Applause.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, there is one of the many virtues of the gentleman from Texas which I think should be particularly emphasized at this time. That is his absolute fairness. The local press may have taken occasion from time to time to criticize him for advocating reductions in appropriations for the benefit of the District which he considered excessive or extravagant. I hope it will not overlook the fact that he has been just as ready to oppose reductions in appropriations which he considered unjustified. His fairness in this respect and his friendship for the District are shown by an item in this report. When the bill came back from the Senate it carried an amendment reducing the appropriation for the traffic department from $45,000 to $10,000. It was an unreasonable cut, but we were in a position where it would have been accepted but for the stanch objection of the gentleman from Texas, who insisted that in justice to the city of Washington the service could not be adequately maintained if the amendment was agreed to, and on his insistence the original appropriation was restored. The city of Washington and the taxpayers of Washington have no better friend than the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON]. He insists on rigid economy in all Government expenditures, but he is just as insistent on adequate provision for all legitimate functions of government.

Let me repeat what I have said many times before both publicly and privately: The gentleman from Texas is, in my opinion, one of the most valuable men who ever sat in the American Congress, and the country as a whole owes a debt of gratitude to his constituents who year after year send him back to the House in spite of the enemies he makes here defending the public interest. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the first amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 19, line 13, after the word "fund", insert:

"Provided, That of said amount the sum of $575,000 is hereby made available for the construction of a bridge to replace the Calvert Street Bridge over Rock Creek, including necessary changes in water and sewer mains, and including the employment of engineering or other professional services by contract or otherwise, without reference to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (U.S.C., title 41, sec. 5), or the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, and engineering and incidental expenses, and the Commissioners are authorized to enter into contract or contracts for construction of said bridge at a cost not to exceed $1,250,000; but no part of said sum shall be available for expenditure in connection with the construction of said Calvert Street Bridge until the Commissioners of the District of Columbia shall have made a restudy and reinvestigation to determine which particular type of bridge is most economical and serviceable and best suited to the proposed location; and the Commission of Fine Arts shall have approved the type of bridge decided upon, and any street railway company using said bridge shall install thereon at its own expense an approved underground system of street-car propulsion and, at its own expense, shall thereafter maintain such underground construction, and bear the cost of surfacing and resurfacing and maintaining in good condition the space between the railway tracks and 2 feet exterior thereto, as provided by law, and shall defray the cost of excess construction occasioned by such use, including the relocation and construction of closed plow pits at the west approach to the bridge, in accordance with plans to be approved by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia: Provided further, That of said amount of $1,500,000 the sum of $45,741 is hereby made available for widening to 73 feet and repaving the roadway of Constitution Avenue NW., North Capitol to First Street, and for widening to 80 feet and repaving the roadway of Constitution Avenue NW., First Street to Second Street, in accordance with plans therefor to be jointly approved by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, including the necessary reconstruction, relocation, changes, and adjustments of all water mains, sewers in advance of paving, trees, sidewalks, lampposts, fire hydrants, or other structures affected, and including personal services and all necessary incidental expenses, and the total cost of said work shall not exceed $76,235, of which sum not to exceed $30,494 shall be transferred from and in accordance with the appropriation in the Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1934, for the construction of the Arlington Memorial Bridge."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I have an amendment that I desire to offer. I ask for a division of the question.

The SPEAKER. The question is on receding from the disagreement to the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Connecticut offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Goss moves to concur in the Senate amendment no. 9 with an amendment, as follows: "On page 19, line 23, after '$1,250,000', insert: 'Provided, That no part of any money appropriated herein shall be used to pay anyone for plans submitted prior to the passage of this act.'"

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, when this bill passed the House a short time ago, I called the attention of the House to the item of the Calvert Street Bridge and to what I thought the scandalous way in which the Commissioners had handled the matter. I inquired of the chairman of the committee this morning, and I understood him to say that the Commissioners had let a contract for plans of a steel bridge without any authority in law, and I yield to him now to ask him if I understood him correctly.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, that is not for the bridge here provided. That may have been true in connection with the original bridge, plans for which were drawn in 1917.

Mr. GOSS. There is still $10,000 due.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. There is testimony to that effect in the Senate hearings, but I am informed otherwise.

Mr. GOSS. My purpose in offering this amendment is to teach these Commissioners that they should not enter into contracts for any matters not authorized by law.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. While they may not have been specifically authorized by a special provision of law, they were within their rights under the appropriations that have been made totaling $70,000.

Mr. GOSS. We had the plans for one bridge made. The Commissioners apparently forgot they had it made. They went out and authorized other plans to be made at an expense of some $70,000. The plans were submitted. The plans of that bridge have never been approved by the Fine Arts Commission in accordance with the amendment, and I do not think we should pay out any money for matters of that sort without more mature deliberation than the Commissioners have given the matter in the past. Has the gentleman any objection to my amendment?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The gentleman is not referring to the item in this bill?

Mr. GOSS. Yes; I am.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The item to which the gentleman refers is $40,000 which was provided a year ago in the 1933 District appropriation bill and $30,000 made available by the 1932 bill.

Mr. GOSS. But the gentleman still says they owe money and they could get it out of this appropriation carried in this bill.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Sixty thousand dollars has been paid.

Mr. GOSS. Let us show these gentlemen that they cannot come up here and issue contracts without authority of law, and do just as they please.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. They had ample authority of law under the appropriation acts.

Mr. GOSS. Why have not they paid out this other $10,000?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. They have the money for it but the expenditure is not necessary.

Mr. GOSS. We ought to turn over all this power as we seem to be doing to the Commissioners to do as they please or else we should hold them under our thumb. That is the only purpose in offering this amendment. I have talked to the gentleman many times on this subject and I think it is scandalous the way these Commissioners have handled this particular matter. I think the gentleman will agree with me.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The Commissioners to whom the gentleman refers are not in office at this time.

Mr. GOSS. I do not care who they were.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Those Commissioners long since retired from office. That is water that went over the dam years ago.

Mr. GOSS. One of the gentlemen is down there in the engineering department, still doing business there.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Oh, no.

Mr. GOSS. Oh, yes; the head one in the engineering department.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. He has been there only 2 years.

Mr. GOSS. But he is still there.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. But he is not a member of the Board of Commissioners, which provided for the plans to which the gentleman refers.

Mr. GOSS. I simply do this to call the attention of the Congress to the fact that we should not have these scandalous matters going on in the District.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The time to have brought that up was many years ago.

Mr. GOSS. Oh, I brought it up last year and this year again.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. But that has no reference whatever to this bill.

Mr. GOSS. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] signed this report. What does he think about it?

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOSS. Yes; I yield.

Mr. BLANTON. If the gentleman would go down there and check up on them he would find many things he does not like.

Mr. GOSS. Probably I would.

Mr. BLANTON. Nevertheless, by this bill we are saving $6,000,000 over the bill we killed on the night of March 3, and we are causing a reduction in taxes of from $1.70 to $1.50 per $100.

If we could eliminate all of the waste out of this District government, and stop the many junkets its officials take, we could further reduce the tax rate here for the people. Does the gentleman know that many District officials take junkets at public expense?

Mr. GOSS. No.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman ought to check them up on that.

Mr. GOSS. Well, the gentleman from Texas signed this report. Is he in favor of this sort of business?

Mr. BLANTON. I was in favor of getting the best bill we could out of conference. And we did do that. If the gentleman has ever sat in conference across the table from a bunch of Senators on the other side of this Capitol he would be glad to get as good a bill as this.

Mr. GOSS. Is the gentleman in favor of doing business in this way?

Mr. BLANTON. There are many things in that bill that I do not approve of, but in conference you have to give and take.

Mr. GOSS. Will the gentleman support the amendment I have just offered?

Mr. BLANTON. I am going to support the conference report, because I always keep faith with the conferees who get a bill out of conference.

Mr. GOSS. I am sorry to see the gentleman approves of that type of conduct.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BEAM). The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. Goss] to concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment.

The motion was rejected.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to incorporate some excerpts therein.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON]?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is now on the motion of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON] to concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment no. 15: On page 30, after line 2, insert " : Provided further, That teaching vacancies that occur during the fiscal year 1934 wherever found may be filled by the assignment of teachers of special subjects and teachers not now assigned to classroom instruction, and such teachers are hereby made eligible for such assignment without further examination: Provided further, That in the interests of economy the Board of Education may, at its discretion, during the fiscal year 1934 appoint as temporary teachers in public schools of the District of Columbia qualified teachers from the eligible list of applicants established by examinations: Provided further, That in filling all such vacancies teachers now in the schools shall have the preference."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement:

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment no. 22: Page 37, in line 8, insert:

"BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS

"Not to exceed $876,000 of any unexpended balances of appropriations contained in the District of Columbia appropriation acts for the fiscal years 1932 and 1933 for the Municipal Center is hereby reappropriated and made available for the construction of public-school buildings, as follows:

"For the erection of an 8-room building on a site already appropriated for in the vicinity of the Logan School, $95,000;

"For the construction of an addition to the Deal Junior High School, including 10 classrooms and 1 gymnasium, $153,000;

"For the construction of an addition to the Browne Junior High School, including 10 classrooms and 1 gymnasium, $153,000;

"For beginning the construction of a senior high school building at Forty-first and Chesapeake Streets NW., in the Reno section, $475,000, and the Commissioners are authorized to enter into contract or contracts for such building at a cost not to exceed $1,150,000;

"In all, $876,000, to be immediately available and to be disbursed and accounted for as 'Buildings and grounds, public schools', and for that purpose shall constitute one fund and remain available until expended: Provided, That no part of this appropriation shall be used for or on account of any school building not herein specified."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede from its disagreement and concur in the amendment with an amendment, which I have sent to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. CANNON of Missouri moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate no. 22 and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows:

"In lieu of the matter inserted by the said amendment insert the following:

"'BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS

"'Not to exceed $570,000 of any unexpended balances of appropriations contained in the District of Columbia appropriation acts for the fiscal years 1932 and 1933 for the Municipal Center is hereby reappropriated and made available for the construction of public-school buildings, as follows:

"'For the erection of an 8-room building on a site already appropriated for in the vicinity of the Logan School, $95,000;

"'For beginning the construction of a senior high school building at Forty-first and Chesapeake Streets NW., in the Reno section, $475,000, and the Commissioners are authorized to enter into contract or contracts for such building at a cost not to exceed $1,150,000;

"'In all, $570,000, to be immediately available and to be disbursed and accounted for as "Buildings and grounds, public schools", and for that purpose shall constitute one fund and remain available until expended: Provided, That no part of this appropriation shall be used for or on account of any school building not herein specified.'"

Mr. GOSS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield.

Mr. GOSS. If the gentleman's amendment is adopted, the bill will go back to conference, will it not?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. No. This is final disposition of the proposition so far as the House is concerned.

Mr. GOSS. It is in disagreement, so that the remarks of my friend from Texas, Mr. BLANTON, on my amendment are no different than here?

Mr. BLANTON. We have an agreement on this.

Mr. GOSS. You have a prior agreement with the Senate, you mean?

Mr. BLANTON. We have a tentative agreement among ourselves.

Mr. GOSS. I have no objection to it. I just wanted to clear it up for the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON] to recede and concur with an amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment no. 28: Page 63, after line 17, insert:

"WAR VETERANS' SERVICE OFFICE

"For personal services, without reference to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, to enable the municipal government to aid and advise war veteran residents of the District of Columbia and their dependents as to their rights and privileges under Federal legislation of which veterans and/or their dependents may be beneficiaries, including assistance in the presentation of claims to the Veterans' Administration or other appropriate Federal agencies, $5,100, to be expended under the direction of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede from its disagreement and concur in the amendment.

Mr. DUNN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield.

Mr. DUNN. Will the gentleman please explain just what that is?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. This item has been carried in the District bill for a number of years. It was eliminated this year in the estimates received from the Budget Bureau. When the bill went to the Senate the Senate merely put back the item in the same language in which it has been carried in previous years.

In the testimony given before the committee we were told by a representative of the American Legion that if provision were made for the item this year it would not be needed in the future. On that understanding it is included in the bill.

Mr. DUNN. This does not take anything away from the veterans.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Nothing at all.

Mr. DUNN. Does it add anything to the veterans?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. It merely restores language carried in former bills.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Missouri.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment no. 32: Page 80, strike out, beginning in line 3, all of section 6, which reads as follows:

"SEC. 6. No part of the appropriations contained in this act shall be used to pay any increase in the salary of any officer or employee of the District of Columbia by reason of the reallocation of the position of such officer or employee to a higher grade since June 30, 1932, by the Personnel Classification Board of the Civil Service Commission."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate no. 32 and agree to the same with an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. CANNON of Missouri moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate no. 32 and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows:

"Restore the matter stricken out by the said amendment, amended to read as follows:

"'SEC. 6. No part of the appropriations contained in this act shall be used to pay any increase in the salary of any officer or employee of the District of Columbia by reason of the reallocation of the position of such officer or employee to a higher grade after June 30, 1932, by the Personnel Classification Board or the Civil Service Commission, and salaries paid accordingly shall be payment in full.'"

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Missouri.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment no. 34: Page 80, after line 15, insert section 7, as follows:

"SEC. 7. When specifically recommended by the budget officer of the District of Columbia and approved by the Commissioners of said District, transfers may be made between subheads of appropriations provided in this act for the free Public Library, public playgrounds, public schools (except buildings and grounds and repairs to buildings), health department, and public welfare, respectively: Provided, That such transfers under this section shall not be made between appropriations for the several municipal services named, and all transfers, whether approved or contemplated, shall be reported to Congress in the estimates of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year 1935."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate no. 34 and agree to the same with an amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. CANNON of Missouri, moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate no. 34 and agree to the same, with an amendment as follows:

"In lieu of the matter inserted by the said amendment insert the following:

"'SEC. 8. When specifically approved by the Director of the Bureau of the Budget upon recommendation of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, transfers may be made between subheads of appropriations provided in this act for the free Public Library, public playgrounds, public schools (except buildings and grounds and repairs to buildings), health department, and public welfare, respectively: Provided, That such transfers under this section shall not be made between appropriations for the several municipal services named, and all transfers, whether approved or contemplated, shall be reported to Congress in the estimates of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year 1935.'"

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Missouri.

The motion was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. CANNON of Missouri, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the conference report and the several amendments were agreed to was laid on the table.

COLLECTION OF INTERNAL-REVENUE TAXES

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (H.R. 5904) to validate collections of internal-revenue taxes stayed by requests or claims for credit, and for other purposes, and ask unanimous consent that it be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, as I understand from the Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, this is a unanimous report from the committee and is agreeable to both sides.

Mr. DOUGHTON. That is my understanding.

Mr. SNELL. There is no objection.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Revenue Act of 1928 is amended by adding after section 619 a new section reading as follows:

"SEC. 620. COLLECTIONS STAYED BY CLAIMS OR REQUESTS FOR CREDIT

"(a) If any internal-revenue tax was, within the period of limitation properly applicable thereto, assessed prior to June 2, 1924, and if a claim was filed, or a request in writing made, for a credit against the tax so assessed of an amount claimed as an overpayment of internal-revenue tax, and if collection of any part of the tax so assessed was postponed, then (1) a credit (made prior to May 29, 1928) against the tax so assessed shall not be considered as void under the provisions of section 609 (a) of this act, relating to credits against barred deficiencies, and (2) the payment (made prior to May 29, 1928) of any part of the tax the collection of which was so postponed shall not be considered as an overpayment under the provisions of section 607 of this act, relating to payments made after the expiration of the period of limitation on assessment and collection.

"(b) If any overpayment of internal-revenue tax was credited against any internal-revenue tax assessed prior to June 2, 1924, and within the period of limitation properly applicable thereto, and if the first date upon which the Commissioner signed the schedule of overassessments in respect of the overpayment so credited was within the period of limitation properly applicable to the collection of the tax so assessed, then the credit, if made prior to May 29, 1928, shall not be considered as void under the provisions of section 609 (a) of this act, and the payment by such credit of the tax so assessed shall not be considered as an overpayment under the provisions of section 607 of this act.

"(c) The provisions of this section shall not operate to validate a credit of an overpayment of internal-revenue tax against a tax not due on the merits.

"(d) As used in this section the term 'tax' includes any interest, penalty, additional amount, or addition to any internal-revenue tax."

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, as I understand, this bill pertains to changes in the regulations in the settlement of tax payments, and that it is entirely in favor of the Government.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Absolutely. It will save the Government $15,000,000 in this way. In many cases taxpayers have asked an extension of time and the Government has granted it. In the meantime, the statute of limitations having run, the taxpayer seeks to take advantage of this technical situation to evade payment of his taxes.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. DOUGHTON, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

ALBERT HENRY WIGGIN

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I present a privileged report from the Committee on Ways and Means, in the form of a resolution (H.Res. 151), and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to furnish the House of Representatives all such information as he may possess, or may be available in the Treasury Department, with respect to the amount of compensation paid during the 5 years preceding the passage of this resolution to Albert Henry Wiggin as president and/or director of the Chase National Bank of New York City; the Adams Express Co.; and/or the American Express Co.; and/or any and all of their affiliates and associated corporations, and the rate of retirement compensation (pension, annuity, or other provision) provided for the said Albert Henry Wiggin by the said bank, companies, and/or affiliates and associated corporations.

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Clerk read the report accompanying the resolution.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the report, as follows:

REPORT NO. 209, TO ACCOMPANY HOUSE RESOLUTION 151

Directing the Secretary of the Treasury to furnish the House of Representatives certain information

The Committee on Ways and Means, to whom was referred the resolution (H.Res. 151) to direct the Secretary to furnish the House of Representatives information with respect to the amount of compensation paid during the past 5 years to Albert Henry Wiggin by the Chase National Bank and other corporations, having had the same under consideration, report it back to the House and recommend that the resolution do not pass.

It appears to your committee, after a careful consideration of the resolution, that action on the part of the House is not necessary, in view of the fact that on May 29 the Senate passed a resolution (S.Res. 75) more comprehensive and far-reaching in its scope and which should elicit the specific information called for by House Resolution 151.

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, as is indicated by the report, the passage of this resolution is not deemed necessary by the Ways and Means Committee for the reason that the resolution referred to therein has recently been passed by the Senate, which calls for information incorporated in this resolution and is even more comprehensive in its scope and application than this resolution.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I move that the resolution be laid on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. COOPER of Tennessee, a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXPORTATION OF AMERICAN APPLES AND PEARS

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 4812) to promote the foreign trade of the United States in apples and/or pears, to protect the reputation of American-grown apples and pears in foreign markets, to prevent deception or misrepresentation as to the quality of such products moving in foreign commerce, to provide for the commercial inspection of such products entering such commerce, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments, and concur in the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

Page 1, line 4, strike out "common."

Page 1, line 4, after "carrier", insert ", or any steamship company, or any person."

Page 2, line 12, strike out all after "act." down to and including "act.", line 15.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, as I understand, the request is to concur in the Senate amendments, which are minor amendments, and, perhaps, improve the bill.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Yes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendments were agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the conferees on the home loan bank bill may have until 12 o'clock tonight to file a report.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object to ask the gentleman from Tennessee a question. Will there be any further special business this afternoon?

Mr. BYRNS. Nothing more, except I have one more unanimous consent that I should like to submit.

Mr. SNELL. I have no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

Mr. BYRNS. I may say further that the gentleman from Oklahoma has a conference report to bring up, but I do not know whether he proposes to call it up at this time or not.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Rules may have until 12 o'clock tonight to file a report.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

GASOLINE BLEND

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for one half minute in order to make an announcement.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I want to call the attention of the House to the fact that the demonstrations in connection with a so-called "alcohol-gasoline blend" will take place tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock, starting in front of the main building of the Department of Agriculture. There will be technicians and experts and engineers here from practically all the States of the Union, among them professors from the Universities of Michigan, Oklahoma, Minnesota, and Iowa State, and incidentally, Captain Rickenbacker, the war ace, will be here. I think it would be very advisable and desirable that the Members, particularly those from the Central Mississippi States, attend this demonstration.

SALARIES, COMMISSIONS, ANNUITIES, ETC., PAID CERTAIN CORPORATION OFFICIALS

Mr. McCLINTIC. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 3 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Mr. McCLINTIC. Mr. Speaker, a few minutes ago a report was presented from the Ways and Means Committee by the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. COOPER], which related to a resolution which had been introduced in this body calling for certain information relative to the salaries and incomes of certain individuals connected with certain large business institutions. This report was adopted on the grounds that a similar resolution introduced by Senator COSTIGAN had been passed by the Senate calling for information relative to salaries, commissions, annuities, and gratuities received by bank officials and those connected with other concerns, and from the confidential information I have received I am of the opinion that this will result in revelations that will be more startling than those in connection with the Morgan investigation.

When the Members of this House and the people of the country realize that there are certain big institutions that are paying bonuses and pensions for life in some cases amounting to as much as $100,000 per year, they will then understand why the assets of this Nation to a certain extent have dried up.

All during this session I have tried to form a conclusion as to why it was necessary to close all of our banks and to cause the same to be reexamined before they were allowed to reopen. I think I now have the answer, as it is evident that many of the business concerns that used the method of selling stock for the purpose of obtaining finances have manipulated their affairs in such a way as to make it possible to vote themselves salaries and different kinds of favors to the extent that many who patronize the same have been unfairly dealt with. I believe it is a fair statement to say that 80 percent of the companies that sell common stock to the people and then ask for their proxies to use for the purpose of electing officers and other purposes use the power so granted to vote to themselves salaries and favors that would not be countenanced if the stockholders had any conception of what was taking place. In other words, this is the way the public is robbed from the inside; and, in my opinion, bank robbers who only obtain a few thousand dollars are far better citizens than those who defraud by using such methods.

I prepared the following resolution and would have introduced the same had I not been advised of the action taken by the Senate on the Costigan resolution.

Resolution

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to furnish the House of Representatives all such information as he may possess or may be available in the Treasury Department with respect to the amount of compensation in excess of $25,000 paid during the 5 years preceding the passage of this resolution to all persons connected with national banks and all of their affiliates and associate corporations, and in addition the amounts of compensation that have been received in excess of $25,000 by all persons connected with companies or corporations that have received loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

I do not wish to disclose any information that has come to the committee of which I am a member in confidence, yet it is pretty tough to be tied down with ethical restrictions when you know what is taking place throughout the Nation. If anyone had told me that a bank had paid one person salary, fees, and compensation amounting to over $400,000 per year for a long period of time, I would have had my doubts. Yet I am in a position to say that such practice is now going on, and unless something is done so that officials will not take that to which they are not entitled, I will support some legislation to open up income-tax returns to the public, feeling that when the searchlight of publicity is turned on that such officials will not dare to continue these practices in the future.

Everyone knows that facts cannot be obtained from an ordinary statement that relates to the financial condition of an institution. Bank statements can be manipulated in such a way as to fool the public. Statements in numerous cases have been presented to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for the purpose of securing loans and in some instances the company that obtained the same has gone broke within a few weeks after the money was obtained. This kind of fraud is practiced on the Government Departments, and, of course, an unsuspecting public has been the victim of many similar occurrences. I predict that if Senator COSTIGAN would push the investigation authorized by his resolution and then give the results to the public our citizens will then realize what has been done to them by those who rob institutions from the inside.

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCLINTIC. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee, who is a member of the committee.

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. I will ask the gentleman if he does not feel it is fair to state that many of us on the Ways and Means Committee are very much in favor of securing the information which is called for in this resolution?

Mr. McCLINTIC. Yes; certainly.

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. But we felt that the resolution which had already passed the Senate was much broader in its scope and would be very much more helpful in serving the same purpose.

Mr. McCLINTIC. I thank my colleague for his statement, because the members of the committee are in accord, and the only reason I am speaking here today is that the Senate has already taken action. If the Senate had not taken this action, in my opinion, the committee would have taken such action, and from my way of thinking the most important revelation that has ever been brought to your attention will be disclosed when the committee asks for the information which they can get, and I hope this will be done soon.

Mr. BACHARACH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCLINTIC. I yield.

Mr. BACHARACH. I want to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that he stated that certain persons were getting a pension of $100,000 a year. I think in all fairness the gentleman should state that that person is not even a director of that particular company, but has a pension of $100,000 a year for life.

Mr. McCLINTIC. Yes. The gentleman is eminently correct, and when the Members of the House realize how the big business institutions of the Nation are depleting the resources that are under their control by allocating them in such an unfair and ungodly manner, I cannot remain in my seat without bringing this much of the facts to your attention. [Applause.]

Mr. McFADDEN. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman's time may be extended 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. If there are going to be any extended speeches, I will raise the point of no quorum.

Mr. BYRNS. I hope the gentleman will not do that. We have a conference report yet to be considered.

Mr. McCLINTIC. Mr. Speaker, I yield the floor.

Mr. McFADDEN. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman's time be extended 2 minutes.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I understand the gentleman from Oklahoma has concluded his remarks, and he does not desire any further time.

Mr. McFADDEN. The gentleman was speaking on a subject that I wanted to interrogate him about. Mr. Speaker, may I have 2 minutes to address the House?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I should like to inquire of the gentleman from Oklahoma whether I understood him correctly that the Ways and Means Committee had tabled my resolution, House Resolution 151, seeking inquiry in regard to the salary and pension paid Albert H. Wiggin, former head of the Chase National Bank, of New York, and its affiliated companies. This resolution was as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to furnish the House of Representatives all such information as he may possess, or may be available in the Treasury Department, with respect to the amount of compensation paid during the 5 years preceding the passage of this resolution to Albert Henry Wiggin as president and/or director of the Chase National Bank, of New York City; the Adams Express Co.; and/or the American Express Co; and/or any and all of their affiliates and associated corporations, and the rate of retirement compensation (pension, annuity, or other provision) provided for the said Albert Henry Wiggin by the said bank, companies, and/or affiliates and associated corporations.

I call to your attention a very serious situation existing with relation to the public funds of the United States—a situation so serious that its fair consideration forecloses any discussion or action looking to the levying of any new methods or rates of taxation.

For nearly 2 years there have been before the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the Treasury Department several specific cases of illegal tax evasion, accompanied by direct evidence, which evidence has never been challenged or questioned by any of the individuals or departments concerned.

Although abundant time has elapsed for complete investigation of all the evidence involved, no known action has been taken by any Government department to collect the taxes so owing to the Treasury or to prosecute the violators of the revenue laws and criminal statutes.

The evidence in these cases, as well as the disclosures made in hearings before a committee of the Senate, gives ample ground for the opinion that the Bureau of Internal Revenue is in the position of being a partisan of those engaged in tax evasion. There is no evidence to indicate that the Bureau of Internal Revenue has been so directed that the public interest is either served or protected.

Tax evasion is an organized business and a very profitable business. It includes in its personnel many accountants, attorneys, tax experts, and, I regret to say, it apparently includes, or has included, important officials of the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the Treasury.

It is difficult to escape the conclusion that the Bureau, which should be organized and directed with the single view of enforcing the revenue laws in the public interest, is or has been organized and directed with the view of aiding in the violation of those laws for the private profit of privileged individuals at the expense of the Government and the people.

In this connection I present the outstanding allegations made in the declaration of a suit filed in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia on Wednesday, June 7, 1933. The plaintiffs in this suit are the United States of America and David A. Olson. The defendant is David H. Blair, former Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Divested of legal terminology, the allegations made in this suit are as follows:

First. James W. Cannon, manufacturer of towels and other cotton goods, was assessed and required to pay large additional taxes over and above the amounts voluntarily reported and paid by him.

Second. James W. Cannon on March 28, 1921, filed a claim with the Bureau of Internal Revenue for the refund to him of the additional income taxes so levied and paid. This claim for refund was denied by Daniel C. Roper, then Commissioner of Internal Revenue, on May 9, 1921.

Third. James W. Cannon did not contest this action of Commissioner Roper at any time during his life, indicating that he accepted the refusal to allow the requested refund as just and legal.

Fourth. James W. Cannon died in December 1921. His last will and testament directed that David H. Blair, then Commissioner of Internal Revenue, be appointed one of the executors and trustees of his estate. David H. Blair was presumably selected for this position because he was the son-in-law of James W. Cannon and a benificiary of the will of which he was the executor and trustee.

Fifth. On June 30, 1922, David H. Blair, acting in his capacity of Commissioner of Internal Revenue, assessed additional income taxes against the estate of James W. Cannon of which he—Blair—was trustee and executor.

Sixth. On August 28, 1922, David H. Blair, acting as trustee of the Cannon estate, filed with himself as Commissioner of Internal Revenue a claim for the refund of the taxes he had himself levied and collected.

Seventh. Thereafter David H. Blair, acting as Commissioner of Internal Revenue, denied the refund which he himself has requested in his capacity as trustee and executor of the Cannon estate.

Eighth. The status quo of these taxes and rejected refund requests remained unchanged until January 5, 1926, 5 days before the lapse of the statute of limitations would have forever debarred any further attempt to recover the amounts paid by the deceased Joseph W. Cannon.

Ninth. On January 5, 1926, David H. Blair, acting as executor and trustee of the Cannon estate, filed in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of North Carolina "false and fictitious" suits against the collectors of internal revenue for North Carolina for the return of the additionally assessed income taxes so levied and paid, with interest from the date of payment.

Tenth. On July 21, 1927, David H. Blair, again acting as executor and trustee of the Cannon estate, filed similar suit in the same court for the return to the Cannon estate of the additional taxes he had himself, acting as Commissioner of Internal Revenue, levied and collected and the refund of which he had himself, acting as Commissioner of Internal Revenue, denied. This was exactly 3 weeks before the statute of limitations on these particular taxes would have run.

Eleventh. The answers filed to these suits by the attorneys of the United States are alleged to have been incomplete and insufficient, and did not recite the facts under which the taxes in question had been levied nor properly present the case of the Government. It is intimated that the case as presented by the Government's attorneys was apparently designed not to win but to lose the Government's case.

Twelfth. The case did not go to trial, but was settled by a compromise entered into in the chambers of Federal Judge I. M. Meekins, at Raleigh, N.C., on December 19, 1928. Under the terms of this compromise, the court signed a purported judgment, under which the United States was required to pay to the Cannon estate the sum of $1,081,027.26. No evidence or computations, with relation to the law, were employed at arriving at this figure. The sum decided upon was exactly one half of the sum of the taxes under discussion, plus interest from the date of their payment to the United States Treasury.

Thirteenth. David H. Blair was in the remarkable position of being, as executor and trustee of the Cannon estate, the plaintiff in these suits—and, as Commissioner of Internal Revenue, the defendant in the same suits. This was a situation which offered little hope for justice and none for the interests of the Government and people of the United States.

Fourteenth. David H. Blair is alleged to have been present in the chambers of Judge Meekins when this compromise was agreed upon. Since the law requires that any such compromise of income taxes must have the approval of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, it may be presumed that he acted in a third capacity and gave his official approval to this remarkable bargain upon which he had agreed with himself.

Fifteenth. Section 3229 of the Revised Statutes of the United States requires that in making any such compromise the Commissioner should have the consent of the Secretary of the Treasury, the recommendation of the Attorney General of the United States, and that there should be filed a written opinion of the Solicitor of Internal Revenue. None of these appear in the record as it appears in the files of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of North Carolina, in which the compromised judgment was issued.

Sixteenth. The office of the General Counsel of the Bureau of Internal Revenue states that the papers in this transaction went into the closed file about January 15, 1929, indicating that the sum of $1,081,027.26 was paid immediately after the issuing of the compromise judgment.

Seventeenth. The payment of this refund does not appear in the published report of the Joint Committee on Taxation of the House and Senate, although it is a legal requirement that all tax refunds in excess of $75,000 shall so appear.

Eighteenth. The volume of the listed refunds submitted by the Secretary of the Treasury to the House Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, which should contain a statement of the payment of this refund, is missing from the files of that committee.

Nineteenth. It is stated in the declaration of the suit filed against David H. Blair that he did not report the payment of this million-dollar refund to Congress, as required by law.

I submit that this remarkable recital of alleged facts requires immediate action by the Attorney General of the United States. If the facts as recited are true, there has been a grave malfeasance in office. If a Commissioner of Internal Revenue is permitted to consummate such a transaction for his own benefit, it is easy to believe that other transactions equally reprehensible were perpetrated during his term of office—and David H. Blair was Commissioner of Internal Revenue for 8 years.

It is certain that all efforts to secure the prosecution and collection of proven tax evasions under the administrations of a later Commissioner of Internal Revenue, David Burnet, were absolutely barren of results for the Treasury and the public.

Evidence of tax evasion has been repeatedly presented to the legislative and executive branches of the Government. None of this evidence has been denied; none of the charges made have been controverted. The only defense against such charges and evidence has been silence. To continue this policy of ignoring fact and refraining from investigation and action is to confess that the tax laws of the United States are administered on a basis of favoritism, and that the Government as now constituted is organized in defense of the industry of tax evasion and against the interests of the people.

Every dollar of just taxation that is evaded through official favoritism or connivance is another dollar that must be raised by additional burdens on the honest taxpayer.

I submit that it is unjust and illegal to maintain a policy which increases deficits, adds to the public debt, and levies unbearable taxation—not for the honest needs of government but for the private profit of favored individuals.

I also submit that the subject can no longer be avoided nor answered by silence.

This is not a question of party politics. It is a question of the integrity of government itself.

Mr. McCLINTIC. I take it the gentleman was not on the floor when the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. COOPER] presented the report from the Committee on Ways and Means which was adopted by the House.

Mr. McFADDEN. I was not. I was called out of the Hall for a few moments.

Mr. McCLINTIC. I will say that the committee carefully considered the resolution introduced by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, but for the reason that it found a wider and more far-reaching resolution adopted by the Senate, calling for the identical information, the committee had the gentleman's resolution laid on the table.

Mr. McFADDEN. The gentleman is referring to a resolution passed a year ago by the two Houses?

Mr. McCLINTIC. No; a resolution passed on May 29.

Mr. McFADDEN. And they are going to get the information and make it available to Members of Congress?

Mr. McCLINTIC. That is the information.

Mr. McFADDEN. I hope they do. I cannot understand why this House does not get this information for themselves, when Members of this House ask for information which they are entitled to have from the various departments of the Government. This is the second resolution pertaining to tax evasion that I have introduced that has been tabled. The result, of course, is that this particular information I have asked for will not be available till the next session of Congress.

PROTECTION OF GOVERNMENT RECORDS

Mr. McKEOWN. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill H.R. 4220, for the protection of Government records, and I ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4220) for the protection of Government records, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same.

TOM D. McKEOWN,
J. BANKS KURTZ,
Managers on the part of the House.

JOE T. ROBINSON,
WM. E. BORAH,
TOM CONNALLY,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4220) for the protection of Government records submit the following written statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

This bill as it passed the House consisted of three sections. Section 1 provided that it shall be a crime for any person by virtue of his employment having custody of or access to any records of the Government to remove, sell, or destroy them for any purpose prejudicial to the Government. This section is merely an extension of existing law (U.S. Code, title 18, par. 234, Criminal Code, sec. 128). Section 2 made it a crime for any person without authorization of competent authority to publish or furnish to another any matter prepared in any official code, or for any purpose prejudicial to the safety or interest of the United States, willfully to publish or furnish to another any matter obtained without authorization of competent authority from the custody of any officer or employee of the United States or anything purporting to be such matter. Section 3 provided that proof of the commission of any of the acts forbidden by sections 1 and 2 shall be prima facie evidence of a purpose prejudicial to the safety or interest of the United States.

The Senate amendment struck out the entire House bill after the enacting clause and substituted one paragraph making it a crime for anyone having, or having had, custody or access to any official diplomatic code or any matter prepared in such code, willfully, without authorization or competent authority, to publish or furnish to another such code or matter, or what purports to be such, or any matter which was obtained while in the process of transmission between any foreign government and its diplomatic mission in the United States.

The conferees recommend the acceptance of the Senate amendment.

TOM D. McKEOWN,
EMANUEL CELLER,
J. BANKS KURTZ,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. McKEOWN. Mr. Speaker, this bill created quite a good deal of flurry after it had passed the House. The Senate, however, struck out all of that part of the bill that was in controversy, rewrote the bill, and confined it to one paragraph dealing with the code of other countries. So that it is back here without the objectionable features in it. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania, if he desires any time.

Mr. KURTZ. Mr. Speaker, this bill is similar to the laws in every civilized country. We have taken the Senate bill and agreed to it because it is simpler and somewhat less drastic and more comprehensive than the one we had.

Mr. McKEOWN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER].

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, this bill, in order to refresh the memory of Members, was one that met originally with a considerable amount of controversy, because it was feared that it would interfere with the prerogatives of Members of this House and the body at the other end of the Capitol, and that we might place ourselves in jeopardy.

As I read the bill originally, it had no such dangerous provision, and certainly the bill now before us, agreed to in conference, has none. It is very simple and aims at one specific evil, namely, the publication of information obtained or extracted from a Government bureau having to do with the code of a foreign government. It is a "snide" and disloyal act, to publish for private gain the facts obtained when holding a confidential and trusted position in the Government.

It would appear that a man named Herbert O. Yardley, who was employed by the Intelligence Bureau of the Department of State until 1929, when he was dismissed for cause, published a book called the "American Black Chamber" in 1929, which contained decoded messages passing between Japan and the United States at the time of the 1921 Disarmament Conference.

This same gentleman, who comes from the State of Indiana, now threatens to publish another book containing other dispatches thus decoded, and it is feared by the State Department, in the light of the coming International Economic Conference, that the publication of this book might seriously embarrass this Government, because it may contain certain decoded messages that would be derogatory to the Government of Japan, whose representatives will sit around the table with our own representatives in a few weeks. A delicate situation may be presented. It is because of that imminent danger of embarrassment, and to prevent a repetition thereof, that this bill comes before you today.

There is nothing in it that infringes upon the freedom of the press. It was thought at the time the bill was originally passed in the House that there was a deprivation of the right of the freedom of the press. There is nothing in that regard in this bill, and I think we can safely vote "aye" on this conference report.

I am a stanch upholder of the freedom of the press, and as a member of the Judiciary Committee, that originally reported this bill, and as one of the House managers, I certainly would strike a blow at anything that would interfere with our time-honored liberty. It has been charged that this bill is a revival of something akin to the alien sedition laws. That is clearly not true. I have great respect for our newspapers. They do a splendid service. There is nothing in this bill hurtful to the newspapers. Jefferson once said:

If I were given a choice of government without newspapers or newspapers without government, I would choose the latter.

I quite agree with Jefferson. The newspapers have nothing to fear from this bill. It is only when in a disloyal and seditious way a message from a foreign government is misquoted and our friendly relations with that government are thereby marred that this bill comes into operation.

Mr. McKEOWN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. RUFFIN].

Mr. RUFFIN. Mr. Speaker, in my judgment this bill, as amended by the Senate, is a material improvement upon the bill as it passed the House. The bill was designed to accomplish one purpose, and it does that in a direct manner in the Senate bill; whereas in the House bill there were ramifications that tended to make it somewhat obscure. I for one offered an amendment when the bill was in committee to make it in exactly the form the Senate has made it. I think this is a material improvement upon the bill as it passed the House, and it meets the objections interposed to it when under discussion in the House.

Mr. MOTT. What is the difference between this bill, as amended, and the existing law?

Mr. RUFFIN. This bill, as amended, is designed to cover a situation where a man in the employ of the Government obtains information passing from this Government to another government or its representatives in this country and discloses that information.

Mr. MOTT. I understand; but what is the difference between this proposed law and the present law? In other words, is not this prohibition contained in the present law?

Mr. RUFFIN. There is some doubt as to whether it is in the law or not. I think even though it may be construed to be in the present law, there is justification for passing this bill.

Mr. MOTT. That is not my understanding. It was not the argument made when the bill was argued in the House. It was argued at that time that existing law covered this particular code situation.

Mr. RUFFIN. I know, but there was some question about it.

Mr. MOTT. And that, in the opinion of the Secretary of State, it should be broadened to contain all of these provisions.

Mr. RUFFIN. That is the reason.

Mr. McKEOWN. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was agreed to was laid on the table.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I expect to propound an inquiry to the majority leader, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS], and I think that the House and the entire country will probably be very much interested in his reply. In looking over the calendar of the House, it appears to me that the major program has almost been completed. I would like very much, if the gentleman from Tennessee feels so inclined, to have him give us his views with reference to the probability of finishing the House program and the possibility of adjournment.

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, the House has completed consideration of all legislative matters presented by the President. It is ready to adjourn as soon as the Senate has passed the public works bill and conference reports which are now under consideration are disposed of. In addition to that, it will be necessary to pass an appropriation bill in the way of a deficiency appropriation bill, making some appropriations for some of the legislation that has been adopted. For instance, the Federal Trade Commission needs a certain sum of money to carry out the purposes of the Securities Act, and, I take it, although I have not been advised, that when the public works bill becomes a law it may be necessary to provide some appropriations for that purpose.

The independent offices appropriation bill is upon the Speaker's table, pending an effort to come to some agreement with reference to veterans' legislation. I am very hopeful that the conference which is now in progress will bring about a settlement of that question, which is uppermost in the mind of every Member, and if that is done I am hopeful that the committee of which the gentleman is a member will bring in a rule and we can take that up tomorrow and consider it.

With that out of the way, it does seem to me that we ought to be able to get away from here within the next few days. I do not think it will be possible, under the circumstances, to get away on Saturday night, as some have predicted.

Mr. BACHARACH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS. I yield.

Mr. BACHARACH. The gentleman said he hoped we could get away within the next few days. Does the gentleman refer to Tuesday or Wednesday or the latter part of next week?

Mr. BYRNS. I am unable to state to the gentleman. I have just stated that we have this appropriation bill, which will have to go to conference. I do not anticipate it will require any particular length of time. Of course, we have to wait on the Senate on the public works bill, and that may have to go to conference. Then we will have to pass a deficiency appropriation bill, and some hearings will be required for that. Then there is a conference report, I am reminded by the gentleman from Alabama, on the railroad bill. That must be considered. So it is impossible to say Tuesday or Wednesday. We all hope we can get away by Tuesday or Wednesday, but I have stated for some time that I could see no chance of adjourning before the 17th. I hope we can adjourn by that time at the latest.

Mr. TREADWAY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS. I yield.

Mr. TREADWAY. In relation to the public works bill, has the gentleman any opinion as to the time the Senate will likely finally act on it, so that that could go to conference?

Mr. BYRNS. There was a statement by several leaders of the Senate that they expected to conclude the bill before they adjourned tonight. Another prominent Senator told me, however, that that was impossible. So the gentleman can take his choice.

Mr. TREADWAY. I should choose the former one, if I had my way about it.

Mr. BYRNS. I know the gentleman's choice is that way.

Mr. TREADWAY. But that would not permit of that bill going to conference tomorrow, would it, even if it were voted on tonight?

Mr. BYRNS. Well, it could go to conference tomorrow if it were passed tonight.

Mr. TREADWAY. Well, there is usually a day or two between the time a bill is passed and when it goes to conference.

Mr. BYRNS. But it could be thrown into conference tomorrow.

Mr. MEAD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS. I yield.

Mr. MEAD. The gentleman has not mentioned the Glass-Steagall bill, which contains a bank guaranty, and which I understand is still in conference. I was wondering if the gentleman had any information with regard to that bill?

Mr. BYRNS. I have the information from the Chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency [Mr. STEAGALL] that he hopes and expects that they will be able to come to an agreement upon that bill.

Mr. MEAD. There was a provision in the Senate bill which would destroy the Postal Savings banks. That was not in the House bill. I hope that is eliminated before it returns to the House.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS. I yield.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. Does the gentleman know if there is any possibility of the Sumners bill, H.R. 585, being considered?

Mr. BYRNS. While we are waiting for the adoption of the various conference reports, it will be possible, I hope, to consider the bill to which the gentleman refers.

Mr. WEIDEMAN. I want to mention this fact: I was speaking of the Sumners bill concerning bankruptcies of cities, and so forth. The State of Michigan has recently passed three laws which will enable municipalities in that State to come under the protection of this law if it is made effective. I believe it will contribute considerably to the financial recovery of those bankrupt municipalities if we can consider that law.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Tennessee having concluded his statement, I yield back the balance of my time.

QUESTION OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of asking the Chair some questions, I rise to a question of personal privilege.

In today's Washington News appears my picture, over the top of which is the word "Censured", and underneath it says I was censured on yesterday by the Speaker. Is that so? Did the Speaker censure me?

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Texas that the Speaker has no authority whatever to censure any Member of Congress unless ordered to do so by the Congress itself.

Mr. BLANTON. And the Speaker did not censure me?

The SPEAKER. The Speaker did not violate the rules.

Mr. BLANTON. Then that statement in the paper is not true.

The SPEAKER. Neither did the House censure the gentleman from Texas, because the House permitted the gentleman's remarks to remain in the RECORD.

Mr. BLANTON. I will call the Speaker's attention to the fact that when the Republicans tried to stop me from speaking, and my friend from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN] moved that I be allowed to proceed, the yeas and nays were demanded by the Republicans, and the Rankin motion carried by a vote of 263 to 92, and the House permitted me to continue my speech; and when the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. LEHLBACH] moved to expunge my remarks, as is shown on the next page of the RECORD, 5206, it clearly shows that by a yea-and-nay vote of 238 to 112, in my favor, the House refused to take my remarks out of the RECORD. And the Journal of the House will correctly show these record votes.

The SPEAKER. The Journal will show what the vote was. The Chair recalls the fact that the gentleman's remarks remained in the RECORD.

Mr. BLANTON. A little, small-sized sheet like this Washington News ought to quit lying on Congressmen. [Laughter and applause.]

Having been granted unanimous consent to extend, Mr. Speaker, I will quote word for word from the RECORD of yesterday every ruling made by the Speaker, showing conclusively that not only was I not censured but that the House also sustained me by a tremendous majority on both votes. I quote from page 5204:

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the words objected to.

The Clerk read as follows:

"He has been so used to cutting melons and has been associated with melon cutters so long that he imagines the President has looked up and found out there is $10,000,000 in the Treasury that could be split up and divided. That does not do you justice, Brother SNELL. You are not the SNELL I have always thought you were if you have such thoughts as that. That is beneath your dignity."

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that that does not violate the rules of the House.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is ready to rule.

Under the rules a Member may not refer to another Member by name.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I make the further point of order that the gentleman did not refer to him except either as "Mr." or "Brother" SNELL, expressions that are frequently used on the floor of the House.

The SPEAKER. A Member may not do that, though, as the Chair understands the rules.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to substitute "Mr." for "Brother."

Mr. LEHLBACH. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order the gentleman from Texas may not be heard.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the "Brother SNELL" part and put in place thereof "the gentleman from New York, the minority leader."

Mr. BRUMM. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. BLANTON. I was inquiring what Mr. SNELL meant when he said he thought the President wanted to divide a $10,000,000 melon.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the remainder of the remarks hold the gentleman from New York up to ridicule, and that is a violation of the rule.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the gentleman from Texas be permitted to proceed in order.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 263, nays 92.

So the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas will proceed in order. [Applause.]

Not one word of censure ever came from the lips of the Speaker. The Speaker merely decided points of order, as to what is in order and is not in order under the rules, as he is called upon to do in every session of the House. He held that I could not refer to a Member by name. Certainly. That is the rule, yet it is violated in practically every speech that is made in the House. The Speaker held that remarks could not be made that held a Member up to ridicule. Certainly. There is a rule against that. But it is violated daily. The Speaker did nothing more than rule on a point of order. He did not censure. He would have made the same ruling, had a point of order been made timely against the remarks of the gentleman from New York, when he asserted that the reason for passing the bill was that Democrats "have found out they have $10,000,000 in the (Hawaiian) treasury, and you want to divide it among deserving Democrats." This Washington News purposely and deliberately misrepresented the facts. It did it hoping to injure me. It has been doing this same thing for years. And that is the reason that neither Congressmen nor citizens of Washington can rely upon or have any confidence in anything it publishes.

Then when the gentleman from New Jersey tried to expunge my remarks from the RECORD the House refused to do it by a vote of only 112 for his motion and 237 votes against it. And when it is remembered that there are 122 Republicans in this House, it will be seen that not even all the Republicans voted for the motion. I now quote the motion to expunge my remarks, the Speaker's rulings, and the vote of the House to show that I was not censured but upheld, and that by a large majority the House refused to expunge my remarks, to wit:

Mr. LEHLBACH. Mr. Speaker, I make a privileged motion. I move that the words spoken by the gentleman from Texas in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union and reported to the House be expunged from the RECORD.

Mr. O'CONNOR. If the gentleman will yield, we are not in Committee of the Whole; we are in the House.

Mr. RANKIN. We have not been in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union. If the gentleman will watch the mace, he will know that.

Mr. LEHLBACH. I am perfectly aware of that.

The SPEAKER. The question now is on the motion of the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. LEHLBACH. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 112, nays 237.

So the motion of Mr. LEHLBACH was rejected.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I am deeply grateful to my Democratic colleagues for protecting me in my rights here.

I want the good people of Washington who have access to the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD to get a copy of today's issue of the Washington News and compare the false statement it printed in top headlines in trying to make people believe I was censured with what really happened in the RECORD, and they will quit advertising in and buying this unreliable little sheet. As the Speaker has stated, not only did the Speaker not censure me but the House of Representatives by a tremendous majority twice upheld me and allowed me to finish my speech, and also kept my remarks in the RECORD. Let me repeat once more to our splendid new colleagues who are now serving here for the first time that if it were not for this daily CONGRESSIONAL RECORD a malicious newspaper could ruin any man in this Congress. The RECORD daily protects every Member here in this House of Representatives.

If it were not for the daily CONGRESSIONAL RECORD that goes into every district of the United States, a weak, little, half-sized, irresponsible, malevolent Washington News could get away with such libelous statements. It tells a falsehood when the truth would serve it just as well. It stated today that the Sergeant at Arms seated me beside "JENNINGS RANDOLPH, a West Virginia Republican", when as a matter of fact JENNINGS RANDOLPH is a dyed-in-the-wool, 100-percent Democrat, and the Sergeant at Arms did not seat me, or come near me, or have any order to seat me, but this double-barrel lie was made out of the whole cloth, without even the semblance of foundation for it. So very few Members ever look at this scandalous midget of a press pretense that I should have left its spewing unnoticed, but once in a while it is our duty to keep the record straight on this Washington News.

MAIL SERVICE

Mr. MEAD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by inserting a speech on the Department of Justice, delivered by my colleague, Hon. EUGENE W. CROWE. This speech is of great historic value and one of the best speeches I ever read on the subject.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. MEAD]?

There was no objection.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following address delivered by Congressman EUGENE B. CROWE, of Indiana, at the district meeting of postmasters, postal officials, letter and rural-route carriers, at Scottsburg, Ind., September 24, 1932:

Mr. Chairman, ladies, and gentlemen, it is my pleasure again to address you at your yearly meeting and under such pleasant surroundings as are had here this evening following this bountiful banquet and program.

I shall take for my subject this evening a matter which I believe will be of interest to each and every official of the Post Office Department not only here but throughout the State and Nation. I shall attempt in a brief way to outline the mail service, not so much in its present-day form, with which you are all so familiar, but to give you some idea of the mail service in various forms, starting back at a period long before Christ and a total of some 5,000 years ago.

While we think of our present-day post office with all its modern equipment and excellent service for the rapid and efficient disbursement of mail as purely a modern institution, we find when we pursue its development that its foundation was laid as early as the ancient period beginning 3000 B.C.

King Sargon of Chaldea or ancient Babylon, whose greatness is dimmed in history only by the remoteness of his age, having lived many centuries before Abraham, who won as many victories as Alexander the Great and became a world conqueror, had his personal messenger, Urduk, who is described as a "trusted messenger", fleet of foot.

Sargon counseled him, "Keep a wise head upon thy shoulders and thy tongue between thy teeth." Urduk always kept his own counsel and that of his King. At first his duties seemed simple. They were some such errands as, "Say unto Seddar of the Sumerians that this will be a dry moon", or "Tell Gemek of the Hittites that the hunt is not proceeding well. He must obtain more ostriches." Such messages were code, and Urduk committed them to memory and would go on foot until he attained his goal. After conveying these messages over the entire kingdom for many years and sometimes meeting with difficulty in getting them accepted as authentic, he presented a plan to the King whereby the King could get his gem cutters to take a precious stone of extra size and carve on it the name of King Sargon and his official greeting. It could be pressed upon a tablet bearing the message from the King and would thus carry his official authority. None could dare dispute the word of the messenger.

Thus the King's seal at the bottom made the message a law. From this beginning we have our present great seal and also the modern letter.

Pharaoh used his trusted messengers (in 380 B.C.) to carry secret tidings in the face of great danger, which aided him in overthrowing the old gods. In 490 B.C. an account is given of the famous defeat of the Persians by the Greeks at Marathon, and the tidings were brought to Athens by Phidippides, the most famous athlete and fleetest runner of his day, although it cost him his life to do it.

During the reign of Queen Esther (in 482 B.C.) a disaster was plotted against the Jews, but was averted by her swift messengers, whose loyalty was dearer than life itself.

The courier system had by 98 A.D. developed in the Roman Empire until it became necessary to establish a system of post roads. The name "post" is of Latin origin, meaning station. These messengers or couriers were kept in readiness at these posts or stations to relay dispatches. One of these young couriers, Laurentius, found favor in the eyes of the Emperor Trajan, and by bravery and shrewdness helped his Emperor to defeat the Dacians.

When Charles Martel smote the Saracens (in 732 A.D.), Roland the Faithful carried the appeal for help from his lord to Paris, which led to the defeat of the Mohammedans at Tours and saved Europe for Christendom.

Richard the Lion Hearted of England would doubtless have lost his life after the battle, in which he tried to save the Holy Land from the infidels, when he attempted to return to his homeland in the feudal days of lawlessness had it not been for the assistance of his faithful page and favorite minstrel.

Wandering over Europe seeking him, the story relates how speedily they brought the tidings of finding him to his faithful subjects.

An interesting story is told of a youth who was a descendant of the famous Von Taxis family of Postment, who served kings about 1500, asking his uncle Francis to send him out on a route. The uncle replied, "You know not what you ask. The life of my riders is a hard one. When I send them on a journey I spare not; it concerns me not whether they live or die, so long as my letters go through. Do you realize that?" Undaunted by the warning and his uncle's desire to make a clerk of him in his office to receive and assort mail, the youth asserted his preference to ride. "Spoken like a true Von Taxis", exclaimed the uncle, who proceeded to tell him how as early as 1300 one of their ancestors organized the Bergamascan couriers in Italy. But despite the hardships of bandits, ruffians, murderers, and by reason of broken bridges, storms, rain, mud, heat, war, and pestilence, the service set up by his ancestor, Omodeo Tasso, flourished and in time spread to other lands. This family has been called Tasso in Italy, Tassis in France, and Taxis in Germany. They became known all over Europe and served kings. These riders wore the family livery and were paid by their own house and were in no way connected with the government.

Francis ran courier lines from Ghent to Brussels in many directions and managed them so well that in 1505 Philip I, King of Spain, signed a contract with him, after appointing him captain and master of posts, and agreed to pay him an annual salary of 12,000 livres, a large sum in those days. These lines were extended until they included Netherlands, Spain, Vienna, Paris, Lyons, and Granada. In addition a regular schedule was adopted.

Knowing this, young Johann, who was an expert horseman, became more eager to enter the service.

After some deliberation as to the boy's future, which was entrusted to him, Francis approached him one day with this question: "I have an important commission for Paris. It may be fraught with danger. Will you undertake it?" The happy expression on the boy's face was sufficient answer.

The French Queen had been having a tiara made by a skilled lapidary in Brussels. It was ready for delivery. It was worth a king's ransom; and if a band of thieves set their hearts upon it, they would stop at nothing to seize it. To send it by a regular messenger would only invite disaster. Francis thought of a plan whereby he would ask the lapidary to display "the diamonds of the Queen of France in his window", except that they were to be made of imitation jewels.

Johann was to set forth with a bundle of books on his shoulder, thus giving the appearance of a schoolboy bound for Paris.

When the horse was made ready Johann was quite disappointed, for instead of his pet saddle a rather worn and shabby one rested on the pony's back. His uncle, seeing the look of displeasure, whispered a few sentences earnestly into his ear. Johann looked puzzled at first, then brightened. "I see what you mean", he said. "the old saddle is good enough."

He set out on his journey and traversed the same soil that was to be so bitterly fought over in the World War 4 centuries later.

The second day out he was about to be attacked by a band of six villainous bandits when, quick as a flash, he bent over the pony and unloosed the saddle girth, leaving the saddle apparently undisturbed. He did not have time to do more for the men were upon him. They searched him but decided he was not a courier so they concluded they would keep him and sell the pony. "Even the saddle's worth keeping", exclaimed one. Although they stripped off his clothing except for a thin shift, the mention of the saddle filled him with alarm. While they were searching his clothing they left a little open space between the captive and his pony.

He leaped to his pony's back like a flash and instantly urged his pony to the nearby stream. The demoralized robbers sprang for their guns and horses, but Johann was almost across the river before one of them fired. The fugitive swung far over to one side, and the bullet missed him, for the animal shielded him entirely. In swerving, Johann's saddle fell into the river near the farther shore.

The bandits gave up the chase for fear they might miss the regular courier when he should ride by with the Queen's jewels.

Johann finally reached a relay station, where an old and trusted employee gave him some hot broth and makeshift garments. The boy related what had happened, and they quietly laid plans.

At early dawn the next day, Johann and a small band of men rode back to the stream. The ruffians had disappeared. They rode into the river and found the old saddle, which Johann placed on the horse. The next day at noon he was admitted to see the Queen, and after relating his story, drew his sheath knife from his belt and slit open the old saddle. A concealed pocket was revealed and from that he drew a small packet, which he presented with a low bow to the Queen.

So impressed was the Queen with his faithful service and the fact that he was a scion of the famous Von Taxis family, she took from her finger a ring and gave it to him. The muddy messenger also became her favored knight.

The uncle was so much pleased with the result of his first mission that he gave him more and more responsibility, and upon his death the great postal organization reaching into every country in Europe passed into his hands. But before the uncle's death Emperor Maximilian conferred upon Johann a knighthood and the Order of the Golden Spur, which was one of the most coveted decorations in Christendom.

The great Francis Von Taxis not only served kings and nobles but as his service grew firmly established he demanded the privilege of taking private mail and even passengers. It was some time before this was conceded, and then the Emperor stipulated such service was not to interfere with carrying royal dispatches. This fact deserves special mention, as here for the first time was instituted a postal service for the man in the street.

The earliest record of a post office in North America appears in the General Assembly of Massachusetts in 1639, when the house of a certain Richard Fairbanks was appointed for all letters which were brought from beyond the seas, or sent thither to be left with him, and he was to take care that they were delivered or sent according to direction. Twenty years later a postal service was established in Virginia and in 1672 a monthly post between New York and Boston was put into operation. In 1691 Thomas Neal secured the right through a royal patent to operate an intercolonial postal service and from this event dates the real beginning of the post office in America. Service was begun in 1693, the post riders traveling from Portsmouth, N.H., to several points in Virginia, taking many days to make the trip. Later the English Crown purchased the right to operate the colonial service as a branch of the general post office in London.

In 1755 Benjamin Franklin established the colonial postal service across the Alleghenies with Philadelphia as a center. In wet weather these roads were seas of mud wandering uncertainly as grading was unknown but did have mileposts to keep the mail carriers from getting lost. From 1773 to 1774 Franklin was deputy Postmaster General. When the Continental Congress met in 1775, they passed a Post Office Act setting up a line of communication from Falmouth, Maine, to Savannah, Ga., with as many cross routes as might be deemed necessary by Franklin, who had now become Postmaster General with a salary of £1,000 a year. Not only was the mail carried by riders but mention is made of the stagecoach.

Since then the post office has developed in marvelous fashion and by 1789 there were 75 post offices. In 1900 there were 76,688, but by establishing rural routes this number was reduced to 59,580 in 1910.

When steam was harnessed to sails in 1819, Nat Crane, who had just arrived in Washington from Philadelphia in a big, clumsy mail coach, was summoned into the private office of Post Master General Meigs and asked to accompany a sack of mail on the first ocean-going steamship, the Savannah, to Liverpool. Although eager for the trip, Crane felt doubtful, as did almost everyone else, whether a boat could carry enough fuel for the engine for such a voyage. Meigs assured him the sails would assist the steam, and thus the boat was launched.

Crane was chosen because Meigs thought he was a dependable man with a clean record and because Meigs hoped to inaugurate a service. Crane was to go as an official observer of the vessel to see whether steam navigation was practicable and to observe the methods used abroad for carrying and handling mail.

The ship made the trip in the record-making time of 27 days and set the whole world buzzing. Crane performed his mission and returned on the Savannah in about the same length of time. While the trip seemed to be a success and aroused great enthusiasm, some mechanical difficulties arose which remained to be solved. The problem of fuel was vexing and the promoters went back to sails, which continued to be used for 20 years. Then, while Americans failed to make use of the opportunity which this vessel offered, and the mails continued to require weeks and months for delivery, Samuel Cunard, of Halifax, a British subject, formed a British company and established the Cunard Line which would ply the Atlantic by steam alone. His first ship came across in 14½ days.

Just 100 years after the voyage of the Savannah, we can see approaching New York Harbor the Majestic, of the White Star Line, another British company, a ship of 50,000 tons, bringing in her hold for American friends thousands of Christmas gifts sent less than a week ago. Mail chutes are run out from the vessel's side and dropped into waiting tenders, filling six at once. The work is supervised by an Assistant Postmaster General, 4 assistant postmasters, and 125 men from the New York City post office. All work madly so that this Christmas mail may be delivered to the farthest corner of the United States before Christmas. Some of it is hustled over to the flying field in Long Island and sent by air. The planes are gone many miles inland before the boat lands. The pieces of mail number about 17,661 bags, but not one bag is of such importance as the lone bag that went to England a century before.

One of the most important factors in the progress of mail distribution is the invention of the locomotive by Peter Cooper. From the time one of the first tracks was laid, about 1842, from Washington to Richmond, a new era was ushered in, in the rapid transit of mail that subsequently would do more than all other forces combined.

But all great forces move slowly and this necessarily was no exception. The country was vast and the cost of railroad construction excessive. Between the Mississippi River on the East and the Pacific on the West lay hundreds of miles of trackless wilderness, barren deserts, and giant mountains. California seemed as remote from the East as Madagascar as late as 1860. This usual route for mails was by water, either around Cape Horn, requiring weeks, or across the Isthmus of Panama from one ship to another, thence up the coast, a journey nearly as tedious. No railroad or telegraph line had as yet pierced this vast stretch. A quicker and steadier means of communication was a necessity. No doubt you are all familiar with the story of the pony express, which supplied this great need for the brief period of a year and a half from 1860 to the fall of 1861. But I wish to review a few of the outstanding events of this period, which, while so brief, contains more thrills, adventure, and romance than any other similar period of our history.

It brings to mind the names of Russel, Majors & Waddell, who laid the plans for this fleet of fast riders called the "pony express" and whose names became famous on the old West. A succession of relay stations were established where a rider would exchange mounts and proceed to the next one until he had covered his required number of miles. A certain William Cody applied for the job of rider, and I quote you the oath required:

"I, William F. Cody, do hereby swear, before the Great and Living God, that during my engagement, and while I am an employee of Russell, Majors & Waddell, I will, under no circumstances, use profane language; that I will drink no intoxicating liquors; that I will not quarrel or fight with any other employee of the firm, and that in every respect I will conduct myself honestly, be faithful to my duties, and so direct all my acts as to win the confidence of my employers. So help me God."

I was deeply impressed by this oath for it told eloquently of the high character of the riders employed, as well as of the company employing them, and I felt it would be a good thing to tack up on the lintel of every office today, and if everyone would live up to the high ideals set forth in it, what a different world this would be. As I pondered on this, I doubted if any group of employees could be found today that came so nearly measuring up to these ideals as the faithful group of mail carriers assembled here and all other groups wherever they may be. It was also a revelation to me to find this same William Cody was none other than the colorful Buffalo Bill of the wild West, the account of whose wild adventures and of his ability to overcome plots of wild Indians, desperadoes, wild animals, rough weather, mountain trails, all to the end that he perform his service faithfully and deliver his cherished packages according to schedule, reads like tales of magic.

The pony express was supplanted by the stagecoach, which, as we know, not only carried mail but passengers. It began to operate about the time the Civil War began, and the newspapers which it carried bore accounts of the war. The stagecoach blazed the trail for the covered wagon, drawn by oxen, and thus the development of the wild West began. The character of the stagecoach drivers and mail carriers was of the same high order as that of the pony-express riders and was exemplified by such men whose names, Bill Jennings and Bob Alder, have come down to us in history as representative of their type.

From the very earliest times of mail delivery, speed has been the watchword. From the fleetest runners, the fastest riders, the best drivers, men emphasized speed in each new development. It was not surprising then at the beginning of the twentieth century when railway companies, which had hitherto designed wooden cars that had two apartments, one for the use of the great mails and the other for way mails, should continue to build cars and revise schedules to expedite the handling of mail. With this thought ever present, they realized strength must accompany speed for safety. Accordingly, the Twentieth Century Limited was the outgrowth called "express trains", with coaches so completely equipped for mail distribution that they were complete post offices within themselves. This really was the foundation of the American system which did not become firmly established until 1864. Since then the growth has been phenomenal and the Post Office Department is without question the most gigantic of all organizations. It handles more pieces, employs more men, spends more money, touches more interests, reaches more homes, uses more agencies, goes through more details, and has more outlets than any other business, public or private, over all the world. It costs the Government upward of $600,000,000 a year.

This one Postal System is greater than that of any European country. The number of letters delivered each year in the United States is from 12 to 15 billions greater than those of Great Britain, Germany, France, and Russia combined. There are more than 56,000 post offices and more than 300,000 employees who handle one third of the total postal business of all civilized nations. The annual receipts average about $3 for each man, woman, and child. The Rural Free Delivery, the Parcel Post, the Postal Savings Systems, the special air service, and other special deliveries are all a part of its marvelous development.

At the close of the war, our Government began putting in experimental air mail lines. It started with a route from New York to Washington, which was maintained so successfully that other eastern cities began to be linked up. Presently airmen with their mail bags flew into Cleveland, Chicago, Kansas City, and Omaha. By 1921 the Post Office Department was ready to proceed further with this fascinating game, and a route was laid out extending to San Francisco. The first flyers went only in daylight, entrusting their bags to the railway trains at night, and other flyers picking them up in the morning. Then beacon lights were set-up to permit day and night flying.

But still our airmen were dissatisfied. They wished to fly as fast as the sun or as fast as it appears to fly. The War Department chose Lt. Russell Maughan, of the United States Army, who had distinguished himself in the World War by bringing down at least four German planes and by winning a Pulitzer prize for having attained a speed of 206 miles per hour, to try the unheard-of feat of delivering a letter in 1 day from coast to coast. It was not a stunt flight but a service flight to see what schedule was practical for our air and mail service. You all remember how it thrilled the world when, on June 23, 1924, leaving Mitchel Field in New York at 4 a.m. with a letter of greeting from Mayor Hylan, of New York, to Mayor Rolfe, of San Francisco, a small packet of other letters, and a copy of the New York Times just off the press, he delivered the letter to Mayor Rolfe at sunset. This was the first dawn-to-dusk flight and a record-breaking transcontinental flight consuming 21 hours and 48 minutes.

It was from this new Air Mail Service our famous Lindbergh developed. He first won his spurs on a regular air route in the West and was known for his daring and the long chances he took. But by far the longest chance he ever took was on May 20, 1927, when he left Roosevelt Field, Long Island, and landed in the Paris airport 21 hours later and presented a letter of introduction to Ambassador Herrick. This letter was the first carried across the Atlantic by air.

Although many transcontinental flights had been attempted since the spectacular flight of Maughan, it remained for Colonel Lindbergh to blaze a new trail. Although it was not his aim to try to break any records, he held to the theory that flying at a higher altitude would make for greater speed, as it would be possible to avoid storms and other unfavorable weather and the very thinness of air would offer less resistance. While this was really a test flight, it proved his theory was true, and he made the trip from Los Angeles to New York in 14¾ hours at an altitude of 14,000 feet and prepared for the day when a letter could be delivered across the continent in much less than 15 hours. How much less none of us can tell, neither to what great distant points, nor how short a time, so rapid has been its development. The words of the Bible can find no truer application than to air mail, "It doth not yet appear what it should be."

As I have attempted to bring to you something of the history of the delivery of mail, two things have made a distinct impression on me. The first, that time has wrought wonderful changes in the manner of delivering mail, beginning with the post runners of King Sargon in ancient times, the courier system of the middle ages, and the pony express, stagecoach, express train, and air mail service of modern times.

But the next thing and the one thing that impressed me very deeply was the fact that the character of the men who have entered this service from ancient times to the present day has remained unchanged. The "trusted messengers" and couriers of the kings of old have become the trusted messengers of all the people everywhere today. The same spirit of loyalty, adventure, honesty, joy in the knowledge of a task well done, prevails today as in bygone days. Although you can proudly boast of such men in your ranks as our great and noble Lindbergh, you are our heroes of the everyday, overcoming all obstacles to perform your tasks worthily and honorably. May the public grow in greater knowledge and appreciation of your great contribution to civilization and to the growth of world history and be made to realize the importance of your great organization in world affairs. May it also see the truth of the words of old Herodotus, father of all historians, as President Wilson saw them when he caused these words to be put up in large letters across the front of the new post office built in New York City a few years ago.

"Neither snow nor rain, nor heat, nor gloom of night stays these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds."

HOME OWNERS MORTGAGE BILL

Mr. STEAGALL, from the Committee on Banking and Currency, submitted a privileged report on the bill (H.R. 5240) to provide emergency relief with respect to home-mortgage indebtedness, to refinance home mortgages, to extend relief to the owners of homes occupied by them who are unable to amortize their debt elsewhere, to amend the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, to increase the market for obligations of the United States, and for other purposes.

CONSTRUCTION AND INSPECTION OF STEAMSHIP BOILERS

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 1129), to amend sections 361, 392, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, and 412 of title 46 of the United States Code relating to the construction and inspection of boilers, unfired pressure vessels, and the appurtenances thereof, with amendments.

It is a bill unanimously reported by the Committee on Merchant Marine, Radio, and Fisheries. I make this request because the Department of Commerce desires to have the bill passed at this session.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That sections 361, 392, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, and 412 of title 46 of the United States Code be, and the same are hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 361. Every vessel subject to inspection propelled in whole or in part by steam or by any other form of mechanical or electrical power shall be considered a steam vessel within the meaning of and subject to all of the provisions of this act: Provided, however, That motor boats as defined in the act of June 9, 1910, are exempt from the provisions of this act.

"SEC. 392. The local inspectors shall also inspect, before the same shall be used and once at least in every year thereafter, the boilers, unfired pressure vessels, and appurtenances thereof, also the propelling and auxiliary machinery, electrical apparatus and equipment, of all vessels subject to inspection; and the inspectors shall satisfy themselves by thorough examination that the same are in conformity with law and the rules and regulations of the board of supervising inspectors, and may be safely employed in the service proposed. No boiler, unfired pressure vessel, or appurtenances thereof shall be allowed to be used if constructed in whole or in part of defective material or which because of its form, design, workmanship, age, use, or for any other reason is unsafe. At each annual inspection all boilers, unfired pressure vessels, and main steam piping shall be subjected to hydrostatic tests or such other tests as may be prescribed by the board of supervising inspectors. The ratio of the hydrostatic test to the maximum working pressure shall be determined by action of the board of supervising inspectors.

"SEC. 406. All boilers and unfired pressure vessels constructed of iron or steel plates or other approved metals for use on vessels subject to inspection shall be made of material that has been tested, inspected, and stamped in accordance with the requirements of this act.

"SEC. 407. Any person, firm, or corporation who constructs a boiler, or steam pipe connecting the boilers, or an unfired pressure vessel for use on vessels subject to inspection, of iron or steel plates or other approved metals which have not been duly tested, inspected, and stamped according to the provisions of this act and the requirements of the board of supervising inspectors; or who knowingly uses any defective material in the construction of such boiler, steam pipe, or pressure vessel; or who drifts any rivet hole to make it come fair; or who delivers any such boiler, steam pipe, or pressure vessel for use, knowing it to be defective in design, material, or construction, shall be fined $1,000. Nothing in this act shall be so construed as to prevent from being used on such vessels any boiler, steam generator, steam pipe, or unfired pressure vessel which may not be constructed of riveted iron or steel plates: Provided, That scientific data and facts are submitted to enable the board of supervising inspectors to satisfy themselves that such boiler, steam generator, or pressure vessel is equal in strength and as safe from explosion as one of the best quality of iron or steel plates of riveted construction: Provided, however, That the Secretary of Commerce may grant permission to use any boiler, steam generator, or unfired pressure vessel not of iron or steel plate riveted construction upon the certificate of the supervising inspector for the district wherein such boiler, steam generator, or pressure vessel is to be used, and other satisfactory proof that the use of the same is safe and efficient, said permit to be valid until the next regular meeting of the board of supervising inspectors who shall act thereon: Provided further, That such boilers, steam generators, or pressure vessels may be constructed with seamless shell or by means of any approved method of welding governed by the rules and regulations prescribed by the board of supervising inspectors.

"SEC. 408. All iron or steel plates, or other material used in the construction of boilers or unfired pressure vessels for the use on vessels subject to inspection shall be tested and inspected in such manner as shall be prescribed by the board of supervising inspectors and approved by the Secretary of Commerce, so as to enable the inspectors to ascertain the tensile strength, homogeneity, toughness, and ability to withstand the effect of repeated heating and cooling; and no plate or other material shall be used in the construction of such boilers or pressure vessels which has not been tested, inspected, and approved under the rules and regulations of the board of supervising inspectors: Provided, however, That small unfired pressure vessels having diameters not exceeding 30 inches and subject to a maximum allowable working pressure not exceeding 100 pounds per square inch shall be exempt from this requirement.

"The Director of the Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection may, under the direction of the Secretary of Commerce, detail inspectors to inspect iron or steel plates or other material at the mills where the same are manufactured; and if such plates or material are found in accordance with the rules of the board of supervising inspectors, the inspector shall stamp the same with the initials of his name and the official stamp of the Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection, which stamp shall be authorized by the board of supervising inspectors; and material so stamped shall be accepted by the local inspectors of the various districts as being in full compliance with the requirements of this section regarding the test and inspection of such plates and material: Provided, That any person, firm, or corporation who affixes any false, forged, fraudulent, spurious, or counterfeit of the stamp herein authorized to be put on by an inspector shall be deemed guilty of a felony and shall be fined not less than $1,000 nor more than $5,000 and imprisoned not less than 2 years nor more than 5 years.

"SEC. 409. Every plate of iron or steel, made for use in the construction of boilers, unfired pressure vessels, or riveted steam pipe shall be distinctly and permanently stamped by the manufacturer thereof, and, if practicable, in such places that the marks shall be left visible when such plates are assembled, with the name of the manufacturer, and the minimum tensile strength in pounds per square inch, and the inspectors shall keep a record in their office of the stamps upon all plates, material, and boilers which they inspect.

"SEC. 410. Any person, firm, or corporation who counterfeits, or causes to be counterfeited, any of the marks or stamps prescribed for iron or steel plates or other material tested and inspected under this act, or who designedly stamps, or causes to be stamped falsely, any such plates or material; and every person who stamps or marks, or causes to be stamped or marked, any such plates or material with the name or trade-mark of another, with the intent to mislead or deceive, shall be fined $2,000, and may in addition thereto, at the discretion of the court, be imprisoned not exceeding 2 years.

"SEC. 411. The board of supervising inspectors is hereby empowered to prescribe formulas, rules, and regulations for the design, material, and construction of boilers, unfired pressure vessels, and appurtenances thereof, and steam piping for use on vessels subject to the provisions of this act The maximum working pressure shall be determined by formulas prescribed by the board of supervising inspectors, and no such boiler, pressure vessel, or appurtenance thereof shall be designed or operated where the factor of safety is less than four: Provided, That the minimum thickness and maximum allowable working pressure of valves, fittings, and other appurtenances shall be determined by formulas prescribed by the board of supervising inspectors.

"SEC. 412. The maximum allowable thickness of shell plates and the details of material, design, and construction of externally fired boilers shall be determined by action of the board of supervising inspectors."

All laws or parts of laws which may conflict with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

With the following committee amendments:

On page 1, lines 3 and 4, strike out the words and figures "361, 392, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, and 412, of title 46 of the United States Code", and insert in lieu thereof the words and figures "4399, 4418, 4428, 4429, 4430, 4431, 4432, 4433, and 4434 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (U.S.C., title 46, secs. 361, 392, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, and 412)."

On page 1, line 6, after the word "Sec.", to strike out the figures "361", and insert in lieu thereof the figures "4399."

On page 2, line 4, after the word "Sec.", strike out the figures "392", and insert in lieu thereof the figures "4418."

On page 2, line 24, after the word "Sec.", strike out the figures "406", and insert in lieu thereof the figures "4428."

On page 3, line 4, after the word "Sec.", strike out the figures "407", and insert in lieu thereof the figures "4429."

On page 4, line 13, after the word "Sec.", strike out the figures "408", and insert in lieu thereof the figures "4430."

On page 5, line 24, after the word "Sec.", strike out the figures "409", and insert in lieu thereof the figures "4431."

On page 6, line 9, after the word "Sec.", strike out the figures "410", and insert in lieu thereof the figures "4432."

On page 6, line 20, after the word "Sec.", strike out the figures "411", and insert in lieu thereof the figures "4433."

On page 7, line 8, after the word "Sec.", strike out the figures "412", and insert in lieu thereof the figures "4434."

Amend the title so as to read:

"An act to amend sections 4399, 4418, 4428, 4429, 4430, 4431, 4432, 4433, and 4434 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, relating to the construction and inspection of boilers, unfired pressure vessels, and the appurtenances thereof."

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLAND. I yield.

Mr. GOSS. Will the passage of this bill affect any vessels that do not now come under the inspection service?

Mr. BLAND. I asked the same question of an inspector yesterday when he was before the committee and he said that it did not, that it covered the same vessels that are covered now.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLAND. I yield.

Mr. McFARLANE. What change does this make in the present law?

Mr. BLAND. It makes a number of changes in the present law in that it liberalizes the present law. The boiler inspection law of the United States was passed many years ago and the opinion of the inspectors is that it is not modern and up-to-date, that this will really be in the interest of safety. There are many technical changes made in the law.

Mr. McFARLANE. Will the gentleman tell us what some of them are?

Mr. BLAND. It gives wider power to the Bureau in fixing the rules whereby an inspection may be had.

Mr. McFARLANE. Does it cost the Government any more money?

Mr. BLAND. I asked that question and was told that it did not. I asked the question if it would require any additional employees and was informed that it would not.

Mr. LEHLBACH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLAND. I yield.

Mr. LEHLBACH. I do not know whether the gentleman stated so or not, because I was temporarily called from the Chamber, but this is the same measure that has been recommended by the present and the preceding administrations.

Mr. BLAND. That is a fact.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLAND. I yield.

Mr. BLANCHARD. The gentleman said it liberalized the law. He did not mean by that that there is to be any letdown in the inspection service?

Mr. BLAND. The inspector said there is not.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the committee amendments.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. BLAND, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

The title of the bill was amended.

THE FEDERAL INCOME TAX LAW

Mr. RUFFIN. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

There was no objection.

Mr. RUFFIN. Mr. Speaker, the correct theory of a judicious income tax is that it taxes citizens according to their ability to pay. I have maintained for years that our Federal income tax law was clumsily drawn and was not accomplishing the purposes intended. The depression caused many people to believe that the income tax was a failure, in that it was not producing its fair share of Government revenue. The Morgan hearing now being conducted before a Senate committee has proven conclusively that it is not the principle of the income tax but the particular instrument used to apply that principle—the existing inadequate law—that has failed.

These hearings should convince all thinking people that material changes should be made immediately in this law, with the view of strengthening it and making it impossible for the wealthy to avoid the payment of their fair share of this tax. I am not maintaining that under this law taxes should be increased on the people with small incomes, but I am contending that the law should be immediately changed to reach the wholesale evasions that have been effectuated by the wealthy, who have in a large measure been able to exempt themselves from the application of the law. All thinking people agree that under the Federal scheme of taxation the income tax law has its proper function, and in my opinion this Congress should not adjourn without taking some action concerning this important matter.

In order to properly and scientifically make all needed changes it will probably be necessary to eventually amend the Constitution itself in order that our income tax law may be made to perform its proper function; but, of course, it will take time to do this. I regard it as of the utmost importance, however, that such changes be made now in this law as can be made within constitutional limitations. I am informed that the Ways and Means Committee has under consideration some changes at this time, and I am hopeful that they can be reported out of that committee within sufficient time for Congress to act upon them at this session. Otherwise, if the matter goes over to the next session, for 1 more year the Government will be that much poorer and the wealthy tax evaders that much richer.

DISABLED SERVICE-CONNECTED VETERANS AND SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR VETERANS ARE NOT HAVING FAIR DEAL UNDER ECONOMY BILL

Mr. AYERS of Montana. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

There was no objection.

Mr. AYERS of Montana. Mr. Speaker, it has become apparent that a limit must be put upon the amount that a disabled service-connected veteran's compensation can be cut.

THE CONNALLY AMENDMENT

The Connally amendment to the independent offices appropriation bill provides that in no event shall service-connected disability compensation of any World War veteran, or the pension of any veteran of a war prior to the World War, or the pension of any widow or dependent of any such veteran, be reduced more than 25 percent.

The newspapers controlled and owned by the great interests of this country have been denouncing the Senate in adopting this amendment because it will tend to unbalance the Budget, but I have not noticed any editorial comment in these same papers advocating teeth in the income tax law so that the Morgans, the Mitchells, the Van Sweringens, and other millionaires will be compelled to pay their just and legitimate share to help balance the Budget.

FRAUDS UPON THE GOVERNMENT

We all know that there have been a large number of serious abuses, deceits, and frauds in the administration of the compensation and pension laws; indeed, in many instances they have reached the proportions of graft. Unjust and unlawful non-service-connected cases, and in many of which no injury or ailment at all exists, have been a loot and a daylight robbery of the Treasury. Another class of unjust cases are those where men are drawing compensation with one hand for total disability while with the other hand they are receiving large salaries from the Government for discharging duties that can only be discharged by men 100 percent well and efficient. With one hand Uncle Sam is writing checks as compensation for total disability and with the other he is writing checks to the same persons in payment of their service for 100-percent ability. The physical facts in these cases brand them as frauds on one side or the other. Both sets of facts cannot be true. It is physically impossible. And then we find many men, amply able financially to care for themselves, foraging upon the Government Treasury through veteran hospitals.

No one can approve of such administration of affairs. The veterans themselves are strictly opposed to it. But are we to say that because of these violations that all of the men who have bared their breasts to preserve the integrity of this Nation, and that the dependents of those who have died from service disability or disease, or that the dependents of those who died on the battle front shall suffer the same penalty that those who are now violating the law should suffer?

NO INTENDED REDUCTION IN SERVICE-CONNECTED CASES

At no time during the discussion of the economy bill on its enactment was there a single expression on this floor that the disabled service-connected veterans should have a cut any greater than the 15-percent cut which the Members of this House themselves were taking. Not even the so-called "Economy League", up to the time of the passage of that act, ever suggested any greater cut than 15 percent in the service-connected veterans' cases, and, really, no one in this country ever urged any cut at all in service-connected cases. The most that was urged in that respect was reclassification in certain instances. Service-connected cases, combat-service cases, and battle-casualty cases were not complained of, yet since the passage of the act such cases have been reduced by rates of from 29 to 68 percent. I feel sure that this is not fair dealing with the veterans of service-connected disabilities.

Approximately 390,000 non-service-connected cases have now been stricken from the rolls. I am not directing my remarks this afternoon to those cases. The veterans themselves are not holding briefs in those cases. I am directing my remarks to the service-connected cases, and the veterans all over this Nation are writing their briefs for these service-connected cases. Those are the cases we are confronted with today. Those are the cases that the Connally amendment deals with.

When the young manhood of America went to foreign soil to maintain the honor of this Nation, at the cost of their lives if necessary, the American people pledged them that nothing was too good for them. And now in this brief period surely we will not breach that pledge to the service-connected disabled. The action taken since the passage of the economy bill in reducing service-connected cases by rates of from 29 to 68 percent is having the effect of putting them on the rolls of the towns, the cities, and the counties; in fact, it has the effect of putting that burden upon the backs of the small taxpayers of this country who support the smaller municipalities and counties. This is not humane treatment to these service-connected disabled veterans or the dependents of such deceased veterans, and it is unfair and unjust to local communities.

INJURIES ARE NOT CURED BY OTHER INJURIES

The many frauds, fakes, and deceits that have been perpetrated through the Veterans' Administration does not warrant the sweeping order that has been made. The machinery of our Government can surely eliminate those cases of fraud, fake, and deceit without punishing the innocent who are suffering from service-connected disabilities. The present order in the name of correcting existing evils is no more consistent than a judgment of imprisonment against an entire neighborhood for larceny just because one thief happened to be among them. Just because there are a few diseased sheep in a flock is no sign that the entire flock should be destroyed.

FAVORS CONNALLY AMENDMENT

The evils of the Veterans' Administration can and must be corrected, but defeating the Connally amendment will not correct them. I am for making the correction and I am for the Connally amendment. Those two positions are perfectly consistent. I find only one fault with the Connally amendment and that is it does not go far enough. If that bill ever gets back to this House and I have an opportunity, I shall offer an amendment to the Connally amendment limiting the cut of service-connected disability cases to 15 percent instead of 25 percent. And I will offer another amendment to the effect that the Spanish-American War veterans and their dependents should have the same classification as the Civil War veterans and their dependents. We could not offer such amendments when the bill was here before. I hope we can if and when it gets back.

If the necessary saving of $450,000,000 cannot be achieved by correcting the existing ills that have grown out of the Veterans' Department, then let us not prey on the service-connected disabled veterans—on the maimed and crippled, the deaf, the blind, and the tuberculosis cases—but let us go to some other place to make the required reduction, or let us make up the deficit by plugging the holes that Ferdinand Pecora has shown to exist in the income-tax law for the benefit of the millionaires.

PRESENT INJUSTICES TO DISABLED SERVICE-CONNECTED VETERANS

To illustrate that injustices under the new program are real and not imaginary I shall list a few instances which have come to my attention, this information coming from the Amputation Post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Minneapolis, where many veterans from my State are treated. I have taken 24 cases at random from a larger list. This list has to do with the nature of the service-connected wounds, the present compensation, and the compensation that will be granted under the reduction order:

1. Gunshot wounds, left arm, left thigh, right lower leg; sciatic neuritis due to gunshot wounds; previously rated permanent partial disability 40 percent, $40 per month; rerated under present rule permanent partial 25 percent, $20 per month.

2. Gunshot wound, chest wall with adhesions and foreign body; previously rated permanent partial 35 percent, $35 per month; rerated 10 percent, $8 per month.

3. Gunshot wound through left chest with fibrosis; previously rated permanent partial 34 percent, $34; rerated 10 percent, $8.

4. Gunshot wound, right leg, with 1½-inch shortening; previously rated permanent partial 30 percent, $30; rerated 10 percent, $8.

5. Gunshot wound, left arm, previously rated permanent partial 20 percent, $20 per month; rerated at less than 10 percent with no compensation.

6. Gunshot wound, right wrist and hand, impaired function of hand and retained foreign bodies; amputation, third finger of right hand; paralysis almost total right ulnar nerve due to gunshot wound; previous rating 41 percent, $41; rerated 25 percent, $20.

7. Gunshot wound through and through right foot with atrophy of disuse right calf; previous rating permanent partial 17 percent, $17; rerated 10 percent, $8.

8. Gunshot wound, right upper arm; gunshot wound through and through right thigh; arthritis right knee and neuritis traumatic; previous rating permanent partial 33 percent, $33; rerated permanent partial 10 percent, $8.

9. Gunshot wounds, left thigh and right wrist, with sciatic neuritis; previously rated permanent partial 15 percent, $15; rerated less than 10 percent, no compensation.

10. Healed multiple gunshot wound and operative scars on left face and left mastoid; deafness due to gunshot wound; paralysis left facial nerve; partial ankylosis of the jaw and neurasthenia; also gunshot wound right thigh; previously rated permanent partial 54 percent, $54; rerated 25 percent, $20.

11. Gunshot wound left wrist with ankylosis; deformity and ankylosis of second, third, fourth, and fifth fingers, left; foreign body left thumb; previously rated permanent partial 48 percent, $48; rerated permanent partial 25 percent, $20.

12. Gunshot wound left elbow; partial paralysis ulnar nerve; arthritis secondary to gunshot wound; previously rated permanent partial 83 percent, $83; rerated 50 percent, $40.

13. Gunshot wound left leg and back; previously rated permanent partial 25 percent, $25; rerated 10 percent, $8.

14. Gunshot scars right arm, compound comminuted fracture right humerus; previously rated permanent partial, 22 percent, $22; rerated 10 percent, $8.

15. Amputation right thigh with neuroma, large painful stump, second degree pes planus; left foot and anxiety neurosis secondary to gunshot wound; previous rating permanent total, $125; rerated permanent partial 50 percent, $60.

16. Gunshot wound back, moderately severe with muscle hernia, injury to tenth or eleventh spinal nerve division, dorsal tenth and eleventh right; previously rated permanent partial 34 percent, $34; rerated 10 percent, $8.

17. Gunshot wound, right buttocks, left thigh; previously rated permanent partial, 28 percent, $28; rerated 10 percent, $8.

18. Amputation right leg, middle third, neuroma of the stump; gunshot wounds, right forearm and left thigh; previously rated permanent partial, 55 percent, $80; rerated permanent partial 25 percent, $40.

19. Amputation right thigh, middle third, with neuroma, right thigh, traumatic neurosis; previously rated 81 percent, $106; rerated 50 percent, $60.

20. Gunshot wound, left hand, amputation second finger with ankylosis of third finger; previously rated 31 percent, $30; rerated 10 percent, $8.

21. Gunshot wounds, left chest, left arm, right leg, with muscle hernia; previously rated 51 percent, $51; rerated 25 percent, $20.

22. Gunshot wounds, left shoulder and back; previously rated permanent partial, 30 percent, $30; rerated 10 percent, $8.

23. Gunshot wound, right thigh, with nerve injury and partial atrophy; previously rated 34 percent, $34; rerated 10 percent, $8.

24. Gunshot wounds, left hand, right thigh; previously rated permanent partial, 28 percent, $28; rerated 10 percent, $8.

I believe these cases reflect a fair representation of the reductions that are being made under present rules, and to me it evidences the fact that we are turning our backs upon our own defenders who are war casualties suffering from injuries in line of duty.

In these actual service-connected cases, where the veteran's service and disability are unquestioned, and when a decision has been reached, and particularly so with the Spanish-American War veterans, where time has wiped out their evidence, the burden of proof should now be upon the Government and not upon the soldier. In such cases the soldier should not again be called upon to maintain the decision at his peril. The theory now is to require the veteran to again furnish proof to reestablish his case. It is unjust, and it is impossible in many instances, and it mitigates to the injury of the individual. With the case of Spanish-American War veterans, in every instance, it is practically impossible to furnish any additional proof, and in a great majority of the cases it is impossible to resubmit the proof that was theretofore offered. In litigation between individuals and between the Government and individuals, the law places the burden upon the person attacking a judgment, decree, or decision, and this is the procedure that should be followed in these service-connected cases.

SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR VETERANS

The Spanish-American War veterans should be treated absolutely the same as the Civil War veterans. No distinction should be made. Their average age is now past 59 years. Thirty-three years ago when they left the malaria and typhoid swamps of the Philippine Islands and of Cuba, with germ-ridden and diseased bodies, little did they think of ever desiring or needing a Government pension. Their pride and their hope was that they had preserved the integrity of their country and that they get back home to the land of health and happiness. A large percentage of them started home from a malaria, a dysentery, or a typhoid bed, and not until the aftermaths of those terrible diseases had made serious inroads on their physical ability did they ask or seek monetary relief from their Government. Then, an appreciative Government put them on the pension list; and now, after 33 years, it is not fair to say that they must furnish new evidence of service-connected disability. Their present condition, when considered with the very nature of the service they performed, should be presumptive evidence, and to all reasonable men is presumptive evidence, that their disability is service-connected. Eighteen months in the Philippines in those days under the conditions that then existed in the islands would permanently disable any white man. "Malaria", "chronic dysentery", "typhoid", "camps in stagnant swamps", "leprosy", "lack of medical and hospital facilities", "all-around insanitary conditions", "Alger's embalmed beef", were all common words and phrases connected with our Army in the War with Spain and the Filipino insurrection.

Therefore I say that the veterans of the Army of 1898, which was the only 100-percent volunteer Army this country ever had, should be placed on the same basis as the veterans of the War between the States, and their widows and dependents should be placed on the same basis.

UNFAIR TREATMENT TO WIDOWS OF SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR VETERANS

By the recent order issued under the Economy Act pensions of widows of soldiers who fought in the Spanish-American War have been reduced 50 percent—from $30 to $15 per month, except in cases where the widow secures special benefits by act of Congress.

Men enrolled in the present reforestation camps enlist under the protection of present compensation laws, which give the widow a $45 pension in case of fatal injury to her husband. I make these comparisons to show the unfair effect of the orders issued under the economy law. I am not making the comparison in the sense of begrudging the reforestation men and their dependents this protection, but I am showing this fact to demonstrate the inequities placed upon the widows of service men.

AGE PENSION SHOULD REMAIN FOR VETERANS OF 1898

With the Spanish-American War veteran an age pension has been granted of $20 when he reached the sixty-second milestone. This was copied from the age pension law provided for Civil War veterans. It increases at the ages of 68, 72, and at 75, when the veteran received a $50 age pension. Through the efforts of Senators DILL and LEWIS, by procuring an amendment in the Senate, these men over the age of 62 are not to be removed from the rolls. It was evidently presumed that this protection thrown about them would cause their pensions to remain intact; but that is not the case. Under the present rules these veterans of the 100 percent volunteer army who did their fighting in the malarial swamps and typhoid-breeding places, have been reduced to $6, and they are excluded from the hospitals unless they can show service-connected disability.

HOSPITAL SITUATION

There are now approximately 15,000 empty beds in Government hospitals. This has been caused by the wholesale expulsion of veterans who are suffering from non-service-connected disabilities. Under the bill it is discretionary to do that. These beds are empty. I do not believe that I am stretching my estimation when I say that it is fair to estimate that there are now 15,000 suffering and poverty-stricken veterans who need hospitalization and who are not in Government hospitals.

Now, that I be not misunderstood, the veterans with service-connected cases must have first privilege of hospitalization, veterans suffering from ailment not service-connected and financially able to care for themselves should be excluded, but these Government hospitals should be utilized to the fullest extent when there are any financially distressed veterans on the outside needing attention, whether they be service-connected or not. As far back as any man can remember it has been the principle of our country that all suffering humanity, unable to provide for themselves, shall have hospital and medical treatment at public expense. When these veterans, unable to provide these necessities for themselves, are turned out of the Government hospitals the obligation of their care is transferred from the National Government to the local governments to be provided for at their city, county, or other local free hospitals.

I believe it is the duty of this Nation to reopen these hospitals and to shoulder as its share of this load these indigent men who have served in the National Army, whether their disabilities be service connected or not; however, not to the extent of excluding a single service-connected case, but to the extent of these vacant beds. Such vacant beds are not a saving; it only amounts to transferring the load from the National Government to the local government, where the money to bear it is raised by a property tax on property already overtaxed.

PERSECUTION OF THE GERMAN JEWISH PEOPLE

Mr. BLACK. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

There was no objection.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. Speaker, the civilized United States is about to sit down in a solemn conference on economics with governments professing and practicing a medieval savagery. At the London Conference will be representatives of the anti-Jew Hitler Government of Germany and the anti-Catholic Governments of Spain and Mexico. If the Conference is to be a success, there must be a foundation of good faith. There can be no such guaranty where religious bigots are subscribers to a pact. Spiritual values necessary for a world economic understanding will be entirely dissipated by the presence of such crass materialists as religious bigots. If governments deal unfairly with their own, how could you expect them to deal fairly with other governments. Unless Germany, Spain, and Mexico give assurances of religious toleration, the London Conference is doomed to failure.

I have introduced a resolution in Congress requiring our delegates to the London Conference to make no arrangements with these governments unless such assurances are given. I believe that the passage of such a resolution will be the most effective method of obtaining these assurances. This country has always been looked upon as the strong protagonist of religious freedom. At a conference in which it is the leading factor, the United States should demand of all involved that our morality on this question be observed.

The United States will be called upon to make economic sacrifices at the Conference. These sacrifices will descend as economic burdens on all our citizens. By them the existing governments of the world will be firmer in their tenures. So the Jew in the United States will be called upon to serve, in an economic way, the Hitler regime in Germany. This is also true of the American Catholic citizens in relation to Spain and Mexico. This is highly unfair, but will result, unless the American delegates to the Economic Conference are instructed not to deal with the offending nations until assurances of religious freedom within their borders are given.

Religious persecution is the lowest and most cowardly form of fraud. It operates in the name of the supernatural, but in reality is a very present and vile class larceny. The persecutors are not concerned with the hereafter of their victims, but merely seek by superior force an economic advantage in the present world. It is not the soul they would save, but the watch they would steal.

In a riot of economic and nationalistic disturbances, Hitler has done the greatest disservice to the world by injecting a religious question. This fool has fanned the flames of religious discord, and it becomes the duty of the entire world to stiffle these flames and Hitler.

Childishly he has thrown to the flames the literature of Jews. You cannot destroy great thought by fire. Hitler will never be able to wipe out Jewish contribution to thought, for it will be enduring as long as the name Hitler spells dishonor, which will be forever.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. SWICK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SWICK. Mr. Speaker, since the enactment of the Economy Act and the issuance of regulations for administration of the veterans' section of the act by the President, I have become more and more impressed with the grave injustices being done thousands of men and women who served their country nobly in time of war. Despite the fact that their disabilities were proved to be of service origin to the satisfaction of legal and medical authorities of the Federal Government, many of them have now been informed that a review of their file does not reveal service connection, and they are no longer entitled to compensation or pension.

I hold no brief for the payment of compensation beyond that provided in the Economy Act for non-service-connected World War cases; however, I am opposed to the wholesale repudiation of former rulings made by the Veterans' Administration, which are based on the same evidence which was deemed sufficient to prove service connection a few months ago.

The administration, through its many spokesmen, both through the press and over the air, is attempting to justify the unfair, unjust, and unmerciful treatment of veterans by appealing to the public in the name of balancing the Budget and waving the danger signal of increased taxes. Is it not strange that no dangers of that kind were thought of when it was determined to pay more than a quarter of a million healthy young men, none of whom were old enough to have served in time of war, $30 per month and furnish them with expensive toilet kits and all necessities of life to go through the motions of reforestation? It caused no straining of the Budget to loan $50,000,000 to the Chinese Government, which in all probability will never be repaid. In order that these things could be done the administration is attempting to convince the public that it is justified in throwing thousands of veterans who are suffering from disabilities incurred in the defense of their country upon the relief rolls of their communities to become objects of charity while their nephews brave the dangers of the forest camps.

In the case of Spanish War veterans insurmountable barriers were established by the President's regulations which have resulted in wholesale removal of their names from the pension rolls. These men, all of them past the age of industrial employment, find themselves in the position of paupers, placed there by the Government whose honor they upheld.

Congress has determined to protect the rights of those who offered their all in the Nation's service in time of war, despite efforts to adjourn before this task is accomplished. We will correct the mistake of relying on the statement made by the administration when we were asked to support the economy bill; then the President said that the veterans would be treated justly, fairly, and humanely.

Under the recent changes in the President's regulations, held out as a compromise to Members of Congress, there is not a ray of hope for the type of case to which I have referred. In my opinion there is no necessity to increase taxes further, to provide fully for service-connected cases. If necessary, let the President curtail his reforestation plan to provide the necessary funds.

That my remarks concerning the injustice being done veterans who have served their country well may be illustrated in no uncertain terms, I submit herewith the military and medical records, secured from the War Department, of one of the outstanding World War veterans in my district, also a letter just received from him concerning his receipt of official notice from the Veterans' Administration of the discontinuance of his compensation. These letters speak for themselves. This case is only one of many similar ones that have been called to my attention since the enactment of the Economy Act. They are convincing evidence and justify my intention to urge the adoption of an amendment to the independent offices appropriation bill that will limit the cuts as proposed in the Senate amendment. I hope it can be made 15 percent in the case of World War veterans.

JUNE 5, 1933.

Hon. J. HOWARD SWICK,
Washington, D.C.

MY DEAR CONGRESSMAN: Please find attached letter from the Veterans' Administration which will explain the unfair treatment to some of the fellows that gave their all for their country. I enlisted 100 percent, was ruptured on both sides by carrying a machine gun, was operated on in France—got a bad job done on me—came home and they both came down so bad that they sent me to Walter Reed Hospital; they gave me an examination and said it would never hold and sent me home. Now I wear heavy braces to hold me up; as you know, there is no one that will hire a man in my condition. I proved this case by even the doctor who sent me to the hospital in France, also by various members of the company.

Surely this Government of ours don't want a man to go through all of this and then let him starve. The braces cost $14 apiece, and the Government never paid for them. After you look this attached letter over and use it, please mail it back to me. I thought you may be able to do something to help out. No doubt there are many like my case.

Very respectfully your friend,

WM. O. COULTER.

P.S.—At my rating I received $40 per month.

VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION,
Pittsburgh, Pa., June 2, 1933.

In reply refer to: 11.21 h C-1367 200.

Mr. WILLIAM O. COULTER,
2505 Seventh Avenue, Beaver Falls, Pa.

DEAR SIR: A review of all claims in which payments of benefits were being made on March 20, 1933, was undertaken for the purpose of determining entitlement to benefits provided by Public, No. 2, Seventy-third Congress, entitled "An act to maintain the credit of the United States Government."

Your claim has been carefully reviewed in accordance with the provisions of the above-entitled act, and it has been found necessary to hold that the evidence of record in your case fails to show that you are entitled, after June 30, 1933, to the payment of any benefits thereunder, for the reason that your disability does not exist to a compensable degree as provided in the schedule of disability ratings issued pursuant to recent legislation.

Regulations promulgated pursuant to the provisions of Public, No. 2, Seventy-third Congress, provide that, except as to degree of disability, an application for review on appeal may be filed within 6 months from the date of this notice, or July 1, 1933, whichever is the later date. In the event you contemplate filing such an application, it is suggested that it be deferred until after July 1, 1933, when the condition of the work incident to the review of claims will permit of expedited action on applications of this character.

By direction:

J. N. MORRIS,
Adjudication Officer, Pittsburgh, Pa.

This is the official record obtained by me today at the War Department of Mr. Coulter:

William O. Coulter enlisted at Beaver Falls June 16, 1917, in the National Guard of Pennsylvania (M. G. Co., 10th Pa. Inf.) and reported for Federal service with his organization on July 15, 1917, under the call of the President dated July 3, 1917. (His organization became the M. G. Co. of the 110th Infantry.)

Sailed for overseas May 3, 1918; arrived in United States May 2, 1919.

Served in the following engagements: Champagne-Marne, July 15–18, 1918; Aisne-Marne, July 18–August 6, 1918; Oise-Aisne, August 18–September 7, 1918; Chateau-Thierry (Champagne), June 28–July 14, 1918; Fismes (Champagne), August 7–17, 1918; Clermont (Lorraine), September 19–21, 1918. (He entered hospital Sept. 21, 1918.)

Evacuated to hospital September 21, 1918, for left inguinal hernia; operated on September 25, 1918, at B.H. 31; October 1, condition good; October 3, transferred to B.H. 43 as convalescent, postoperative; October 29, classified at B.H. 43 in B-2 (30 days) for "hernia, left inguinal, indirect, incomplete, herniotomy"; ordered sent to base depot for convalescents. Transferred to First Replacement Depot January 19, 1919.

Honorably discharged, demobilization, May 15, 1919, at Camp Dix, N.J.; character, "excellent."

Mr. SWICK asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and to include therein a letter from a World War veteran.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. UTTERBACK, indefinitely, on account of official business.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H.R. 1767. An act to authorize the acceptance of certain lands in the city of San Diego, Calif., by the United States, and the transfer by the Secretary of the Navy of certain other lands to said city of San Diego;

H.R. 5239. An act to extend the provisions of the act entitled "An act to extend the period of time during which final proof may be offered by homestead entrymen", approved May 13, 1932, to desert-land entrymen, and for other purposes; and

H.R. 5690. An act to legalize the manufacture, sale, or possession of 3.2 percent beer in the State of Oklahoma when and if the same is legalized by a majority vote of the people of Oklahoma or by an act of the Legislature of the State of Oklahoma.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 1 o'clock and 59 minutes p.m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Friday, June 9, 1933, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARING

COMMITTEE ON THE PUBLIC LANDS

(Friday, June 9, 10 a.m.)

The Committee on the Public Lands will hold a hearing on H.R. 2835 on Friday, June 9, at 10:30 a.m., in the committee room of the Committee on the Public Lands.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

87. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, pursuant to section 1 of the River and Harbor Act approved January 21, 1927, and section 10 of the Flood Control Act of May 15, 1928, a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated May 9, 1933, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and illustrations, containing a general plan for the improvement of Little Missouri River, Wyo., Mont., S.Dak., and N.Dak., for the purposes of navigation and efficient development of its water power, the control of floods, and the needs of irrigation (H.Doc.No. 64); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with illustrations.

88. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, pursuant to section 1 of the River and Harbor Act approved January 21, 1927, a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated May 2, 1933, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and illustrations, containing a general plan for the improvement of Kawishiwi River, Minn., for the purposes of navigation and efficient development of its water power, the control of floods, and the needs of irrigation (H.Doc.No. 65); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with illustrations.

89. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated May 29, 1933, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and illustration, on a preliminary examination and survey of Rahway River, N.J., authorized by the River and Harbor Act approved July 3, 1930 (H.Doc. No. 63); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with illustration.

90. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated June 3, 1933, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers, on a preliminary examination of entrance to channel of Salt Pond, sometimes called "Point Judith Pond", R.I., authorized by the River and Harbor Act approved July 3, 1930; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. BANKHEAD: Committee on Rules. House Resolution 180. Resolution providing for the consideration of H.R. 5950, a bill to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; without amendment (Rept. No. 211). Referred to the House Calendar.

ADVERSE REPORTS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. DOUGHTON: Committee on Ways and Means. House Resolution 151. Resolution to request certain information from the Secretary of the Treasury (Rept. No. 209). Laid on the table.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. PIERCE: A bill (H.R. 5978) to amend sections 211, 245, and 312 of the Criminal Code, as amended; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DOCKWEILER: A bill (H.R. 5979) to prohibit the export of certain goods except in vessels of the United States; to the Committee on Merchant Marine, Radio, and Fisheries.

By Mr. CONNERY: A bill (H.R. 5980) to provide for the employment of American citizens in skilled positions on the Panama Canal; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. KENNEY: A bill (H.R. 5981) to allow the use of the mails in aid of sick, disabled, and indigent former soldiers and sailors, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. HARLAN: Resolution (H.Res. 179) authorizing the Ways and Means Committee to make certain investigations; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. BANKHEAD: Resolution (H.Res. 180) providing for the consideration of H.R. 5950, a bill to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. McSWAIN: Joint resolution (H.J.Res. 200) to reestablish and to maintain the credit of the United States; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. O'BRIEN: A bill (H.R. 5982) for the relief of Ladislav Cizek; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mrs. NORTON (by request): A bill (H.R.5983) to confer jurisdiction on the Court of Claims of the United States to hear and determine the claims of George Cabot and others, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. MILLER: A bill (H.R. 5984) to authorize the appointment of Howard Hillman Hasting as second lieutenant of Infantry, Regular Army; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. McLEAN: A bill (H.R. 5985) for the relief of John J. Flanagan; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HILDEBRANDT: A bill (H.R. 5986) for the relief of Mable W. Bill; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H.R. 5987) for the relief of Roy Whipple; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H.R. 5988) for the relief of Rose Rouillard; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H.R. 5989) for the relief of Samuel Renville; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (5990) for the relief of Fix Henmans; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H.R. 5991) for the relief of Adelia W. Jandreau; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. HART: A bill (H.R. 5992) granting a pension to Eleanor R. Gage; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H.R. 5993) granting an increase of pension to Margaret Metcalf; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CONNALLY: A bill (H.R. 5994) for the relief of Thomas F. Donohue, Sr.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CARTER of California: A bill (H.R. 5995) for the relief of John N. Paulson; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

1341. By Mr. LINDSAY: Petition of National Economy League, New York State Branch, New York City, approving action taken by executive committee in opposing the Connally amendment to the independent offices bill; to the Committee on Appropriations.

1342. By Mr. RUDD: Petition of Old Glory Club of Flatbush, Inc., Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the recognition of Soviet Russia; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1343. By Mr. TRAEGER: Petition of the Legislature of the State of California, relative to enactment of legislation which will facilitate the protection of sardines in the territorial waters of this State; to the Committee on Merchant Marine, Radio, and Fisheries.

1344. Also, petition of the Legislature of the State of California, relative to accepting amendments to permit from the Government of the United States for the construction of approach roads over certain rights of way leading to the Golden Gate Bridge in the Fort Baker Military Reservation, and relating to the retrocession by the Congress of the United States of jurisdiction over said rights of way as relocated; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

1345. Also, petition of the Legislature of the State of California, urging legislation to limit the jurisdiction of the Federal courts in suits brought to restrain State officers in the enforcement of public-utility rate orders; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

1346. Also, petition of the Legislature of the State of California, relative to hours of employment of persons on interstate carriers; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

SENATE

FRIDAY, JUNE 9, 1933

(Legislative day of Tuesday, June 6, 1933)

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a.m., on the expiration of the recess.

THE JOURNAL

On motion of Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal for the calendar days of June 6, 7, and 8 was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Dickinson	Logan	Robinson, Ark.
Bachman	Duffy	Lonergan	Russell
Barkley	Erickson	McGill	Sheppard
Borah	Fess	Murphy	Smith
Brown	Hale	Neely	Thomas, Utah
Byrd	Harrison	Norris	Thompson
Clark	Hayden	Nye	Townsend
Coolidge	Johnson	Patterson	Vandenberg
Cutting	Kendrick	Pope	White

Mr. VANDENBERG. I desire to announce that my colleague the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. COUZENS] is necessarily absent from the Senate in attendance upon the London Economic Conference.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I desire to announce that the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] is necessarily detained from the Senate by reason of his attendance as a delegate representing our Government at the London Economic Conference. I wish this announcement to stand for the day.

Mr. FESS. I wish to announce that the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. NORBECK] is unavoidably absent.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Thirty-six Senators have answered to their names. There is not a quorum present. The clerk will call the names of the absent Senators.

The legislative clerk called the names of the absent Senators, and Mr. BRATTON, Mr. FRAZIER, Mr. MCKELLAR, Mr. OVERTON, and Mr. WALSH answered to their names when called.

Mr. ASHURST, Mr. AUSTIN, Mr. BAILEY, Mr. BANKHEAD, Mr. BARBOUR, Mr. BLACK, Mr. BONE, Mr. BULKLEY, Mr. BULOW, Mr. BYRNES, Mr. CAPPER, Mrs. CARAWAY, Mr. CAREY, Mr. CONNALLY, Mr. COPELAND, Mr. COSTIGAN, Mr. DALE, Mr. DAVIS, Mr. DIETERICH, Mr. DILL, Mr. GEORGE, Mr. GLASS, Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH, Mr. GORE, Mr. HASTINGS, Mr. HATFIELD, Mr. HEBERT, Mr. KEAN, Mr. KEYES, Mr. KING, Mr. LA FOLLETTE, Mr. LEWIS, Mr. LONG, Mr. MCADOO, Mr. MCCARRAN, Mr. MCNARY, Mr. METCALF, Mr. REED, Mr. REYNOLDS, Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana, Mr. SCHALL, Mr. SHIPSTEAD, Mr. STEIWER, Mr. STEPHENS, Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma, Mr. TRAMMELL, Mr. TYDINGS, Mr. VAN NUYS, Mr. WAGNER, Mr. WALCOTT, and Mr. WHEELER entered the Chamber and answered to their names.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Ninety-two Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

CORRECTION—VIEWS OF MINORITY ON SENATE BILL 752

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, on Tuesday last, on behalf of the Judiciary Committee, I submitted a majority report on Senate bill 752, and at the same time, as I had to get unanimous consent to do that, I asked unanimous consent that the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN] be accorded the privilege of filing the views of the minority.

I notice on reading the report it is stated that I have filed them both; that I submitted the majority report and, on behalf of Mr. STEPHENS and Mr. AUSTIN, filed the minority report.

It is not very material, Mr. President, except that I am, of course, very much opposed to the minority report, and I know the minority members who are making it would not want me associated with them in the report, because they know my views are entirely contrary to it. I do not know that there is anything that can be done about it, except, if there is any reprint, I ask that it may be corrected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The documents will be corrected as requested by the Senator from Nebraska.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, which was ordered to lie on the table:

Joint resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States to give serious consideration to allotting for highways a larger proportion of the funds set aside for the public-works program

Whereas the most effective aid to unemployment is Federal highway construction; and

Whereas specifications are now ready and plans prepared for many road projects, thereby assuring quicker and more prompt action in road construction than in any other type of public work; and

Whereas the promptness with which projects were placed under contract under the 1932 emergency Federal-aid road appropriation is conclusive evidence of the effectiveness of immediate relief to the unemployed through highway construction; and

Whereas one of the greatest investments our States have ever made are in their highway systems; and

Whereas these systems are of great value to and constantly used by the entire public throughout the year; and

Whereas according to newspaper reports only one eleventh of the $3,300,000,000 proposed for a Federal public-works program is to be allotted for highway construction; and

Whereas there has been no regular Federal aid for highways provided for the next biennium: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the assembly (the senate concurring), That the Legislature of Wisconsin respectfully memorializes the Congress of the United States and Franklin D. Roosevelt, our President, to give most serious consideration to allotting for highway purposes a larger proportion of the funds set aside for a public-works program; and be it further Resolved, That properly attested copies of this resolution be sent to President Franklin D. Roosevelt, to both Houses of the Congress of the United States, and to each Wisconsin Member thereof.

THOMAS J. O'MALLEY,
President of the Senate.
R. A. COBBAN,
Chief Clerk of the Senate.
C. T. YOUNG,
Speaker of the Assembly.
JOHN J. SLOCUM,
Chief Clerk of the Assembly.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a telegram from the California State Department Convention of Disabled American Veterans of the World War, requesting the elimination of "causative factor" requirement in regulation 5, issued pursuant to the Economy Act, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also laid before the Senate a telegram in the nature of a memorial from Walter Goldman, of New Orleans, La., endorsing Hon. HUEY P. LONG, a Senator from the State of Louisiana, condemning attacks made upon him, and remonstrating against a senatorial investigation of his alleged acts and conduct, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also laid before the Senate resolutions adopted by Local Union No. 393, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, and Local Union No. 322, United Association of Plumbers and Steamfitters, both of Camden, N.J., endorsing House bill 5755, the national industrial recovery bill, which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. COPELAND presented a resolution adopted by the board of managing directors and members of the Drug, Chemical, and Allied Trades Section of the New York Board of Trade, of New York City, favoring postponement of consideration of the national industrial recovery bill until the next session of Congress so that proper study and consideration can be made of its many features, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the New York Pharmaceutical Conference, representing more than 5,000 independent pharmacists of New York City and Westchester County, favoring the passage of the national industrial recovery bill without eliminating the licensing provision thereof, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Wholesale Confectioners Board of Trade, Inc., of New York City, approving and endorsing the national industrial recovery bill, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Retailers' National Council, with headquarters at Washington, D.C., endorsing the national industrial recovery bill, and urging the adoption of an amendment relative to code or codes to section 3 of the bill, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a report approved by a special meeting of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association of Bush Terminal, with headquarters at Brooklyn, N.Y., approving the national industrial recovery bill, and making certain recommendations relative thereto, which was ordered to lie on the table.

TREATMENT OF JEWS IN GERMANY

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I present and ask to have printed in the RECORD a memorial, a telegram, and lettter in the nature of memorials, from the Fall River American Jewish Congress, the Hatikvoh Camp, No. 40, O.S.Z., of Dorchester, and other citizens, all in the State of Massachusetts, remonstrating against atrocities committed against the Semitic race in Germany.

There being no objection, the memorials were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, without the signatures to the last memorial, as follows:

FALL RIVER, MASS., May 15, 1933.

Senator DAVID I. WALSH,
Washington, D.C.:

At mass meeting of 27 local Jewish organizations, attended by over thousand citizens, it was unanimously resolved that we utter solemn protest against appalling injustice of which German Jews have become victims; that we urge Congress intercede in behalf of these persecuted people; we urge immediate intervention.

FALL RIVER AMERICAN JEWISH CONGRESS,
SAUL ODESS, Secretary.

DORCHESTER, MASS., May 12, 1933.

Senator DAVID I. WALSH,
United States Senate, Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. SENATOR: You have no doubt heard of the present condition of the German Jews in Germany under the "Nazis" government.

I and my fellow coreligionists are suffering in spirit along with the Jews in Germany. We ourselves are unable to bring about any change in the "Nazis" policy, so we therefore appeal to you in behalf of humanity and world peace and urge you as Senator of these United States from Massachusetts to take whatever action may appear advisable in behalf of German Jews against whom the Hitler government is waging an unrelenting war of extermination.

I sincerely hope and trust that this matter will receive your immediate attention.

Sincerely yours,

HATIKVOH CAMP, No. 40, O.S.Z.,
By MARCUS SELIKOVITZ, Secretary.

BOSTON, MASS., May 24, 1933.

Senator DAVID I. WALSH,
Washington, D.C.:

As human beings and as citizens of this liberty-loving country, we earnestly and fervently appeal that you do all in your power in behalf of the German Jews, against whom the Hitler government is waging cruelest unrelenting war.

PROTECTION OF NEW JERSEY SHORE LINE FROM EROSION

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD and appropriately referred a resolution I have received from the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Monmouth County, N.J., urging that a portion of the public-works fund be spent in checking erosion of the shore line of New Jersey.

There being no objection, the resolution was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas Congress has passed or is about to pass a bill creating a Federal emergency administration of public works and to provide funds, among other things, for the conservation and development of natural resources, including control, utilization, and purification of waters, prevention of soil erosion, river and harbor improvements, with a view to alleviating unemployment; and

Whereas serious erosion of the beach front on the shore line of New Jersey from Sandy Hook to Cape May has created a condition that threatens the very existence of the seashore resorts and has caused inestimable damage to bulkheads and structures heretofore erected, and threatens to destroy valuable properties, thus decreasing the ratables of the shore front to a point where the owners thereof have become discouraged unless this erosion is forthwith checked; and

Whereas the condition above referred to has become so serious that the local governing bodies and the counties of the State have found it impossible to cope with the situation because of the lack of financial ability to adequately meet the problem of checking the erosion and protecting the shore front; and

Whereas the Governor of this State has called to his aid departmental heads of the State government, pursuant to the provisions of the aforesaid legislation passed or to be passed by Congress, outlining a plan for the expending of such funds as may be made available under said program of unemployment relief outlined in said legislation, and will be called upon to submit such program to the Federal administrator in charge of such public works: Be it therefore

Resolved, That in this manner the Governor's attention be again respectfully called to the serious problem faced by all of the municipalities on the shore front and the county governments in which said municipalities are situated, to the end that he press with all the power at his command the need for immediate conservation, restoration, and protection which the situation warrants; and to that end this board in this manner pledges its undivided support, and that all the communities of this county so seriously affected, in the hope that from the funds made available an adequate amount may be set aside for this purpose and be made available at once if serious future loss and damage is to be averted; and be it further

Resolved, That the members of the Legislature of New Jersey representative of this county, our United States Senators at Washington, Hon. W. WARREN BARBOUR and Hon. HAMILTON F. KEAN, and our Congressman for the Third Congressional District, Hon. WILLIAM H. SUTPHIN, be furnished with a true copy of this resolution and urged to expend every effort in behalf of the shore-front communities to seeing to the direction of an expenditure of a portion of the public-works appropriation adequately sufficient to meet the dire needs of the shore-front communities in coping with the public emergency that has visited the entire shore and caused so great a loss and damage; and be it further

Resolved, That the public press of this county be respectfully asked to lend every aid in the form of publicity in furtherance of the objects sought to be attained in the passage of this resolution.

Seconded by Mr. Reichey and adopted on roll call by the following vote:

In the affirmative: Messrs. Jeffries, Polhemus, Reichey, Wyckoff, and Director Newcomb.

In the negative: None.

CERTIFICATION

I hereby certify the above to be a true copy of a resolution adopted by the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Monmouth at a meeting held June 7, 1933.

CHAS. E. COLE, Clerk.

DEVELOPMENT OF SOUTHERLY END OF SANDY HOOK PARK, N.J.

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD and appropriately referred a resolution I have received from the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Monmouth County, N.J., urging that a portion of the public-works funds be utilized in the development of the southerly end of Sandy Hook Park as free public bathing grounds, made possible by the erection and construction of new State highways and bridges leading directly from the intensely populated sections of northern New Jersey and New York to the entrance of Sandy Hook Reservation at Highland Beach.

There being no objection, the resolution was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas Congress has passed or is about to pass a bill creating a Federal emergency administration of public works and to provide funds, among other things, for the conservation and development of natural resources, including control, utilization, and purification of waters, prevention of soil erosion, river and harbor improvements, and publicly owned instrumentalities and facilities; and

Whereas the southerly end of Sandy Hook Park along the beach front affords unusual opportunities for free public bathing made possible by the erection and construction of new State highways and bridges leading directly from the intensely populated sections of northern New Jersey and New York to the very entrance to said Sandy Hook Reservation at Highland Beach, as well that it affords adequate navigation facilities for boats and craft of all kinds in and about New York Harbor; and

Whereas the State authorities at Trenton have recognized and advocated the need for a public park and free bathing grounds along the ocean front and have under consideration the location of such in the near future to take care of the great numbers of the public seeking such advantages, facilities, and privileges: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Monmouth, That this board in this manner desires to point out to his excellency the Governor of the State of New Jersey and to the members of the legislature and to our Representatives in Washington the tremendous possibilities which such a project, if developed, would afford to the great masses of the public, as well as the benefits which would inure to the citizens of this county in advocating and pressing for the development of this portion of Sandy Hook not needed for military purposes in times of peace as a free public park and bathing grounds, and we do in this manner urge our public representatives to expend every effort and energy to seeing to the direction of an expenditure of a portion of the public-works appropriation adequately sufficient to make this proposed free public park and playground available to the use of the public; and be it further

Resolved, That the public press of the county be respectfully asked to lend every aid in the form of publicity in furtherance of the objects sought to be attained and that copies hereof be certified to the Governor, our representatives in the legislature at Trenton and at Washington, calling upon them for their cooperation in this important movement.

Seconded by Mr. Wyckoff and adopted on roll call by the following vote:

In the affirmative: Messrs. Jeffries, Polhemus, Wyckoff, Reichey, and Director Newcomb.

In the negative: None.

CERTIFICATION

I hereby certify the above to be a true copy of a resolution adopted by the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Monmouth at a meeting held June 7, 1933.

CHAS. E. COLE, Clerk.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. SHEPPARD, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (H.R. 5645) to amend the National Defense Act of June 3, 1916, as amended, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 135) thereon.

Mr. DICKINSON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 1813) providing for the sale to Joe Graham Post, No. 119, American Legion, of the lands lying within the Ship Island Military Reservation in the State of Mississippi, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 137) thereon.

Mr. PATTERSON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 1654) for the relief of George Yusko, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 138) thereon.

Mr. HEBERT, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (S. 1650) amending section 74 of the Judicial Code, as amended (U.S.C., Annotated, title 28, sec. 147), reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 136) thereon.

EXECUTIVE REPORT OF THE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

As in executive session,

Mr. LONG, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of Frank J. Wideman, of Florida, to be Assistant Attorney General, to fill an existing vacancy, which was ordered to be placed on the Executive Calendar.

ENROLLED BILL PRESENTED

Mrs. CARAWAY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on June 8, 1933, that committee presented to the President of the United States the enrolled bill (S. 1562) granting the consent of Congress to the Levy Court of Sussex County, Del., to reconstruct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Deeps Creek at Cherry Tree Landing, Sussex County, Del.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. NEELY:

A bill (S. 1869) relating to the manner of appointment of certain officers of the United States; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. LA FOLLETTE:

A bill (S. 1870) to amend certain laws relating to American seamen, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. ERICKSON:

A bill (S. 1871) to amend the provisions of the act entitled "An act to extend the period of time during which final proof may be offered by homestead entrymen", approved May 13, 1932, to desert-land entrymen, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

By Mr. McKELLAR:

A bill (S. 1872) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the French Broad River on the proposed Morristown-Newport Road between Jefferson and Cocke Counties, Tenn.; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. JOHNSON:

A bill (S. 1873) to provide revenue by increasing the taxes on certain vinous liquors and prescribing conditions and limitations on the manufacture, transportation, and sale thereof; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma:

A bill (S. 1874) relative to leasing restricted lands of Indians of the Five Civilized Tribes of Oklahoma, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

COSTS OF MARKETING AND PROCESSING MILK AND ITS PRODUCTS

Mr. LA FOLLETTE submitted the following resolution (S.Res. 99), which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

Resolved, That the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, or a duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized and directed to investigate the costs of marketing and processing milk and its products, including the salaries or other compensation received by officials or employees of companies marketing or processing dairy products and the profits and ownership of such companies, with the view of determining the extent to which such costs of marketing and such salaries and profits are excessive in relation to the prices received by farmers in payment for milk or other dairy products.

For the purposes of this resolution such committee or subcommittee is authorized to hold hearings and to sit and act at such times and places as it deems advisable; to employ experts and clerical, stenographic, and other assistance; to require by subpena or otherwise the attendance of witnesses and the production of books, papers, and documents; to administer oaths and to take testimony and to make all necessary expenditures as it deems advisable.

The cost of stenographic services to report such hearings shall not be in excess of 25 cents per 100 words. The expenses of such committee or subcommittee, which shall not be in excess of $7,500, shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers approved by the chairman.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its clerks, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 1129) to amend sections 361, 392, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, and 412 of title 46 of the United States Code, relating to the construction and inspection of boilers, unfired pressure vessels, and the appurtenances thereof, with amendments, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had passed a bill (H.R. 5904) to validate collections of internal-revenue taxes stayed by requests or claims for credit, and for other purposes, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED

The bill (H.R. 5904) to validate collections of internal-revenue taxes stayed by requests or claims for credit, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Finance.

TAX-EXEMPT SECURITIES—EDITORIAL FROM THE ST. LOUIS STAR

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD an editorial from the St. Louis Star and Times on the subject of the taxation of tax-exempt securities.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the St. Louis Star and Times]

AN INCOME-TAX PRECEDENT

In 1909 on the day the income-tax amendment was submitted by Congress to the States, Congressman Cline, of Indiana, made a statement which applies remarkably to the present situation regarding taxation of the income from tax-exempt securities.

The enthusiastic support of the constitutional amendment by some congressional leaders, he declared, "is to convert the country and Congress to the theory that Congress cannot now pass a valid income tax law which the Supreme Court would uphold as constitutional."

The theory was that if the amendment was submitted, 13 States could block it, and in the meantime it would be assumed that Congress had no power to legislate. Something of the same reason is back of the demand that Congress submit an amendment for the taxation of income from tax-exempt securities. It would be an admission that no power exists to tax the income from securities now exempt. Thus the holders of those securities would continue safe from the surtax. But if Congress simply repealed the present exemption and taxed all income, it would end the tax dodging, provided the Supreme Court upheld it.

The St. Louis Star and Times has pointed out previously that the sixteenth amendment gave Congress power to lay a tax on "incomes from whatever sources derived", and that in ordinary language that includes income derived from Federal, State, and municipal bonds.

It is argued against this that the Pollock decision of 1895, invalidating the 1894 income tax, laid down the rule that under the Constitution all power not granted to Congress was reserved to the States and that among the reserved rights of the States was the power to borrow money. A tax on income from State bonds, the court held, would diminish the borrowing power of the States and, therefore, would infringe upon their sovereignty in a matter reserved to them. The power to tax income from State bonds is the power to destroy them. So, even though Congress under the sixteenth amendment has power to levy a tax on "incomes from whatever sources derived", it has no power to levy a tax on incomes derived from State bonds because that covers a matter in which sovereignty is reserved to the States.

That argument has a plausible sound, but it ignores two very important facts: In the first place, if Congress levies a tax equally upon all income, including income from Federal and State bonds, it no more destroys State sovereignty than it destroys its own sovereignty. It no more diminishes State borrowing power than it diminishes its own borrowing power. If the tax applies to all income, it does not shift the relative borrowing power of anybody or anything. An assumption that such a tax is destructive, against a State, must carry the corresponding assumption that it is destructive to the Nation, which is plainly false. In brief, it is a mere bit of legal sophistry.

In the second place, the sixteenth amendment was a definite transfer of part of the reserved sovereignty of the States to the Nation—to wit, the right to protection from the effect of an income tax upon income "from whatever sources derived." By ratifying the sixteenth amendment the States definitely limited their sovereignty. If a tax upon all income would reduce their borrowing power, they consented to that reduction. The logic of the Pollock decision would hold good, after the adoption of the sixteenth amendment, only if Congress attempted to levy a discriminatory tax upon income from State and municipal bonds.

Why should not Congress submit this issue to the Supreme Court? There is good precedent for suggesting it. William Howard Taft, when a candidate for President, urged that Congress enact an income tax law despite the Pollock decision. He said in an address at Columbus, Ohio, August 19, 1907:

"In times of great national need, however, an income tax would be of great assistance in furnishing means to carry on the Government, and it is not free from doubt how the Supreme Court, with changed membership, would view a new income tax law under such changed conditions."

Then, in his address accepting the Presidential nomination in 1908, he said:

"In my judgment, an amendment to the Constitution for an income tax is not necessary."

The logic of events today is just what it was when Mr. Taft spoke those words, save that the emergency is greater and the constitutional path, because of the adoption of the sixteenth amendment, is clearer. When a future Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court can thus appeal to Congress not to let itself be bound by an out-dated 5-to-4 decision, why should Congress hesitate to follow that path today?

It is time to end the fraud of income-tax exemption by congressional action under the sixteenth amendment.

NATIONAL RECOVERY ACT—EDITORIAL FROM BALTIMORE SUN

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I also ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD an editorial from the Baltimore Sun having to do with industrial control bill and the pledges of the last Democratic national platform.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Baltimore Sun, June 9, 1933]

PROPOSAL AND PROMISE?

The platform approved by the Democratic National Convention a year ago contains the following pronouncement on the Federal antitrust laws:

"We advocate strengthening and impartial enforcement of the antitrust laws to prevent monopoly and unfair trade practices, and revision thereof for the better protection of labor and the small producer and distributor."

President Roosevelt accepted in full the platform, of which this, relative to the notable brevity of the document, was one of the more expansive planks. He said of the platform that it "is a proposal and at the same time a promise binding on the party and its candidates."

That part of the so-called "National Industrial Recovery Act", which provides for the regimentation of American industry under Federal auspices says:

"While this title is in effect and for 60 days thereafter any code, agreement, or license approved, prescribed, or issued and in effect under this title, or any action complying with the provisions thereof taken during such period shall be exempt from the provision of the antitrust laws of the United States."

Thus, insofar as the provisions of the so-called "recovery bill" are employed—and they are broad enough to embrace virtually the entire sweep of American industry—the Federal antitrust laws are for all practical purposes repealed.

The national industrial recovery bill is in legal form an emergency measure (though the sweeping economic readjustments contemplated give every promise of creating a perpetual emergency, so far as the time limit is concerned). Hence it may be argued after a fashion that the bill does not repudiate the Democratic platform.

It so happens, however, that the economic emergency at the time the platform was drafted was perhaps more acute than it is today. But at that time there was no qualification of the antitrust-law plank to suggest that these laws might be repealed during the emergency, though the case for that course was being strenuously pressed at the time.

The plank stands as an unqualified advocacy of a strengthening and impartial enforcement of the antitrust laws. And the first decisive step taken by the administration in this field is to deliver a coup de grâce to these laws. How this course can be reconciled with the view that "a platform is a proposal and at the same time a promise binding on the party and its candidates" we find very difficult to see.

ST. LAWRENCE DEEP WATERWAY TREATY

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the RECORD an editorial appearing in the Kansas City Times of June 6, 1933, and in the morning issue of the Kansas City Star, in opposition to the St. Lawrence waterway treaty in its present form.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Kansas City Times, June 6, 1933]

A THREAT TO THE VALLEY STATES

The giant St. Lawrence waterway project, as commonly understood, is an enterprise calculated to help balance the transportation advantages of this middle-States region with those of the coastal areas of the United States. Its purpose, along with that of the Mississippi River outlet to the south, is to free this midwestern area from the heavy transportation handicaps it has suffered since the building of the Panama Canal. The St. Lawrence project is designed, in short, to move an Atlantic seaport 1,000 miles or more inland and give this territory fair access to the cheap ocean transportation of the world.

It is with such an understanding that this project has been accepted and its benefits recounted. It was such a view in this country that led to signing of the joint treaty with Canada, which would authorize construction of the waterway and establish the terms upon which it should be maintained. Ratification of that treaty now is pending in the Senate. It is extremely important—especially to the valley area south of the Great Lakes, including Missouri, Kansas, and other States—that all the terms and conditions of this treaty be clarified and that the interests of a region to be vitally affected shall be thoroughly safeguarded.

In particular, one portion of the treaty, article 8, is open to serious question. It must be noted that the Mississippi waterway south from St. Louis and north from that point on east to Chicago and the Lakes is vital in a double sense to the middle and lower valley. The outlet to the south and that to the Lakes are equally essential. This treaty section as it now stands is a threat to both.

The article provides that diversion of Lake Michigan water through the Chicago Drainage Canal on to the Illinois River and into the Mississippi Channel shall be limited to only 1,500 cubic feet per second. That is inadequate to assure continued navigation of the Lakes-to-the-Gulf channel, opened in its entirety but a few days ago. For nearly 20 years the diversion at Chicago has ranged from 8,500 to 10,000 cubic feet. An average diversion volume of at least 5,000 up to 10,000 feet is deemed an absolute necessity to the north-and-south channel.

The treaty article incorporates a decision of the United States Supreme Court with respect to future diversion. But the Court, in reaching its opinion 3 years ago, took into account the navigation needs only of the drainage canal, not the requirements of a Mississippi channel. That was recognized when Congress, only a few months after the Court's decision was rendered, authorized a survey of the Lakes-to-Gulf waterway project, a report of which was to be made in 1938.

Thus the matter stands. The treaty not only includes the diversion limit as stated, but it stipulates that should the United States at any future time desire an increase of diversion volume, "in order to meet an emergency", the matter shall be submitted for final decision to an arbitral tribunal. But on that Canada would have equal representation with this country, and no decision could be reached without the consent of the former. And it so happens that Canada was insistent upon the extreme low limit on diversion as incorporated in the treaty and has made it a cardinal point in the acceptance of that document. Further, waterway needs probably could not be termed an emergency. So the hands of this country would be tied, to the most serious detriment of this inland region.

The treaty makes Lake Michigan an international body of water, although it is wholly within the United States, a fact that has been recognized officially by this country for nearly 150 years. The article, therefore, is a surrender of sovereignty, with the attendant dangers noted.

If the article should be included, unchanged, in the ratification, these Middle States, distant from the Lakes, not only might be wholly denied participation in the St. Lawrence waterway benefits but denied as well safe access to an ocean outlet to the south. This area in effect might be left stranded with respect to transportation advantages, with even less advantage than it now holds through but limited use of the Mississippi channel.

The obviously just and necessary procedure is to incorporate a treaty reservation bearing upon lake water diversion and the valley navigation requirements of this country. As the treaty is drawn in this respect, and in others of less importance, the advantages are preponderantly with the other country. That is neither equitable nor needed. The adjustment can and should be made. If it is not made, the treaty should be held over from the present session and then given the thoroughly serious attention it deserves before it receives this country's final endorsement.

WHAT THE FIDAC IS

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I present a letter addressed to the editor of the New York Sun and published in the issue of that paper of the 5th instant, entitled "What the Fidac Is, a Concise Explanation of the Society's Purpose", by Charles Hann, Jr., American president of the Fidac.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Sun, June 5, 1933]

WHAT THE FIDAC IS—A CONCISE EXPLANATION OF THE SOCIETY'S PURPOSE

To the EDITOR OF THE SUN:

SIR: The recent brief visits of the famous Polish general, Roman Gorecki, head of the Fidac and president of the largest bank in Poland, to over a dozen cities in America, has aroused great interest in the Fidac and caused many to inquire about that organization. I am sure that many of your readers would like to know a little about the Fidac.

The Fidac, a name made up of the initials of "Fédération Interalliée des Anciens Combattants", the Interallied Federation of Ex-Service Men, is the great international organization of veterans' societies of 10 of the allied countries in the World War. The American Legion, with 1,000,000 members, is the sole society member of the Fidac in the United States. I have the honor to have been elected the American president by the congress in Portugal. The Fidac, which was founded in Paris in 1920, now has more than 8,000,000 members.

The purposes of the Fidac include the maintenance, fostering, and development of that spirit of comradeship which manifested itself on the battlefields of the World War of 1914–18, fought in common for a common cause, and to use that comradeship in the cause of peace. Ex-service men are informed how to know one another better so that they may better understand one another. Knowledge of the life, customs, problems, and aspirations of other countries often helps to remove obstacles to international understanding.

The Fidac stands aloof from all political parties or sectarian denominations, but one of its objects is to review impartially the great problems to be solved by the different countries, especially by the countries affiliated with the Fidac. Its constitution is as democratic as the constitutions of its component members. It desires to make known the program, the life, and the works of the member associations.

It supports the governments of its constituent countries and is determined to help those governments in any way that lies within its power to see that insofar as possible justice is meted out to the war disabled, the widows and orphans, to help in the maintenance of law and order, and generally to assist in obtaining as full a realization as may be possible of the results of the victory achieved in common.

Many constructive things have been accomplished by the Fidac in the interest of permanent world peace and the promotion of good will on earth, and the Fidac consistently strives to remove friction between allied nations, through unofficial explanations and contacts of responsible citizens and officials. It combats national or international false news and antiallied campaigns.

The Fidac recalls the sacrifices and efforts of the Fidac countries during the World War, which was hateful to them, and keeps reverently the memory of the dead. It strives to instruct the younger generation in respect to a better understanding among the peoples of the world.

The Fidac has splendid headquarters in Paris, France, at 15 rue de Presles. It publishes monthly a beautiful review, conducts a travel bureau, and sells souvenirs. The Fidac holds its annual Congresses in each allied member country in turn. The congress in Washington established the Fidac international identity card. The Fidac organized annual awards of the educational medal of the Fidac to educational institutions featuring international relations and friendship. The Fidac has done and is doing countless other good things in its activities which cover a wide field.

CHARLES HANN, JR.,
American President of the Fidac.

NEW YORK, June 3.

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5755) to encourage national industrial recovery, to foster fair competition, and to provide for the construction of certain useful public works, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN] to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I ask that the amendment may be stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 26, line 4, it is proposed to strike out the word "more" and insert the word "less."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Arizona to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The next amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 27, after line 7, it is proposed to insert the following:

(b) All contracts let for Federal construction projects pursuant to this title shall contain provisions for minimum rates of wages, to be predetermined by the awarding authorities, which contractors shall pay to skilled and unskilled labor, and such minimum rates shall be stated in the invitation for bids and shall be included in the proposals for bids for the work. The awarding official shall have power to revise the predetermined wages if in his judgment changed conditions so justify. In event the rate of wages is increased, an amount equal to the amount of such increase in wages in any one month shall be paid at the end of such month to the contractor by the United States upon a satisfactory showing by the contractor as to the amount thereof, and in the event of a decrease in the rate of wages, the contract price shall be decreased by the amount of such decrease in wages, and such decrease in the contract price shall be computed on the basis of satisfactory evidence submitted by the contractor.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, there is a good deal of opposition to this amendment on the part of the American Federation of Labor. I do not see the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. METCALF] in the Chamber, but we held hearings before the Committee on Education last year, at which time the American Federation of Labor and others appeared before us. It supported that proposed legislation, but the organization is quite distressed over the inclusion in the bill of this particular amendment.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. COPELAND. Yes.

Mr. WAGNER. I may say to the Senator that I am not responsible for the insertion of this provision; it was inserted by the committee. I recognize the opposition of labor organizations. They feel that it would interfere somewhat with their efforts to secure increase of wages at times if wages were fixed by a commission. I think they would prefer to do it as the result of collective bargaining, and, so far as I am concerned, I will not insist on the amendment.

Mr. COPELAND. I hope that the Senate will reject the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. COPELAND. I hope it will not be agreed to.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I do not know who is responsible for the amendment as adopted by the committee. I can say, however, that a similar system was adopted in the emergency public works act of 2 years ago, whereby the State highway commission predetermined the rate of wages. That provision of law has worked very satisfactorily. In that case the State highway department fixes the wages for various kinds of labor employed on road construction, sets them out in the specifications, and makes them a part of the bids, and then all contractors bid, knowing that they will have to pay labor at the same rate. As I have said, it has worked very satisfactorily. I do know, upon the other hand, that in the construction of public buildings, where the rule has been merely "the prevailing rate of wages", there have been continuous disputes all over the United States as to what was "the prevailing rate of wages" in the community where the buildings were erected.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, if I may interrupt the Senator, let me say that under the so-called "Davis-Bacon law" wages throughout the United States are determined by the Secretary of Labor. That is the law now, and it has worked very satisfactorily to practically all those interested in this character of construction work.

Mr. COPELAND. It is only right; there should be an increase in the compensation of the contractor that labor should be benefited. There should be a range with reference to it. I hope the amendment will not be agreed to.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I would like to say to the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN] that the provision to which he refers is still a part of the law and it is in this bill. The suggestion of my colleague does not in any way interfere with that particular provision.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, may I ask the junior Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] if he is familiar with what is known as the "Bacon-Davis Act"?

Mr. WAGNER. Does the Senator mean the act which authorizes the Secretary of Labor to determine the prevailing rate of wage?

Mr. JOHNSON. Yes. Is this virtually a repeal of that act?

Mr. WAGNER. No; we are not interfering with that act at all.

Mr. JOHNSON. That is what is expressed to me by some who are interested in it.

Mr. WAGNER. If we eliminate the provision, as is proposed by my colleague, then the Bacon-Davis Act remains the law of the land.

Mr. JOHNSON. The Senator then has no objection?

Mr. WAGNER. Oh, no.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, last evening before we recessed the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] was ready to accept an amendment that I did not then have ready in reference to the annex of the Library of Congress. I have the amendment now at hand and offer it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. The Senator from Ohio proposes, on page 20, line 23, after the word "facilities", to insert:

(5) To advance, upon request of the Commission having jurisdiction of the project, the unappropriated balance of the sum authorized for carrying out the provisions of the act entitled "An act to provide for the construction and equipment of an annex to the Library of Congress", approved June 13, 1930 (46 Stat. 583); such advance to be expended under the direction of such Commission and in accordance with such act.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from Ohio.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FESS subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that following the adoption of the amendment which I offered a few moments ago I may have inserted in the RECORD a letter from the Librarian, Dr. Putnam, giving the reasons why the amendment should be adopted.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The letter is as follows:

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS,
Washington, June 9, 1933.

Hon. SIMEON D. FESS,
Senate Office Building.

MY DEAR SENATOR FESS: Herewith three copies of the amendment. You will notice it goes in on page 19, at line 23, inserting there a new clause (5). In case of question the emphasis might be:

(1) The original proviso to section 202 remains untouched.

(2) This amendment merely authorizes an advance of funds.

(3) It authorizes even that only on the request of your Commission.

(4) It reserves for your Commission the direction of the expenditure.

To the suggestion that the matter belongs rather to the appropriation bill, the answer is:

(1) This will delay the project by at least another year.

(2) Plans have already been prepared and with the funds in hand the main contract could be let at once.

(3) In the meantime the congestion is very serious and impedes every operation of the Library.

Faithfully yours,

HERBERT PUTNAM, Librarian.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the next amendment of the committee.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, on page 28, after line 10, to strike out:

(b) No articles, materials, or supplies shall be acquired for public use or for use upon or in State, municipal, or private projects financed in whole or in part by Federal funds, under this or other acts of Congress, unless such articles, materials, or supplies have been manufactured in the United States of articles, materials, or supplies mined or produced in the United States, if available at a reasonable cost.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. MURPHY. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment to the committee amendment on page 19, line 3.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Senator from Iowa proposes, on page 19, line 3, after the word "plants", to insert the words "armory and memorial buildings."

Mr. HARRISON. I think that is all right, and I am willing to have it go to conference.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The vote by which the committee amendment as amended was agreed to will have to be reconsidered. Without objection, that vote is reconsidered. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Iowa to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The committee amendment as amended was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will report the next amendment.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, on page 28, after line 18, to insert:

SUBSISTENCE HOMESTEADS

SEC. 207. To provide for aiding the redistribution of the overbalance of population in industrial centers $25,000,000 is hereby made available to the President, to be used by him through such agencies as he may establish and under such regulations as he may make, for making loans for and otherwise aiding in the purchase of subsistence homesteads. The moneys collected as repayment of said loans shall constitute a revolving fund to be administered as directed by the President for the purposes of this section.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. ASHURST. Is the pending amendment on page 28?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The pending amendment is on page 28, beginning in line 19.

Mr. ASHURST. On page 28 I observe a committee amendment beginning in line 11, striking out down to and including line 18.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment has been agreed to.

Mr. ASHURST. I was out of the Chamber at the time, attending a meeting of the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Arizona yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield.

Mr. REED. The reason why that was stricken out was that by an act of March 3 of this year, in the Treasury and Post Office Departments appropriation bill, it was made general law applicable to all departments and governmental agencies that domestic materials shall be purchased where reasonably practical.

Mr. ASHURST. That is the trouble—"where reasonably practical."

Mr. REED. I am not quoting the exact language. The language, as I recall it, is, in effect, "where the interests of the Government will permit and where it can be done without paying an unreasonable price." It seemed to Congress that those limitations ought to be applied.

Mr. ASHURST. I accept the statement of the Senator, and I ask unanimous consent to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

The language stricken out and which I desire restored reads:

(b) No articles, materials, or supplies shall be acquired for public use or for use upon or in State, municipal, or private projects financed in whole or in part by Federal funds, under this or other acts of Congress, unless such articles, materials, or supplies have been manufactured in the United States of articles, materials, or supplies mined or produced in the United States, if available at a reasonable cost.

The scope and purpose of this bill seem to be generally approved, and need not be repeated now. The scholarly Senator from Ohio [Mr. FESS] delivered last evening a speech here that, in my judgment, elevated him to a still higher position as a scholar and historian. A reply was made thereto by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH], who with an eloquence and a flawless logic rarely seen even in the Senate, pointed out that these are unusual times; these are catastrophic times; these are times that try men's souls. We are calling into requisition latent powers of the Constitution seldom resorted to except in grave emergencies.

Mr. President, there is no disguising the fact that American labor cannot successfully compete with foreign articles and foreign labor. The American shoe factories cannot make shoes in competition with foreign shoe factories. The American manufacturer of furniture cannot compete with the foreign manufacturer. The American miner, who smites the obdurate face of nature in search of the metals, cannot compete with the cheap and conscript labor of Russia. The American sawmill man, converting logs into lumber and shingles, cannot compete with the convict and conscript labor of Russia.

How ironical it is to find in a bill the supposed purpose of which is to restore industry in the United States and reduce unemployment in the United States—how ironical it is, I say, to find public funds used in the purchase of materials mined and fabricated in foreign countries.

I see sitting before me with their usual diligence the two Senators from California [Mr. JOHNSON and Mr. MCADOO], and I am thus reminded that the Federal Government is financing the construction of the Oakland Bridge, near the Golden Gate, the most romantic, the most fascinating of all harbors in the world. Yet the manganese that goes into the steel used in that bridge, which steel is paid for by the United States, comes from Russia, and this manganese is produced and mined by conscript or convict labor, and thus the United States, out of its public funds, is generously advancing the money to construct that bridge, whereas at home and in the State of California there is ample manganese.

For example, let me refer to a distressing and singular episode. Some years ago in a certain town in Arizona it was concluded by the citizens that they should have a new schoolhouse. I do not here mention the town. The trustees of the school district let the contract and concluded that inasmuch as Arizona produced copper they would roof the new schoolhouse with copper. The trustees stipulated for copper, but, behold, when the building was completed there was indeed a copper roof on the building which roof has been paid for by the taxpayers of that district, but the copper came from a foreign country where copper may be mined at one eighth of the cost at which copper may be mined in America.

I cite another illustration, and I am not certain as to these facts I now relate, but a gentleman in whom I have confidence, whose name may be given, who is now attached to the Senate, told me that 2 years ago the very chairs in the Senate restaurant were made in Europe. I am not vouching for the authenticity of this statement, but the gentleman who told me is at hand and may be called.

So, Mr. President, in this time of national distress, when we are heavily oppressing and burdening our taxpayers and necessarily doing so, we surely ought to be statesmen enough and fair enough to our own taxpayers to see to it that in every case where Federal funds are used all the materials, articles, and supplies paid for by Federal funds shall be available if, only, and when such materials, articles, and supplies are made, mined, and produced in the United States.

It is folly—and I now use a phrase that I heard last fall that attracted me. It was used by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG], who said that a certain thing was "fiddle-faddle." I apologize to the Senate for using such slang, but it is so apt that I apply it at this time. It is folly, it is mere froth, it is fiddle-faddle to pretend we have not manganese enough and lumber enough and other raw materials enough in America to make the articles that go into our public works financed by Federal funds.

So, Mr. President, I therefore urge that this language be restored. I believe that if we are to acquire an emergency stock of materials and supplies strategic to the national welfare, such materials, articles, and supplies should be produced, grown, mined, and fabricated in the United States.

You may call that an embargo if you choose. I never was afraid of epithets. On the countrary I desire to secure, temporarily, at least, an embargo of goods, articles, and materials made by cheap, convict, or conscript labor abroad when and while we are trying to stabilize America and reduce unemployment here. I ask Senators not to allow this bill to pass unless they are certain that all the materials and articles used and paid for by public moneys shall be produced, grown, fabricated, and manufactured in the United States.

What a folly, what a puerile procedure, to appropriate billions of dollars designed and intended to aid our own country to restore business, to reduce unemployment, and yet leave the door open, leave the gap down, so that foreign countries with lower standards of living, with cheaply paid labor, may send their goods, materials, and articles here and receive in payment therefor the hard-wrung money of our taxpayers.

If one John Smith or Richard Roe desires to spend his own earnings in a foreign country, that is his business. If any American citizen desires to purchase a hat, or a suit of clothing, or a piece of furniture, made in Europe rather than in America, that is that citizen's business, and no one has a right to complain; but we must draw the line when it comes to spending the public money. As to all public moneys that are expended under such a bill as this one, care and prevision should be taken to see to it that no materials, supplies, or articles are used except those that come from the bosom of America, especially when her own taxpayers are paying for them.

Mr. President, the able Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED]—and I am not using the word "able" merely as a gesture of polite speech, because the Senator from Pennsylvania is known throughout this country to be a diligent, able statesman and an exceedingly astute lawyer—tells me that already we have on the statute books a law which denounces the use of materials and supplies produced in a foreign country and paid for out of our Federal Treasury. That is what the Senator's statement seems to be.

Mr. REED. That is right.

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator then takes the position that we do not need this statute.

Mr. President, it requires fortitude and presumption to challenge a direct statement as to the law as pronounced by the Senator from Pennsylvania. It may be that such law would be efficacious and sufficient for the Treasury Department expenditures or for such Departments as are mentioned; but I am fearful that the law referred to by the able Senator is not sufficient wholly to protect our country and our citizens against the influx of cheaply made goods, articles, and materials.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CONNALLY in the chair). Does the Senator from Arizona yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I think in substance the law that we passed some time ago is about as the paragraph contained in this bill; but it occurs to me that that policy is such a wholesome policy, and there is such necessity to impress it upon those who administer the law in regard to purchasing American products, that it would be a very desirable thing to have it continued in this bill, even if covered by the other measure.

Mr. ASHURST. That is my point. I was at the bar for 14 years. I did not achieve such eminence at the bar as did my learned friend the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED]. No honors, no wreaths in the legal world placed upon his brow could be so splendid as to make me at all envious of him. I rejoice in the success and ability of other men, for I am ennobled by their learning, and I do say the Senator from Florida has put his finger upon the point. That law referred to by Senator REED is not adequate, is not efficacious for all purposes; hence out of abundant caution this language ought to be restored in the form in which it passed the House.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arizona yield to the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. TYDINGS. I desire to ask a question as a matter of information.

I understood that the Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON] had already offered an amendment which I thought was comprehensive enough to cover this situation. It is the law of the land. I remember the Senator offering the amendment some time ago.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, it was the amendment that was attached, I think, to the Post Office bill last March, just before we adjourned.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is right.

Mr. JOHNSON. But the Senator from Arizona and some others think that it is not entirely appropriate to this new legislation.

Mr. ASHURST. That is the point.

Mr. TYDINGS. The reason why I interrupted the Senator from Arizona was not to take issue with him, but to get information. I understand that the law passed at the behest of the Senator from California would apply to the legislation which we are now about to enact.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, if the Senator will pardon me——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arizona yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. JOHNSON. The hope was, when the amendment was attached to the Post Office bill, that it would constitute general legislation which in the future would deal with the subject; but we never contemplated at that time this measure, of such extent that we have no comprehension of what it may be and what it may do. For that reason, I think it would be a safer idea to do as the Senator from Arizona is suggesting.

Mr. TYDINGS. What I had in mind was that I think the amendment offered by the Senator from California had been dressed over several times, and was pretty generally acceptable; and it struck me that if we were to go along in the same line it would be well to stick to the same phraseology. What I desire to ask the Senator from Arizona is, What did not the amendment offered by the Senator from California contain that this amendment does contain, and which is necessary to carry out the philosophy of that amendment?

Mr. REED. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arizona yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. REED. I have in my hand a copy of the Treasury and Post Office appropriation bill approved March 3, 1933. In title III of that act, which is found on page 35, occurs the following. While it is somewhat lengthy, I think it ought to be read, because it is so much more comprehensive than this language which the Finance Committee struck out of the pending bill.

Mr. ASHURST. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, before the Senator reads that, I wonder if he will permit an interruption.

Mr. REED. Surely; as far as I have the floor.

Mr. TYDINGS. May I ask the Senator if, in his judgment, the amendment of the Senator from California, which he has in his hand, is sufficiently comprehensive to cover this situation?

Mr. REED. I think it is much more comprehensive; and that will appear as I read it. If the Senate will bear with me, I think the reading is better than any argument that I might advance:

SEC. 1. That when used in this title—

(a) The term "United States", when used in a geographical sense, includes the United States and any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof;

(b) The terms "public use", "public building", and "public work" shall mean use by, public building of, and public work of, the United States, the District of Columbia, Hawaii, Alaska, Puerto Rico, the Philippine Islands, American Samoa, the Canal Zone, and the Virgin Islands.

SEC. 2. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, and unless the head of the department or independent establishment concerned shall determine it to be inconsistent with the public interest, or the cost to be unreasonable, only such unmanufactured articles, materials, and supplies as have been mined or produced in the United States, and only such manufactured articles, materials, and supplies as have been manufactured in the United States, substantially all from articles, materials, or supplies mined, produced, or manufactured, as the case may be, in the United States, shall be acquired for public use. This section shall not apply with respect to articles, materials, or supplies for use outside the United States, or if articles, materials, or supplies of the class or kind to be used or the articles, materials, or supplies from which they are manufactured are not mined, produced, or manufactured, as the case may be, in the United States in sufficient and reasonably available commercial quantities and of a satisfactory quality.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I do not wish to interrupt the Senator, but he has read far enough for me to say that I can drive a coach and four through that law in nine places. Why, Mr. President, I will show the Senator where and how I can drive a coach and four in nine places through it.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, before the Senator starts on his coaching trip, will he not let me read the third section? [Laughter.]

Mr. ASHURST. Yes, indeed.

Mr. REED (reading):

SEC. 3. (a) Every contract for the construction, alteration, or repair of any public building or public work in the United States growing out of an appropriation heretofore made or hereafter to be made shall contain a provision that in the performance of the work the contractor, subcontractors, material men, or suppliers shall use only such unmanufactured articles, materials, and supplies as have been mined or produced in the United States, and only such manufactured articles, materials, and supplies as have been manufactured in the United States substantially all from articles, materials, or supplies mined, produced, or manufactured, as the case may be, in the United States except as provided in section 2: Provided, however——

Mr. ASHURST. Ah! "Provided, however!"

Mr. REED. Yes; that is there.

Mr. ASHURST. Yes. "Provided, however, if the head of the department does not want to buy American manganese, he may buy it elsewhere."

Mr. REED. The worst of it is the words "Provided, however" are in italics. [Laughter.]

Mr. ASHURST. That makes the trouble still greater.

Mr. REED (reading):

That if the head of the department or independent establishment making the contract shall find that in respect to some particular articles, materials, or supplies it is impracticable to make such requirement or that it would unreasonably increase the cost, an exception shall be noted in the specifications as to that particular article, material, or supply, and a public record made of the findings which justified the exception.

I shall not read any more; but the act goes on to provide that if any contractor violates these provisions, he shall not again be given a public contract by the Federal Government.

Surely the Senator does not think that this miserable little sentence which the Finance Committee struck out can compare in effectiveness and comprehensiveness with that general law which was put in by the Senator from California last March.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I should be inclined at first blush to accept any legal paper prepared by the Senator from California, and to which he gave his attention; but I think it is well to remember that the language proposed by the Senator from California was to cover the particular cases he had in mind on that bill.

I am not going to array myself as a lawyer against such another eminent lawyer as the senior Senator from California; but I do point out that the defect in the act that has just been read by the able Senator from Pennsylvania is this:

Provided, however, That if the head of the department or independent establishment making the contract shall find that in respect to some particular articles—

In the case of the Oakland Bridge, costing $40,000,000, to be paid for by the Federal Government, the departments must have held that there was no manganese in America, and that therefore they would use manganese from Russia to construct the Oakland Bridge, to be paid for by the American taxpayers. So much for Brackenberry, so much for that law. It did not work. It allowed foreign material to come in.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I should like to point out that in the amendment which was reported in the bill, which was stricken out, and which the Senator wants to have reinserted, the last six words are "if available at a reasonable cost."

Mr. ASHURST. I am willing that they be stricken.

Mr. TYDINGS. I want to point out that the same objection would be applicable.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, the provision in the bill as it came from the House makes the language applicable to "State, municipal, or private projects financed in whole or in part by Federal funds." Does the law referred to by the Senator from Pennsylvania, the existing law, cover projects which are financed by Federal funds, and are State or private in their character?

Mr. REED. No, Mr. President; it relates only to public spending for articles manufactured by private persons and subsequently bought for the Government.

Mr. President, will the Senator from Arizona permit a question?

Mr. ASHURST. Certainly.

Mr. REED. The Senator says he is about to move to strike out the last six words in the paragraph. Let me call to his attention the fact that the conservation corps has just bought 6,000 trucks.

Mr. ASHURST. Yes.

Mr. REED. Each of them has four rubber tires on it.

Mr. ASHURST. Yes.

Mr. REED. Rubber is made in the United States at the present moment out of goldenrod, at a very high cost. It is available for about 3 cents a pound as it comes from Brazil and the East Indies. The Senator's amendment would compel the Government to buy goldenrod rubber instead of the rubber which is imported. At the present time in the United States there is a very small quantity of tin produced from American ore, smelted in America. The quantity is infinitesimal. It does not amount to 1 percent of the national needs of tin each year. The Senator's amendment, as he would change it, would force the Government to buy nothing but that American tin. The price would go sky-high.

Mr. ASHURST. That is what we are seeking to do, is it not? What is the purpose of this bill?

Mr. REED. I am only a Republican. I believe in reasonable tariffs.

Mr. ASHURST. I should think the Senator would, coming from a State which has always urged reasonable tariffs.

Mr. President, the word "reasonable" sounds well; it is a large, euphonious, mouth-filling word, "reasonable" tariffs. I am in favor of tariffs which will, until this unemployment crisis comes to an end, keep out goods and materials produced by cheap foreign convict, conscript, or forced labor, whether the tariff be reasonable or unreasonable.

Mr. REED. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. ASHURST. Certainly.

Mr. REED. The test of a reasonable tariff, then, might be whether it was so high as to completely exclude all foreign products. The Senator, while he disapproves of such a tariff, reaches exactly the same end in a more direct way by just clapping on a complete embargo.

Mr. ASHURST. I do not disguise my position. I do not hide behind ambushes. I have fought for years for an embargo, not only a high tariff but an embargo, on copper produced by cheap foreign labor.

Mr. REED. That is the kind of Democrat I like. I thank the Senator. [Laughter.]

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, in view of the numerous disputes which have taken place here between the proponents of tariffs and embargoes, it seems to me that the matter might be simplified, if the Senator would permit me to make a suggestion.

Mr. ASHURST. I yield to the able Senator from Missouri.

Mr. CLARK. I think this might settle the whole business: "On and after the approval of this act no article or commodity shall, under any circumstances, be imported into the United States or exported from the United States which can in any manner or by any possibility be produced in the United States."

That would, of course, include an embargo on exports, because it logically and inevitably follows from the embargo on imports.

Mr. ASHURST. I accept the amendment. [Laughter.]

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Missouri whether he would be willing to include in his amendment a provision applying the same paralyzing rule to the products of each State?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I am willing to accept the suggestion that tin and rubber, for which the Senator from Pennsylvania pleads, may constitute an exception.

I advocate no free-trade nostrums. Free trade exists only in the minds of those who sit in academic chairs. It does not exist in the practical world.

The able Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] last night vindicated a great name. He is a worthy scion of an illustrious sire, and he disclosed a research of history, particularly referring to the Democratic positions, in a manner that won for him the admiration of his colleagues.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri will give attention to the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. ASHURST. I am a Jacksonian Democrat. It was the protective-tariff State of Pennsylvania that first proposed General Jackson for the Presidency. General Jackson was not at first proposed by Tennessee, and in the initial days of General Jackson's Presidential campaign a distinguished gentleman from Virginia, Mr. Ritchie, a great editor of a great paper, an illustrious man, wrote to General Jackson and said, in substance:

> We in Virginia have had notice in the press that you, sir, are advocating protective tariffs.

It has been years, Mr. President, since I read the letter, but I can quote some of it.

"If it be true, General Jackson", the letter went on, "that you are advocating a protective tariff, the support for the Presidency that Virginians have heretofore given you will be relaxed."

Whereupon General Jackson, with that courage and frankness that always characterized him, wrote to Mr. Ritchie, and in his letter of reply wrote one of the greatest protective-tariff speeches in the history of our country. General Jackson pointed out that if America was to be a great, powerful, and happy country, we must in and of our own selves and in our own bosom produce the materials of war in order to protect ourselves, and in and of ourselves from the rich bosom of America produce the articles, materials, and supplies needful to a people pursuing the arts of peace and progress.

If any Democrat is perplexed as to what his duty is or as to what the ancient and original doctrine of the Democratic Party was, let him read the letter of General Jackson to Mr. Ritchie. Not even the Senator from Pennsylvania, in his most exuberant desire for a protective tariff, reached the point Andrew Jackson reached.

Thomas Jefferson wrote 14, mayhaps 16, letters urging a protective tariff. The free-trade, low-tariff doctrine introduced into our country some 40 or 50 years ago is an excrescence upon the party. It is not the true Democratic doctrine. But whether it be the doctrine or not, it is not my doctrine. I stand for the protection of American industry and for the protection of American labor, no matter what epithet may be given to such doctrine.

Mr. President, my State has honored me far beyond my deserts. Yet, indeed, I am presumptuous enough to ask them to continue these honors. That State at one time produced one sixth of the copper of the world. As my able friend from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] says, many of those copper towns are now ghost towns.

Some 10 years ago the able Senator from Massachusetts came to Arizona, and as he traveled the highway from Tucson to Douglas the people came out from their mines and ranches on the hillsides to see this illustrious man from Massachusetts. His reputation had preceded him. He passed through the historic and glamorous town of blood and silver and sand of bygone days—Tombstone. The copper mines of that county in which Tombstone is located have been closed because of a lack of tariff protection. The smelter stacks, which once poured their plumes of smoke skyward, testifying to industry and good wages, are empty. The drill and pick have fallen silent. The bats and the owls and the reptilia of the desert now in large part inhabit some of the buildings where in happier days my good friend from Massachusetts visited and spoke. That is the result of free trade.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, does the Senator charge this result to the visit of the Senator from Massachusetts? [Laughter.]

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator from Massachusetts was received with a royal welcome. His speeches were listened to with respect. Industry then flourished in the copper camps. But when vast quantities of copper were discovered in Africa, where labor is paid 30 or 40 cents a day, and where the ores are four times as rich as our ores, our copper industry in Arizona, in Montana, in Colorado, in Nevada, in Michigan, and elsewhere, fell into obsolescence because of free trade, and, I repeat, towns and cities where once a happy people labored and were paid good wages—towns, villages, and cities where people worked on week days and worshiped their Creator on Sunday, where their children went to school well dressed, where each citizen was radiant with optimism, hope, and joy, and had faith in the institutions of his country—gloom, pessimism, and contagious despair now reign and hope has abandoned her noble functions.

I tell Senators that I am through with the folly of throwing my porcelain theories against a concrete wall of fact. The porcelain is always shattered; the facts remain. Free trade is a porcelain theory. When hurled against the concrete wall of facts, the porcelain is always shattered.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, it seems that this proviso of the law which has been quoted here, and which has been the subject of this debate, revolves about a question of fact as to whether or not manganese can be produced in the United States at a reasonable cost.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I reply that manganese is produced in 32 of our States. About 3½ years ago an investigation was made by the Bureau of Mines, supplemented by the efforts of 15 or probably more, perhaps 20, engineers, miners, men skilled in geophysics, men skilled in chemistry, and the conclusion was reached, buttressed upon facts, that there is an ample supply at reasonable cost of manganese to be found in the United States.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arizona yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I simply want to call attention to the fact that the use of American manganese ore in the manufacture of steel cannot be compared with the use of goldenrod in the manufacture of rubber, because in a ton of steel there are only 14 pounds of manganese used, and if we use American manganese it costs 1 cent a pound extra, which would add 14 cents to the cost of a ton of steel.

Mr. ASHURST. I thank the Senator for his contribution.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President——

Mr. ASHURST. I yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Arizona, known as he is to all of us on both sides as an historian of his party, as well as a practical follower of his party, to recall and state if he does not——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Let there be order in the Senate.

Mr. LEWIS. Of course, Mr. President, no one ever expects a Senator to listen to any other Senator.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I always listen with instruction and delight to my able friend from Illinois.

Mr. LEWIS. I was only remarking that an innovation such as intimated by the Chair should really not be put upon Senators ever to listen to anybody except themselves.

Mr. President, I return to my observation, and ask my able friend from Arizona if he will not state to this honorable body on both sides that it is a mistake to indulge the idea or make the accusation that the Democratic Party was ever for free trade.

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator is correct.

Mr. LEWIS. It never was, and it never has subscribed itself to such a doctrine as a principle of government.

Mr. ASHURST. I thank the Senator. He is correct.

Mr. LEWIS. May I not say in this connection that the theory——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate must be in order and the galleries will please be quiet or the Chair will clear them.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, let me ask the Senator if it be not true that our theory has ever been a tariff not only legitimately for legitimate revenue but always as an incidental guardianship, which we speak of as incidental protection, and that the doctrine of John C. Calhoun and those who followed him, which was a doctrine addressed to those who early engaged in agriculture and who, having to purchase many things before manufacturing became an incident to our own development, demanded reductions and adjustments of tariffs as to such commodities imported; but there never was in the policy of the Democratic Party, since the Republic was founded, the doctrine of free trade, in the sense in which the expression is used.

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator is correct. He referred to one of the most eminent of Americans, one of the purest of statesmen, John C. Calhoun. I have always had before me a sentence in substance from John C. Calhoun: Every man and every institution in our country should bear alike the burdens of government and receive alike its benefits.

Now, Mr. President——

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ASHURST. Yes.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I simply want to congratulate the Senator upon his able tariff analysis, and urge him to lift his voice loud enough so that Secretary of State Hull will be sure to hear him in London.

Mr. SMITH. Yes; exactly!

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I have a great admiration for Secretary of State Hull. The personal relations between that gentleman and myself are so intimate and so cordial that they are almost brotherly in their affection. There is probably no man, outside of my own blood kin, whom I hold closer in friendship and intimacy that the able, pure-minded and high-minded Secretary of State, Mr. Hull. He knows my tariff views. I have in private conversation inflicted them upon him so often that I now suspect whenever I call upon him to engage in social converse he says to himself, "I hope Henry is not going to try again to impose some of his high-tariff doctrine on me." [Laughter.]

Mr. President, getting back to John C. Calhoun, he began his life as a protectionist.

Mr. SMITH. And regretted it ever afterwards.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arizona yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield.

Mr. FESS. It is interesting to recall that John C. Calhoun was the author of the Tariff Act of 1816.

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator is correct.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arizona yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield.

Mr. SMITH. The Senator has been a close student and he doubtless is aware that John C. Calhoun lived the remainder of his life regretting the horrible blunder he made when he advocated a protective tariff for infant industries, and he spent the last years of his life in a magnificent fight against that fatal error.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I said that John C. Calhoun began his career as a high-tariff man, and, as the able Senator from Ohio [Mr. FESS] suggested, Calhoun piloted through the Congress the protective-tariff bill in 1816. Now the scholarly Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH], a worthy follower of John C. Calhoun, suggests that Mr. Calhoun regretted such action the remainder of his life.

Mr. President, there is no one here who has not many private regrets. So Mr. Calhoun was not an exception in that regard. Being a pure man, a man of conscience, if he believed he did wrong, he naturally would regret it——

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me at that point?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arizona yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, the historical connection which forced John C. Calhoun into that error was the War of 1812, as the Senator knows. At that time there was evidence of the fact that in the days of our infancy as a nation, when we had but lately emerged from the struggle for liberty and had but lately achieved victory, there was need for some manufactures. Mr. Calhoun advocated protection—that is, that the Government should lend whatever credit it might have to the development of those things of which during the War of 1812 it became evident we stood so sorely in need. It was, however, only to be a temporary aid, in order to secure such development and to produce commodities which were not then manufactured to any extent in this country. Under those circumstances he did agree to a tariff and specified the commodities that should be protected, which were those that we had not even begun to manufacture and supply for ourselves; but he opened the door to the inordinate greed that has brought us to the horrible conditions from which we are suffering today, the rule of the corporations, which alone, under the very principle of the tariff, can be benefited by it. The masses of the American people have from time to time in their disorganized condition attempted to stem the tide of the bleeding of all the nations for the benefit of the few. Like a patriot, Calhoun deplored the fact, while he had merely lent his support when he thought it was necessary for the protection of his Government from an invading foe, that he had lent himself temporarily to a thing that has devastated America, and I thought drew the line between the two parties.

I do not know where, in the name of God, I am now; I thought that I belonged to the Democratic Party, but if the doctrine I hear here today is the doctrine of the Democratic Party I am a man without a party; but, thank God, there are some faithful ones left yet, and in spite of the fact that copper is produced in Arizona real, genuine Democrats are produced in South Carolina. [Laughter.]

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arizona yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, as I accept the courtesy of the Senator from Arizona, I regret that we have awakened from the eminent Senator from South Carolina rather an assault upon the views which we represent, and something of indignation and resentment at the views which we say the ancient eminent statesman from South Carolina, Mr. John C. Calhoun, represented. But, Mr. President, since my good friend from Arizona allows me to interpolate some remarks in the midst of his observations, let me say that time does make changes in statesmen, and while the eminent Senator from South Carolina may doubt as to where he stands today, he must reckon that the whole world has been going through such a metamorphosis that none of us can say that we will be tomorrow the same as we were yesterday. If we are to speak the facts of history, lest we shall be held up to a new generation as a party which represented free trade and favored opening our ports to all the world to inundate with their goods our own people, let it be said that so far as he spoke for the Democratic Party—for Mr. Calhoun was not much of a Democrat; he was very much a statesman, but a man who had not reached the point of acknowledged democracy representing equality of opportunity or equality of manhood—those two things he did not advocate. The regret which was in the life of Mr. Calhoun is not as my eminent friend from South Carolina now recalls and describes. It was because in a tempting moment he became an advocate of Henry Clay's tariff of 8 percent proposal, with gradual increase. It was in his advocacy of Henry Clay and that which Mr. Clay subsequently claimed that he stood for in union of States and central power controlling the United States. It was that which embarrassed Mr. Calhoun, for which, as the eminent Senator from South Carolina well says, there were days of regret, but it was regret because of the position he took which justified Mr. Clay in his Presidential campaign in charging him both with motives and objects that were foreign to his purpose. His purpose was the legitimate protection of American industry and not the advocacy of the candidacy or principles of Mr. Clay. There is where the distinction as to politics and theory lies.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I now speak of another equally distinguished statesman, probably the premier of all America's orators—whose voice boomed like a golden bell hung in the canopy of the sky—Daniel Webster. He began as a Representative from Massachusetts as a freetrader.

A Senator near me, the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], suggests he was from New Hampshire. The Senator is correct. Webster was once a Representative from New Hampshire, and originally was a freetrader.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arizona yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. ASHURST. Of course I yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. FESS. Daniel Webster was born in New Hampshire, but he moved to Boston and represented a district in Massachusetts in the Congress.

Mr. ASHURST. I am not going to quarrel with or be drawn into any controversy with the learned Senator from Ohio as to whether or not Daniel Webster served in Congress from New Hampshire, but I will be presumptuous enough to say that he was once a Representative from New Hampshire. I beg the Senator's pardon for disagreeing with him, but I am quite sure of my statement. Anyway, whether Daniel Webster was once a Representative from New Hampshire or not, he was once a freetrader.

The logic of events addressed themselves to the intellect and conscience of Daniel Webster; he became a high-tariff man and spent some unpleasant moments later remembering that he had been a freetrader.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD and Mr. COSTIGAN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arizona yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield first to the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I have in my office a letter written in 1828 by Mr. Lawrence, of Massachusetts, to Daniel Webster, who was then a Senator. The letter was addressed to Mr. Webster and had reference to the then pending tariff bill which had just been reported to the Senate by the Finance Committee. Mr. Lawrence expressed approval of that tariff bill of 1828 and said if it could be passed by the Congress in the form in which it had been reported by the Finance Committee, he could assure Mr. Webster that the West and the South would be mortgaged to New England for the next 100 years.

Mr. ASHURST. I thank the Senator.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arizona yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield.

Mr. COSTIGAN. While Daniel Webster adjusted himself to the growing protectionist sentiment of Massachusetts, in his later life it has always been the contention of historians that he never turned his back upon his original argument in favor of freer commerce. My trouble with the argument of the distinguished Senator from Arizona is that I fear he has left out of his proposed amendment what would appear to be implicit in his argument, namely, a provision that those who interfere with his embargo shall be subjected to an inquisition, drawn, quartered, and finally thrown to the sharks. [Laughter.]

Mr. ASHURST. The able Senator from Colorado always speaks to the point and with great pungency, but those who will be thrown to the sharks will be those industries that have to compete with the cheap labor and cheap methods of foreign countries that do not have our standards of living.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Arizona yield at that point?

Mr. ASHURST. Very well.

Mr. FESS. I want to correct an error into which I fell. I was not aware that Webster had ever been elected a Representative from New Hampshire. I find that he was elected for two terms and then moved to Massachusetts and was elected from Massachusetts to the Senate.

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator is frank and manly. It is additional evidence that even Homer sometimes nods! I have learned, as a Senator once said to me, that even I do not know it all. [Laughter.]

James Madison was a good Democrat in his day. No one questions his democracy. He piloted through the House our first tariff bill. Madison was denied a seat in the Senate. Virginia, for good reasons of her own, sent two other renowned men to the Senate and did not send James Madison, but Madison secured a seat in the House and, in the Congress which assembled in 1789, he piloted, I repeat, the first tariff bill through the House. Madison was 8 years Secretary of State under Jefferson, 8 years President of the United States. Let me read the preamble of that bill:

> Whereas it is necessary for the support of the Government, for the discharge of the debts of the United States, and for the encouragement and protection of manufacturers that duties be laid on goods, wares, and merchandise imported: Therefore be it enacted—

And so forth. Mr. President, I conclude by inquiring how will the shingle mills of Oregon, how will the shingle mills of Washington survive against the lumber of Russia? How will the manganese producers of America survive against the manganese produced by the forced, conscript labor of Russia? How will the copper industry survive against the importations of foreign copper produced by labor which is paid 40 cents a day, and where the ores are, in some cases, four times as rich as some of our own ores?

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, will the Sentor yield?

Mr. ASHURST. Yes.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. The only question is whether or not the American people and this Government are willing that the steel manufacturers shall have an extra cost of 14 cents a ton on steel by reason of using American manganese.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I apologize for consuming so much time. I ask that the language be restored, and that the committee amendment be rejected.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arizona yield to the Senator from West Virginia?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield to the able Senator.

Mr. HATFIELD. Does the Senator remember the title that was given to the first tariff bill by James Madison?

Mr. ASHURST. Yes; I read it just a few moments ago when the Senator was not in the Chamber.

Mr. HATFIELD. Does the Senator remember the observations made by the then President, George Washington?

Mr. ASHURST. I do not for the moment recall them.

Mr. HATFIELD. May I read them to the Senator?

Mr. ASHURST. I shall be glad to have the Senator do so.

Mr. HATFIELD. This protective tariff worked so well that President Washington, in a subsequent message, said:

> Agriculture, commerce, and manufacturer prosper beyond example. Every part of the Union displays indications of rapid and varied development, and with burdens so light as scarcely to be perceived. It is not too much to say that our country presents a spectacle of national happiness never surpassed.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, in conclusion, surely the American citizen has a right to his own market, and that is all I am asking by restoration of the language, viz, that the American citizen shall have the benefit of his own market and shall have the preference instead of the foreigner.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arizona move to reconsider the vote by which the committee amendment was agreed to?

Mr. ASHURST. I ask unanimous consent to that end. I ask that the vote by which the amendment was agreed to may be reconsidered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona asks unanimous consent that the vote by which the amendment on page 28, beginning in line 11, was agreed to may be reconsidered.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I think in fairness to the Senator the vote ought to be reconsidered, but I think after its reconsideration the action of the committee should be upheld by the Senate. The only reason why the Senate committee took action in striking out the language was because of the law that has already been enacted and too, at the insistence of the Secretary of War who stated in a letter to me that the adoption of the language would slow up a speedy starting of the program.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, has the Senator the letter?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes; and I ask unanimous consent that the letter and a letter from the Secretary of State may be inserted in the RECORD. I hope the action of the Senate committee will be upheld by the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the letters referred to by the Senator from Mississippi will be inserted in the RECORD.

The letters are as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 29, 1933.

The Honorable PAT HARRISON,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR HARRISON: I wish to call to your attention section 205 (b) of the Industrial Recovery Act introduced in the Senate May 27, which reads as follows:

"No articles, materials, or supplies shall be acquired for public use or for use upon or in State, municipal, or private projects financed in whole or in part by Federal funds, under this or other acts of Congress, unless such articles, materials, or supplies have been manufactured in the United States of articles, materials, or supplies mined or produced in the United States, if available at a reasonable cost."

On May 12 this Government joined seven other governments represented in the Organizing Committee for the Monetary and Economic Conference in an agreement not to adopt any new initiatives which might increase the many varieties of difficulties now arresting international commerce. This provision in the Industrial Recovery Act would appear to be a new initiative substantially adding to the difficulties now arresting international commerce. Similar provisions in State legislation have recently been given great publicity in the Paris press and this enactment could hardly fail to produce a strong reaction detrimental to our efforts to obtain the removal of trade barriers.

I doubt that this limitation on the sound discretion of administrative officials serves any useful purpose. In some cases it would probably prove detrimental to the best administration of projects financed by Federal funds. The important thing, however, is that the enactment of a mandatory provision of this kind at this juncture would be a highly inflammatory gesture from an international point of view. This is not an appropriate time for substantial cancelation of our free list by indirect protectionism.

Sincerely yours,

CORDELL HULL.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, May 29, 1933.

Hon. PAT HARRISON,
Chairman Senate Finance Committee,
United States Senate.

DEAR SENATOR HARRISON: It has been brought to the attention of the War Department that there has been incorporated in H.R. 5755, which is a bill to encourage national industrial recovery, etc., section 205 (b), on page 19, lines 11 to 18, inclusive, which is as follows:

"(b) No articles, materials, or supplies shall be acquired for public use or for use upon or in State, municipal, or private projects financed in whole or in part by Federal funds, under this or other acts of Congress, unless such articles, materials, or supplies have been manufactured in the United States of articles, materials, or supplies mined or produced in the United States, if available at a reasonable cost."

Title III of Public 428, Seventy-second Congress, approved March 3, 1933, contains a provision requiring the use of domestic materials in Government purchases and public works, with certain exceptions and limitations. For your convenience, section 2 of this title relating to the procurement of supplies is quoted:

"SEC. 2. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, and unless the head of the Department or independent establishment concerned shall determine it to be inconsistent with the public interest, or the cost to be unreasonable, only such unmanufactured articles, materials, and supplies as have been mined or produced in the United States, and only such manufactured articles, materials, and supplies as have been manufactured in the United States substantially all from articles, materials, or supplies mined, produced, or manufactured, as the case may be, in the United States, shall be acquired for public use. This section shall not apply with respect to articles, materials, or supplies for use outside the United States, or if articles, materials, or supplies of the class or kind to be used or the articles, materials, or supplies from which they are manufactured are not mined, produced, or manufactured, as the case may be, in the United States in sufficient and reasonably available commercial quantities and of a satisfactory quality."

Section 3 of this title provides that a similar provision shall be contained in every contract for the construction, alteration, or repair of any public building or public work in the United States.

It will be noted that the proposed section in the National Industrial Recovery Act differs from title III of Public 428 in the following particulars:

(1) It does not provide that the head of department or independent establishment concerned may determine such purchase to be inconsistent with the public interest.

(2) While the proposed act includes the words "if available at a reasonable cost", it does not provide for the determination of that fact by the head of the department or independent establishment nor does it provide who shall determine that question.

(3) The proposed act limits the purchases to manufactured articles only while the act of March 3, 1933, covers not only articles manufactured in the United States but also such unmanufactured articles, materials, and supplies as have been mined or produced in the United States.

(4) The proposed act does not provide that if articles, materials, or supplies of the class or kind to be used, or articles, materials, or supplies from which they are manufactured are not mined, produced, or manufactured, as the case may be, in the United States in sufficient and reasonably available commercial quantities and of a satisfactory quality that articles of foreign origin may then be procured.

In other words, the proposed section would change completely the provisions of title III of the act of March 3, 1933, which has been in effect in all Government establishments since that date.

The proposed section in H.R. 5755 would be very difficult, if not entirely impracticable, of administration. This statement is based upon the efforts now being made to carry out the more liberal provisions of title III of the act of March 3, 1933. Manufactured articles are complex in their nature, and the task of determining in each purchase the origin of all the components that may enter into an article will present great difficulties to the purchasing agencies and also to the commercial concerns who are attempting to transact business with the Federal departments. Ordinarily, merchants do not know the genealogy of the goods being sold by them. Even manufacturers must go back through one or more steps in the chain of supply to determine the real origin of the materials entering into the product produced by themselves.

In consequence, the proposed section, if enacted into law, will seriously impede the execution of all projects in which any Federal funds are involved. It is believed that the purpose of the industrial-recovery bill is to speed national economic improvement.

It is undisputed that in all construction projects there must be used a certain amount of foreign materials. This is inescapable because certain essential materials are not produced in the United States at all; or, if so, the domestic production is limited in quantity. For example, rubber, platinum, chromium, jute, tin, asbestos, mercury, tungsten, etc., must be used. It is true that the quantities involved may be small, but the proposed restriction makes no exceptions and rests the determination solely upon the question of cost. This can only be determined by inviting bids and comparing those submitted. Therefore, if the agencies of the Government must withold action upon every purchase until a determination can be made whether any bidder expects to use foreign materials, interminable investigations, delays, and disputes will result.

In short, the opinion of the War Department is that the proposed section of H.R. 5755, quoted above, would tend to defeat the purpose of the act.

A further difficulty that is anticipated in the administration of such a provision is the question as to who will determine the only qualifying condition, namely, "if available at a reasonable cost." The existing law provides that agencies of the executive departments are authorized to make determinations of questions that arise under the law. It is the view of the War Department that this duty should be reposed in the head of the department or independent establishment concerned in the transaction who is charged with and is responsible for the results. Otherwise the business of the Government will suffer because of delays in the possible reference to one official of the multitudinous cases that will arise under such a law. It is believed that the heads of the departments and establishments of the Government may be safely trusted to safeguard the interest of American business whenever the law gives them the necessary authority to do so.

Inasmuch as the various Government departments and establishments are now operating under title III of the act of March 3, 1933, and the intent of the proposed act is apparently to extend the restriction of such purchases to articles, materials, or supplies purchased for use upon or in State, municipal, or private projects financed in whole or in part by Federal funds, it is suggested that if such is the purpose of this section the expeditious and simple method of so doing would be to provide expressly that the pertinent provisions of title III of the act of March 3, 1933, shall extend and apply to all cases contemplated by the section here under consideration.

The War Department in submitting this letter desires only to bring the foregoing matters to the attention of Congress in order that these aspects of this law may be considered before final enactment.

Sincerely yours,

GEO. H. DERN, Secretary of War.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arizona that the vote by which the committee amendment was adopted shall be reconsidered? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, the Senate has been so patient and kind that I am not going to offend by speaking any longer more than to say that in my judgment the present law is not efficacious. Unfortunately the department takes refuge behind the language of the present law, wherein it is provided "if it would unreasonably increase the cost." By their mere ipse dixit they say it would increase the cost and hence they buy foreign materials. I ask that the language be restored and that the committee amendment be rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment of the committee.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 28 the committee proposes to strike out lines 11 to 18, both inclusive, as follows:

(b) No articles, materials, or supplies shall be acquired for public use or for use upon or in State, municipal, or private projects financed in whole or in part by Federal funds, under this or other acts of Congress, unless such articles, materials, or supplies have been manufactured in the United States of articles, materials, or supplies mined or produced in the United States, if available at a reasonable cost.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment.

Mr. ASHURST. On that I respectfully ask the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, that forces me to do that which I very much regret to do. I am forced to speak at enormous length if I am not to have the yeas and nays.

Mr. HARRISON. I understood the yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No; the Chair announced there was not a sufficient number seconding the demand.

Mr. HARRISON. I ask unanimous consent that the count be taken again on the demand for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is the demand for the yeas and nays seconded?

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. LONG. Are we voting "yea" to retain the language?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the committee amendment which strikes out the language on page 28 beginning in line 11. Those favoring striking it out will vote "yea" and those favoring its retention will vote "nay." The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, there seems to be confusion in the Senate as to just what the yeas and nays signify.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will restate the question.

The question is on the adoption of the committee amendment on page 28, striking out the language contained in the bill. Those in favor of striking it out will vote "yea." Those opposed will vote "nay."

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana (when his name was called). In the absence of the junior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STEPHENS], with whom I have a general pair, and not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I desire the attention of the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. HEBERT] to ask if my eminent friend desires to read out the list of missing fellow seamen from the second cabin. [Laughter.]

Mr. HEBERT. Mr. President, I am informed that we have no announcements to make regarding pairs this morning. I desire to announce, however, that the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS] is detained from the Senate on official business.

Mr. LEWIS. I announce the absence of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. THOMPSON], who is engaged at the White House on official business.

Mr. FESS. I desire to announce that the senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. MCNARY] is unavoidably detained from the Senate. Were he present he would vote "yea."

Mr. KENDRICK. I wish to announce the absence on official business of the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. DUFFY], the Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER], and the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STEPHENS].

The result was announced—yeas 48, nays 35, as follows:

YEAS—48

Bailey	Copeland	Kean	Pope
Bankhead	Costigan	Keyes	Reed
Barkley	Cutting	King	Robinson, Ark.
Black	Dieterich	La Follette	Sheppard
Bratton	Dill	Lewis	Smith
Bulkley	Fess	Logan	Thomas, Okla.
Bulow	George	Lonergan	Thomas, Utah
Byrnes	Goldsborough	McAdoo	Townsend
Carey	Gore	McKellar	Tydings
Clark	Hale	Metcalf	Wagner
Connally	Harrison	Murphy	Walcott
Coolidge	Hebert	Norris	Walsh

NAYS—35

Adams	Caraway	Long	Schall
Ashurst	Dale	McCarran	Shipstead
Austin	Davis	McGill	Steiwer
Bachman	Dickinson	Neely	Trammell
Barbour	Erickson	Nye	Vandenberg
Bone	Frazier	Overton	Van Nuys
Borah	Hatfield	Patterson	Wheeler
Brown	Johnson	Reynolds	White
Capper	Kendrick	Russell

NOT VOTING—13

Byrd	Glass	McNary	Robinson, Ind.
Couzens	Hastings	Norbeck	Stephens
Duffy	Hayden	Pittman	Thompson
Fletcher

So the amendment of the committee was agreed to.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, last night, when the Senate adjourned, there was a road amendment pending. I should like to have us return to that matter, if the amendment may be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senate will return to the consideration of the amendment referred to by the Senator from Mississippi, which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 23, line 16, after the word "States", it is proposed to strike out the comma and the words "three fourths."

Mr. AUSTIN obtained the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Let the Chair state the question.

The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment on page 23, line 16, to strike out the words "three fourths."

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I desire to say just a few words in support of the committee amendment.

For the purpose of the RECORD of the Senate on this subject, I should like to call attention to page 4365 of the RECORD of the House, which contains a table of States and columns representing the effect of the change in the allocation of these funds which would have occurred had the bill remained without the amendment proposed by the committee.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator state again the page to which he refers?

Mr. AUSTIN. Page 4365 of the RECORD.

Mr. WALSH. I thank the Senator.

Mr. AUSTIN. From that table it is perfectly apparent that the distribution of assistance which is intended by this great measure will be largely curtailed if we do not assent to the committee amendment. Some 30 States of the Union will have their allotments reduced materially if we do not adopt the committee amendment, and 16 or 17 States of the Union will have their allotments greatly increased if we do not adopt the committee amendment.

What does this mean in terms of relief?—for this is principally a relief measure.

Of course, it needs no argument whatever to have everyone admit that in terms of development, in terms of highway construction, the committee amendment would achieve the objective of broadly spreading the development all over the country, and making not only a more equitable allocation of the development but a much better allocation of it from the point of view of the general welfare. This, however, is a relief measure; and let us consider where we are at this moment with relief before we pass upon this amendment.

The Wagner-La Follette-Costigan bill, carrying the huge sum of $500,000,000 for relief to be expressed in gifts or grants to the several States, contains this provision—and I refer to section 4—as follows:

Out of the funds of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation made available by this act the Administrator is authorized to make grants to the several States—

I omit the balance of the paragraph in order to have brought forward prominently the ratio of participation of the several States in this fund.

I read from subsection (b) of section 4, as follows:

Of the amounts made available by this act, not to exceed $250,000,000 shall be granted to the several States applying therefor, in the following manner: Each State shall be entitled to receive grants equal to one third of the amount expended by such State, including the civil subdivisions thereof, out of public moneys from all sources for the purposes set forth in subsection (a).

Mr. President, I shall conclude shortly, but I wish to have in the RECORD these facts. The effect of that law is to make the rich State richer and the poor State poorer. Let us consider the case of a State like Vermont. It finds itself in this situation under that law, that it cannot participate on anywhere near an equitable or reasonable basis with the great States of this Nation, because it has practically nothing as a foundation for drawing funds from this huge sum of $500,000,000 today. Those great States are able to employ, as a measure of the amount of money they can draw out of that $500,000,000, all of that sum which they obtained from the Federal Government and expended in ways of relief heretofore. But a State like the State of Vermont, which did not ask for and did not receive one single cent from the Federal Government to aid it in supporting its poor, unfortunate people, has not any such measure.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, the allocation to which the Senator refers applies to only $250,000,000. In the case of the Senator's State, they will still get whatever additional sum is needed, of which the community itself cannot carry the burden, out of the second $250,000,000, because the allocation of that is purely upon need. I do not think the Senator intends to be inaccurate, but the allocation to which he refers applies only to one half.

Mr. AUSTIN. I have read the language of the measure, and there can be no confusion whatever about it. The Senator from Vermont is talking about that $250,000,000, and that measure which the law lays down for it, and that is one half of the total, $500,000,000. I am referring to it for this purpose, namely, to show that if we carry on in the same manner, with the amendment pending now in the Senate, we are still further crowding the small States right off into a corner and bringing forward the great States, with their large centers of population, which have reached into the Treasury and which will now reach in again, to the great disadvantage of the small States, if we do not adopt the committee amendment.

Mr. President, it should be remembered that in a rural State like the State of Vermont this contribution to highway construction is practically the only way in which the Federal Government can aid the State in relief of unemployment. Therefore we say that this amendment of the committee should be adopted in the interest of a broad, fair distribution of this relief over the entire country, reaching out into the rural communities, and attracting out into rural life people who seek employment and who are now in congested areas. The whole theory of relief would be benefited by adopting the committee amendment. I therefore hope that it will prevail.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Vermont what proposition is before the Senate at this time which opposes the committee amendment?

Mr. AUSTIN. At the time of considering the committee amendment yesterday, a debate started favoring the rejection of the committee amendment. Thereupon a request was made by the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED] that that matter be postponed until later because of its controversial character. It has now come up again for consideration, and I have made such statements as I have made in this matter because I hope the committee amendment will prevail.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I feel almost ashamed to rise in my place to speak against the committee amendment. I have been much impressed by what the Senator from Vermont has said. I know how sincere he is, and it is distressing to me to appear to be in the position of opposing him, particularly to urge something for a rich State like mine.

The figures to which our attention has been called by the Senator from Vermont, found on page 4365 of the RECORD, appear to indicate that, if the committee amendment were defeated, my State would profit to the extent of $5,200,000. With apparent selfishness I must point out why, from my standpoint, we should defeat the committee amendment, in spite of the eloquent appeal of the Senator from Vermont.

It so happens that the States enumerated in this table which would profit by the defeat of the amendment are the industrial States. Who can question but that unemployment and human distress are greater in the industrial States than elsewhere?

Mr. HAYDEN. I question that very, very seriously. I think that the distress in the industrial sections, such as in the centers of population, where there are great newspapers and other avenues of publicity, has been more exploited than elsewhere in the country. I think, in all sincerity, that in small communities, in backward places, where the distress of the people is not generally widely known, there is just as much misery and just as much human suffering, in proportion, as in the industrial centers.

Mr. COPELAND. What my friend from Arizona has said makes it all the more difficult for me. My ears, unfortunately, are so attuned that I can hear a baby's cry, no matter in what State or in what country that baby lives. I suffer myself because of the misery of which I hear.

There is no misery anywhere like the misery in the cities. I was born on a farm and brought up in the country. Perhaps on that account the human suffering in the great, teeming centers makes more appeal to me, because it is so shocking to my sensibilities and to my traditions. But I have often said that when the people in New York suffer it is not like the suffering on a farm, where there are vegetables to be had. If the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. NORBECK] were here, I would not dare trot out the old rooster any more! I have said that one can go out and get an old rooster and parboil him and have something to eat; but with us, when there is hunger, there is nothing to eat but the sidewalks of New York.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, in normal times, of course, I would not think of even citing this comparison, but during this emergency I think we ought to consider somewhat the respective contributions toward the unemployed. I would like to read right here, while the Senator is discussing that question, some figures as to that.

In the State of Arizona the amount per capita received in the distribution of this $400,000,000 is $13.47. In New York it is $1.60. The amount per unemployed worker in the State of Arizona, in the distribution of the $400,000,000 under the Highway Act, would be $123, and in New York it would be $10. If we adopted the House provision Arizona would receive $100 per unemployed worker and New York would receive $12. I wanted to show this extreme disparity, which I do not think ought to exist during this emergency period.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I thank my colleague for his contribution.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I think there is another factor which we are entitled to emphasize under existing circumstances. It is to be remembered that a substantial portion of the revenue is to come from a gasoline tax, and such taxes come in overwhelming degree from the larger States, which are now struggling with their own problems, and have an existing difficulty to find revenues within themselves with which to meet their own problems.

For example, if the Senator will permit me, if the gasoline tax which is included in this particular bill were to be continued for 15 years, which is the amortizing period to pay the entire cost of the particular road projects which we are discussing, the following would be the net result of the arithmetic.

The State of New York would pay $111,000,000 in return for $20,000,000 of road rewards, whereas the State of Arizona—and I cite that only because the Senator from Arizona has invited the parallel—would receive $5,800,000 in return for only $4,000,000 during the entire period. Which is to say, that the State of Arizona would make an actual cash profit, in respect to this transaction, whereas States like New York, Michigan, and Ohio would suffer a stupendous net loss, no matter what methods were used for the allocation.

I think that in normal times we are not entitled to make that plea, and I would not think of making it in normal times, but at a time when the larger States are having all in the world they can do to make both ends meet, I submit we are entitled to consider that factor.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I thank the Senator. I am sorry, if I may be permitted to say it again, that we have to talk of things which are sordid. But in my city we are paying for poor relief, a direct gift by the city, seven and a half million dollars per month. We are paying in New York City for the care of a million families about $90,000,000.

This is a serious thing, let me say, and, while the amount involved in the amendment, so far as my State is concerned, is small compared to our needs, yet, after all, the additional $5,000,000 to our receipts would mean much in promoting human relief and the preservation of self-respect.

It is not good for people to have to be given money; it is not good for people to be on the dole. Every American citizen is entitled to work at a decent wage. The good thing about road work, as I see it, is that about 90 cents out of every dollar is used to pay for labor.

I must not detain the Senate. I wish that my State, generous as it is, might be free from the need of any appeal whatever, and that I might be authorized by my State to say, "We will foot the whole bill." But we have the same troubles in the great State of New York that people have in other States. New York City is looked upon as a very wealthy city. As a matter of fact, the wealth is in the hands of a comparatively few men. The poverty and the human suffering in New York are as great as anywhere on earth.

This contribution and this difference in arrangement will make a difference of $5,000,000 to my State; it will mean that for 20 or 30 days human beings there can earn money and be preserved from the indignity of taking relief from charity. So my appeal is that the Senate be generous with us.

Let me remind the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN], who is always eager to help his State and his section—and I honor him for it, and no man does his work here more intelligently or more diligently than does the Senator from Arizona—that in this bill we are providing $50,000,000 for trails and for forests, things which we cannot have in my section of the country. But if we shall be given this additional sum, and be permitted to share a little more generously in the distribution provided by the bill, it will mean relief of human suffering in a State where there is just as much human suffering as there is anywhere else in the Nation.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, I hope the committee amendment will prevail. It is designed to conform the apportionment of this fund to the system which has prevailed with respect to the Federal highway program ever since it was initiated many years ago. It was thought then to be fair and equitable and just among the several States, and I see no reason for making a distinction between this situation and those which have preceded it. Why should we depart from the basis of allotment heretofore existing? Why should we invoke a new system? Why should we disrupt the uniformity of the system that has obtained for more than 15 years?

This provision in the measure, Mr. President, is simply to expand Federal-aid highway construction. The present system has been found to be satisfactory; it has been found to be equitable among the several States, having regard for their population, for their area, and for other factors taken into consideration.

Of course, Mr. President, unusual conditions beset us on every hand; indeed, an abnormal situation surrounds us all; but why should we depart from the well-settled and well-understood system which has obtained through the years? If we disrupt that now, on the next occasion some other departure will be suggested. Mr. President, we may well adhere to the system already tried and found satisfactory.

It has been urged that some 18 States will lose under this new basis of apportionment and that about 30 States will gain. Mr. President, I hope I should be the last one in this body who would say anything intended to array one State against another or to array one group of States against another group; each one of us should refrain from doing that. The system, founded about 20 years ago, has been operated since that time upon a basis of apportionment which has worked satisfactorily; it has proven to be equitable. I cannot see why present circumstances should move the Congress to depart from that system and that plan of apportioning funds for the construction of Federal-aid highways.

The committee amendments are intended to conform the apportionment of this fund to that heretofore existing.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator from New Mexico yield to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. BRATTON. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. The Senator appreciates that, of course, I have always voted in favor of highway appropriations, to be allocated according to the present law?

Mr. BRATTON. Yes.

Mr. WAGNER. Under normal circumstances, of course, it is a very fair apportionment, but in this emergency we are not in a normal situation; we ought to consider the general unemployment situation and the places where unemployment is most intense. Under ordinary circumstances, I would not make this comparison, but I think we ought to consider it in deciding upon this amendment. On the basis of a one-fourth apportionment according to population, the State of New Mexico would get for each unemployed worker $155.13, while the State of New York, even according to the one-fourth apportionment according to population, would get but $12 per unemployed worker. So we are only seeking a very slight increase of what our apportionment would be according to law. It seems to me that the Senator ought to consider that point, and I want to arouse his generous impulses to the extent of helping our populated centers by this slight increase in aid.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator from New Mexico yield to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. BRATTON. I yield.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Of course, it is not possible to build up on the table referred to by the Senator from New York, but I venture the assertion that if it were—in other words, if a table showing the entire distribution of the $3,300,000,000 could be formulated at this time, no such discrepancy in the distribution according to the unemployed worker would be shown in that table, for this reason: Under this bill a large part of the money available under the program will no doubt be allocated to cities, counties, and States for carrying on public-works projects other than roads. Therefore they will no doubt get the major portion of that part of the program. On the other hand, the less populous communities, with fewer municipalities, fewer public works other than roads to be built, will have to rely for their unemployment relief chiefly upon the distribution of the money for road work.

Certainly no one in this body will question my interest in unemployment relief and in putting people back to work; and I think I am perfectly justified in saying that upon the basis of this bill, unless the committee amendment shall be sustained, those communities which are not able to qualify or to furnish projects other than roads will suffer great hardship. Therefore I believe the contention of the Senator from New Mexico is absolutely correct.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, I welcome the observations of the Senator from Wisconsin. No one in this body has given more earnest or prolonged consideration to the subject of unemployment relief than has the Senator from Wisconsin; indeed, few of us have devoted ourselves to that problem, even in a comparable sense, to the manner in which he has labored with it.

Let me say to my friend from New York preliminarily that I recall how he has supported the Federal-aid highway appropriation from year to year. That, Mr. President, was characteristic of the Senator from New York; but let me say to him that if every dime of the $3,300,000,000 of Federal-aid highway money provided in this measure were expended in the 30 States that will gain, and not a dime of it were expended in the 18 States that will lose, I assert with every ounce of sincerity at my command that the 18 States would still benefit more than would the 30 States which would gain if the committee amendment should prevail, because highway construction is the major benefit under this measure to the sparsely populated States of the Southwest, and the Middle West, and the Northwest. That is not true of the industrial centers. They will benefit otherwise under this bill; they will get their share, and perhaps more than their share, under the proposed legislation, and I do not begrudge them any part of it.

What I do insist upon is that we adhere to the system heretofore obtaining with respect to the allotment of Federal-aid money, because even then the 30 States that will gain under the table to which reference has been made will not share disproportionately to the 18 States which will lose. The latter States will enjoy their share, and perhaps more, under other provisions of the proposed legislation.

So let us not array one group of States against another; let us not discuss this question from a selfish standpoint. If we have our share under this provision and other States enjoy theirs and more under the other provisions, let us all cooperate in the hope that all will enjoy the fullest measure of benefit possible under the legislation as a whole.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President——

Mr. BRATTON. I yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. COPELAND. The Senator was always a just judge, and he will be a just judge to the end of his days.

Mr. BRATTON. I thank the Senator more than can be expressed in words.

Mr. COPELAND. My deep regret is that he is leaving the Senate. The Senator from New Mexico has honored this body; he has won the affections of his fellow Senators, and he has shown always by his fairness and justice and generosity how kind a man he is.

Now, let me ask the Senator, Would he be willing to compromise this matter and have one half of the sum set aside in accordance with the provisions of the Federal Highway Act and the other half in the ratio of population?

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, before answering the Senator's question, let me say that words would be empty and fruitless if I undertook to employ them to express my appreciation for his encomiums of me, and I return with compound interest the affection he has expressed. Let me say to him that I believe, if the committee amendment shall be adopted and the system heretofore existing shall continue, his State will enjoy its full share, and probably more; and I am happy in the thought that it will be so, because I know, Mr. President, that the Senator's State has suffered tremendously during the crisis through which we have been passing. The Senator from New York has told us from time to time of the distress and the suffering and sacrifice of the people of his State. We all join him in a deep feeling of keen interest in the matter. But, Mr. President, even with the committee amendment sustained by the Senate, the State of New York, so ably represented by both Senators from that State, will enjoy its full share of the benefits. I hope the amendments of the committee may prevail.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, the case in favor of the House provision is admirably stated in letters sent to members of the Finance Committee by A. W. Brandt, State highway commissioner of New York State. May I read it? It is as follows:

MAY 29, 1933.

Hon. PAT HARRISON,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR HARRISON: The House when it passed the public works bill provided that the $400,000,000 authorized under section 204 should be allocated to the States, three fourths on the basis of the Federal Highway Act and one fourth on the basis of population. This method of allocation was endorsed by a subcommittee representing the executive committee of the American Association of State Highway Officials. It was accepted by the President and included in the bill transmitted to Congress. Copies of this bill were sent to all State highway officials, and not one protest against the method of allocation has been received.

The American Association of State Highway Officials realizes that this is not in the strict sense of the word a public works bill, but is an emergency relief measure, and that more consideration than the Federal Highway Act provides should be given to the unemployed in each State.

I am attaching hereto several copies of a tabulation showing the amount per capita by States that this $400,000,000 provides as well as the amount per gainful worker and the amount per unemployed worker under the provisions of the Federal Highway Act. You will notice that the State of Massachusetts—

The writer uses the State of Massachusetts for illustration, though as a matter of fact he appears to be the State highway commissioner of New York State—

You will notice that the State of Massachusetts receives $7.69 for each unemployed worker under the provisions of the Federal Highway Act, while the State of Nevada receives $362.24 for each unemployed worker, nearly 50 times as much. Certainly there is nothing equitable in the way of relief in any such allocation as that. The fourth column of this tabulation shows the amount that each unemployed worker receives on the basis of three fourths of the money allocation under the Federal Highway Act and one fourth on the basis of population. That is by no means an equitable distribution; that is, the State of Massachusetts will only receive $10.42 per unemployed worker, while the State of Nevada receives $276.80 per unemployed worker.

As a member of the committee representing the State highway officials I urge that your committee oppose any effort to change the allocation in the bill as passed by the House. I am sure by looking over this tabulation the members of your committee will agree that the sparsely settled States are being treated more than fairly, and that if there is any just grievance it is in the States which are densely populated, where the intensity of unemployment is the greatest.

I am also attaching hereto a chart showing the intensity of unemployment in each State.

Very truly yours,

A. W. BRANDT,
For the Committee Representing American Association of State Highway Officials.

Mr. President, the table which I will annex to my remarks shows but little shifting in benefits to any State. To be sure, the sparsely settled States with large areas lose some of the allotment they receive under the Senate committee amendment, but the more populous States, where unemployment is greater, receive a small increase by virtue of the House text.

Let me present some of these figures. Alabama receives $59.63 per unemployed worker under the provision of the Senate committee amendment, while under the provision of the House text Alabama would receive $59.81. California, under the provisions of the Senate committee amendment, would receive $17.20, against $16.42 per unemployed worker under the House text; Connecticut, $14.16, as against $11.29. If I cared to take the time of the Senate to make further comparisons between the two provisions and the amount that each State would receive per unemployed person, I would be able to show a very small reduction in the large amounts allotted to the sparsely settled States and only a small increase to the populous States because of the very large number of unemployed people in those States. Certainly no harm will be done to the smaller States by retaining the House provision and rejecting the Senate committee amendment.

I ask permission to insert in the RECORD at this point the table referred to in the letter which I have just read.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

State	Apportionment of $400,000,000 on the basis of sec. 21 of the Federal Highway Act			Amount per unemployed worker; apportionment on basis of three quarters, sec. 21, Federal Highway Act, and one quarter on population
	Amount per capita	Amount per gainful worker	Amount per unemployed worker
Alabama	$3.22	$8.31	$59.63	$59.81
Arizona	13.47	35.51	123.82	100.36
Arkansas	3.78	10.49	78.61	75.92
California	2.74	6.22	16.42	17.20
Colorado	7.27	18.69	49.02	42.26
Connecticut	1.62	3.83	11.29	14.16
Delaware	8.39	20.39	107.53	91.09
Florida	3.69	9.04	27.26	26.47
Georgia	3.58	8.96	51.95	50.80
Idaho	11.28	30.95	134.58	110.66
Illinois	2.22	5.33	12.96	14.47
Indiana	3.15	8.15	26.18	26.41
Iowa	4.28	11.58	69.32	65.20
Kansas	5.79	15.68	82.26	73.29
Kentucky	2.89	8.32	38.67	39.92
Louisiana	2.77	7.13	28.71	29.98
Maine	4.46	11.53	36.37	33.92
Maryland	2.08	5.05	22.63	25.83
Massachusetts	1.35	3.15	7.69	10.42
Michigan	2.60	6.54	13.78	14.66
Minnesota	4.38	11.31	39.78	37.24
Mississippi	3.58	8.52	91.61	89.55
Missouri	3.45	8.58	31.38	30.96
Montana	15.66	38.88	119.90	96.17
Nebraska	6.16	16.73	85.60	75.53
Nevada	57.68	122.44	362.24	276.80
New Hampshire	4.30	10.38	33.17	31.17
New Jersey	1.37	3.23	8.58	11.56
New Mexico	15.48	45.85	193.26	155.13
New York	1.60	3.66	10.06	12.66
North Carolina	3.04	8.44	46.67	47.53
North Dakota	9.46	26.83	160.76	134.41
Ohio	2.25	5.72	15.09	16.79
Oklahoma	4.02	11.63	44.93	42.82
Oregon	7.00	16.29	43.27	37.56
Pennsylvania	1.82	4.72	12.65	15.15
Rhode Island	2.91	6.73	12.54	12.92
South Carolina	3.20	8.08	57.10	57.39
South Dakota	9.64	26.98	284.34	237.29
Tennessee	3.32	9.06	60.10	59.83
Texas	4.39	11.58	52.94	49.54
Utah	9.16	27.36	89.61	75.19
Vermont	5.56	14.16	51.02	45.74
Virginia	3.11	8.54	43.72	44.27
Washington	4.09	9.63	28.51	27.06
West Virginia	2.55	7.74	29.86	31.93
Wisconsin	3.39	8.83	32.95	32.63
Wyoming	22.78	55.55	203.10	159.60
Hawaii	5.43	(1)	(1)	(1)
Average	3.26	8.23	26.84	26.84

[1] Data not available.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. WALSH. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. While no one would wish in such a connection of course to make any invidious comparison, yet as a matter of truthful analogy and logic, when we find a situation which gives $362 for unemployed workers of the State of Nevada, we find a situation which at least in terms of Michigan mathematics would provide a sufficient fund to take care of all of the unemployment of the State. If we could have $362 for each unemployed worker, our entire unemployment problem would be answered without any collateral assistance whatever.

Mr. WALSH. The Federal Government would take care of everything?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Precisely. The Federal Government would take care of everything under such an allotment. Our contemplation, on the other hand, in an industrial State which is overwhelmed with a major crisis in unemployment, is that we receive but $13.78 per unemployed worker, and the net result is that the contribution, while welcome, is scarcely significant in helping us to meet the problem.

Mr. WALSH. By retaining the House text, which I fear we are not going to succeed in doing, the Senator's State would get an advance from $13.78 to $14.66 to help it handle its great unemployment problem.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. I have been impressed with the argument made by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] and the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. BRATTON] that under other provisions of the bill it may be possible for municipalities who undertake projects of a public character to receive, through the provision granting aid from the Federal Government, 30 percent of the cost of labor and materials as a benefit that the rural States or less sparsely settled States will not be in a position to obtain.

Mr. President, I make bold to say, and I fear I am alone in this position, at least publicly alone, that I personally think we have gone into the business of building highways throughout this country to too great an extent. I think in some States we have reached the stage of waste and extravagance and luxury. The magnificent boulevards that have recently been constructed, 4-lane boulevards running in different directions across several States, have cost a tremendous sum of money. To be sure, they were undertaken in the days of prosperity, but they have put a blanket of debt upon the cities and towns, that are now prostrate financially because of their inability to collect taxes to meet the expenses of their governments.

In my judgment the time has come to halt and to go carefully forward in the matter of spending money further for additional public highways. The Federal Government will soon be appropriating funds for maintenance. I concede that great benefits have resulted from building many of these highways. There was great need for highway purposes. It has been of inestimable value. But when and in what year are we going to reach the point when we have met all the necessary requirements and entered into the domain of waste and extravagance? Certainly in some Commonwealth we have reached that point, and that is not through Federal aid but through the States' large appropriations to that end.

Through private conversations I have had with Senators here it has been indicated to me that their States, if not already, are rapidly reaching the point where there is not the need for continuing the large appropriations we have been making for highway purposes. In my judgment a good deal of this money will be spent in the building of highways that it is not necessary to build and that will lay upon the Federal Government or the State government a very large burden for maintenance for many years to come. Certainly the point of building highways ought to be related to and thought out and worked out in conjunction with the cost of maintaining the highways.

Mr. President, I hope that the purpose of the bill, which is to relieve unemployment, will not be lost sight of in the vote upon the amendment and that the House provision will be retained.

WILLIE MAYES SHUEY

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, may I submit a unanimous-consent request that I hope will not involve any discussion? If it does, I shall withdraw it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator may.

Mr. GLASS. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate consider at this time a resolution (S.Res. 93), which I submitted day before yesterday and which is on the desk.

Let me make a preliminary statement of a few words.

I happened not to be present in the Senate when there was an announcement of the death of Mr. Theodore F. Shuey, who for 65 years had been a reporter of Senate debates. He came from my State, and his body is buried there. I have now submitted a resolution asking that the Senate vote his widow 1 year's salary.

It is a most extraordinary case—a man engaged for 65 years reporting the debates of the United States Senate, whose services were of inestimable value to Senators personally, and who, in the course of his service, corrected enough grammatical errors in the speeches of various Senators to justify this contribution to his widow.

I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the resolution at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Let the Chair state to the Senator from Virginia that the resolution went automatically to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, so the Senator should modify his request and move that the committee be discharged from the further consideration of the resolution.

Mr. GLASS. I modify my request in accordance with the statement of the Chair.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, the practice has been to refer these matters to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate after reference has been made to the standing committee having jurisdiction of the subject matter. Has this resolution taken the prescribed course?

Mr. GLASS. It has not, Mr. President, perhaps owing to my ignorance of the customary procedure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the Senator will permit the Chair to make a statement, the Chair is advised that these resolutions go nowhere except to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate. They do not go to any regular standing committee. This resolution is now before the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, and the Senator from Virginia has asked unanimous consent that that committee be discharged from its further consideration.

Mr. GLASS. It is a rather insignificant sum; and I may say that the successor of Mr. Shuey, I am informed, is not drawing any salary at present. The reporters are making contribution accordingly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Let the Chair state that he is advised by the authorities here that the widow of an employee of the Senate who has served over 25 years' time is customarily entitled to a year's salary.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I was about to say that I thought it probably would not be necessary to discharge the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, leaving it as if they had refused to act on the matter.

Mr. GLASS. No; I do not want to leave any such inference. Very likely I should have asked to have the resolution sent there, instead of asking to have it lie on the desk.

Mr. McNARY. I understand that the committee did not act unfavorably on the matter.

Mr. GLASS. No; they did not.

Mr. McNARY. I have no objection to the present consideration of the resolution.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. GLASS. Certainly.

Mr. COPELAND. I was away from the Senate at the time Mr. Shuey died. I am glad of this opportunity to speak of my deep affection for him. I may say to the Senator from Virginia that if this little gift to the widow is to make up for correcting the mistakes of Senators, I think I should pay the whole amount myself.

It is a notable thing that a man should serve 65 years in a legislative body or elsewhere and never miss a day. It is a very remarkable service. Because of Mr. Shuey's lovable qualities, as well as the perfection of his work, I think we may well turn aside for a moment to adopt this resolution.

I agree with the Senator from Oregon that it is fully in accord with our custom to pay a year's salary under these conditions. It has been done a number of times where employees have served a long time. I am very happy, indeed, to join in the request of the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I should like to add that I think the Senator from Virginia has expressed the sentiments of every Senator upon this floor; and I am sure every Senator envies him the honor and the privilege of taking the course he has taken to reward the dependents of a faithful public servant.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Virginia yield?

Mr. GLASS. I yield.

Mr. FESS. The Chairman of the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate has just entered the Chamber, and I think he will be glad to ask unanimous consent to have the committee discharged.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I have no objection to the discharge of the committee. In fact, I will join in asking unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution of the Senator from Virginia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate will be discharged from the further consideration of the resolution, which will be read.

The Chief Clerk read Senate Resolution 98, submitted by Mr. GLASS on the 7th instant, and it was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate hereby is authorized and directed to pay from the appropriation for expenses of inquiries and investigations, contingent fund of the Senate, fiscal year 1932, to Willie Mayes Shuey, widow of Theodore F. Shuey, late an Official Reporter of the Senate, a sum equal to 1 year's compensation at the rate he was receiving at the time of his death, said sum to be considered inclusive of funeral expenses and all other allowances.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 1580) to relieve the existing national emergency in relation to interstate railroad transportation, and to amend sections 5, 15a, and 19a of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 5240) to provide emergency relief with respect to home-mortgage indebtedness, to refinance home mortgages, to extend relief to the owners of homes occupied by them and who are unable to amortize their debt elsewhere, to amend the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, to increase the market for obligations of the United States, and for other purposes.

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5755) to encourage national industrial recovery, to foster fair competition, and to provide for the construction of certain useful public works, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment on page 23, line 16.

Several Senators called for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. McNARY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum being suggested, the clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Coolidge	Hayden	Reed
Ashurst	Copeland	Hebert	Robinson, Ark.
Austin	Costigan	Johnson	Robinson, Ind.
Bachman	Cutting	Kean	Russell
Bailey	Dale	Kendrick	Schall
Bankhead	Davis	Keyes	Sheppard
Barbour	Dickinson	King	Shipstead
Barkley	Dieterich	La Follette	Smith
Black	Dill	Logan	Steiwer
Bone	Duffy	Lonergan	Stephens
Borah	Erickson	McCarran	Thomas, Okla.
Bratton	Fess	McGill	Thomas, Utah
Brown	Fletcher	McKellar	Thompson
Bulkley	Frazier	McNary	Townsend
Bulow	George	Metcalf	Trammell
Byrd	Glass	Murphy	Tydings
Byrnes	Goldsborough	Neely	Vandenberg
Capper	Gore	Norris	Wagner
Caraway	Hale	Nye	Walcott
Carey	Harrison	Overton	Walsh
Clark	Hastings	Patterson	Wheeler
Connally	Hatfield	Pope	White

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. THOMAS of Utah in the chair). Eighty-eight Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present. The question is upon the committee amendment on page 23, line 16, upon which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, may we not vote upon the two amendments together? They relate to the same matter.

Mr. HARRISON. I ask unanimous consent that we vote on the two together.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? If not, it is so ordered. The amendments will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. The pending amendment is on page 23, line 16, to strike out the comma after the word "States" and the words "three fourths"; and the next amendment is, on line 19, after the word "supplemented", to insert "(which act is hereby further amended for the purposes of this title to include the District of Columbia)"; and then to strike out lines 21, 22, and 23 down to and including the word "census" and the comma.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the two amendments which have just been stated.

The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll.

Mr. DALE (after having voted in the affirmative). Mr. President, I have a general pair with the junior Senator from California [Mr. McADOO], and was informed that if present he would have voted as I have voted. However, there seems to be some little misunderstanding as to how the Senator from California would vote on this question, and therefore I withdraw my vote.

Mr. KENDRICK. Mr. President, I desire to announce that the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS], and the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS] are absent in attendance on a committee meeting.

I also wish to announce that the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. LONG] and the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] are absent on official business.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I wish to announce that the Senator from California [Mr. McADOO] is necessarily detained from the Senate.

The result was announced—yeas 66, nays 20, as follows:

YEAS—66

Adams	Carey	Hayden	Robinson, Ind.
Ashurst	Clark	Kendrick	Russell
Austin	Connally	Keyes	Schall
Bachman	Costigan	King	Sheppard
Bailey	Cutting	La Follette	Shipstead
Bankhead	Dickinson	Logan	Smith
Barkley	Dieterich	McCarran	Steiwer
Black	Dill	McGill	Stephens
Bone	Duffy	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Borah	Erickson	McNary	Thomas, Utah
Bratton	Fletcher	Murphy	Thompson
Brown	Frazier	Norris	Townsend
Bulow	George	Nye	Trammell
Byrd	Gore	Overton	Wheeler
Byrnes	Hale	Patterson	White
Capper	Harrison	Pope
Caraway	Hastings	Robinson, Ark.

NAYS—20

Barbour	Fess	Kean	Tydings
Bulkley	Goldsborough	Lonergan	Vandenberg
Coolidge	Hatfield	Metcalf	Wagner
Copeland	Hebert	Neely	Walcott
Davis	Johnson	Reed	Walsh

NOT VOTING—10

Couzens	Lewis	Norbeck	Reynolds
Dale	Long	Pittman	Van Nuys
Glass	McAdoo

So the committee amendments were agreed to.

Mr. DILL. Mr. President, on last evening I was on my feet to propose an amendment on page 26, line 16. I want now to ask unanimous consent to return to that amendment and to modify it so that my amendment will be to add, after the word "construction", the words "repair and improvement."

Mr. HARRISON. I do not think there is any objection to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 26, line 16, after the word "construction", to insert the words "repair and improvement."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, on the same page, in line 17, after the first comma, I move to insert the words "the Canal Zone."

Mr. HARRISON. There is no objection to that amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 26, line 17, after the word "Alaska" and the comma, to insert the words "the Canal Zone."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk, which I desire to offer.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to insert before the period and after the word "appropriations" in line 4, page 24, the following words: "and unobligated balances of previous appropriations made for Federal-aid projects destroyed or injured by storm and flood."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from Alabama is not in order at this time, because it is an amendment to the original text, and not a committee amendment.

Mr. BLACK. I understood we were taking up amendments to the original text.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate is still considering committee amendments.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, have we not finished with the committee amendments?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No. The clerk will state the next amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. The next amendment of the committee is to strike out pages 30, 31, 32, 33, and down to line 16 on page 34.

Mr. HARRISON. I ask unanimous consent that before we go to the taxation part of the bill we finish up with individual amendments to the public-construction title.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, does the Senator from Mississippi mean that when we finish with the consideration of committee amendments in title II, individual amendments may be offered before we go to the next title?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes; Senators may offer individual amendments now to title II before we go to the taxation features of the bill.

Mr. SMITH. I have some amendments which are necessary to go into the bill in order to aid the Department of Agriculture to discharge certain function, and I should like to have the Senator indicate to me when the time comes that it would be appropriate to offer them.

Mr. HARRISON. I know what the Senator has in mind, and I do not think there will be any objection to those amendments being offered after we finish with the other amendments in the bill.

Mr. SMITH. I do not want to interfere with the progress on the bill, but I want to have an opportunity to offer these amendments.

Mr. HARRISON. I understand that; but I do think it would be better if we should finish now the public-construction part of the bill, by individual amendments being offered, if the Senate committee amendments are out of the way.

Mr. REED. Of course, the taxation features are part of title II.

Mr. HARRISON. Yes.

Mr. REED. The Senator does not mean to permit individual amendments to them?

Mr. HARRISON. Not until we finish with the others.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I have sent forward an amendment which has already been read and which can be disposed of in just a moment. The chairman of the committee says he has no objection to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] has made a request for unanimous consent. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The clerk will state the amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to strike out the period on line 4, page 24, and to add the following words: "and unobligated balances of previous appropriations made for Federal-aid projects destroyed or injured by storm and flood."

Mr. HARRISON. I have no objection to that amendment going to conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I send to the desk an amendment which I desire to propose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 19, in line 13, after the word "plants"——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that the committee amendment at that point has been agreed to. Without objection, the vote whereby the committee amendment was agreed to will be reconsidered.

Mr. MCNARY. Mr. President, may we not have the amendment read before other action is taken?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 19, after the amendment heretofore agreed to, in line 3, it is proposed to insert after the word "plants" the following:

For the construction of drydocks and graving docks and accessories thereto.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I will say that this amendment is offered——

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I have no objection to this matter going to conference, I will say, unless some other Senator has objection.

Mr. FLETCHER. I hope the Senator will allow it to take that course.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the vote whereby the amendment of the committee was agreed to will be considered, and, without objection, the amendment proposed by the Senator from Florida to the amendment will be agreed to, and the amendment, as amended, will be agreed to.

Mr. MCKELLAR. Mr. President, I ask the clerk to read the amendment, which I send to the desk, to come in on page 18, line 10, after the word "buildings."

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 18, line 10, after the word "buildings" it is proposed to insert:

(including the remodeling of buildings hereby authorized to be purchased for Federal purposes).

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I think that amendment carries out the intention of the proposed act. I have no objection to it, and I shall not make objection to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. MCKELLAR. I offer a further amendment along the same lines to come in on page 21, line 22, after the word "apply."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 21 line 22, after the word "apply" and before the period, it is proposed to insert:

Except that the Postmaster General may in cases deemed in the public interest acquire sites and buildings requiring but little remodeling for postal purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. MCCARRAN. Mr. President, we could not hear the amendment over here.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will again be stated.

The amendment was again stated.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I understand the amendment includes the authority to purchase buildings as well as the sites upon which the Federal Government is to construct buildings. I have no objection to letting it go to conference, but I think it is very questionable whether that authority ought to be conferred.

Mr. MCKELLAR. I hope the Senator will let it go to conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I should like to inquire of the Senator from Tennessee or the Senator from New York while we are on this subject, is it the intention by the general description contained in section 202, on page 18, to include such projects as are referred to in the amendment offered by the Senator from Tennessee, that is, such projects as have been heretofore included in Document No. 788?

Mr. MCKELLAR. The only addition is the remodeling of such buildings. The buildings to which the Senator refers are already included in section 202.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I should like to inquire of the Senator from Tennessee or the Senator from Mississippi is there any precedent for legal authority being given to the head of any department to purchase property for the purpose of remodeling it for post-office purposes?

Mr. MCKELLAR. I do not know whether there is any precedent or not, but there is very little precedent for anything in this bill, for that matter.

Mr. WALSH. But this bill contemplates the building of post offices for the purpose of providing employment and not merely for the purpose of purchasing or owning post offices. It would make it possible to buy property everywhere where post offices already exist and for which rent is now being paid. The theory upon which this bill is founded is that people will be put to work and that materials will be purchased and that new buildings will be erected and industry benefit thereby. Now, however, it is proposed to go into the business of buying for post-office purposes second-hand business blocks. Who can possibly conceive the pressure that will be brought to bear upon department heads to sell property that has been thrown on the market to the Federal Government for post-office sites and for remodeling into post offices? It seems to me it is an extreme proposal for the Federal Government to go into the real-estate business to the extent of remodeling existing buildings.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WALSH. I yield.

Mr. REED. I should like to ask the Senator from New York whether he approves this amendment?

Mr. WAGNER. I do not. I just made a statement to that affect.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, there are some of these amendments that we can accept in order to go along, but I hope the Senator from Tennessee will not press his amendment.

Mr. MCKELLAR. Mr. President, this amendment was suggested by the Post Office Department. I am sorry to hear the Senator from Massachusetts say that it is "an outrageous proposal." I do not think it is outrageous at all. I think the attitude of the Department indicates that that is not so. I hope the Senator from Mississippi will take the amendment to conference and iron it out.

Mr. HARRISON. The first amendment has been agreed to.

Mr. MCKELLAR. Both have been agreed to, and it is just a question now of talking about them. The Senate has agreed to both of them, and the RECORD will so show. I hope the Senator will take them to conference, and if they are not right, I know the conferees will straighten them out.

Mr. HARRISON. I hope the Senator will withdraw the amendment. I will ask the ruling of the Chair. Has the amendment of the Senator from Tennessee been agreed to?

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I do not think my inquiry was answered. I should like to ask the Senators in charge of the bill the following question: Do they interpret section 202 to include within the description of projects therein mentioned in general terms such projects as are covered by Public Document No. 783 relating to the public-building program outside the District of Columbia proposed under the $415,000,000 authorization contained in acts approved May 25, 1926, February 24, 1928, March 31, 1930, and February 16, 1931? Are such projects comprehended by the general terms of section 202?

Mr. WAGNER. All projects are. This simply refers to a provision in the Emergency Relief and Construction Act of 1932 by which we made it possible to acquire sites at once so that the usual condemnation proceedings could be avoided, such proceedings sometimes covering a period of 5 or 6 months or more. In order to save that money we authorize the Government to acquire the property at once, and then have a proceeding, if that shall be desired, in condemnation to ascertain the value of the property.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, the Senator does not understand my question; probably it was so confused that it could not be understood by anyone. I am not talking about condemnation proceedings or the acquisition of property; I am talking about the provision of section 202 relating to a comprehensive program of public works; and all I want to know is whether the authors and proponents of this bill interpret that section to include such projects as are described specifically in document numbered 788 to which I have called attention.

Mr. WAGNER. Does the Senator mean whether or not money appropriated under this act may be used for the construction of the buildings to which he refers?

Mr. AUSTIN. Yes.

Mr. WAGNER. Yes; it may be.

Mr. AUSTIN. That is all I desire to know.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the last amendment of the Senator from Tennessee was adopted. I do not believe that most of the Members of the Senate heard the question put; most of us were unconscious of the fact that the amendment was being declared adopted. The amendment, in effect, proposes that with these unemployment-relief funds we shall go out and buy real estate. That may relieve a little unemployment on the part of influential persons who can persuade the Postmaster General to buy their real estate, but the mass of the people will get no benefit from it, and such an amendment has no business in this bill.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. I wonder whether I am clear about it that there is no power existing now under any statute to acquire pieces of property in that way.

Mr. REED. Only in cases where Congress has specifically legislated to authorize it; and I am very happy to learn that the Senator from New York, who has given close study to this unemployment-relief bill, is not in sympathy with the amendment.

Mr. WAGNER. On the contrary, I hope that the amendment may be withdrawn.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the vote by which this amendment was adopted may be reconsidered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the vote is reconsidered. The question now is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Tennessee.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, on page 27, I move to strike out, on line 9, beginning with subdivision (A), the words:

> To citizens of the United States who are bona-fide residents of the political subdivision and/or county in which the work is to be performed.

The reason for that amendment, Mr. President, is that the State highway commission of my State writes me, and has telegraphed me on numerous occasions, to the effect that with this provision in the bill it will work a hardship upon the commission, in that they will be unable to take people out of the congested districts and put them into the country districts. In other words, the ruling of the Department has been that they must give preference to and take all the workers from the county lists; and consequently they say that, for instance, in a city like Butte, where there is a tremendous amount of unemployment, on account of——

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. WHEELER. Yes.

Mr. WAGNER. Does the Senator propose to strike out subdivision (A)?

Mr. WHEELER. I propose simply to strike out subdivision (A).

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Montana.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Montana whether the situation he has in mind would be cared for if this provision were simply made not to apply to road construction? The Senator knows full well that upon many other types of public construction, experience in the past indicates that contractors have bid upon projects and then have imported or brought in their labor from very distant regions, and persons residing within the immediate localities have had to stand idly by while others brought perhaps 500 or 1,000 miles have been given jobs on the project.

Mr. WHEELER. Let me say to the Senator that my amendment retains the State provision; in other words, the contractors will have to give preference to citizens of the State, but not to those of the particular community. There may be some communities, for instance, some counties, in which road construction will be carried on where there will be practically no unemployment at all.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. All I was suggesting to the Senator was that he move to amend subdivision (A) by inserting an exemption insofar as highway construction and repair work are concerned.

Mr. WHEELER. Does not the Senator think if we leave clause (B) in the bill that, as a matter of fact, it will take care of the situation, because under that clause preference will have to be given to the people in the several States?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I realize that, Mr. President, but it seems to me, inasmuch as these are simply preferences and the law does not provide that the residents of the communities must be employed, if the Senator would provide an exemption insofar as highway construction and repair work is concerned with regard to subdivision (A) that the difficulty of the highway department of his State would be eliminated. At the same time, upon these projects, other kinds than road construction, preference would be given to those who reside in the localities where the project is being constructed.

Mr. WHEELER. I would not have any objection to it except that it seems to me unnecessary. I know of no particular instance where the situation applies except as to road construction. I can well imagine there could be a situation where it was desired to construct some public building in a community where the labor would not be of the quality or kind required.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. They merely give preference. If the skilled labor is not there, they, of course, bring it in. The Senator knows that right here in the District of Columbia, where a large construction program has been carried on for the last 2 or 3 years, contractors have come here and made low bids and have brought their labor from hundreds of miles distant, while residents of the District of Columbia and surrounding territory have had to go on with no employment whatsoever.

I think the objective sought to be obtained by the two subdivisions, insofar as the residents of those localities are concerned, is a worthy one. I recognize, however, that highway projects present a different problem, because a contractor may undertake the construction of a stretch of 5 or 6 or 10 miles of road, and it would be found that the particular project went from one political subdivision to another, and he would have to stop when he came to the boundary line and lay off the crew that worked up to that point and hire another crew. It seems to me to be very practical and very easy to draw an exception to the subdivision excluding it from application to highway construction.

Mr. WHEELER. Of course, that could be done, but the situation to which the Senator calls attention in the District of Columbia would still be taken care of by subsection (B), because it provides that preference in the employment of labor in connection with any such project shall be given first to ex-service men and their dependents, and so on, and subsection (B) gives preference to citizens of the United States who are bona-fide residents of the State, Territory, or District in which the work is being performed. In the District of Columbia there would not be any question about it, and no contractor would be able to go outside for labor.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I recognize that the District of Columbia would be taken care of in the situation. I simply mentioned it as an example. We might have the same situation in a large State, where a highway might be built in one part of the State and the contractor who got the contract would bring the labor from a distant point in the State, and those who live in the community where the project is being constructed would be denied an opportunity to get any work. I am wondering if an exception would not meet the Senator's objective so far as highway work is concerned.

Mr. WHEELER. It would meet my objective, so far as I am concerned, if we simply left it to the discretion of the highway commissioner with reference to road work or if we incorporated a proviso that "nothing in this subsection shall apply to highway construction" or something to that effect.

In line with the suggestion of the Senator from Wisconsin I withdraw my former amendment to strike out subsection (A), and instead thereof I move to insert, in line 10, after the word "perform", the words "provided this preference shall not apply in case of highway construction."

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I gave notice on yesterday or the day before that I would offer an amendment on page 34, section 210, paragraph (A), beginning in line 18.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, we have not yet reached that point.

Mr. GORE. I thought we had reached that title. I withhold the amendment for the time being then.

Mr. METCALF. Mr. President, during my short absence from the Chamber today an amendment was considered on page 27, line 18, in which I am very much interested. I ask unanimous consent that we may reconsider the vote by which the amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Rhode Island?

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator if it would provoke much discussion?

Mr. METCALF. The Senator knows I never talk long.

Mr. HARRISON. I understand; but the Senator might inspire others to talk. We had quite a discussion on that matter this morning. We have almost reached the point in the bill where we are to take up the tax question. There ought not to be a great deal of discussion on that matter. It seems that if we can pass the bill this afternoon the conferees can go into session on it tonight and there is a very strong probability of our adjourning tomorrow; but if we prolong discussion and stay here indefinitely, there is no hope of doing that.

Mr. METCALF. I promise not to talk an hour.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, let me suggest to the Senator from Mississippi that the matter was brought up immediately following the quorum call this morning when the Senator from Rhode Island was detained on public business. When he reached the Chamber, action had been taken. I think it is but fair to him that he should have the privilege of having the vote reconsidered.

Mr. HARRISON. As I said, I am not going to raise any objection, but I do hope that prolonged discussion will not be had again on the matter.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Rhode Island to reconsider the vote by which the amendment on page 27, line 18, was rejected? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment on page 27, line 18.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment; on page 26, after line 17, to insert a new subsection. The amendment is on the table, and I offer it at this time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Senator from Nevada proposes, on page 26, after line 17, to insert a new subsection (c), as follows:

(c) The President is authorized to allocate not to exceed $20,000,000 of the amount made available by this act for the maintenance of existing scientific and research activities and experimental farms maintained by the Government on or in Federal reclamation projects.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, does the Senator expect to discuss this at length?

Mr. McCARRAN. I had expected to discuss it at length.

Mr. HARRISON. I have no personal objection to letting it go to conference, if the Senator desires.

Mr. McCARRAN. Very well.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I propose an amendment; on page 22, in line 11, after the words "cost of", to insert the words "surveys, plans, and", so it will read:

The amount apportioned to any State under this paragraph may be used to pay all or any part of the cost of surveys, plans, and of highway construction—

And so forth. It merely broadens slightly the authorization.

Mr. HARRISON. I have no objection to the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I desire to offer another amendment. On page 18, line 16, after the words "flood control", insert "and rehabilitation of works previously completed by political subdivisions of the several States." This would enable the administrator to use a portion of the fund for rehabilitating public works, such as drainage ditches and canals.

Mr. HARRISON. I have no objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. In connection with the amendment just adopted, I ask that there may be inserted in the RECORD a letter fully explaining the purpose of the provision.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The letter is as follows:

THE LITTLE RIVER DRAINAGE DISTRICT,
Cape Girardeau, Mo., June 1, 1933.

Senator JOSEPH T. ROBINSON,
Senate Building, Washington, D.C.

DEAR SIR: I have just read H.R. 5755, referred to as the National Industrial Recovery Act, sometimes spoken of by the press as the public works bill.

I doubt whether this bill, as drawn, is sufficiently broad to permit drainage districts to qualify under the bill. We have this thought in mind.

The ditches or canals of practically every drainage district in the Mississippi Valley have grown up with willows, flags, cattail, moss, and other vegetable growth that has reduced the efficiency of the ditches very materially.

This condition has come about by reason of the inability of the farmers owning lands in the district to pay their taxes. The district, having no other source of revenue than money collected from taxation for maintenance purposes, has been without funds to do this badly needed maintenance work.

The drainage districts are political subdivisions of the State, exercising only prescribed governmental functions. They are in no sense private corporations, as has been announced by both the Supreme Court of the United States and the Supreme Court of Missouri (Houck v. L.R.D.D. (239 U.S. 254, l. c. 261), State ex rel. Caldwell v. L.R.D.D. (291 Mo. 72, l. c. 78–9), and L.R.D.D. v. R.R.

(236 Mo. 94, l. c. 111–12)). I merely give you three of a long list of Missouri cases so holding.

Being political subdivisions of the State, "as much so as the city of Hannibal", to use the exact words of our supreme court, it is desired that if a public-works program is to be instituted that they be permitted to qualify under the terms of the act to the end that they may rehabilitate and restore to their former state of efficiency the ditches that have deteriorated during the period of extreme depression in agricultural products.

Furthermore, the act carries with it a 30-percent grant from the Federal Government to the municipalities qualifying under the act; and it is, of course, highly desirable that if this clause remains in the act that the drainage districts be enabled to secure the benefit of the grant and thereby lessen the burden of taxation on the lands in the district. The ditches in these districts are completed projects but have depreciated to such an extent that the efficiency of the ditches has been reduced in many instances as much as 66⅔ percent or more.

Bonds were issued to construct these ditches and the annual installment of the taxes for the retirement of these bonds must be paid. Since the efficiency of the ditches is so greatly reduced they fail to drain the land, and consequently the farmer is unable to grow his crops and he is unable to pay his tax and hold his property, because the land becomes water-logged because of the inability of the ditches to carry the water away.

Perhaps under a broad construction of the act it is sufficient. From the press reports I gather it is not stylish to introduce amendments to a bill after it comes out of the committee.

If it be possible to secure a committee amendment so as to take away all uncertainty about drainage districts qualifying under the act, it will be a great saving to the taxpayer in these districts.

I suggest for your consideration addition of the following words immediately following the words "flood control", in line 22, page 12 of H.R. 5755, to wit:

"and rehabilitation of works previously completed by political subdivisions of the several States."

I call your attention to the use of the word "political subdivision", in lines 5 and 6, page 20, of section 205 of the act, wherein it specifies the residence of the labor to be used in carrying out the terms of the act.

I am calling this matter to the attention of Senator CLARK, of Missouri, and Congressman CLYDE WILLIAMS, of Missouri, and Congressman W. J. DRIVER, of Arkansas, all of whom have large areas incorporated in drainage districts in their respective States that are in exactly the same situation as hereinabove detailed, and the landowners of which will be greatly benefited if the suggestions herein brought to your attention can be incorporated in the act.

I shall be pleased to hear from you at your convenience.

Very respectfully,

OLIVER & OLIVER, General Attorneys.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Mississippi if someone proposed an amendment relating to educational institutions?

Mr. HARRISON. Such an amendment was considered in committee, and there was an amendment offered on the floor yesterday, but it was voted down, as I recall.

Mr. COPELAND. May I ask what Senator introduced the amendment?

Mr. HARRISON. I believe it was the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], but I am not sure about it.

Mr. COPELAND. The recollection of the Senator is that the matter was presented?

Mr. HARRISON. It was presented and the amendment was voted down in the committee.

Mr. COPELAND. It was presented to the committee?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes; and on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. COPELAND. So that in the opinion of the Senator it would be useless to offer another amendment on that subject, because the decision would be certain to be adverse?

Mr. HARRISON. I believe so.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I have an amendment which I desire to offer.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 19, line 3, after the word "plants" and the semicolon in the committee amendment, in section 202, it is proposed to insert:

finance and/or aid in the construction of exhibition parks and gardens and accessories which are self-liquidating in character.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I offer this amendment on behalf of my colleague [Mr. FLETCHER], he having proposed it before the committee. He is unable to be here at this time.

Of course, I am very much in favor of the amendment. It authorizes loans for exhibition parks and the development of gardens, something like the famous magnolia gardens south of Charleston, S.C. Of course, I should like very much, as my colleague would, to have this added to the list of self-liquidating projects for which loans could be made.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Florida.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, I desire to address myself to section 204, paragraph (1).

A few days ago I made personal inquiry of the Chairman of the Finance Committee regarding the question of the privilege of constructing bridges. Upon reading the section, though he has insisted that bridges are included, I find that the only mention is that of the widening of narrow bridges or the replacement of unsafe bridges. I wonder if the Senator feels that bridges themselves are included.

Mr. HARRISON. The experts, and all those connected with the drafting of the bill, think bridges are included.

Mr. NYE. Would we not be more secure if we inserted in line 11, after the word "highway", the words "and bridge"?

Mr. HARRISON. I have no objection to that.

Mr. NYE. Then I offer such an amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from North Dakota.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I desire to interrogate the Senator from Mississippi again about section 202, on page 18. That section contains a broad description of a program of public works. I desire to ask first with respect to the amendment in line 13. The words are, "construction of sewage-disposal plants." Does the Senator construe that clause to include sewers?

Mr. HARRISON. I think it would be construed to mean exactly what it says—sewage-disposal plants. I doubt whether it would be construed in any other sense.

Mr. AUSTIN. Does the Senator regard sewers as within the intent of public works?

Mr. HARRISON. If the Senator desires to offer an amendment to say "sewers and sewage-disposal plants", I shall have no objection to it.

Mr. AUSTIN. Very well. I have such an amendment printed, and it is on the desk. I call it up at this time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 18, line 13, after the word "of", it is proposed to insert "sewers and".

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the vote whereby the committee amendment was agreed to will be reconsidered. The Senator from Vermont offers an amendment to the committee amendment, which has been stated. The question is on agreeing to that amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, in the same paragraph, on the same page, line 16, I ask the Senator from Mississippi if he interprets the language "and harbor improvements and flood control" to include such projects as have already been surveyed and reported upon by the Army engineers.

Mr. HARRISON. I may say to the Senator that I think there is no question about that.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I think there is no question about that.

Mr. AUSTIN. I wanted to have the RECORD show that. At the suggestion of the Senator from Mississippi, I had a talk with those who ought to know about that, and was so informed privately; but I desire to have no question about it.

Mr. HARRISON. That was the information presented to the committee.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment to the committee amendment on page 18.

Last night, if I may have the attention of the Senator from Mississippi, there was general agreement that street-widening projects will be eligible for loans under the language of the bill; but that is so vital to the city of Detroit, it being the only real opportunity for relief at that very difficult point in the country, that I am very anxious to add, in line 13, the words "widening of streets."

Mr. HARRISON. I have no objection to that.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I offer that amendment to the committee amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 21, line 22, it is proposed to insert the following:

(d) The President, in his discretion, and under such terms as he may prescribe, may extend any of the benefits of this title to any State, county, or municipality notwithstanding any constitutional or legal restriction or limitation on the right or power of such State, county, or municipality to borrow money or incur indebtedness.

Mr. REED. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Georgia yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. RUSSELL. I do.

Mr. REED. I did not mean to discuss the proposal to abolish all constitutions that is embodied in that amendment; but I have been trying for sometime to get recognition, so that I might ask the Senator from Mississippi about the part of the bill that occurs on page 18, lines 15 and 16, where the President apparently is given power to prepare a program of public works, including the construction of river and harbor improvements.

Does the Senator from Mississippi construe that to mean that the President will be in any way bound by the river and harbor acts we have heretofore passed or by the action of the Corps of Engineers in surveying projects; or is the President given a free hand to improve any river, anywhere, in any way, or any harbor, anywhere, in any way?

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, as the Senator knows, in the committee that particular question was not put either to General Johnson or to others who framed the legislation. My own opinion is that the President would have full power in the matter without reference to the projects that had been adopted by the Board of Army Engineers, though that might have great influence with him. I imagine it would be in most cases those projects that he would adopt; but I do not think he is restricted to the adoption of just those particular projects.

Mr. REED. I think the Senate ought to understand what it is doing, then, that all of the experience of past years, all of the studies made by the engineers, are saved from scrapping only by the discretion of the President. All the precautions we have taken, all the limitations we have put on, all the study and surveys made by the Army engineers in response to our directions, go for naught if President Roosevelt, in his sole and uncontrolled discretion, chooses to ignore them.

It is just as well that we should understand that before we pass this bill.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, I think it would be most unfortunate if we did not include language to make it clear that the approved projects are the ones to be considered.

Mr. REED. So do I.

Mr. COPELAND. Because all such projects have been considered by committees of both Houses; they have been studied by the Army engineers; and, as a matter of fact, I do not see how any other river and harbor projects could be advantageously carried on, because of the lack of study. I agree fully with the Senator from Pennsylvania, however, that language should be added here which will make it clear that it is the approved projects that will be given consideration.

Mr. REED. Mr. President——

Mr. RUSSELL. I believe I have the floor.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Georgia has the floor. He has the right to yield to whom he wishes.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I do not desire to yield for a discussion on that point. I have a brief statement that I wish to make in connection with this amendment.

Mr. REED. Very well. I will speak in my own time.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, despite the remark of the Senator from Pennsylvania, this amendment does not affect the Constitution of the United States. It merely provides that every county or municipality of the Nation may be placed upon the same basis and be permitted to share the benefits of the bond issue that is proposed to be floated by this title of the pending bill.

Some of the States have constitutional limitations on the borrowing power of their municipalities and require elections to be held, at general elections, before bonds can be issued by the various municipalities and counties or before the States or their subdivisions can incur any indebtedness.

We are preparing here to borrow the sum of $3,300,000,000 for distribution under the terms of this act. This amounts in round figures to $27.50 for every man, woman, and child in the United States.

I submit to the Senate that since we are vesting in the President of the United States such wide discretion in all recent legislation, there can certainly be no valid objection to permitting him to make such loans to worthy projects, subject to such rules as he may lay down and prescribe. No municipality or county of this nature should be debarred on account of some antiquated provision of State constitution or laws that cannot be changed until the next general election in 1934.

I have in mind, in my own State, a small municipality—one of the most progressive of the smaller cities of the Nation—which owns its own power plant, which owns its own waterworks and gas system, a magnificent municipal auditorium, a school system, and properties valued at from two to three million dollars; but, on account of constitutional limitation, this city cannot issue bonds or incur any indebtedness whatever in excess of 7 percent of the assessed value of its property. They will be wholly debarred from obtaining one dime of the funds raised by this bond issue, for they are already bonded to this extent, though it represents only a small portion of the assets of this municipality.

Mr. President, there is a precedent for this amendment. In the original Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, providing $300,000,000 for the relief of destitution in this country, there was a similar provision. Under that provision if there was destitution in States having constitutional inhibitions against borrowing funds, they were not to be denied the benefits of the act.

There are municipalities in the United States today that are in default on their bonds, that cannot meet their indebtedness or their obligations, and yet they can obtain grants of money under this act; but municipalities and States that are hampered with constitutional provisions, as Georgia is, cannot obtain a single dime under this bill unless this amendment be adopted.

All I am asking is that if the President decides it is possible to enter into a contract that will protect the interests of the United States, the municipalities of my State may have a right to come in and enjoy all the benefits of this act. They have been unable to get a single, solitary loan under the self-liquidating provisions of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act. Every cent that will be secured to combat unemployment in a large number of States will be that which goes to highways. My amendment will enable a considerable number of political subdivisions to obtain very necessary assistance in addition to highway funds, and create work for the unemployed. It will tend to make for a more equitable distribution of the large fund the bill provides for, and will make for essential justice in this great matter.

Mr. President, in this legislation we are departing from anything that has been known heretofore. Since I have come to this body I have heard Senator after Senator say that no one today felt that the original $300,000,000 advanced to the various States for the relief of destitution ever would be repaid; that this indebtedness has now been assumed by the national Government. Who knows? I dare say that in 3 years there will be candidates for the House of Representatives and for the United States Senate in the various States who will be running on platforms of canceling the indebtedness to the States and the advances that may be made to the various cities and municipalities under the terms of this act, because they will take the very natural position that the National Government has already levied taxes upon all the people in order to fund and retire this bond issue, and therefore there is no necessity of the cities repaying any of the advances which might be made to them. I understand that under this bill the Federal Government will make a direct grant to municipalities for 30 percent of the cost of a project, and that the Federal Government will lend to the municipalities or other political subdivisions the other 70 percent of the cost of the project.

If in the future, in this revolutionary age, an age of change, this indebtedness should be canceled, it would mean that the people of the States who could not avail themselves of the loans would be compelled to bear their part of the cost of retiring these bonds, yet they would not have derived one dollar of benefit therefrom.

I appeal to the Members of the Senate to agree to this amendment, and vest the President of the United States with this additional power, in order that some satisfactory method may be worked out between those who have this work in charge and the municipalities and States which are handicapped by constitutional restrictions.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, before we take up the tax amendment, I wish to offer an amendment to title II, I believe it is, the public-works title. I move to insert in the proper place under that title these words:

In the selection of projects under this title preference shall be given to the control of the flood waters of the Mississippi River and its tributaries.

Mr. President, I am not going to debate the point. I am not going to ask for a record vote. I merely offer the amendment for the RECORD, and for my own record.

The Mississippi River drains, in whole or in part, 32 different States of this Union. The control of its flood waters constitutes a national project. That project cannot be met or financed by any one State, or by any combination of States. It is a national project. It must be taken care of, and it should be taken care of, and should be financed by the Government of the United States.

We stand by and suffer floods to come, time after time, destroying, at each visitation, enough property in value to control these flood waters and to render the future secure, and the property situated in the Mississippi Basin secure. Yet we stand by and permit that demon to come, time after time, and do not bridle the demon.

Let the record bear witness that there is one man here who thinks that it is a national shame, and that it approaches a national crime, to permit this devastation to occur and to reoccur time after time and year after year, while we waste multiplied millions, waste money on projects which are of no consequence, and neglect this project, which is of national consequence, and is of concern, vitally and directly, to 32 different States of this Union.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I hope the amendment will not be agreed to.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I wish to say that the protest on the part of the Senator from New York is entirely unnecessary. This project has too much sense in it to have the slightest chance on earth.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I present an amendment, which I ask to have read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Colorado offers an amendment, which the clerk will report.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 18, line 16, in section 202, to insert the following, after the word "control":

and also the construction of any river or drainage improvement required to perform or satisfy any obligation incurred by the United States through a treaty with a foreign government heretofore ratified and to restore or develop for the use of any State or its citizens water taken from or denied to them by performance on the part of the United States of treaty obligations heretofore assumed.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I wish to make some explanation in reference to this amendment.

The amendment combines within itself the possibilities both of unemployment relief and development of natural resources, and adds the possibility of the performance of an obligation on the part of the United States Government. It renders possible the doing of a thing which this body has upon two occasions directed should be done. Bills to that effect have passed this body twice.

The foundation of the situation is this: It affects directly three States, the State of Texas, the State of New Mexico, and the State of Colorado.

In 1906 the United States entered into a treaty with the Republic of Mexico by which the United States Government gave to the Republic of Mexico 60,000 second-feet annually of the waters of the Rio Grande. In order to carry out that treaty obligation there have been imposed upon the water users of Texas, New Mexico, and Colorado obligations to pass that amount of water down the river. They have been denied the opportunity of developing their regions because of the paramount obligation brought about by a treaty of the United States Government.

This amendment offers merely the opportunity, as the section under consideration is not mandatory but merely permissive, to include in the public-works program a project which will restore to the States of New Mexico, Texas, and Colorado the waters which they are now furnishing to the United States in order that it may deliver the waters to the Republic of Mexico.

It so happens that there is a physical and geographical situation near the boundary of the State of New Mexico which, with comparatively slight development, will permit the producing of practically a new water supply to meet this obligation. Therefore this amendment limits itself in terms to restoring to States that which was taken from them by the United States Government pursuant to treaty obligations. It is, as I have said, purely permissive, and it should be included for consideration with the other public-works program.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, unfortunately I have not heard the discussion thus far. I came into the Chamber while my gifted colleague was speaking on the amendment he has tendered. I rise to support that amendment and wish to add that a bill providing for a drainage project in the San Luis Valley of Colorado for the benefit of the States of Colorado, New Mexico, and Texas, and sponsored by the Senators from those three States, passed this body in February 1931, more than 2 years ago; that his amendment is consistent with and looks toward the public ends contemplated in that measure, which was carefully considered at that time; and I am convinced that the amendment should be adopted.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the junior Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 20, line 5, after the numerals "202", it is proposed to insert a comma and the following:

And to refinance or aid in refinancing outstanding obligations heretofore or hereafter issued in connection with local contributions made to aid in the construction of Federal flood-control works.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator a question.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, this amendment would change the policy and philosophy of this whole legislation and permit the use of Government funds for refinancing purposes. I hope the amendment will not be agreed to.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, would this in any way help bring about reemployment?

Mr. WAGNER. No; it has no relation to it.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, I think the Senator from New York takes a mistaken view about this question. The pending bill, when enacted into law, will authorize these flood-control works to be undertaken. The bill further authorizes the financing of those flood-control projects.

The flood control law enacted by the Congress provides that the Federal Government shall go ahead and do the work at the cost of the Federal Government. There are one or two exceptions to that rule. One is that the States and local subdivisions are required to make certain local contributions, principally of rights of way. Those local subdivisions, the levee boards, have been making those contributions. They have been able to do so up to the time of this depression, but they are not able now to continue to furnish those contributions, and they will have to be financed.

If that work is to go ahead, if the Federal Government is to continue with this floor-control work on the Mississippi River and its tributaries, and these local subdivisions, the levee boards, are to be required to continue to furnish the rights of way, it will be necessary that they be refinanced in reference to the obligations they have already incurred in respect to these rights-of-way.

It might be said, Mr. President, that the Government could go ahead and finance them for future rights of way, but they have outstanding obligations, obligations which they have not been able to meet. They are obligations which have been incurred with property owners, where levees are to be constructed, which have to be purchased, and concerning which they have given their certificates of indebtedness, or their promises to pay, their contractual obligations to pay, their I O U's.

They have not been able to take up those obligations, which are outstanding, and those obligations are being hawked around at 80 cents and 60 cents and 50 cents on the dollar, until it has reached the point where the property owners are unwilling to deal with the local boards unless they are properly financed.

Mr. President, if this work is to continue, if the Federal Government is to go on with this stupendous task of undertaking to control the flood waters of the Mississippi River, it is necessary not only to finance the future rights of way but to refinance these levee boards with reference to obligations which they have already incurred with respect to the rights of way already secured.

I say that the amendment is in line with the pending bill. The Government cannot go on with the flood-control works unless the rights of way are furnished. If the rights of way are to be furnished by the local authorities, then the local authorities ought to be aided by this measure.

Mr. LONG and Mr. WAGNER addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the junior Senator from Louisiana yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. OVERTON. I yield to my colleague the senior Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. LONG. May I ask if these are the rights of way that the levee boards have to buy for the Government?

Mr. OVERTON. They are.

Mr. LONG. At certain times the levee boards cannot wait to be financed by the Government, because they have to spend the money first and the Government has to pay them back?

Mr. OVERTON. Yes.

Mr. LONG. The levee boards now have not the money with which to do that. If the Senator from New York and the Senator from Mississippi understood this amendment, I believe they would accept it.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I understand the amendment, and, to the extent to which this money is used to refinance any obligation, it will prevent the use of it for the purpose of this act, namely, to employ people.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, does not the Senator from New York know that every dime of it is used to employ people? When the rights of way are obtained by the State of Mississippi, the State of Tennessee, the State of Missouri, the State of Arkansas, the State of Louisiana, the State of Illinois, all of them are reimbursed for the money by the Government; but they cannot go on with the public-works program until they get the rights of way for the Government. It is necessary, in order that the work may start, that these boards get the rights of way. Then when they get the rights of way the work starts, and the Government reimburses the States or the levee boards.

The trouble, however, is that we have not the money to pay the people to get the rights of way, in the first place, and, therefore, while the Government gives us back the money, we cannot get the credit to buy the rights of way and to enable the work to go on. That is due largely because of the floods of 1927, 1928, and of other years, which we have never got over, and we have had to let all this work remain idle, and let people go unemployed for the reason that we cannot get the money to pay for the rights of way for which the Government reimburses us anyway.

I do not see why the Senator from New York should have any objection to the amendment. In the long run the Government will not be out a penny in the world. It is, in the ultimate, the Government's own obligation, but all the work of flood protection is held up for the simple reason that although the Government is willing to repay the States for the rights of way when the States buy them, the States cannot buy them because they have not the credit now to make the initial outlay, and that keeps the work tied up.

Mr. OVERTON. Is it not a fact that it will require only a million or two million dollars to secure these rights of way?

Mr. LONG. It will require very little money to do so. The Government would not have to advance over a million or two million dollars, I should say, at the most. It is a very small item because it will all be turned over; as fast as we get a million and a half it will be turned right back. In other words, the Government is not out anything, but it simply is just giving us a little "edge" to start on. If we had a million dollars, by the time we used up that million dollars the Government would pay us back a million dollars, but we have not the million dollars to start on. That is the trouble today.

This work is important. It is work that will do much good. As a matter of fact, it is an ideal kind of public work. If we could spend every dollar of this money on that kind of work we should be doing as much good as we could do by doing any other work. I do not see why objection is made to the amendment. It is almost an infinitesimal matter. By the adoption of this amendment we will make it possible to go ahead with the flood-control work which the Government is paying for anyway. I hope Senators will not make any objection to the amendment, but will let it be adopted. I will say the Government will not be out a 10-cent piece on it; it will not cost the Government a dime.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON]. [Putting the question.] By the sound the "noes" seem to have it.

Mr. LONG. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. McNARY. On this vote I have a pair with the senior Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER]. Not knowing how he would vote I withhold my vote. If I were permitted to vote I should vote "nay."

Mr. STEPHENS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. ROBINSON] and therefore withhold my vote. If permitted to vote I should vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. HEBERT. I desire to announce the following general pairs:

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. DALE] with the Senator from California [Mr. MCADOO];

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] with the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS]; and

The Senator from Maine [Mr. WHITE] with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY].

Mr. KENDRICK. I desire to announce that the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], and the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS] are necessarily absent on official business.

The result was announced—yeas 27, nays 47, as follows:

YEAS—27

Bachman	Copeland	Logan	Pope
Bone	Cutting	Long	Reynolds
Borah	Dill	McGill	Russell
Capper	Erickson	Murphy	Schall
Caraway	Hatfield	Nye	Trammell
Carey	Johnson	Overton	Wheeler
Clark	La Follette	Patterson

NAYS—47

Adams	Byrnes	Hastings	Robinson, Ark.
Austin	Connally	Hayden	Sheppard
Bailey	Coolidge	Hebert	Smith
Bankhead	Davis	Kean	Steiwer
Barbour	Dickinson	Kendrick	Thomas, Utah
Barkley	Dieterich	Keyes	Thompson
Black	Duffy	Lonergan	Townsend
Bratton	Fess	McCarran	Tydings
Brown	Goldsborough	McKellar	Wagner
Bulkley	Gore	Metcalf	Walcott
Bulow	Hale	Norris	Walsh
Byrd	Harrison	Reed

NOT VOTING—22

Ashurst	George	Neely	Thomas, Okla.
Costigan	Glass	Norbeck	Vandenberg
Couzens	King	Pittman	Van Nuys
Dale	Lewis	Robinson, Ind.	White
Fletcher	McAdoo	Shipstead
Frazier	McNary	Stephens

So Mr. OVERTON's amendment was rejected.

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, I offer an amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 19, line 3, after the amendment heretofore agreed to at that point——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Illinois offers an amendment to an amendment which has already been agreed to. The only way the amendment can now be in order is to reconsider the vote by which the committee amendment was agreed to. That may be done by unanimous consent.

Mr. DIETERICH. I ask unanimous consent that the vote whereby the committee amendment was agreed to may be reconsidered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the vote whereby the amendment was agreed to will be reconsidered. The amendment offered by the Senator from Illinois to the committee amendment will now be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. Following the amendments heretofore agreed to after the word "plants" in line 3, page 19, it is proposed to insert the following:

And for systems for central generation and distribution of steam.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on agreeing to the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I offer an amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Pennsylvania offers an amendment which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 18, line 16, after the word "control", it is proposed to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That no such river and harbor improvements shall be carried out unless they have heretofore or hereafter been adopted by the Congress or have been recommended by the Chief of Engineers of the United States Army in reports heretofore submitted to Congress.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, just a word in explanation. The amendment would come in the appropriate place in that line, either before or after the amendment of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS]. The purpose of the amendment is to limit the expenditure of these moneys to such river and harbor projects as Congress in the past has authorized or in the future may authorize, or such as the Chief of Engineers has favorably reported upon up to this time. Within that vast group of projects the President has a free hand.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. REED. Certainly.

Mr. TYDINGS. I think it has been pretty conclusively shown that the money expended on dredging is practically all money for labor. As a matter of fact the Chief of Engineers of the Army has submitted a report which was placed in the RECORD in which it is shown that a greater amount of labor is used for the dredging dollar than for any other dollar the Government expends. I appreciate the Senator does not want every creek in the country dredged, but it occurs to me that perhaps his amendment may be a little bit strictly drawn. If the amendment were to read "unless approved by the engineers of the Army", that would not only allow such projects as are now included, but any hereafter approved that are worthy, and in that way we would get the maximum amount of labor employed for the dollar of the Government money that is expended.

Mr. REED. I think the projects that have already been approved, either by us or by the Chief of Engineers, are so vast that there will be plenty of dredging to do with all the money the President can spare. I should think the President himself would like to be protected by some such provision as this, because it will relieve him of a lot of importunities from people presenting projects that are really without merit. Were I in his place, I should like to be protected by having a proviso like this.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, do I understand the Senator's amendment would preclude any work except that which the Army engineers have under advisement at the present time but have not already approved?

Mr. REED. Unless it was already approved of, it would preclude it.

Mr. WHEELER. I certainly would be opposed to that, for the reason that on the Mississippi River there is flood control and on the Missouri River there are a number of projects on which the Army engineers are at this very moment working on, and some of the staff have already approved them and they have been sent up to the Chief of Engineers. Certainly the Senator would not want to eliminate those because of the fact that the President might have in mind that they were more worthy than the ones already approved. If he would provide for those that have been approved or those hereafter approved by the Board of Army Engineers, then I would have no objection.

Mr. REED. My thought was that if in the future recommendations came, Congress could act on them, but I realize that would prevent any work this season on those projects. The Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE] also has been urging the same amendment, saying that he had some meritorious projects in the course of study, as has the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD]. In view of the large popular demand for insertion of the words "or hereafter", I will modify my amendment accordingly to read "any reports heretofore or hereafter submitted by him to Congress."

Mr. TYDINGS. If the Senator does that, as I understand the amendment, which I hold in my hand, it would still be necessary for Congress to adopt the change.

Mr. REED. Not at all. It would then read:

Provided, That no such river and harbor improvements shall be carried out unless they shall have heretofore or hereafter been adopted by the Congress or shall have been recommended by the Chief of Engineers of the United States Army in reports heretofore or hereafter submitted to the Congress.

Mr. TYDINGS. If the Senator will yield further, under that phraseology it will be necessary to have the Congress authorize the work, and the whole summer would go by without any work being done.

Mr. REED. Not at all. It is in the alternative, either that they shall have been approved by Congress or shall have been recommended by the Chief of Engineers.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. Does it not require a submission to Congress before action can be taken? The President would be powerless to act unless the project had been submitted to the Congress. Of course, during the summer a report could not be submitted to Congress.

Mr. REED. I see the Senator's point. It can be cured by making it read in this fashion, and I modify it accordingly:

Provided, That no such river or harbor improvements shall be carried out unless they shall have been heretofore or hereafter adopted by the Congress or are recommended by the Chief of Engineers of the United States Army.

I think that makes it clear.

Mr. BORAH, Mr. AUSTIN, and Mr. COPELAND addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. REED. I yield first to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. BORAH. Would any such improvement be carried on unless either one or the other, either the Congress or the engineers, had approved of it?

Mr. TYDINGS. As I understand it, the improvement could not be carried on unless it was both recommended by the engineers and approved by the Congress; but, under the Senator's amendment, if there is more work to be done than Congress has approved, it could only be done if the engineers had authorized it. It was to take care of perhaps a gap in a large program that the engineer feature, without congressional action, was adopted for this emergency.

Mr. BORAH. I cannot imagine the President taking up a project unless one or the other had happened, anyway.

Mr. TYDINGS. Of course.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator from Pennsylvania a question. The Senator from Vermont understands by the language of the amendment that it does not relate to flood control.

Mr. REED. No; it does not.

Mr. AUSTIN. In that event, should it not follow the word "improvement" rather than the word "control"?

Mr. REED. No; because the proviso is limited to river and harbor improvement, and it comes in appropriately at the end of the sentence.

Mr. AUSTIN. With the explanation that it is not intended to affect flood-control projects, I have no objection to it going there. If it were to affect those projects, I certainly would want to change its location.

Mr. REED. Grammatically we cannot put a proviso in the middle of a sentence, so we have put it at the end of the sentence and by its terms limited it solely to river and harbor improvement.

Mr. AUSTIN. Very well.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. As I understand the situation, unless the Senator's amendment is adopted, we have reverted to the old pork-barrel rivers and harbors rule and system of operation.

Mr. REED. Oh, worse than that. We have shut our eyes and said to the President of the United States, "Take $3,000,000,000 and spend it in any old creek or any place at any old time in any old way."

Mr. VANDENBERG. But if we replace the great progress that has been made in Congress in the last 10 or 15 years in the direction of at least attempting to be somewhat scientific in respect to river and harbor improvements, we turn our backs on all that and go back to where we were before we started.

Mr. REED. Just as we would turn our backs on the political education of the country for the last century and a half.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, there has been more scandal attached to river and harbor matters than to any other projects presented to Congress. We long since learned in the Committee on Commerce that the only safe way to proceed in river and harbor items is to insist that there shall be an approval of each project by the Board of Army Engineers. I am in hearty sympathy with the amendment suggested by the Senator from Pennsylvania.

While I am on my feet I want to find fault with the Board of Army Engineers. I think some of their regulations are as antiquated and moss covered as the codes of ethics of some of the learned professions.

For example, contractors are now at work to dredge the channel between Governors Island and Brooklyn. The contractors took the work at 19 cents per cubic yard. They wanted to get a dredge. The only dredge to be had in that vicinity is owned by the Government. The Government proposed to let the contractors have the dredge, requiring them to pay all the wages paid to the men on the dredge and a certain per diem for its use. In addition, there is a surcharge of 50 percent of the sum of those two items. In other words, it will cost the contractors, if they are obliged to take that dredge, about 40 cents a yard to make the excavation when the contract was made for 19 cents a yard.

I can see no reason why the Government should interfere in this manner with the operation of such activities in our various rivers and harbors. Nevertheless, if we do not have such a provision as is suggested by the Senator from Pennsylvania, every old river and creek and mudhole in the United States will be put forward as a place where Government money should be spent. I think it is utterly wrong.

There ought to be some authoritative place or body to regulate the matter. The Army engineers should do this. They are above suspicion of politics or improper influences. If we cannot trust them, we cannot trust anybody. I think the President himself would be glad to have the Army engineers pass judgment upon river and harbor projects before they are undertaken.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, under this provision projects can be prosecuted if they have heretofore been adopted by the Congress or are hereafter or have heretofore been approved by the Chief of Engineers of the United States Army. With those reports the Chief of Engineers always presents an estimate of cost, and Congress authorizes a certain amount of the estimate or the total of the estimate for appropriation.

I should like to ask the Senator from Pennsylvania whether or not he believes that under this provision in the pending bill, if the Chief of Engineers shall approve a project, it will be necessary, before starting work on the project or allotting funds to the project, to come to the Congress for an appropriation and an authorization for an appropriation, or for an increase in an authorization that has heretofore been limited.

Mr. REED. No, Mr. President. An authorization is just a check imposed by Congress upon itself—a check imposed as a preliminary to making an appropriation. The Constitution does not mention authorizations. Consequently when in this bill we appropriate $3,300,000,000 we have done the final and decisive act; and no further authorization and no further appropriation is necessary.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I thank the Senator.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment as modified. [Putting the question.] By the sound, the "ayes" seem to have it.

Mr. HARRISON. I ask for a division.

On a division, the amendment as modified was agreed to.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, I desire to propose orally two amendments which I believe the committee will accept. They are identical in language, and I ask unanimous consent that they may be treated as one amendment.

I move to strike out, on page 27, lines 7 and 8, the words "citizens of the United States who are", and the same words in line 10 of that page.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, may I say that my recollection is that paragraph (a) has already been amended.

Mr. COPELAND. Yes; it has.

Mr. HARRISON. And what the Senator is trying to do has already been done by the Senate.

Mr. COSTIGAN. I did not know that it had been done.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. No; Mr. President. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. COSTIGAN. With pleasure.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I would not wish the Senator from Colorado to be laboring under a misapprehension, and I am sure the Senator from Mississippi would not wish that to occur.

The only amendment to this particular subsection which was adopted was one offered by the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER], which exempted from its provisions highway-construction work, and had no relation to the question of whether the persons to be employed were bona-fide residents or bona-fide citizens, or both.

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator from Wisconsin has stated the facts. The Senator from Montana first offered the amendment to strike out all of that section, and finally agreed on the proposition to make it applicable only to the highways.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, in view of the statements of the respective Senators from Wisconsin and Mississippi, for which I am indebted to them, I feel that I should renew my motion. The language moved to be stricken is certainly, as one member of the committee said last evening, unintended.

Mr. HARRISON. I do not think there will be any objection to striking out those words.

Mr. COSTIGAN. If the language is stricken out, preferences in regard to employment to work on public projects will be given first to ex-service men and their dependents, which is proper; and, after that, to bona-fide residents of political subdivisions in the regions in which the projects are to be constructed.

Mr. President, in order that the reasons for the amendment may be of record and may be more surely before the conference committee for consideration, if there is, though there should not be, any doubt on the question, I ask unanimous consent to include in the RECORD a letter, not from noncitizens but in fact written on behalf of distinguished citizens of this country who are members of the board of trustees and advisory council of the Foreign Language Information Service of New York City. This organization is the lineal descendant of a Government organization of the World War—the Public Information Service created by President Wilson at that time. Its fine motto has been to interpret America to the foreign born in our midst and the foreign born to America. Its present director, who signs the letter, is an able lawyer, a member of a distinguished American family, who has proven his devotion to the public service.

I ask that this letter, which gives convincing and, indeed, overwhelming reasons for the amendment, may be incorporated in my remarks.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

FOREIGN LANGUAGE INFORMATION SERVICE, INC.,
New York City, May 26, 1933.

DEAR SENATOR COSTIGAN: Miss Eastman has already called your attention to one feature of the national industrial recovery bill, as recommended by the Ways and Means Committee of the House, which we feel will work great hardship and injustice.

As introduced by Senator WAGNER (S. 1712) the bill provides (sec. 205)—

"That in the employment of labor in connection with any such project, preference shall be given, where they are qualified, to ex-service men with dependents."

To such a preference there is, of course, no objection.

In the House bill (H.R. 5755), however, the Ways and Means Committee has provided (sec. 205)—

"That in the employment of labor in connection with any such project preference shall be given, where they are qualified, to ex-service men with dependents, and then in the following order: (A) To citizens of the United States who are bona fide residents of the political subdivision and/or county in which the work is to be performed; and (B) to citizens of the United States who are bona fide residents of the State, Territory, or district in which the work is to be performed: Provided, That these preferences shall apply only where such labor is available and qualified to perform the work to which the employment relates."

Under existing economic conditions the preferences thus granted virtually exclude noncitizens from employment on the $3,300,000,000 public works to be undertaken.

This discrimination will affect adversely some 6,000,000 persons who have not yet obtained citizenship. According to the 1930 census there were 5,784,760 aliens in the United States and 499,853 foreign born for whom data in regard to citizenship were not obtained—a total of 6,284,613. Of these some 5,654,672 were 21 years of age and over.

In support of these preferences it is urged that where there are 2 applicants and only 1 job it is proper to give preference to the citizen. Other things being equal, this may be granted. But in countless cases other things are not equal. The citizen may be a single man. The alien may have a wife and children dependent on him. In such a case humanity and sound public policy require that the alien be given the job. This would be impossible under the arbitrary provisions of the House bill.

In most cases, further, the children of the alien are native born. In discriminating against their fathers the bill would, in effect, discriminate against hundreds of thousands of American citizens, and those least able to protect themselves.

The unemployed alien, it seems to us, is as much in need as the unemployed citizen. Having admitted him to permanent residence, the country ought not, in decency and fairness, to discriminate against him. In this vital matter of employment and livelihood the alien, from every human standpoint, is on the same footing as the citizen. He is subject to the same taxes. In many cases he has already declared his intention of becoming a citizen. Often he has not yet acquired citizenship because of the high fees and other expenses involved in naturalization. In the past this very sort of work—construction and manual labor—has been regarded as the special province of the immigrant, the native born not choosing to do it.

The House bill, as it stands, gives preference not to all citizens but to those who are bona fide residents of the locality in which the work is to be performed. If such local preference is retained, it will not, we hope, be limited to citizens but extended to all bona fide residents, whether citizen or alien.

Sincerely yours,

READ LEWIS, Director.

Hon. EDWARD P. COSTIGAN,
United States Senate, Washington, D.C.

Mr. COSTIGAN. I understand that the committee accepts the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Colorado offers two amendments, which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 27, lines 7 and 8, it is proposed to strike out the words "citizens of the United States who are", and the same amendment in line 10.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I was about to ask a question regarding the amendment, but the statement by the clerk answers my question. I desired to know if both places were proposed to be amended.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendments proposed by the Senator from Colorado.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, on last evening I offered an amendment on page 24, line 19, to insert the words "Canal Zone" after the word "Colombia." Inadvertently, I offered the amendment in the wrong place.

I ask unanimous consent that the Senate reconsider the vote whereby that one amendment was agreed to; and if that is granted I shall withdraw the amendment, and offer it at another place.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the vote whereby the amendment was agreed to will be reconsidered.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I now withdraw the amendment, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment is withdrawn. The Senator from Wisconsin offers a further amendment, which will be stated.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. On page 21, line 6, after the comma, I move to insert "the Canal Zone."

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CLARK in the chair). The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 21, line 6, after the comma, it is proposed to insert "the Canal Zone."

The amendment was agreed to.

RADIOBROADCAST BY SECRETARY HOWE

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I desire to complete the RECORD in a few brief observations as it refers to Col. Louis M. Howe, the President's secretary, and his relationship with his radio hour. I feel called upon to do this in view of the nature of my sympathetic colloquy on June 5, 1933, with the able junior Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CUTTING].

I remind the Senate that the junior Senator from New Mexico on June 5, at page 4968 of the RECORD, commented specifically upon the fact that Colonel Howe, the secretary to the President, had gone upon the air on Sunday evening previously and had broadcast an appeal to the country against the action of the Senate in respect to certain phases of veterans' allowances.

The Senator from New Mexico, among other things, made the following observations; and I might say parenthetically that certainly no one can accuse the Senator from New Mexico of being partisan in his attitudes. He has recently made conclusive demonstrations to the contrary.

I quote the Senator:

Mr. President, I desire to call the attention of the Senate to what seems to me a grave breach of the proprietics on the part of the White House secretariat.

Further:

It is a grave question as to whether coordinate branches of the Government should appeal to the people of the United States against each other. That, however, is rather a broader question than the one with which I am immediately concerned. Certainly, if there is such a controversy, it is not the duty of a secretary, clerk, or stenographer to present it to the people of the United States.

Mr. President, I interrupted the Senator from New Mexico with the following observation:

If the Senator is justified in raising a question respecting the ethics of this type of broadcast, it will be particularly interesting to know what the nature of Mr. Howe's own contract with the radio broadcasting company is, and whether or not he is compensated for doing the thing against which the Senator complains; because, if he is, and in any such amount as is commonly understood, the situation becomes doubly aggravated.

I further said, at the conclusion of the colloquy:

I think it is a rather serious contemplation when that radio hour is now delivered to the Presidential secretariat—

Referring to the hour previously occupied by Mr. David Lawrence—

if it is true that that is a matter of a dollars and cents compensation contract. The thing I am interrupting the Senator from North Dakota to suggest, with his permission, is that when Mr. Howe appears next as a witness in the conservation-kit controversy before the Committee on Military Affairs, he be requested, for his own sake and for our information, frankly to disclose the nature of his radio relationship with the National Broadcasting Co.

Mr. President, pursuant to that suggestion, at the next meeting of the Committee on Military Affairs the Senator from Iowa [Mr. DICKINSON] asked Colonel Howe, who was a witness upon the stand, respecting his arrangements for his radio hour. It was immediately objected that the question was beyond the scope of the committee, and therefore the witness was not required to answer.

Thereupon, inasmuch as I assumed that Colonel Howe's silence under such circumstances indicated his own disinclination to provide us with the information, I wired General Harbord, at New York, who is president of the Radio Corporation of America, and asked for the information. General Harbord courteously replied the following morning that he did not have the information himself, but that he was in position to say—I assume after contacting Colonel Howe—that Colonel Howe himself would be very happy to provide me with the information if I would address him directly upon the subject. This certainly was highly creditable to Colonel Howe; and I desire to emphasize the fact that I was very happy to find out that Colonel Howe would be willing to give me the information at first hand; and under such circumstances I only regret that I did not go to him in the first instance for the information.

At any rate, I thereupon addressed my questionnaire to Colonel Howe. I now have his complete and detailed answer. I am somewhat perplexed in connection with it, because it is labeled "personal and confidential", which scarcely is in line with the objective to which I was addressing myself; but I find within the letter frank permission to abstract from the letter—

The information you wish in connection with the facts as to my own contract.

I respect Colonel Howe's request and use only the information referring to his own contract.

I have been somewhat perplexed again to dissect out the information which I am entitled to use; but I believe I am entitled to report that Colonel Howe spoke originally twice upon the radio with a compensation of $1,000 each time for 15 minutes; that his present contractual arrangement, covering a 10 weeks' revocable relationship, nets him $900 for each 15 minutes; and that the total cost of his 15-minute radio hour, including the compensation for all concerned, is $1,500, which is at the rate of $100 per minute.

When the Secretary to the President of the United States speaks in a radio hour in any such fashion as this radio hour is presented, regardless of all efforts to warn the country otherwise, the inevitable conclusion is that the White House has spoken by proxy to the Nation. You can undertake to draw any fine discriminations as you please, but that is the inevitable popular conclusion. Colonel Howe makes no such pretense, of course. Indeed, he undertakes to avoid it. But he cannot shed his White House role.

Here is a trade magazine called Radio. This is the announcement in the magazine called Radio respecting this situation. I read:

$1,500 FOR HOWE'S TALKS ON WHITE HOUSE AFFAIRS

Weekly series that Col. Louis McHenry Howe, Secretary to President Roosevelt, and Walter Trumbull, newspaper correspondent, start on NBC for the RCA Victor group Sunday (June 4), will have them splitting $1,500 between them per broadcast. Contract is for 13 weeks, with the link (red) taking in 42 stations from coast to coast.

With Trumbull doing the quizzing, the President's Secretary will chat on administrative matters. Commercial plans working in the mail angle by asking the listeners to write questions of governmental problems, moves, and situations they would like Howe to expatiate on.

And this is the significant part of this publication, and the inevitable deduction to be drawn from such a situation:

Colonel Howe is nationally recognized as the President's spokesman, and as such this series makes him the "mouthpiece of the White House."

That is about as near to an official, professional announcement of Colonel Howe's relationship to this radio hour as we could get, because it is in this leading radio trade paper. I submit that it interprets the broadcasts precisely as they will be interpreted by a vast majority of the American people.

Mr. President, ethics are always for each man to decide for himself, and I have no intention of pretending any monopoly upon the virtues or undertaking to dictate ethics to others. But the White House does belong to us all. I submit to the President's Secretary and to the President for their consideration that the nationally recognized spokesman for the President, speaking in the Nation's Capital, should not be speaking for $100 compensation per minute to himself and his associate. I submit that the mouthpiece of the White House—and I am quoting the publication which I have read—should not be a mouthpiece at the rate of $100 per minute in a personal, private purse.

Nobody would think of employing the very eminent Colonel Howe—and I speak of him with the greatest respect—at $100 a minute upon the radio, if he were not the secretary to the President of the United States. This demonstrates why the broadcast is deemed to be worth so much money. It demonstrates that it is the secretaryship and not Colonel Howe which is involved in the contract. The secretaryship belongs to us all.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, if I understand what the Senator has said, he has informed us that Colonel Howe is speaking for the administration; but I think we owe it to Colonel Howe to say that, as I understand the situation, he is speaking only in his individual capacity and not in any way as representative of the President of the United States.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator is absolutely correct, and, in addition, the $100 a minute is his own individual $100; but there is no way in this world that the secretary to the President can step down out of the White House on Sunday evening and successfully undertake to interpret national affairs to the American people in his private capacity as Colonel Howe. He is the President's secretary, whether he wishes to divest himself of this role or not.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I am glad to.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Assuming the right of free speech and free expression, assuming also the right of Mr. Howe to accept radio employment, who has the authority to determine what his compensation shall be? Does the Senator from Michigan assume that the Senate should pass upon the question as to what his services may be worth? We have heard a great many times that moving-picture stars, that lecturers, that radio speakers, receive what appears to be very liberal, not to say very great, compensation; but is it not a matter of contract, assuming that there is the right to enter into such contracts? In other words, does the Congress, or the Senate, claim the right to fix the compensation a movie star or a radio speaker or a lecturer shall receive?

Of course, upon the question of the propriety of entering into a radio contract there may be difference of opinion. There may be also difference of opinion as to the practice of Senators in accepting contracts with chautauquas, lyceums, and bureaus, but, after all, one has the right to express himself, one has the right to enter into contracts of that nature, and the amount of the compensation must be determined by the agreement of the parties.

If some radio broadcasting company thinks that Mr. Howe is worth more than what the Senator from Michigan or the Senator from Arkansas thinks he is worth, the matter is determined at last by the opinion of the management of the broadcasting company.

I do not suppose for one moment that the Senator from Michigan assumes he has the right to tell a broadcasting company what the services of its speakers are worth, or to tell the speakers themselves what limit shall be placed on the amount of their compensation.

Granting, for the sake of argument, that the amount paid Mr. Howe is more than what the Senator thinks his services are worth, what business is it of the Senate or of the House, and how can we regulate matters of that kind?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, if the Senator has concluded his question, I shall be glad to undertake to answer. In answering I hope I can bring my observations back to the plane upon which I undertook to submit them.

I am not interested in how much Colonel Howe gets, I am not interested in undertaking to attempt to fix Colonel Howe's compensation, I am not interested in any of those commercial phases; I am interested in the ethical contemplation, first, that the Secretary to the President of the United States goes upon the air in an attack upon the Senate of the United States in respect to allowances granted to disabled war veterans. That is the first ethical question raised originally by the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CUTTING].

Then I am interested in the second ethical question, that when he attacks the Senate of the United States, introduced to the audience as the Secretary to the President, and when he criticizes the Senate for having undone some of the brutalities that were perpetrated by the rules and regulations of the Veterans' Administration upon disabled veterans of the United States—when he does that, he and his associates are reimbursed, at the very moment he is pleading for economy, at the rate of $100 a minute for the performance he puts on. I am raising the ethical question.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, it seems to me that we ought not to mind that so much, because that $100 a minute comes from a private purse. In less than a minute Colonel Howe costs the United States about $100,000 in the purchase of the Conservation Service toilet kits, and that comes out of the Treasury of the United States. [Laughter in the galleries.]

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator is entirely correct. But he is back in the realm of arithmetic, rather sad arithmetic.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The occupants of the galleries are admonished that they are here as the guests of the Senate, and that expressions of approval or disapproval of words spoken on the floor of the Senate are forbidden by a rule of the Senate, which rule will be observed.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I want to remain in the ethical field in respect to this situation, because I want to repeat what I said in the beginning—and I rather suspect the Senator from Arkansas did not hear me—that I would not undertake to pass upon Colonel Howe's conscience in respect to a problem of this nature. That is his responsibility, and it is not mine. It is all any of us can do to attend to our own conscience. The one thing I am doing is addressing the ethical question to the President's Secretary, and to the President, for whom this Secretary inevitably speaks in this radio hour, no matter how much he protests to the contrary; I am submitting the ethical question, whether that sort of White House spokesmanship is a private perquisite entitled to be privately capitalized at the rate of $100 a minute. That is all I have to say on the subject.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator a question.

MBr. VANDENBERG. I shall be very happy to answer.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. As I understand the Senator's statement, he does not assert that Mr. Howe, in making radio addresses, is actually authorized to speak for the President or for the White House.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I stated quite the contrary—that he is not, and that he distinctly undertakes to say that he is not.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. But the Senator states that, for the reason that he is a Secretary to the President, there arises the implication that he is speaking for the White House.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Inevitably.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I do not think that conclusion is convincing.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Let me ask the Senator one question as bearing on that.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Suppose my secretary writes a newspaper article, or delivers an address, or makes a radio speech; does the inference inevitable arise that he is speaking for me merely because in other capacities he is employed by me?

Mr. VANDENBERG. No, Mr. President; but without depreciating the Senator's very great stature in the eyes of the Nation, I am bound to submit that the Senator's secretary and the President's secretary are two totally different persons. Furthermore, the country has become accustomed to the role of the President's Secretary as one who is intimate and closely informed respecting public affairs, whereas senatorial secretaries rarely get into the newspapers except when some critic is discussing nepotism. That is about all we hear about.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I do not believe the Senator wishes to stand on that last statement. I think it is a reflection on Senators and on their secretaries in the manner in which the Senator has asserted it.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Let me——

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Now, I want to say this——

Mr. VANDENBERG. I have the floor, Mr. President.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I do not think so. The Senator surrendered the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that the Chair understood the Senator from Michigan to yield the floor, and the Senator from Arkansas took the floor.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Very well.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I have the floor, and I will yield to the Senator, but before doing so I wish to make just one statement, that in my opinion the group comprising senatorial secretaries is a group very deserving—a very loyal and a very capable class of employees. I do not think the Senator would wish to characterize them as distinguished principally for nepotism.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Certainly.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I agree with every word the Senator has said.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Then there is nothing further to talk about. Let us go on with the bill.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, the observation I made regarding senatorial secretaries was drawn out by a remark of the Senator from Arkansas. I said, and I repeat, that when the public hears about our secretaries from our critics in the newspapers it usually is in respect to that sort of a discussion, whereas the President's Secretary is known to the press and to the Nation in a totally different aspect, and I think we are bound to recognize that fact. No senatorial secretary will ever get a radio contract for $100 a minute. I respectfully submit that there is no escape from the conclusion that the President's Secretary capitalizes a high position, belonging to the Nation, for private gain.

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5755) to encourage national industrial recovery, to foster fair competition, and to provide for the construction of certain useful public works, and for other purposes.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I have two amendments I should like to offer. Both of them have been submitted to the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER], and he has agreed that they may be sent to conference.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will report the first amendment submitted by the Senator from Massachusetts.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Senator from Massachusetts proposes to amend section 202, page 18, line 21, after the semicolon, by inserting the following:

To make loans to finance the construction or purchase of the buildings, equipment, and apparatus to be used for, or to promote the welfare of, nonprofit federations of labor unions: Provided, That loans under this paragraph may be made through the purchase of securities, or otherwise, and for such purpose the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is authorized to bid for such securities.

Mr. WALSH. I understand that the Senator from New York is willing that this amendment may go to conference.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I shall make no objection, but I hope it will be made broader in conference.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, this amendment is offered at the request of the American Federation of Labor to permit federations of labor which own and operate buildings and housing projects to secure temporary financial assistance to prevent the forced sale of properties.

These properties are self-liquidating in character and are operated without profit.

This amendment is permissive only, and loans will be made or securities purchased only if the security offered is sufficient to insure the payment of the loan.

This amendment will make it possible for these federations of labor to carry on and extend the constructive work they are doing without being penalized through the forced sale of properties.

The forced sale of these properties or the inability of these federations of labor to extend their activities will cause large financial losses to many thousands of thrifty Americans.

Many federations of labor have been seriously injured through the closing of banks in which their funds were deposited and further through the forced sale of properties, the indebtedness of which was held by closed banks.

Mr. BORAH. Are they placed in any different situation from anyone else whose home is likely to be lost? Let us make it broad enough to reach all home owners in distress.

Mr. WALSH. They are not in any different situation, but provisions have been made, of course, for home owners and farmers whose homes and farms are threatened with foreclosure.

Mr. BORAH. I have no objection to making any preparation possible to save the homes of laborers, but I was wondering whether that was confined exclusively to laborers? I have no objection to it going to conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. POPE. Mr. President, I offer an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 20, line 8, it is proposed to strike out the comma after the word "project" and strike out all the words beginning with the word "but", in line 8, and ending with the word "project", in line 10.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, is that the amendment striking out "30 percent"?

Mr. POPE. Yes.

Mr. HARRISON. I am willing to let it go to conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Idaho. [Putting the question.] The "noes" have it, and the amendment is rejected.

Mr. COOLIDGE. Mr. President, out of order, I offer an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 42, after line 19, it is proposed to insert the following new subsection:

(k) Section 1 of the act entitled "An act to provide revenue by the taxation of certain nonintoxicating liquor, and for other purposes", approved March 22, 1933, is amended by inserting immediately after the words "fruit juices" where they first appear therein the following: "(except cider)."

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I should like to say a word about the amendment.

Mr. HARRISON. That matter should come up later.

Mr. DILL. Mr. President——

Mr. TYDINGS. I should like to explain the amendment without being interrupted by 2 or 3 Senators.

Mr. DILL. I should like to know what the effect of it is.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is what I am going to explain.

Mr. President, inadvertently in passing the beer bill nonintoxicating fruit juices were taxed at the same rate that beer was taxed. Unless the law shall be changed the farmer will have to pay on a barrel of cider the full tax that the brewer pays on a barrel of beer. It never was the intention of the Senate to tax cider.

Mr. DILL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes; I yield.

Mr. DILL. That only applies if the cider contains more than 3.2 percent of alcohol.

Mr. TYDINGS. No; it does not. It applies to all cider having less than 3.2 percent of alcohol but more than one half of 1 percent, so that practically all cider would be subject to a tax of $10 a barrel. If we want to adjourn, with this season's apple crop coming on, and have every farmer in the land pay $10 a barrel tax on his cider, that is one thing; but I do not believe the Senate wants to do that, and the Senator from Massachusetts has offered an amendment to cure that defect in the law.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. COPELAND. Is it not a fact that if a farmer is making cider with a view to developing vinegar that after fermentation sets in and the alcoholic content exceeds one half of 1 percent, he must then give bond?

Mr. TYDINGS. That is right.

Mr. COPELAND. And if this amendment were to be adopted, it would relieve that situation.

Mr. TYDINGS. It would relieve it. In the first place, it was an oversight in the passage of the particular bill and this is the last chance, I am afraid, to have it corrected.

Mr. COPELAND. I am frank to say that in my State it is a matter of great concern wherever apples are raised.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I think there can be no objection to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GEORGE in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the clerk's desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri offers an amendment, which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 19, line 3, it is proposed to strike out "and if" and insert in lieu thereof the following:

(f) the construction and operation, by a corporation to be formed by the President, under the laws of any State or the District of Columbia, and to be controlled by the Secretary of Agriculture, which shall be a Government instrumentality to effectuate the policy declared in the Agricultural Adjustment Act, approved May 12, 1933, of plants to manufacture ethyl alcohol from agricultural commodities grown within the United States, and the distribution and sale of such alcohol and byproducts thereof, such plants to be constructed and operated only in such States as the Secretary of Agriculture finds have made, by law or otherwise, adequate provision for requiring or encouraging the purchase from the corporation of such alcohol and the use thereof for motor-vehicle fuel or other purposes; and (g) if.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, this amendment was prepared by the Department of Agriculture and has the specific approval of the President of the United States.

The amendment in general provides for the development of a project for the use of alcohol from farm products for motor fuel and other purposes. General information on this subject will be found in Senate Document No. 57, Seventy-third Congress, first session, entitled "Use of Alcohol from Farm Products in Motor Fuel" submitted by the Secretary of Agriculture in response to Senate Resolution No. 65.

While the method proposed is different, the subject matter is essentially the same as that covered by the bill introduced in the Senate by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. DICKINSON] and myself.

The amendment authorizes the President to form a Government corporation to establish plants for the manufacture and sale of alcohol from farm products such as corn, wheat, sorghum, rye, rice, oats, potatoes, and sweetpotatoes. The plants will, however, be established only in such States as take affirmative action, by law or otherwise, to avail themselves of the advantages of the project. There is no Federal compulsion whatsoever. Any use of alcohol in motor fuel or for other purposes would, if compulsory, be so solely by reason of State action.

Under the farm relief bill, the corn-hog situation has usually been considered the most difficult to meet. The proposed amendment, in providing a new outlet for corn, will take care of the surplus corn production and at the same time place upon the Corn Belt and other interested States the responsibility of taking the necessary steps to provide a market for the alcohol. The Government corporation would be under the control of the Department of Agriculture, thereby permitting operation on such basis as will stabilize the agricultural situation. This can be done by making purchases in those years when corn or other crops are cheap by reason of surplus production, yet marketing the alcohol on a substantially constant basis.

The effect on the unemployment situation can be gathered from the following statistics: 28 plants with 20,600,000 gallons capacity each would produce alcohol in an amount equivalent to 5 percent of the annual consumption of motor fuel. These plants would cost $111,300,000, employ 78,160 men for 1 year in building and equipping the plants, consume an annual average of 245,000,000 bushels of grain, 4,200,000 tons of coal, require $60,280,000 worth of freight service a year, and 4,160 factory employees a year.

As I have said, Mr. President, this amendment was prepared under the supervision of the Administrator of the Farm Relief Act and has the specific approval of the President of the United States.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CLARK. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. By what authority does the Senator from Missouri say that it has the approval of the President of the United States?

Mr. CLARK. I have been so informed by those who speak for the President.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Constitution provides a way for the President to advise Congress of his views, and I just want to challenge the statement of the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, the Senator from Texas understands that we have not done a thing at this session except to act on measures sent up here from the departments, with the approval of the President.

Mr. CONNALLY. I want to advise Senators that if we adopt this amendment, we are going to increase the price of every gallon of gasoline which their constituents burn in their automobiles.

This matter was considered by the Finance Committee. The gentlemen who are interested in it were present; the committee decided that it was a matter that ought not to be taken up at this time, and rejected it, but agreed that at the next session of Congress, when we had time to go into the matter, it will be considered and proper attention given to it.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, the Senator does not mean to say that this matter was presented to the committee and rejected. The Senator from Iowa and myself introduced the bill the Senator has in mind. It was never acted on by the committee. It was originally my intention to offer it as an amendment to the gasoline tax bill, but, at the suggestion of the Chairman of the Finance Committee that this matter ought to be considered further, it was agreed that it should not be presented as an amendment to that bill. However, it was not acted on by the committee, and it was not rejected. It was agreed, so far as the Senator from Iowa and I were concerned, that we were willing to have the matter submitted to the committee to be reported back. This is a measure that comes from the Farm-Relief Administrator. It is essentially a different proposition from the other.

Mr. CONNALLY. I will say to the Senator that I do not care to get into any controversy about the facts. I still insist that so far as this bill was concerned, it was rejected with the understanding that it would be taken up later. The Senator from Missouri was present, and the chairman of the committee, while I have not consulted him, is here and can state what occurred.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, the fact about it is that when the tax bill came over from the House some time ago representatives of farmer groups came before the committee to press an amendment with reference to some character of tax touching blended alcohol. We knew it was quite a complicated matter; it had various angles to it. The Senator from Missouri, who is much interested in this subject matter, was there, and we asked these gentlemen not to present the matter at that particular time, but that the Senator from Missouri would offer a joint resolution or that under the power granted him, the Chairman of the Finance Committee would appoint a subcommittee to go out to investigate this question from every angle, and submit a report next January. And so the committee did decide to that extent; but this particular matter was not before the committee.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, the proposition that was tentatively before the committee but never offered as an amendment was the proposition to compel the mixture of alcohol with gasoline by the use of the taxing power of the United States. That was essentially a different proposition from the one herein contained, because this is simply a provision to be added to the public-works program.

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator is correct in that respect. I never heard of this proposition until about 3 days ago, when a representative of the Agricultural Department, with the O.K. of the President of the United States, I may say handed me this particular suggested amendment and said they were very anxious to have it incorporated in this bill. I told him that we would bring it to the attention of the committee. I called it to the attention of the Senator from Missouri because he had been very much interested in the subject. That is why it is before the Senate. I hope the Senate will express its judgment and decide whether or not it wants to give the President the power to make these experiments.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President——

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a suggestion?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. REED. From the standpoint of experimentation is it not established beyond peradventure that ethyl alcohol can be distilled from corn?

Mr. CONNALLY. To be sure; as well as any other kind of alcohol.

Mr. REED. Is there any sense in further experimentation along this line? We might just as well build an experimental station to determine whether gasoline may be distilled from petroleum. We know it can be.

Mr. CONNALLY. Certainly.

Mr. REED. Or we might as well build a gasoline refinery as to adopt this proposal.

Mr. CONNALLY. Let me say to the Senator from Pennsylvania also that if this amendment is to be considered at all, it ought to be considered as a matter of farm relief rather than on a tax bill seeking to raise money for the purpose of carrying on the public-works program.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. Does not the Senator think it is pretty late in the session to be raising the question of what subjects shall be added to various bills. Throughout the session we have been passing bills that are hodge-podges of everything that could be conceived; and it seems to me to be pretty late to be raising the question as to whether a particular amendment is offered to an appropriate bill.

Mr. CONNALLY. Let me suggest to the Senator from Missouri that some of us think it is rather late for the Senator from Missouri, who is a member of the committee and who did not press the matter before the committee, to come in now in the closing hours of the session and in the closing hours of the consideration of the bill, and press this wholly new and novel proposition.

Mr. CLARK. The matter was never presented to me until after the bill had been reported.

Mr. CONNALLY. It was never presented to the Senator from Missouri until after the bill had been reported. When the committee had it under consideration, according to what the Senator from Mississippi has already said, the committee rejected it so far as this bill was concerned and postponed it for future consideration of the committee. I submit, whether a Senator is from a corn State or a cotton State or a shoe State or a steel State or a coal State, all of us are going to buy gasoline. I submit it is uneconomic, it is not sound economics to force the people to put alcohol in their gasoline when they can buy the gasoline less expensively without the alcohol in it.

Mr. CLARK. If the Senator will read the amendment proposed, he will find there is absolutely no element of compulsion in it whatever. The amendment simply provides that as a part of the public-works program the President, if he so desires, shall have authority to create a corporation to be controlled by the Secretary of Agriculture, which is a part of the public-works program, and shall have the right to construct these plants.

Mr. CONNALLY. In order to make clear the Senator's amendment, I will read parts of it.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Texas if this amendment is to put corn juice in gasoline? [Laughter.]

Mr. CONNALLY. That is the object of it. Here is what the Senator from Missouri wants to do: The Senator from Missouri has said we have passed all kinds of fool bills and fool provisions and therefore, having done that, we should pass or adopt one more. Let us see what his amendment provides.

The amendment of the Senator from Missouri authorizes the President to provide, if he sees fit—

For the construction and operation by a corporation—

Another corporation!—

to be formed by the President, under the laws of any State or the District of Columbia, and to be controlled by the Secretary of Agriculture, which shall be a Government instrumentality to effectuate the policy declared by the Agricultural Adjustment Act approved May 12 of plants to manufacture ethyl alcohol from agricultural commodities grown within the United States, and the distribution and sale of such alcohol and byproducts thereof, such plants to be constructed and operated only in such States as the Secretary of Agriculture finds have made, by law or otherwise, adequate provision for requiring—

The Senator from Missouri said there is no compulsion in it!—

for requiring or encouraging the purchase from the corporation of such alcohol and the use thereof for motor-vehicle fuel or other purposes.

Mr. President, while the amendment itself may not have any compulsion in it, its objective away out yonder is compulsion. Its objective is to spend millions of dollars of Government money to find out something that everybody already knows, and that is that almost any kind of alcohol can be made out of corn.

Mr. CLARK. Does the Senator find anything in the amendment about experimentation? This is simply an amendment to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to build plants for the reduction of grain to alcohol in States which have themselves of their own motion provided therefor. It does not compel anybody to use gasoline and alcohol unless they want to do so. It does not say a word about experimentation. It simply authorizes, as a part of the public-works program, the Secretary of Agriculture to build the plants.

Mr. CONNALLY. Let me suggest to the Senator from Missouri that one trouble in the country is that we have been mixing alcohol and gasoline too much in the past.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator from Texas yield?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. REED. As the amendment is drawn it seems to me it would include blackstrap molasses.

Mr. CONNALLY. Oh, to be sure.

Mr. REED. At the present moment there are millions of gallons of alcohol being made out of blackstrap molasses in this country. Why should the Government go into that business?

Mr. CONNALLY. The purpose of the amendment is to relieve those States that are trying to force the people to buy alcohol and to use it in their gasoline and to have the plants financed out of the Federal Treasury, which those States ought themselves to maintain. If those States are interested in forcing their citizens to burn alcohol instead of gasoline, let them spend the money out of their own treasuries to build up the plants. This is a self-liquidating proposition, as is suggested to me sotto voce by the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE].

The States that are ambitious to operate on their own citizens, to innoculate their automobiles with a little alcohol made out of their corn, should go into their own treasuries and establish the plants for the manufacture of ethyl alcohol. Why should the Government of the United States go into the business of manufacturing ethyl alcohol, when, as suggested by the Senator from Pennsylvania, there are plants over all the country today manufacturing ethyl alcohol from blackstrap molasses and also from corn, if it can be done economically. If it cannot be done economically, it ought not to be done at all.

I hope the Senate will vote down the amendment and not add another tax on the users of our roads and the users of automobiles in the United States.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri. [Putting the question.] The Chair is in doubt.

On a division, the amendment was rejected.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment and ask for its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts offers an amendment, which will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Senator from Massachusetts proposes, on page 28, after line 10, to insert:

SEC. —. (a) For the purpose of expediting the actual construction of public works contemplated by this title and to provide a means of financial assistance to persons under contract with the United States to perform such construction, the President is authorized and empowered, through the Administrator or through such other agencies as he may designate or create, to approve any assignment executed by any such contractor, with the written consent of the surety or sureties upon the penal bond executed in connection with his contract, to any National or State bank, of his claim against the United States, or any part of such claim, under such contract; and any assignment so approved shall be valid for all purposes, notwithstanding the provisions of sections 3737 and 3477 of the Revised Statutes, as amended.

(b) The funds received by a contractor under any advances made in consideration of any such assignment are hereby declared to be trust funds in the hands of such contractor to be first applied to the payment of claims of subcontractors, architects, engineers, surveyors, laborers, and material men in connection with the project, to the payment of premiums on the penal bond or bonds, and premiums accruing during the construction of such project on insurance policies taken in connection therewith. Any contractor and any officer, director, or agent of any such contractor, who applies, or consents to the application of, such funds for any other purpose and fails to pay any claim or premium hereinbefore mentioned, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000, or by imprisonment for not more than 1 year, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(c) Nothing in this section shall be considered as imposing upon the assignee any obligation to see to the proper application of the funds advanced by the assignee in consideration of such assignment.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, sections of the Revised Statutes forbid a contractor on a public project from making any assignment of his contract or any part of it on his contract. The result has been that the contractor who can not immediately finance his job has been removed from any opportunity of obtaining a contract.

The amendment has been submitted to the Supervising Architect's Office. It is with his consent and approval that it is offered. Let me read what he says about it:

I am not authorized to express my opinion on the amount for the Treasury Department, and the following is only my personal opinion. I consider that the provision outlined in the amendment is a meritorious one, and I see no objection to its enactment.

That is signed by Mr. Wetmore, the Supervising Architect.

Then I have a statement from the solicitor of the same department, as follows:

My personal view of this matter is the same as that above expressed by Mr. Wetmore.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Massachusetts explain the objective of his amendment?

Mr. WALSH. Under existing law a contractor may not assign any portion or part of his contract or funds to be realized on it. The amendment would permit him, with the permission of the administrator of the public-works program, to make an assignment to a bank of a portion or part or all, so that the fund would be available to help him finance his contract. Because the banks have closed their doors to contractors the contractors have no credit. Only a few prosperous and highly successful contractors can do any public work. The average contractor has no chance.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WALSH. I yield.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. There are some people from my State who have very valuable contracts for a public building, and they have found they cannot even borrow enough money from the banks to meet their pay rolls.

Mr. WALSH. They cannot even assign the money coming from the Federal Government to get enough to meet their pay roll?

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. No. They came down to get funds from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and found they were not eligible under the law.

Mr. WALSH. Banks have heretofore been reluctant to extend credit to contractors engaged in Government work because they have been unable to get adequate legal security. Banks consider assignments to be sound security. The inability of the contractor to obtain credit from banks has left him only one alternative, and that has been to apply for credit from a finance company. It is well known that finance companies make excessive and often illegal charges for loans. The finance-company element in the financing of Federal construction has been a source of much evil. This is freely admitted by the Government officials whose business it is to administer these contracts.

The Government will be benefited if the proposed amendment is adopted, because it will insure a better class of contractors with which to deal. The Government has had a great number of disagreeable experiences with the type of contractor who leaves a large number of accounts unpaid after finishing one project and who bids upon another and is awarded it, on the promise by him, both to the Government and to his creditors, that he will pay his old accounts with the funds to be received under the new contract. This amendment provides that the funds received from one contract shall be used to pay the bills incurred in performing that contract. There can be no diversion of funds to the prejudice of creditors.

The amendment has two major purposes. The first is to permit the contractor to secure legitimate financing at a reasonable cost; the second is to prevent the contractor from taking the money he receives from the bank in consideration for the assignment which is permitted in the amendment, and diverting such money; that is, using it to benefit others than his creditors. This amendment was taken almost verbatim from the lien law of the State of New York. The reforms contained in the amendment were adopted in New York after a legislative committee appointed for the purpose had conducted an exhaustive investigation into all of the factors of the construction industry. It is generally looked upon as a thing of great merit.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, this is to help the average contractor of very limited means?

Mr. WALSH. Exactly.

Mr. BORAH. Let us put it in the bill as it is presented.

Mr. WALSH. I ask for a vote on the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from Massachusetts.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Arkansas offers an amendment, which will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Senator from Arkansas proposes, on page 42, to add to section 219 the following:

The President is authorized to allocate so much of said sum, not in excess of $100,000,000, as he may determine to be necessary for expenditure in carrying out the Agricultural Adjustment Act and the purposes, powers, and functions heretofore and hereafter conferred upon the Farm Credit Administration.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I understood we had a unanimous-consent agreement to dispose of committee amendments first.

Mr. HARRISON. I think that as to this title the committee amendments have all been disposed of.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is advised that later on the Senate ordered individual amendments to be considered under this title. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment which I ask to have stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Minnesota offers an amendment, which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 22, line 11, after the word "highway", it is proposed to insert the words "maintenance and."

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, just a word to explain the amendment.

The Senator from New York and the Senator from Mississippi have indicated to me that they will not object to this amendment. It will provide for day labor on the maintenance and repair of highways and the construction of cement roads.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I have no objection to the amendment going to conference.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Minnesota.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, at the request of the Agricultural Department in a statement to me that it was essential to the proper reduction of acreage, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk and suggest that it be added as a new section on page 14, line 4, just after the word "agriculture."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to insert, at the proper place in the bill, the following:

Notwithstanding any provision of any existing law, the Secretary of Agriculture may, in the administration of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, make public such information as he deems necessary in order to effectuate the purposes of such act.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I have another amendment which I have also been asked to submit. It is a modification of section 7 in order to meet the existing conditions. There is an explanation which I will not send up. I ask to have the amendment inserted at the proper place.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 42, after line 19, after the amendment of Mr. COOLIDGE already agreed to, it is proposed to insert the following:

Section 7 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, approved May 12, 1933, is amended by striking out all of its present terms and provisions and substituting therefor the following:

"SEC. 7. The Secretary shall sell the cotton held by him at his discretion, but subject to the foregoing provisions: Provided, That he shall dispose of all cotton held by him by March 1, 1936: Provided further, That, notwithstanding the provisions of section 6, the Secretary shall have authority to enter into option contracts with producers of cotton to sell to the producers such cotton, in such amounts and at such prices and upon terms and conditions as the Secretary may deem advisable, in combination with rental or benefit payments provided for in part 2 of this title."

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment, on page 29, to strike out lines 11 to 26, inclusive, and to insert in lieu thereof "Issue of United States notes."

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold that amendment for just a moment? Are there any other amendments to this other title?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Has any Senator any other amendments to this section?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I am somewhat confused. I understood at first that we were to complete the committee amendments; but now I understand that individual amendments to the tax section of the bill are to be considered as they are offered. I wanted to make certain that a compliance with the suggestion of the Senator from Mississippi would not foreclose any Senator from offering an amendment after the amendment tendered by the Senator from Montana had been disposed of.

Mr. HARRISON. It was the order, may I say, that the committee amendments should be disposed of first. We have almost reached that stage. There are one or two little individual amendments here that ought to be adopted first. We have reached the stage where I do not think there are going to be more than one or two votes. I understand that a sales-tax proposal is to be offered to the Senate, a proposition on taxes. Does the Senator from Montana prefer to have a vote on his amendment first?

Mr. WHEELER. Yes; I prefer to have a vote on this amendment before we go to the sales tax or other matters, because it seems to me that if they should be adopted it would change the situation with reference to the sales tax and with reference to several other taxing proposals.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Montana offers an amendment, which will be stated.

Mr. HARRISON. I hope the Senator will wait until we can clean up some individual amendments on this matter before getting to taxation.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Are there other individual amendments?

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President——

Mr. WHEELER. I will withhold this amendment, with the understanding, however, that it will be offered first when we come to that part of the bill.

Mr. HARRISON. I have no objection to its being offered first.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I ask the attention of the Senator from Mississippi. I have an amendment to the text on page 29 which I desire to offer, but I will not do so until the able Senator tells me that it will not interfere with his plan of procedure. It is to the text on page 29.

Mr. HARRISON. I should like to clean up everything before we get to the text.

Mr. ASHURST. Very well. I think the Senator is correct; but I wanted to know, so that I would not be foreclosed. I withhold the amendment.

Mr. KEAN. Mr. President——

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, will the Senator from New Jersey permit me to offer an amendment at the instance of the committee to clean up just one matter?

Mr. KEAN. Yes.

Mr. HARRISON. On page 18, after the word "construction" on line 19, I move to insert "reconstruction, alteration, or repair."

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, just a moment. I do not understand where that comes in.

Mr. HARRISON. It will come in on line 19, page 18. After the word "construction" I move to insert "reconstruction, alteration, or repair."

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Is it not necessary, to accomplish the result the Senator desires to achieve, to strike out the words "under public regulation or control"?

Mr. HARRISON. May I say to the Senator that this amendment was suggested a few moments ago by General Johnson. He said he thought it was necessary. That is why it is offered.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Yes; but I think the words "under public regulation or control" will have to come out in order to achieve the objectives which the Senator has in mind.

Mr. HARRISON. I move also at that point that the words immediately following, "under public regulation or control", be stricken out.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. KEAN] has withheld an amendment in order to enable the Senator from Mississippi to offer an amendment. Is the Senator from Mississippi prepared to offer the amendment?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes, Mr. President. On lines 18 and 19, page 18, after the word "construction", I move to add the words "reconstruction, alteration, or repair."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 18, line 19, after the word "construction", it is proposed to insert "reconstruction, alteration, or repair."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KEAN. Mr. President, I offer the amendment, which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New Jersey offers an amendment, which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 20, line 10, after the word "project", it is proposed to insert:

which public-works project may be leased for a term of years to the political division wherein it may be located, with the privilege of purchase by said political division upon the payment of a sum equal to 6 percent per annum of the true value of such public-works project, of which 4 percent shall be the interest charge and 2 percent shall be the amortization payment; the total of which amortization payment shall not, in the aggregate, amount to more than 70 percent of the true value of the public-works project.

Mr. KEAN. Mr. President, this amendment which I have offered is to enable the cities of New Jersey to get something out of this bill.

At the present time they are taxed varying amounts up to the legal limit of the law of New Jersey. The consequence is that under the law they can issue bonds only for the time the engineer says the improvements will last. Under those circumstances they probably could not qualify under this bill at all.

This amendment is offered by me at the request of the largest city in New Jersey, to enable them to construct some public works under this bill and to obtain some of the benefits of it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey.

The amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Are there further amendments to this section of the bill?

Mr. CAPPER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter that I have received from Mr. Isely on the subject covered by the new section 207. In connection with the letter I wish to express my hearty approval of the new section relating to subsistence homesteads. Under the provisions of that section it is hoped that we will be able to put into operation many well-worked-out plans for supplying small 5- and 10-acre subsistence homesteads for thousands of farmers and laborers. I have in mind one in the State of Kansas, known as the "Ford County Housing Association", sponsored by Mr. C. C. Isely, the originator of this rural housing idea in the West.

Dodge City is a thriving industrial city in the heart of the Kansas wheat belt, a city that has made remarkable progress in the last two decades. It is one of the historic cities of Kansas. The junior Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], who, I believe, is the author of this amendment, tells me that the type of project planned by the Ford County Housing Association will be eligible for assistance under this section. It probably would be eligible under subsection (d) of section 202, but the adoption of the subsistence homestead amendment seems to remove all doubt. When the enterprise is in operation it will provide homes for several hundred rural families on small suburban farms.

It is not my intention at this time to take up the time of the Senate explaining the Ford County housing project, but at my request Mr. Isely has written me a letter explaining the project very clearly, and I ask unanimous consent to have it printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks. I send the letter to the desk.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD as follows:

THE FORD COUNTY HOUSING ASSOCIATION,
Dodge City, Kans., June 2, 1933.

Senator ARTHUR CAPPER,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR CAPPER: In regard to the housing section of the Wagner bill, those of us who have been working with this problem in Kansas feel that there should be either an amendment or an interpretation that would definitely authorize housing in suburban or rural areas, with the special objective of rehabilitating the unemployed on small tracts of land so that they can become self-sustaining. The emphasis has been on slum clearance.

None of us like the word "dole", yet every family that is even partially sustained by public or private help, or by friends or relatives, adds to the entire country's economic burden. If that family can be so placed as to become self-sustaining that burden is removed and a large percentage of such families soon become producers, and in turn, consumers. This isn't a spectacular process but it is on the sure route to recovery.

We have been concerned now for 6 months with a project we have under way here in Ford County. Communities all over Kansas are watching us, writing us, phoning us, hoping that we get under way, under the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and that similar plans can be initiated in their communities. Letters also from other States evoke a similar interest. We set out here as an initial undertaking to find suitable housing for 100 families. We have had from 200 to 400 families receiving some form of public relief. We have received applications from these families and had a committee sort out those considered best suited to succeed in the undertaking. We found that in many cases two families were occupying quarters not sufficient for one family. We have been informed that in places like Kansas City, in spite of empty residences, that this crowding up is on a large scale. Of the 100 applicants we found that it included artisans of all sorts, carpenters, carpenters' helpers, plumbers, painters, plasterers, cement workers, electricians, and common laborers. All of these selected families had some equipment. In a community like this we found that all of them had some farm experience. We understand, in experiments tried elsewhere, that many of those purely city bred were just as successful when placed on a rural tract as the country bred. I suppose they followed instructions better and were not hampered by preconceived concepts as to what should be done in their rural surroundings. Since we were selecting a site a few miles out of town we were confronted with a transportation problem. We found 65 percent of our applicants had some sort of a car and most of them were mechanically inclined, and that would be a big help.

Now the plan is not to have these people produce the items that are now disturbing the agricultural experts of this country. It is not proposed to produce wheat or cotton or tobacco, but primarily such fruits and vegetables, eggs and milk, that they can use for themselves. Remember many of these families have not had enough to eat; or, at best, they have subsisted on unbalanced rations that have not been conducive to good health. So our first concern was to get them established to live and have elemental food. The next step was to get them to produce enough of vegetables so they could be marketed locally. In the Arkansas Valley, with irrigation, anything can be produced, and there is a large market, on the wheat table land adjoining this valley and stretching away for 100 miles north and south, to sell all the surplus that can be produced. It is planned to erect a community canning kitchen so that surplus here provided can be conserved. The home-demonstration agent, following the example successfully carried on in the South, will show the women of these families not only how to preserve these foods for their own use but how to prepare them for the nearby market. Of course, in this climate poultry production will be a valuable side line for all these families, providing them with eggs and meat and supplementing their income.

Now, to get this under way, we have organized these artisans, so that they can do 90 percent of the work in erecting these houses and other buildings. Foremen have been selected, and they will direct the work. The way this project is now planned, the houses and tracts are leased to tenants. A low initial rental charge is set up for the first 2 or 3 years. A portion of the compensation received for the work will be paid to the housing association, which is essentially a cooperative enterprise, as a first payment on the house they are to occupy. This initial payment is made in consideration of this low rental and for the further purpose of giving the tenants an option to purchase the property. The money borrowed from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for this purpose or from the administrator of the Wagner bill will be repaid out of rentals. These rentals in turn will be set up by our housing corporation and allocated as interest and payments as principal.

I notice reports that housing corporations have planned and have actually set up in some of the cities huge tenement houses in which it is proposed to rent to families of low income single rooms for $10 and $12 and $14 per month. Our plans contemplate initial rentals of only $10 to $12 per month for a 4-room house and a few acres of land and garden house for vegetables, a cow, and poultry. Of course these rentals will have to be stepped up, but, under the plans we have under way, the average rentals over a period of 16 years should not average over $15 or $16 a month. Now, if we had the funds allocated to our use, we could place 500 families immediately in this part of Kansas. The demand is almost without limit. The security offered is greatly enhanced in the demand for the service. Tenant farmers, living on poorly improved wheat farms all over the West in 6 States, would like such a situation as this, so that they could properly produce vegetables not produced efficiently on the wheat uplands of these Western States. Here, too, they could efficiently care for their cows and poultry. At the same time, with modern machinery, they could farm the wheat farms, even if those farms were as much as a hundred miles away. A tenant in such a situation would not be out of money during a time of wheat failure and need a seed loan. Again, there are many landowners living as far east as Hutchinson and Wichita in Kansas, who are farming their lands as far west as the Kansas line and into Colorado. These farmers or their sons would be glad to have a chance to occupy a small irrigated tract and do their upland farming not so far from home. I mention these things to show you that the demand for this type of housing is not only practically unlimited but there is no danger in this type of investment to the public agencies making the loans. These projects will not cost the taxpayer a dime if properly set up. Care should be taken not to overdo the thing in any one community. Projects should be grouped to have highway, school, and electrical accommodations. These things make vacancies at zero and improve the security of the loans.

Now, there is another thing to be considered. When the unemployed build a road, a bridge, a tunnel, a dam, and get the job finished they are again out of a job. They are just where they were. These projects must be paid for out of taxes, even though planned to be paid for out of tolls. The labor on a road with a hoe or a shovel, as we are doing now, is inefficient and an insult to the self-respecting man doing the work. Building a cottage, however, is all proper and efficient hand work. The saw, the hammer, the trowel, the paintbrush, the hoe mixing mortar, the shovel digging a trench, all are suitable types of hand work making the laborer feel like he is doing worth-while work. From the time the tree is felled in Arkansas or Washington or the cement quarried from the limestone ledges in southeast Kansas there is work all the way. I observe a report just out from Washington that freight-car loadings, factory employment, industrial production, department store sales run 53 percent, 58 percent, 67 percent, and 68 percent normal. Values of imports and exports 25 percent and 29 percent, while building construction of all kinds is only 14 percent. The best of these figures is poor enough. But until there is something of a balance, until the greatest hand labor job of all, namely, building, is resumed, unemployment will stare this country in the face. Now, there is no more advantage building slum-clearance tenements than there is building roads; but to get a few millions back to the land on small tracts, where they can get part-time employment or seasonal employment, is tremendously essential, and the Wagner bill should be so set up that lawyers will not find objections and delay us, as they have for months in this Ford County housing project, wondering whether we could, under the law, really occupy land that would sustain a family and furnish him some additional income.

I am sorry this letter is so long, but I have tried to cover only a few of the main points.

Very truly yours,

C. C. ISELY.

Mr. WHEELER obtained the floor.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment to the original text, on page 42, line 24. Shall I offer that amendment at this time, or after the amendment offered by the Senator from Montana has been disposed of? I am perfectly willing to have the Senator from Montana proceed at this time; but I do not wish to be foreclosed from offering that amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator desire to offer the amendment at this point?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The Senator from Montana is anxious to proceed, and I am perfectly willing to permit him to do so; but I want it understood that I shall not be foreclosed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That will be the understanding.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Wisconsin whether he proposes to offer the amendment at the conclusion of the tax discussion? I take it that the Senator has in mind the so-called "water-power matter."

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. No; I was talking about an amendment to increase the size of the public-works program.

Mr. WAGNER. I beg the Senator's pardon.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Montana has the floor.

Mr. WHEELER. I yield to the Senator from California.

Mr. JOHNSON. May I have the attention of the Senator from New York?

There is a very brief amendment, to which I think there is no objection, which has been submitted to the Senator from New York, on page 43, striking out the words "to bid upon or purchase bonds", which I think the Senator will accept and take to conference. Then, if there is any conflict——

Mr. WAGNER. I suggest that the amendment be sent to conference.

Mr. JOHNSON. I offer the amendment, then, to strike out the words "to bid upon or purchase bonds", in lines 17 and 18 on page 43.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from California.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk. It is an amendment on page 29, to strike out lines 11 to 26, inclusive, and to insert in lieu thereof the matter which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. The amendment is to strike out lines 11 to 26, both inclusive, on page 29, and to insert the following:

ISSUE OF UNITED STATES NOTES

SEC. 207. (a) The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to issue, from time to time, United States notes in such amounts as may be necessary to meet the expenditures authorized by this act, which shall be used for the purposes herein provided. Such notes shall be of such denominations, not less than $1, as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, shall not bear interest, shall be payable to bearer, shall be in such form as the Secretary may deem best, and shall be lawful money and legal tender in payment of all debts, public and private, within the United States; and such notes, when held by any Federal Reserve bank or any member bank of the Federal Reserve System, may be counted as a part of its lawful reserve.

(b) The Secretary of the Treasury is further authorized and directed to increase annually the reserve fund held for the redemption of United States notes by an amount sufficient to retire annually the notes issued under the provisions of this act as follows: During the period of 2 years after the date of enactment of this act, at the rate of 4 percent of the total amount of such notes issued and outstanding at the end of each year, and thereafter at the rate of 4 percent of the total amount issued and outstanding at the end of such 2-year period until all such notes shall have been retired.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, this was the amendment that was offered in the committee to this section by the Senator from California [Mr. MCADOO]. Of course, when he offered it, it had his approval.

I want to call attention to the fact that we have had a great deal of talk about economy during this session of Congress. We have talked about saving money by cutting the allowances of veterans, and saving money by cutting the compensation of employees. We have tried to save money by cutting out services rendered to the people, and in every other way. At no time, however, have we attempted to save money by cutting down the interest on bonds, or by ceasing to issue bonds, and issuing money in the place of bonds.

I propose, through the amendment, to have the Government of the United States make a saving, as it will save, of a total of $1,900,000,000, which we would make if we issued notes instead of the bonds.

If the provisions of sections 207 and 209 of the bill as passed by the House become law, the sums necessary to pay interest and sinking fund on the $3,300,000,000 of bonds to be issued would amount, at the outset, to about 6 percent, or perhaps 6½ percent, made up as follows: Interest on the bonds, 3½ percent plus 2½-percent sinking fund, or interest, 4 percent, plus 2½-percent sinking fund. In the same case the sums to be raised by taxation would amount, in the beginning, to $198,000,000 per annum, or perhaps $214,500,000, depending upon the coupon rate on the bonds issued. Bonds bearing 3½-percent interest would be retired by a 2½-percent sinking fund in 25½ years, while 4-percent bonds would be retired in 24½ years.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, if I understand the amendment, the Senator would do away with the unnecessary burden of collecting taxes and proposes to print the money and save the burden to the people.

Mr. WHEELER. No; that is not correct. That might be the interpretation the Senator would like to have placed upon it, but that is not accurate. I propose that we shall issue Government notes and set aside a sinking fund to take care of those notes and to take up those notes every year, instead of issuing bonds and turning them over to the bankers of the United States, paying the bankers 4-percent interest for issuing the money which the Constitution of the United States provides the Congress of the United States shall do.

Mr. President, does the Senator from Ohio think that when I am proposing this, I am trying to do anything except what was proposed by the fathers in the Constitution of the United States? I am simply asking the Congress to exercise its power to save the people of this country the interest upon these bonds, which would otherwise be paid to the bankers, and to permit the Treasury of the United States to set aside a sinking fund to take care of the notes which would be issued by the Treasury of the United States.

If the public-works program were financed by the issuance of United States notes redeemable at 4 percent per annum, the sums necessary to be raised by taxation would amount to $132,000,000 a year throughout the retirement period of 25 years. The savings to the taxpayers at the outset would thus amount to $66,000,000 a year, or perhaps even $82,500,000.

The total cost for interest and sinking fund of a 4-percent bond issue, with a 2½-percent sinking fund, amounting to $3,300,000,000, would, in round numbers, be $5,200,000,000. Since the total cost of retiring an equivalent amount of United States notes would be only $3,300,000,000, the saving to the taxpayers for the entire operation would amount to $1,900,000,000.

Will any Senator rise in his place and contend that there is no difference between the issuing of the bonds and setting aside a sinking fund to take care of those bonds, and issuing Government notes, without interest, which can be used to pay the public debt, and setting aside a sinking fund to take care of those notes, identically as we take care of the bonds?

Mr. President, this is one way by which we can save money for the Treasury of the United States; this is one way in which we can economize without hurting anybody in the United States; this is one way in which we can economize without cutting wages; this is one way in which we can economize without throwing people out of employment, without throwing veterans out of hospitals, without cutting down veterans' allowances. We can simply say to the people, and to the great banking interests of the country, that this is a means of issuing money, which the Constitution of the United States says in the first instance is the duty of Congress.

I submit that this amendment ought to be adopted, and I hope the Senate will agree to it.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. WHEELER. I will be glad to yield.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. As I understood the Senator's statement, if his amendment were agreed to, he would contemplate providing special taxes in this very bill to set up a 4-percent fund to retire the notes?

Mr. WHEELER. Exactly.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. A net saving, however, would come, because those taxes would not have to be so onerous and burdensome in order to pay additional interest to those who purchased the bonds.

Mr. WHEELER. That is exactly correct.

Mr. BORAH. In other words, the Senator proposes to provide for the retirement of these Treasury notes by other amendments?

Mr. WHEELER. I provide in this very amendment that 4 percent of these notes shall be retired each year over a period until they are all retired. Then we would come to the taxing provisions, and we would have to raise only enough by way of taxes to retire the 4 percent of the notes each year, instead of having to pay the 4 percent or 4½ percent interest on the bonds. In other words, according to the figures I have, the saving would be between $66,000,000 and $82,500,000 a year, depending on the rate of interest we would have to pay upon the bonds.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. President, is there any difference in principle between this amendment proposed by the Senator from Montana and the measure which the Congress has already adopted, the Thomas amendment to the agricultural bill, which provided that $3,000,000,000 could be printed under certain conditions? As I see it, the only difference is that the Senator would just have us inflate it to the extent of $3,300,000,000 more. But if the Senator should provide by this means a repeal of that which the Congress has already done, it occurs to me that this would be the finest way in the world to get this money out.

Mr. WHEELER. I do not think there is any doubt in the world but that this would be the finest way in which to get the money out, to get it into circulation. We hear Senators say on the floor repeatedly that there is plenty of money in the country, that there is plenty of money in the banks, and that there is plenty of credit. The difficulty is to get the money out among the people of the country, to get it into circulation. That is one of the reasons why we are proposing, through a public works bill, to get the money out into circulation, so as to start up industries, and to start buying among the people of the country.

On the one hand we are issuing Government bonds, and we are going to pay the bankers for taking those bonds and putting them into the Federal Reserve bank and issuing currency against them. We are going to pay practically 4 to 4½ percent for doing that very thing, which the Government of the United States under the Constitution has a right to do itself.

In further answer to the Senator's question, of course, under the Thomas amendment, the President would have the right to issue $3,000,000,000 worth of currency. This amendment of mine provides not fiat money, because we are setting up against it a sinking fund, and we are going to tax the people to take care of those notes. So it is quite different, as a matter of fact, from fiat money. We are going to have back of those notes just exactly the same thing we would have back of the bonds we would issue. The notes will have the backing of the taxing power of the country, just exactly as the bonds would have back of them the taxing power of the Government of the United States to make them good. If the notes are not good, then the bonds we are going to issue will not be good. The bonds will not be good unless we can raise taxes to pay them off. The notes will be good to exactly the same extent to which the bonds would be, I repeat, because we are going to raise taxes to take care of those notes and set aside a sinking fund to take them up in identically the same way we will take up the bonds, except that we are going to save the people of this country, during the period of time these bonds would be issued and be taken up, $1,900,000,000.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, does the Senator's amendment provide that the bonds shall be legal tender?

Mr. WHEELER. Exactly. They will be legal tender just the same as currency would be legal tender.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, in response to the interruption made by the Senator from Delaware, may I point out that under the so-called "Thomas amendment" the one and only purpose for which the notes provided in that measure could be issued was to meet maturing obligations of the United States Government. In other words, it is not a blanket provision for the issuance of notes for all purposes.

Mr. HASTINGS. I understand that, but I cannot see the difference in issuing this kind of money to retire bonds that are already out and in the hands of the public and then issuing these new bonds in the first instance to pay for public works.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HASTINGS. I yield if I have the floor.

Mr. FESS. This is a legitimate second step after the first step which we have taken. The first step was the inflation by $3,000,000,000 of notes without any redemption feature. This is the second step; then we will take the third step, and we will be on the road which Germany traveled before we know what we are doing.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, let me say to the Senator—and I think I have the floor—that he is entirely wrong, for the simple reason that Germany does not present a parallel picture at all. When the German currency was issued there was no sinking fund set up to retire it. We are proposing to set up a sinking fund.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President——

Mr. WHEELER. I will yield in just a moment. We are setting up a sinking fund to retire these notes, just exactly the same as we have set up a sinking fund to retire our bonds. So the Senator is absolutely incorrect in attempting to draw the parallel which he seeks to draw between this country and Germany.

Mr. FESS. The Senator from Ohio is not incorrect. What is the money to be collected in the form of taxes worth if it is fiat money?

Mr. WHEELER. This is not fiat money.

Mr. FESS. What will setting up any kind of a sinking fund in depreciated money amount to? So we are on the road that Germany traveled; and this is the second step which I expected to be taken, although I did not expect it to be taken at this session of Congress.

Mr. WHEELER. I repeat, the Senator is wrong in his assumption because of the fact that the currency of Germany was issued in an entirely different manner, and there was no sinking fund set up to retire that currency at any stage of the proceeding.

Mr. President, we hear much about the issuance of $3,000,000,000——

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. I should like to ask the Senator from Ohio a question in connection with his statement. Is not the same thing behind the currency notes that is behind the bonds, namely, the taxing power of the United States?

Mr. FESS. No. Bonds are exchanged for money, and the Government has the money when the bonds are taken.

Mr. BORAH. What kind of money are they exchanged for now?

Mr. FESS. For money that was, until the other day, payable in gold.

Mr. BORAH. I say, what kind of money now is exchanged for the bonds?

Mr. FESS. Any kind of money that the Government is willing to pay.

Mr. BORAH. Exactly. Then, what is the difference?

Mr. FESS. Does the Senator think, after what we have done in the way of eliminating the feature of redemption, that the money which the Senator from Montana is proposing to provide is going to be worth anything in the way of taking care of the sinking fund? The money collected from taxes will be money that is depreciated, depreciated by the issuance of the $3,000,000,000 already to be issued, and now there is to be another $3,300,000,000 issued, and before we get through there will be another issue. The Senator certainly knows that if we proceed on this kind of a basis, all money that has any value will be driven out of circulation.

Mr. BORAH. If we proceed to issue bonds every few days, as we have been doing and are contemplating doing, there will be nothing behind the bonds except the taxing power of the United States; that is all; that is the same thing that is behind this proposed currency, namely, the taxing power of the people of the United States.

Mr. FESS. If the taxing power is to be exercised to collect money in depreciated currency, the money that goes into the sinking fund will be worth no more than the notes which it is proposed to provide.

Mr. BORAH. We are issuing the same kind of money precisely in both instances.

Mr. FESS. Yes, Mr. President, on the basis of the promise of the United States Government, but what will that amount to when we repudiate the promise and issue any amount of money without reference to our ability to redeem it?

Mr. BORAH. It seems that the people thought differently when they bought the bonds which have recently been issued; it seems that they thought the promise of the United States was worth something.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE and Mr. HASTINGS addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Montana yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield to the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. If I remember correctly, the Senator from Ohio and other Senators who were opposed to the gold resolution predicted dire consequences when the United States Government should try to sell any more securities on the market, and, with a good deal of relish, they said they were waiting to see what would happen. If I remember correctly, the $75,000,000 note issue recently put out was gobbled up on the open market at an exceedingly low rate of interest.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CLARK in the Chair). Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. As a matter of fact, the only difference is this: The bonds will draw interest and the Government will tax the people to pay possibly about 4 percent on the total amount outstanding, costing about $132,000,000 in interest. Currency is equally an obligation of the Government of the United States; the credit and good faith of the Government are behind it; and the only difference is that the Government does not have to pay interest on it. There would be an amortization charge of 4 percent, which it would also be necessary to have on the bonds if the Government were going to retire them, and that would retire the currency; but the Government would be saved $132,000,000.

Mr. WHEELER. That is exactly correct.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. President, I want to make this observation: I wish to say to the Senator from Montana, who supported, as I remember, the Thomas amendment, that it seems to me he is wholly consistent, but what I am curious to find is how there can be a successful opposition to his amendment on the part of those who did support the Thomas amendment. As he may remember, I did not agree with the Thomas amendment, and I do not agree with this proposal; but the point that I am making, and the only point I am making, is how is it possible for those who supported the Thomas amendment to oppose the amendment now proposed by the Senator from Montana?

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I entirely agree with the Senator from Delaware with reference to that proposition, but I go farther than that. I do not see how anybody, even though he has been supporting the Thomas amendment, can fail to support this amendment, because, as a matter of fact, the difference between this proposal and the Thomas amendment is that the Thomas amendment did not, as I recall, set up any sinking fund for the purpose of taking care of or retiring the issue of notes. The Senator from Minnesota has well set forth the difference between the issuing of bonds and the issuing of currency.

The Senator from Ohio speaks of bonds as if there were something sacred behind them, and as if there were not something just as sacred behind notes. When the Government issues notes, if it shall issue notes, and when it issues bonds the good faith of the Government of the United States is back of them. The only difference is, in the one instance, the Government pays 4-percent interest to the holders of the bonds, but when it issues notes it does not pay that 4 percent, thereby, over a period of time, saving, by following the procedure suggested in this amendment, $1,900,000,000.

Mr. President, some Senators want to issue bonds. They are perfectly willing to talk about balancing the Budget. I have heard the Senator from Ohio say on the floor of the Senate, and I have heard other Senators say upon the floor of the Senate, that the thing necessary to be done is to balance the Budget. "Balance the Budget", they say, "and business will immediately pick up." I want to say to every Senator on this floor, as to the balancing of the Budget—and I say it with all due respect to any man who has uttered the sentiment—that there is not one thing that the balancing of the Budget has to do with the return of prosperity in this country of ours. As somebody well said on the floor of the Senate the other day, we did not talk about balancing the Budget during the World War; and we are in a worse depression and the country is facing a worse situation now than during the World War.

Here is a chance, Mr. President, to help balance the Budget; here is a chance to help to do something constructive toward balancing the Budget of the United States; here is an opportunity to do something constructive to save the taxpayers of this country over a period of twenty-odd years $1,900,000,000. Here is an opportunity to save the taxpayers of this country that amount of money, and at the same time not put one single man out of a hospital, not cut the salaries or wages of one single Government employee. Here is an opportunity to save $1,900,000,000 to the taxpayers of this country; and by issuing this money we would also stimulate business.

Thus far, Mr. President, there has not been any inflation in this country. Let me ask who are the people who want bonds issued? Who are the people who have come to the Congress and insisted that we must issue bonds? They compose the same group who are now being investigated—the House of Morgan, the investment bankers, the National City Bank, and the group that have been managing and running our financial institutions and have brought us right to the verge of ruination. Yet we are still listening to the same people.

Mr. President, I challenge the Members upon the other side to tell me wherein there is a difference between issuing notes and setting up a sinking fund to take care of them and issuing bonds with a sinking fund to take care of them. The only difference is that a note issue would save the taxpayers the interest upon the money that would go to the great banks of the Federal Reserve System, and nowhere else.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, when we talk about matters of currency it seems to be utterly impossible for some sincere men to understand the principles which the centuries have taught us and which apply to all problems of currency in every land. When the Senator from Montana proposes to issue paper money drawing no interest, and redeemable by a 4-percent annual sinking fund, he is proposing to issue promises to pay which will fall due in an average of 12½ years; some of them not for 25 years, for it will take 25 years for his so-called "sinking fund" to retire all these promises from circulation.

The value of the promise to pay a dollar a year from now is 94 cents, if the rate is 6 percent. It is something less than 88 cents if the promise is to pay in 2 years and the discount is 6 percent; and so on it goes down. The value of a promise to pay at the end of 25 years is but a very small fraction of the face value of the promise. That is a simple enough conception for anyone who has ever taken a note to a bank for discount.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. FESS. The Senator obviously overlooks the fact that the proposed note issue is to be legal tender, and it can be forced on the people.

Mr. REED. I am talking about true value. Assuming that this legal tender is to be redeemed in something of true value, and worth a dollar at the end of 25 years, its discount value, which depends of course upon the rate of interest—the rate of discount one uses—is very substantially less than the face value of the promise.

I do not see how that conception can be denied. If we give it a spurious value by making it legal tender at face value, we have debased our money. Obviously, by making it legal tender we increase the number of units that we have to give for something of present value. It seems to me we make it difficult by trying to argue it, because it is so very plain.

In the Thomas amendment we gave permission to the President to resort to this kind of greenback money to the tune of $3,000,000,000. We also authorized $3,000,000,000 of Federal Reserve notes to be issued in exchange for outstanding Government bonds. We also authorized free silver, but we can leave that out of consideration. If we adopt the Wheeler amendment it will be the second installment of greenbacks authorized to be issued by this special session of Congress.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. WHEELER. Let me say to the Senator that that was permissible on the part of the President, while this is a direction.

Mr. REED. Yes; I know that.

Mr. WHEELER. So this is not the second permission. The trouble is that everybody has been saying we were going to inflate, and the minute we gave the President permission to inflate, the very fact that we gave him that permission, started business of all kinds going up.

Mr. REED. Certainly.

Mr. WHEELER. We have not done anything about it. The President has not done anything about it. The administration has not done anything about it. If something is not done about it, then we will see a complete collapse. I am proposing that we take positive action, and not only that, but in addition to that that we do what the Senator from Pennsylvania has so eloquently advocated on so many occasions, and that is to cut down expenses and try to help balance the Budget.

Mr. REED. Surely we are all in favor of reducing the burden of the taxpayer. We are all in favor of saving Government expense. When we discuss it we do it in complete good nature, because our objects are the same, only it seems to me that this does not attain that object. It is true the first greenback law we passed in the Thomas amendment was permissive. The President has not exercised the power. The Wheeler amendment is a direction. The Senator is scarcely correct when he says the President has not acted on any of the inflationary powers we have given him, because the President has embargoed the gold exports; he has forbidden specie redemption in gold, although our outstanding notes contain the Government's promise to redeem in gold on demand. He has attempted to enforce this quite unconstitutional proclamation that we authorized him to issue requiring citizens to surrender their gold. He has finally driven through the Congress a bill repudiating the Nation's promise to pay its debts in gold. As the result of it inflation has occurred and the American dollar at the close of business last night was worth eighty-one and a fraction cents in the markets of the world. It is all right to say that our dollar bills still call themselves dollars, but throughout the world, where a fair appraisal of the value of those dollars is permitted, they were quoted last night at eighty-one and a fraction cents.

Mr. WHEELER. When the Senator speaks about our dollar being worth only 81 cents, it seems to me that is not quite a fair statement, because the value of the dollar in the world market is a relative thing.

Mr. REED. Of course.

Mr. WHEELER. It only means, for instance, that all the other countries have depreciated their currency.

Mr. REED. Not all of them.

Mr. WHEELER. Practically all of them.

Mr. REED. Holland and Switzerland have not.

Mr. WHEELER. They are practically the only ones that have not.

Mr. REED. In terms of their currency we have depreciated our dollar 19 percent.

Mr. WHEELER. Oh, in terms of the currency of the rest of the world we have not. We have simply lowered our money to that extent in terms of their money. It is a relative proposition.

Mr. REED. France, Italy, Belgium, and some other countries have all resorted to inflation and have finally, in their endeavor to stabilize again, stabilized at greatly reduced values for their currency units. That stabilization on a gold basis occurred before we began to inflate. In terms of their currency also our currency has fallen in value 19 percent since the 4th of March. The process is accelerating. When our delegation sailed for the London conference the pound was worth about 3.90. In the 10 days or so that they have been on the ocean the pound has risen in value to 4.12, which is what it was when they landed last night.

The same thing happened in Germany, not all at once, but a few cents at a time. I wish Senators had read an article in the Saturday Evening Post recently that told of the experience of a German professor who lived through the inflation, and told it graphically, a graphic story worth everybody's reading.

So it happened in Germany. The snowball started down hill and it received greater momentum as it went, until finally it grew in size and gained in speed and became irresistible. It carried absolute ruin to millions of honest Germans who were not in the least to blame for the policy or for its application; absolute ruin to those who were trusting in the good faith of the Government of the Reich, just as we have millions of people in America today trusting in the good faith of the American Government, because ever since they were born there was not any question about it.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. Certainly.

Mr. FRAZIER. Undoubtedly there were Germans ruined, and we have had millions ruined in the United States on our gold standard, too.

Mr. REED. That is true, and we are not going to make their ruin any less by ruining a lot more.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. REED. Will not the Senator indulge me for a few minutes, and then I shall be glad to yield?

I have had several friends, elderly ladies, come to me in the past week and ask what they can do about their investments, into what they can put their money so as to be reasonably safe against the growing decline in the value of the dollar, or, what is the same thing, the wholly artificial rise in price commodities. One lady, who had a considerable sum invested in the Corporate Trust Co. of New York, saw that go down from par to below 70 in the course of a month. Why? First, because of the financing policy approved on the part of the city authorities, and secondly, because of this repudiation bill which has shaken the confidence of all investors of the conservative type in securities of that sort.

Ordinary municipal bonds cannot be sold today at all. For proof of that look at the testimony of the group of mayors who came before the Finance Committee from all over the country—New Orleans, Detroit, Chicago. I do not remember the names of the cities or the names of the men, but there was quite a group of them. They were unanimous in saying that their credit is absolutely gone. That is what we are doing to the credit of the United States Government.

Senators will point, I know, to the returns that Secretary Woodin reported on his recent offer of 2⅞-percent 5-year notes, but when we come to analyze those figures it will be found that most of the subscriptions were compulsory conscript subscriptions forced out of the Federal Reserve banks and their members. That is a process that we cannot carry very much further without danger. At the present moment the only market for American Government bonds of any consequence is that which is artificially stimulated by members of the Federal Reserve—the Federal Reserve banks themselves. The quotations have risen, it is true, but they have risen because of what are so euphemistically called "open-marketing dealings" of the Federal Reserve System. They have been ordered to go into the market and buy bonds when they are offered for sale. If it had not been for that support, no one knows where Federal bonds would be quoted at this minute. That is the only market for future issues, too.

We are not going to restore faith in the American Government until we shall make evident our determination to limit ourselves to sane financial measures. This is another step downhill. It will not ruin the country. We can stand another $3,000,000,000 of inflation; but, mind you, the needs of the country today are only about $6,000,000,000 in currency. This will be half of that, and if the President uses the power under the Thomas amendment to put out $3,000,000,000 of greenbacks, that will make a total of $6,000,000,000. If the Gresham law is still working, and I think it is, that money is going to drive better money right out of circulation. It always happens so. Bad money depreciates good money and invariably replaces in circulation the sounder money that was there before.

Mr. GORE. That law has been repealed.

Mr. REED. The Senator from Oklahoma suggests that the Gresham law has been repealed. Perhaps the repeal will not take effect if this greenback issue comes out.

That is the only reason against the amendment. In itself it does not spell ruin any more than 1 day's emission of paper marks spelled ruin to German finances. But in the aggregate it spells ruin, and it spells it in letters that anybody can read.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I have listened in the Senate of the United States for the last year to the argument of my learned and eloquent friend from Pennsylvania. He talks about Germany and what the German people suffered. I was in Germany in 1923 when the process of inflation was going on. But instead of it going down a cent at a time, as the Senator said, as a matter of fact the German mark went from 20,000 to 40,000 for a dollar in 1 month. It was the deliberate, premeditated policy of the German Government to do that very thing.

When we are talking about inflation, about the ruination of those countries by reason of the fact that they had inflation, Senators do not point to Great Britain, who deliberately went off the gold standard and then inflated her currency. They do not point out what France and Italy did, but they take Germany and Russia and Austria as spectacles of what happened.

I submit that this is not going to ruin the country, and this money is going to be just as good as the bonds that would be issued under the bill. It would have exactly the same thing back of it.

Of course, if we had not passed the joint resolution the other day dealing with the gold standard, Senators on the other side undoubtedly would be standing on the floor of the Senate and saying, "But you will drive us off the gold standard", as if putting us off the gold standard was immediately going to wreck this country. Now we are off the gold standard. When I advocated the remonetization of silver—and I much prefer that to going off the gold standard or having paper money—I said, when I was advocating the remonetization of silver upon this floor, that if we did not take it, we would get something worse; that we would get paper money; that we would have nothing back of our currency. Senators would not listen to me, however; and now we have not gold back of our money. We are off the gold standard.

It was said, when I argued that, "Why, you will drive us off the gold standard", and then it was said, "In addition to that you will be breaking these contracts that are payable in gold." Senators no longer have those two arguments.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator remembers, of course, as he has just been telling us, that during the argument on the joint resolution it was prophesied that if we repudiated our obligation to pay in gold, of course, our bonds and all our obligations would immediately drop away down.

Mr. WHEELER. Yes.

Mr. NORRIS. Has the Senator noticed the market to see how they dropped?

Mr. WHEELER. I have not followed the market, but I understand that they went up.

Mr. NORRIS. Of course, I would not say that those gentlemen, who were experts, saying that that would happen, could be anything but right. I have not looked at the market quotations in the paper since; but I assume, of course, that United States bonds are away down to 15 or 20 cents on the dollar.

Mr. WHEELER. That is why the offerings were oversubscribed.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. WHEELER. I do.

Mr. LONG. I happened to read only the headlines saying that our last bond issue was subscribed five times over at par this morning.

Mr. NORRIS. There must be something wrong about that, because these experts could not be wrong. They said that all Government obligations would disappear, and would go down to nothing, down to zero. The Senator ought to look at that again.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. REED. I think the Senator from Nebraska has just entered the Chamber. We were discussing that matter; and I, too, called attention to the fact that Government-bond quotations had been rising, and that there was a great oversubscription reported on these new 5-year notes.

Mr. NORRIS. Then, we ought to go off the gold standard again if it is going to do us that much good.

Mr. REED. But perhaps the Senator did not hear me state where those subscriptions came from. Those are not public subscriptions, Mr. President. The public in the United States is not buying those bonds, either from the Treasury or in the market.

Mr. NORRIS. I am going to send out and get a daily paper. I will ask to have the New York Times brought into the Chamber.

Mr. REED. I have it here. I have been trying to tell the Senator what happened. The market is wholly artificial. It is sustained by Federal Reserve buying; and if the Senator will look at the figures of the increase in Government securities reported each week by the Federal Reserve System, he will see precious quick where the market is.

Mr. NORRIS. All of that was known the other day when we had the argument, but the experts did not seem to think of it then. It seems to be an afterthought.

Mr. WHEELER. Of course, when the Thomas amendment was up here and when the remonetization of silver was up here in each instance they said, "If you adopt this policy, if you drive us off the gold standard, there is nothing but ruin going to be in your wake."

Let me call the Senator's attention to this fact, however: He speaks about the old lady who came to see him the other day and asked him what he could invest in. I agree with the Senator that the inflation of Germany ruined the people over there. It ruined the middle classes. It ruined the bondholders, the stockholders. It did not ruin the workers, of course, and it did not ruin the farmers, because of the fact that they still had their farms and they had to have people do the work, and they had to see that they got money enough to feed them. It ruined the middle classes. Let me say to the Senator, however, that the deflation has very nearly ruined the middle classes of this country because of the fact that it has ruined the farmers of the country. The deflation has driven 13,000,000 people out on the streets, and they are walking the streets of this country now in search of employment. Nothing is said by the Senators upon the other side in sympathy for these unfortunate souls that the deflation and the high-priced American dollar has driven on to the streets.

Mr. CUTTING. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. WHEELER. I do.

Mr. CUTTING. Of course, the Senator is not arguing in favor of any such procedure as was adopted in Germany.

Mr. WHEELER. Of course not.

Mr. CUTTING. An inflation of this sort does not necessarily lead to the extreme measures which were adopted by the German Reich.

Mr. WHEELER. Exactly.

Mr. CUTTING. On the other hand, may I call the attention of the Senator from Montana to the fact that even at the worst stage of the German inflation, of which we hear so much, there were less than a million unemployed in Germany; and that since Germany went on the orthodox economic standard there has been suffering, hardship, unemployment, starvation, and misery beyond anything ever exemplified in that country.

Mr. WHEELER. Exactly.

Mr. CUTTING. So that the evils of extreme deflation have worked out in Germany far worse than even the extreme inflation of which we have heard so much.

Mr. WHEELER. Of course, there are in Germany, if I remember the figures now, about four or five million unemployed who are suffering much more now than they did in the period of inflation in 1923, when, as the Senator said, there were only about a million unemployed.

Mr. CUTTING. Why, of course.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield to the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I do not want to interrupt the Senator——

Mr. WHEELER. I shall be very glad to yield to the Senator.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. But with reference to Germany in comparison with the United States, there cannot be a comparison made with any logic.

It must be remembered that Germany had to make great payments by way of reparations. She had to make great foreign payments. She was a foreign debtor. She owed foreign countries. We are a creditor nation. Under the Treaty of Versailles she was shut off from trading. Her foreign trade was cut off. Her shipping was cut off and, in fact, destroyed and confiscated. Our trade balance is greatly in our favor, and that is the greatest source of stability to our finance—the balance of trade in our favor—also, the invisible imports in the form of rents and interest on money invested abroad.

The great danger to the currency of the United States is in the uncertainty of our monetary policy; and the greatest danger of all to the stability of the American dollar is the threat that the amendment we put in title I of this bill yesterday may be taken out in conference, because if we go on now under this bill and permit processors and the industries of the country to fix prices and gouge exorbitant and inordinate profits out of the people they will continue to destroy whatever purchasing power there is in agriculture and among the great masses of the people who work for wages. They will take that in the form of exorbitant profits and further destroy the purchasing power of the American people, making a further inflation necessary. That is the greatest danger to the American dollar that is facing us today.

If we go on with inflation, and do not control prices and profits, we are going to have the maladjustment in distribution of income that we had during the inflation of credit from 1922 to 1929, when practically everything to the amount of 50 percent increase went to industry, while agriculture lost approximately 40 percent of its aggregate income, and labor lost more than 30 percent of its aggregate income. That is what brought on the deflation, in addition to the increase in the capital structure, fixing an overhead charge upon industry, throttling every industry in the country.

The little bit of inflation that this measure would bring about would not be a threat to the American dollar. The greatest threat is the policies we have pursued, and the policies which I fear we are going to pursue if the Borah amendment is taken out of title I of this bill.

Mr. WHEELER. I thank the Senator. Of course, Mr. President, the idea that $3,300,000,000 of currency, where we set up a sinking fund against it, is going to depreciate the American dollar and ruin this Government is the height of folly. No intelligent person who has given any study to the subject would for one moment say so.

I was glad to hear the Senator from Pennsylvania say that of course that would not ruin this Government. Anybody who has given any thought to it knows that that is true; but it would save the Government of the United States, the taxpayers of this country, $1,900,000,000. I was glad that the Senator from Pennsylvania called attention to the fact that the only people who would take these $3,300,000,000 worth of Government bonds would be the Federal Reserve banking group. They are the people to whom, if we issue these bonds, we are going to pay $1,900,000,000. That is what we are going to do. We are just going to take out of the average taxpayer of this country $1,900,000,000 to pay these Federal Reserve bankers that the Senator has spoken about.

When we are talking about balancing the Budget, and talking about cutting down the veterans, and cutting wages and everything else, we are willing to turn over to this group $1,900,000,000 of the taxpayers' money.

Do we want to go back to our people and tell them that though we drove the men out of the hospitals when we voted for the Economy Act, though we voted to put them out on the street and to cut their compensation 70 percent, and though we voted to cut the wages of the employees of the Government in order to balance the Budget, we turned around in almost the very same breath and voted to give these great banking institutions interest on bonds to the amount of $1,900,000,000 for the privilege of issuing our own currency?

I submit, Mr. President, that this amendment ought to be voted into the bill.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, I desire to say to the Senator from Montana that I think the opposition to his amendment comes from the coupon clippers who would get $1,900,000,000 in coupons as interest on these bonds under the regular form and would not get it under the Senator's amendment.

Mr. WHEELER. Exactly. The opposition will come from the House of Morgan, from Kuhn, Loeb & Co., from the National City Bank, from the Chase National Bank; yes, it will come from the Harriman Banking Co. and the rest of the racketeers who have run this Government and nearly destroyed it.

Mr. DILL obtained the floor.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I think a word is justified in reply——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Washington yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. DILL. No; I do not yield. The Senator from Pennsylvania has spoken 3 or 4 times on this amendment, and I should like to say just a few words about this subject before the vote is taken.

Mr. REED. Will the Senator from Washington indulge me for a few sentences?

Mr. DILL. I want to say something about the remarks of the Senator from Pennsylvania a while ago in reference to this bond issue.

The Senator explained that the reason why the $900,000,000 was oversubscribed to the Treasury loan was that the Federal Reserve banks were compelled to do it, and that that process, he says, has about run out. When we take the $900,000,000, there is still over $4,000,000,000 in the offering that we have not yet appealed to the public at all for. I have become convinced that the Senator from Pennsylvania is simply obsessed with his own ideas of the gold standard and of the policies of the past administration that got the people of this country into the terrible predicament we are now in; so, for my part, I have no faith in any prediction he makes, because all of them have failed so far as the money problem is concerned.

On the other hand, I am opposed to the amendment of the Senator from Montana, and I am going to vote against it because I believe that it is the wrong policy to pursue in this matter of inflation.

I voted to give the President the power to issue the $3,000,000,000 of paper money because I believed he could be trusted to control such inflation; but this is not a proposition to trust anybody. This is not a proposition to control inflation. This is to compel inflation. This is inflation outright by order of the Congress of the United States. I do not believe that we should now, at this period of the return toward better conditions in this country, to inject into the money system of this country $3,300,000,000 when we have had only $6,000,000,000 of currency in circulation for the past few years.

If I had believed, when the measure was before us to give the President the power to issue three billions of paper money, that he would do that all at once, as this proposal provides, I would never have voted for it. We can stand a certain amount of inflation in this country, but when we get to a certain point it will break down and the money will depreciate. When we attempt by law to provide for inflation immediately, by compulsion, in an amount more than one half of the circulating medium of the United States today, we are traveling down a mighty dangerous ground.

The President has used the power of inflation most cautiously; he has done very little to inflate the currency. He has, I understand, ordered $25,000,000 of bond purchases, and I understand he has made available $100,000,000 in the Postal Savings banks for that purpose; but that is an entirely different proposition from compelling the issuance of $3,300,000,000 by law, without any power to regulate it, as was given in the law that gave the power to inflate.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, the Senator is mistaken with reference to the amendment. This $3,300,000,000 will not be issued immediately. It will be at least a couple of years before the public-works program can possibly be put into operation.

Mr. DILL. The vice of the Senator's amendment is that it is not to be within the discretion of the President, or of any other power, to say how fast or when this money shall be issued. It must be issued when there is a desire to spend it, and I am opposed to that.

Mr. WHEELER. What difference does it make whether the Government issues notes, or whether the Government issues bonds and then the money is issued upon those bonds? It is the same kind of inflation whether we issue bonds to the extent of $3,000,000,000 and turn those bonds over to the Federal Reserve banks which get the money on those bonds, or whether we have the Government issue the money directly. The only difference is that in one instance we are paying the Federal Reserve Board 4 percent for the purpose of issuing the money, and in the other instance we are not. That is the only difference.

Mr. DILL. Mr. President, if the Senator believe that, there is no use arguing with him.

Mr. WHEELER. I know it is true; and if the Senator believes differently, he is mistaken with reference to his position.

Mr. DILL. The Senator has made that speech four or five times, and I do not want to argue with him about it. Anybody who does not know the difference between issuing paper and passing it out as money, and issuing bonds on which interest is paid, and which are to be redeemed at a certain time, simply does not have the philosophy or the understanding of the money question that I have. I confess I do not have much knowledge on that subject, but I know that difference; and if I did not know that difference, I would not think there was ever any use in issuing bonds in this country at all.

I intend to vote against this amendment, and I did not want to sit here and vote against it with the statement uncontradicted that we are voting to put $1,900,000,000 of interest on the backs of the American people, when there would not be any difference in the financial status if we did not do it. There is all the difference in the world.

My real reason for not voting for the amendment is that I think that whatever inflation there is to be in this country in the way of the issuance of paper money should be a controlled inflation. I am willing to trust the President of the United States, and up to this time his use of the power we gave him has shown that he has justified the faith we placed in him when we passed the legislation. I do not think anything at this hour justifies Congress in saying we do not trust the President to issue the paper money, as he believes it should be issued in the interest of the money system of the country and in the interest of the people of the country. For these reasons I shall vote against the amendment.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, the hour is getting rather late, and many Senators have grown restless on account of the long hours we have spent in the Senate in the last 2 or 3 days, but I think this is a very important question to the American people and to the taxpayers of the United States.

The Senator who has just addressed the Senate expresses himself as having a desire to control inflation, and the policy he would seek for this control is a policy which would bring about the imposition of an additional tax burden upon the people of the United States.

So far as I am concerned, I desire to pursue a policy, in providing the money necessary for carrying on the enterprises contemplated in this bill, that will make the tax burden upon the citizens of the United States as light as possible.

I cannot quite discriminate between the idea of Government currency being issued in the way suggested by the Senator from Montana and the old plan of selling bonds, turning them over to the financial institutions of the country, and they in turn coming to the Government and putting up those bonds as security and obtaining money for circulation. I think there is only a margin of 30 percent. They get the bonds, they carry them back to the Government, they get bank notes issued to the amount of 90 percent of the value of their bonds. The proportion has been raised recently to a hundred percent. They can secure the issuance of additional money, of circulating medium.

I cannot see why, if we are going to issue currency for the purpose of increasing circulating medium by law, we should provide a system whereby it must go through the financiers of the country, and make the American taxpayer foot the bill, in addition to providing the funds necessary for a sinking fund, to pay the interest upon the obligations. The interest is upon the Government's own money, because it has sold the bonds; and, in turn, the bankers, if they desire, have obtained currency upon that same security.

Mr. President, this is a great undertaking; it imposes a great financial responsibility on the country. We should use a system whereby the finances of the country will not be impaired, whereby there will not be any destructive inflation. I take the position that there will not be. There is no necessity for any unusual or undue inflation, and the President can control it. He has the power to control the question of inflation. This does not deprive him of that privilege, because the Congress, forsooth, sees proper to issue this currency for the purpose of carrying on the public enterprises provided in this measure.

I am not a financial expert, I am not an expert in the money system, or anything of the kind; but I have resolved the questions involved from the standpoint of common sense, knowing a few facts and knowing a little of the principles of law which control our governmental system. I can see no reason for criticism of the plan proposed by the Senator from Montana, except that it would deprive the money barons of this country of the privilege of handling this money. That is the only reason urged against it. I do not mean that those who oppose it are actuated by that reason, but when we begin to search for excuses, or any logical reason why this step should not be taken, that is the only reason, as I see it.

Of course, the money barons would not like that. For years and years, for decades and decades, our banking institutions have dominated and controlled almost absolutely the financial system of this country. That was true 100 percent at the inauguration of the Federal Reserve System and during these times of stress and of poverty, going to the extent of hunger and the unemployment of 15,000,000 American citizens, good, stalwart, fine citizens, desiring to work, not idle of their own choosing. When we attempted to reform the Federal Reserve System to meet the conditions of the present day we never found a favorable attitude existing toward proposals which seem necessary for reformation of the financial system on the part of those who have dominated and controlled the banking situation of the country. We never saw them yield to any suggestion until by their own short-sightedness and by their own conduct the financial system of this country lay wrecked and prostrate upon the ground. Then, of course, they come in and say, "We realize that something has to be done." But even then, when we try to reform the financial system, we find the same crowd of money dictators and captains of industry want any reform in the banking laws all to their advantage.

When we come to dealing with the question of inflation, as I have witnessed their position and their attitude, they have always sought to make their interests preeminent, and if we allow their interests to predominate, then the good accomplished would not reach down to these other people who were in suffering and in distress, they not being willing to reform our banking laws for the general good of the people of this country.

We have here, as I see it, a direct issue as to whether or not we shall declare ourselves for the interests of the taxpayers of the United States, or whether we shall bow the knee to the money interests of this country, and adopt a plan which will cost the taxpayers of the country millions and even into the billions of dollars before the plans contemplated under this proposed act are carried out, and the money we have used in carrying it out shall have been raised.

Mr. President, I feel very thankful to the Senator from Montana for proposing this amendment. I favored a similar amendment proposed by the Senator from California [Mr. McADOO]. I observed the Senator from California when he was Secretary of the Treasury, during the great World War, and I have observed him since in relation to money questions and the money policy of the Government, and I have always found that his judgment was very sound upon those questions.

I know the Senator from California has often been called into the councils of those who were planning for reformation of our system of banking, and discussing the question of the circulating medium, some changes in that behalf, and I think that both he and the Senator from Montana have done a great service to the country in bringing forth this magnificent plan whereby no one will suffer and the American taxpayers will gain almost $2,000,000,000.

I hope Senators will consider the matter seriously, and not vote upon this amendment in a spirit of frivolity or indifference, and that we can adopt the amendment proposed by the Senator from Montana.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the senior Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER].

Mr. WHEELER. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I wish to make one observation before the roll call begins. The Senator from Montana and the Senator from Florida have stated the issue as they view it in very clear-cut terms. I do not exactly understand the issue as they see it. I therefore do not wish the RECORD to be made or the yeas and nays to be called upon that issue until I state a different view, as I see it.

The statement is made here that we are undertaking to borrow money, issue bonds, pay the interest on those bonds, which I believe the Senator from Montana says during the life of the bonds would aggregate $1,900,000,000—an interest charge upon the taxpayers of the country; but that, under his amendment, the taxpayers would be saved $1,900,000,000.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. GORE. I yield.

Mr. WHEELER. The Senator from Oklahoma is not quite correct about that statement. I know he wants to be accurate about it.

Mr. GORE. Certainly.

Mr. WHEELER. I stated what the saving to the taxpayers would amount to at the outset. Let me say to the Senator from Oklahoma that these are not my figures but are figures which were furnished to me by the Senator from California [Mr. McADOO], and I assume that the figures are correct.

The statement handed to me as coming from that Senator is as follows:

If the provisions of sections 207 and 209 of the bill passed by the House should become law, the sums necessary to pay interest and sinking fund on the $3,300,000,000 of bonds to be issued would amount at the outset to about 6 percent, or perhaps even 6½ percent per annum, made up as follows:

Interest on bonds, 3½ percent plus 2½ percent sinking fund; or Interest, 4 percent plug 2½ percent sinking fund.

In this case the sums to be raised by taxation would amount at the beginning to $198,000,000 or perhaps to $214,500,000 per year, depending upon the coupon rate of the bonds issued.

Bonds bearing 3½-percent interest would be retired by a 2½-percent sinking fund in 25½ years, while 4-percent bonds would be retired in 24½ years.

If the public-works program were financed by the issue of United States notes redeemable at 4 percent per annum, the sums necessary to be raised by taxation would amount to $132,000,000 a year throughout the retirement period of 25 years.

The saving to taxpayers at the outset would thus amount to $66,000,000, or perhaps even $82,500,000 per year.

The total cost for interest and sinking fund of a 4-percent bond issue with a 2½-percent sinking fund, amounting to $3,300,000,000, would be in round numbers $5,200,000,000.

Since the total cost of retiring an equivalent amount of United States notes would be only $3,300,000,000, the saving to taxpayers for the entire operation would amount to $1,900,000,000.

As I have said, these are not my figures, but are the figures furnished by the Senator from California.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, as I understood the Senator's figures, they are to the effect that there would be a saving of $1,900,000,000. I think that is the statement I made.

Mr. WHEELER. Yes.

Mr. GORE. But the Senator makes this point: That if we issue bonds and pay interest on those bonds, it will lay an additional burden upon the backs of the taxpayers; but that upon the other hand, we have the power to issue Treasury notes which would obviate that interest charge. I think there is one episode of our financial history that may shed some light upon that point and clarify that issue, and I desire to get it in the RECORD. It will take only a moment.

When we resumed specie payment on January 1, 1879, we had outstanding about $346,000,000 of greenbacks, the promise of the Government to pay on demand—to pay gold on demand.

A bond is the Government's promise to pay at a fixed time in the future, bearing interest it is true. A Treasury note is a promise to pay, not at a fixed time but is generally a promise to pay on demand. Here is the instance I have in mind:

On the 14th of July 1890 Congress passed what is known as the Sherman Act, providing for the purchase of silver bullion, 4½ million ounces per month, paying for that silver in Treasury notes. There were those who predicted at the time that it would cause a run on the Treasury and the flight of gold. At that time the greenbacks were payable on demand in gold. Here are the figures to which I call attention:

During the fiscal year closing June 30, 1890, just 2 weeks before the Sherman Act went into effect, only $1,000,000 worth of greenbacks were presented for payment on demand and were paid in gold—$1,000,000 worth. During the fiscal year 1891, $6,000,000 worth of greenbacks were presented and payment in gold demanded. During the fiscal year 1892, $9,000,000 worth of greenbacks were presented and payment in gold was demanded. During the fiscal year 1893, $102,000,000 worth of greenbacks were presented to the Treasury for payment and payment in gold was demanded. During the fiscal year 1896, $189,000,000 worth of greenbacks, of non-interest-bearing Treasury notes, were presented for payment and were paid in gold.

In order to obtain the gold with which to pay these non-interest-bearing Treasury notes, the Government of the United States issued $250,000,000 worth of interest-bearing bonds. It bought gold with those bonds and used that gold to redeem greenbacks—United States notes, promises to pay on demand. But when that operation was over, in the fall of 1896, we still had outstanding the same $346,000,000 worth of greenbacks—$346,000,000 worth of United States notes—$346,000,000 worth of the Government's promises to pay on demand, which did not bear interest. We had as many United States notes, greenbacks, and promises to pay outstanding at the end of that operation as we had in the beginning.

Sir, in addition to that, we had outstanding $250,000,000 worth of interest-bearing bonds, a burden on the bended backs of the American taxpayers, and we still owed $346,000,000 of non-interest-bearing United States notes or greenbacks; we still had that many promises to pay on demand outstanding. But, in addition to that, we had $250,000,000 of interest-bearing bonds outstanding. How stood the account with the American taxpayer? He still owed the $346,000,000 of promises to pay on demand plus the principal of $250,000,000 of interest-bearing bonds, plus the interest itself during the life of the bonds.

That is the trouble; at least, when you pay off a bond, you are done with it; but when you issue a promise to pay on demand, and reissue it after redemption, you still owe as much as you did before; and if you are obliged to buy gold in the meantime with which to redeem it, your debt has increased, and you still have as large an outstanding debt, non-interest-bearing United States notes, as you had before, and to that you have added another indebtedness, a bonded indebtedness, which does bear interest. Neither a nation nor an individual can afford to have too many promises to pay on demand outstanding at one and the same time. It is fraught with too much danger. It makes the debtor the slave of his creditor; it makes possible instant foreclosure. And a government is deeper in debt after it pays such a debt than before.

Mr. President, I do not undertake to distinguish between the facts existing at the time to which I refer and the similar facts with reference to redemption which will be raised by the pending amendment. I have not had a chance to analyze them with a view to reaching a conclusion upon that point.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I desire to answer the statement of the Senator from Oklahoma by making this distinction: The greenbacks were issued, but there was no fund set aside to redeem them. In this instance we are proposing to provide that a sinking fund be set aside to redeem these Government notes just exactly as we would redeem Government bonds; just exactly in the same way. That is the distinction between the greenbacks the Senator from Oklahoma is speaking about and the Government notes which would be issued under this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Montana. The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. McNARY (when his name was called). On this vote I have a pair with the senior Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER]. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote. If permitted to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. STEPHENS (when his name was called). On this vote I am paired with the senior Senator from Indiana [Mr. ROBINSON], and withhold my vote because of his absence. If permitted to vote, I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. DAVIS (after having voted in the negative). On this question I have a pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN]. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WALCOTT], and allow my vote to stand.

Mr. HEBERT. I wish to announce that on this question the Senator from Vermont [Mr. DALE] is paired with the Senator from California [Mr. McADOO].

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I wish the RECORD to show that the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS] has been called out of the Chamber on official business.

Mr. BARKLEY. I wish to announce that my colleague [Mr. LOGAN] is unavoidably detained on official business. He is paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS], as has already been announced. I am not authorized to state how my colleague would vote if present.

Mr. KENDRICK. I wish to announce that the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], the Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. KEAN], the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WALCOTT] are detained in attendance upon a meeting of the Committee on Banking and Currency.

I also wish to announce that the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], and the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS] are detained on official business.

The result was announced—yeas 29, nays 51, as follows:

YEAS—29

Ashurst	Erickson	Norris	Thomas, Okla.
Black	Frazier	Nye	Thomas, Utah
Bone	La Follette	Overton	Thompson
Borah	Long	Pope	Trammell
Bulow	McCarran	Reynolds	Wheeler
Caraway	McGill	Russell
Clark	Murphy	Shipstead
Cutting	Neely	Smith

NAYS—51

Adams	Carey	Hale	Patterson
Austin	Connally	Harrison	Reed
Bachman	Coolidge	Hastings	Robinson, Ark.
Bailey	Copeland	Hatfield	Schall
Bankhead	Davis	Hayden	Sheppard
Barbour	Dickinson	Hebert	Steiwer
Barkley	Dieterich	Johnson	Townsend
Bratton	Dill	Kendrick	Tydings
Brown	Duffy	Keyes	Vandenberg
Bulkley	Fess	King	Wagner
Byrd	Glass	Lonergan	Walsh
Byrnes	Goldsborough	McKellar	White
Capper	Gore	Metcalf

NOT VOTING—16

Costigan	George	McAdoo	Robinson, Ind.
Couzens	Kean	McNary	Stephens
Dale	Lewis	Norbeck	Van Nuys
Fletcher	Logan	Pittman	Walcott

So Mr. WHEELER's amendment was rejected.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 5040) to extend the gasoline tax for 1 year, to modify postage rates on mail matter, and for other purposes; that the House had receded from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate no. 3 to the said bill and concurred therein with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the Vice President:

S. 1094. An act to authorize the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to subscribe for preferred stock and purchase the capital notes of insurance companies, and for other purposes;

H.R. 4812. An act to promote the foreign trade of the United States in apples and/or pears, to protect the reputation of American-grown apples and pears in foreign markets, to prevent deception or misrepresentation as to the quality of such products moving in foreign commerce, to provide for the commercial inspection of such products entering such commerce, and for other purposes; and

H.R. 5793. An act to revive and reenact the act entitled "An act authorizing Jed P. Ladd, his heirs, legal representatives, and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across Lake Champlain from East Alburg, Vt., to West Swanton, Vt.", approved March 2, 1929.

EXTENSION OF GASOLINE TAX—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. HARRISON submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (H.R. 5040) to extend the gasoline tax for 1 year, to modify postage rates on mail matter, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1 and 2, and agree to the same.

The committee of conference have come to no agreement on amendment numbered 3.

PAT HARRISON,
WILLIAM H. KING,
DAVID A. REED,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

R. L. DOUGHTON,
HEARTSILL RAGON,
SAM B. HILL,
ALLEN T. TREADWAY,
ISAAC BACHARACH,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives on Senate amendment no. 3 to House bill 5040, which was read, as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
June 9, 1933.

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate no. 3 to the bill (H.R. 5040) to extend the gasoline tax for 1 year, to modify postage rates on mail matter, and for other purposes, and concur therein with the following amendment:

In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert:

SEC. 6. (a) Effective September 1, 1933, section 616 of the Revenue Act of 1932 is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 616. Tax on electrical energy for domestic or commercial consumption.

"(a) There is hereby imposed upon electrical energy sold for domestic or commercial consumption and not for resale a tax equivalent to 3 percent of the price for which so sold, to be paid by the vendor under such rules and regulations as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, shall prescribe. The sale of electrical energy to an owner or lessee of a building, who purchases such electrical energy for resale to the tenants therein, shall for the purposes of this section be considered as a sale for consumption and not for resale, but the resale to the tenant shall not be considered a sale for consumption.

"(b) The provisions of sections 619, 622, and 625 shall not be applicable with respect to the tax imposed by this section.

"(c) No tax shall be imposed under this section upon electrical energy sold to the United States or to any State or Territory or political subdivision thereof or the District of Columbia. None of the provisions of this section shall apply to publicly owned electric and power plants. The right to exemption under this subsection shall be evidenced in such manner as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may, by regulation, prescribe."

(b) Despite the provisions of this section the tax imposed under section 616 of the Revenue Act of 1932 before its amendment by this section on electrical energy furnished before September 1, 1933, shall be imposed, collected, and paid in the same manner and shall be subject to the same provisions of law (including penalties) as if this section had not been enacted.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, in view of the fact that the House has accepted the action of the Senate with reference to the so-called "Johnson amendment", it seems to me there is nothing left for the Senate to do except to concur in the House amendment. I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

PAYMENT TO SURPLUS GRADUATES OF NAVAL ACADEMY—CONFERENCE REPORT

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate a conference report, submitted by Mr. TRAMMELL on the 1st instant, which was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 5012) to amend existing law in order to obviate the payment of 1 year's sea pay to surplus graduates of the Naval Academy, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment.

PARK TRAMMELL,
GEO. MCGILL,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
CARL VINSON,
FRED A. BRITTEN,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I move the adoption of the conference report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the conference report is agreed to.

Mr. TRAMMELL subsequently said: Mr. President, did the Chair announce a decision on my motion to agree to the conference report on the Naval Academy bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair announced that it was agreed to by unanimous consent.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I do not care to have it agreed to by unanimous consent in that way. I was on my feet endeavoring to get recognition. There was one amendment with reference to which I was very much disappointed. I had hoped that it might be reported favorably or else in some modified form. I ask for a vote on my motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Florida to adopt the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

EMERGENCY RELIEF OF RAILROADS—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. DILL submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 1580) to relieve the existing national emergency in relation to interstate railroad transportation, and to amend sections 5, 15a, and 19a of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following:

"That this act may be cited as the 'Emergency Railroad Transportation Act, 1933.'

"TITLE I—EMERGENCY POWERS

"SECTION 1. As used in this title—

"(a) The term 'Commission' means the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"(b) The term 'Coordinator' means the Federal Coordinator of Transportation hereinafter provided for.

"(c) The term 'committee' means any one of the regional coordinating committees hereinafter provided for.

"(d) The term 'carrier' means any common carrier by railroad subject to the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, including any receiver or trustee thereof.

"(e) The term 'subsidiary' means any company which is directly or indirectly controlled by, or affiliated with, any carrier or carriers. For the purpose of the foregoing definition a company shall be deemed to be affiliated with a carrier if so affiliated within the meaning of paragraph (8) of section 5 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended by this act.

"(f) The term 'employee' includes every person in the service of a carrier (subject to its continuing authority to supervise and direct the manner of rendition of his service) who performs any work defined as that of an employee or subordinate official in accordance with the provisions of the Railway Labor Act.

"(g) The term 'State commission' means the commission, board, or official, by whatever name designated, exercising power to regulate the rates or service of common carriers by railroad under the laws of any State.

"SEC. 2. In order to foster and protect interstate commerce in relation to railroad transportation by preventing and relieving obstructions and burdens thereon resulting from the present acute economic emergency, and in order to safeguard and maintain an adequate national system of transportation, there is hereby created the office of Federal Coordinator of Transportation, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, or be designated by the President from the membership of the Commission. If so designated, the Coordinator shall be relieved from other duties as Commissioner during his term of service to such extent as the President may direct; except that the Coordinator shall not sit as a member of the Commission in any proceedings for the review or suspension of any order issued by him as Coordinator. The coordinator shall have such powers and duties as are hereinafter set forth and prescribed, and may, with the approval of the President, and without regard to the Civil Service laws and the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, appoint and fix the compensation of such assistants and agents, in addition to the assistance provided by the Commission, as may be necessary to the performance of his duties under this act. The office of the Coordinator shall be in Washington, D.C., and the Commission shall provide such office space, facilities, and assistance as he may request and it is able to furnish. The Coordinator shall receive such compensation as the President shall fix, except that if designated from the Commission, he shall receive no compensation in addition to that which he receives as a member of the Commission.

"SEC. 3. The Coordinator shall divide the lines of the carriers into three groups, to wit, an eastern group, a southern group, and a western group, and may from time to time make such changes or subdivisions in such groups as he may deem to be necessary or desirable. At the earliest practicable date after the Coordinator shall have initially designated such groups, three regional coordinating committees shall be created, one for each group, and each committee shall consist of 5 regular members and 2 special members. The carriers in each group, acting each through its board of directors or its receiver or receivers or trustee or trustees or through an officer or officers designated for the purpose by such board, shall select the regular members of the committee representing that group, and shall prescribe the rules under which such committee shall operate; but no railroad system shall have more than one representative on any such committee. In such selection each carrier shall have a vote in proportion to its mileage lying within the group. The two special members of each committee shall be selected in such manner as the Coordinator may approve, one to represent the steam railroads within the group which had in 1932 railway operating revenues of less than $1,000,000 and the other to represent electric railways within the group not owned by a steam railroad or operated as a part of a general steam railroad system of transportation. Each such special member shall have reasonable notice of all meetings of his committee at which any matter affecting any carrier which he represents is to be considered and may participate in the consideration and disposition of such matter. Members of the committees may be removed from office and vacancies may be filled in like manner.

"SEC. 4. The purposes of this title are (1) to encourage and promote or require action on the part of the carriers and of subsidiaries subject to the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, which will (a) avoid unnecessary duplication of services and facilities of whatsoever nature and permit the joint use of terminals and trackage incident thereto or requisite to such joint use: Provided, That no routes now existing shall be eliminated except with the consent of all participating lines or upon order of the Coordinator, (b) control allowances, accessorial services and the charges therefor, and other practices affecting service or operation, to the end that undue impairment of net earnings may be prevented, and (c) avoid other wastes and preventable expense; (2) to promote financial reorganization of the carriers, with due regard to legal rights, so as to reduce fixed charges to the extent required by the public interest and improve carrier credit; and (3) to provide for the immediate study of other means of improving conditions surrounding transportation in all its forms and the preparation of plans therefor.

"SEC. 5. It shall be the duty of the committees on their own initiative, severally within each group and jointly where more than one group is affected, to carry out the purposes set forth in subdivision (1) of section 4, so far as such action can be voluntarily accomplished by the carriers. In such instances as the committees are unable, for any reason, legal or otherwise, to carry out such purposes by such voluntary action, they shall recommend to the Coordinator that he give appropriate directions to the carriers or subsidiaries subject to the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, by order; and the Coordinator is hereby authorized and directed to issue and enforce such orders if he finds them to be consistent with the public interest and in furtherance of the purposes of this title.

"SEC. 6. (a) The Coordinator shall confer freely with the committees and give them the benefit of his advice and assistance. At his request, the committees, the carriers, the subsidiaries, and the Commission shall furnish him, or his assistants and agents, such information and reports as he may desire in investigating any matter within the scope of his duties under this title; and the Coordinator, his assistants, and agents, and the Commission, shall at all times have access to all accounts, records, and memoranda of the carriers and subsidiaries. If, in any instance, a committee has not acted with respect to any matter which the Coordinator has brought to its attention and upon which he is of the opinion that it should have acted, under the provisions of section 5, he is hereby authorized and directed to issue and enforce such order, giving appropriate directions to the carriers and subsidiaries subject to the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, with respect to such matter, as he shall find to be consistent with the public interest.

"(b) Insofar as may be necessary for the purposes of this title, the Commission and the members and examiners thereof shall have the same power to administer oaths and require by subpena the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of books, papers, tariffs, contracts, agreements, and documents and to take testimony by deposition, relating to any matter under investigation, as though such matter arose under the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended and supplemented; and any person subpenaed or testifying in connection with any matter under investigation under this title shall have the same rights, privileges, and immunities and be subject to the same duties, liabilities, and penalties as are provided in the case of persons subpenaed or testifying in connection with any matter under investigation under the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended.

"SEC. 7. (a) A labor committee for each regional group of carriers may be selected by those railroad labor organizations which, as representatives duly designated and authorized to act in accordance with the requirements of the Railway Labor Act, entered into the agreements of January 31, 1932, and December 21, 1932, with duly authorized representatives of the carriers, determining the wage payments of the employees of the carriers. A similar labor committee for each regional group of carriers may be selected by such other railroad labor organizations as may be duly designated and authorized to represent employees in accordance with the requirements of the Railway Labor Act. It shall be the duty of the regional coordinating committees and the Coordinator to give reasonable notice to, and to confer with, the appropriate regional labor committee or committees upon the subject matter prior to taking any action or issuing any order which will affect the interest of the employees, and to afford the said labor committee or committees reasonable opportunity to present views upon said contemplated action or order.

"(b) The number of employees in the service of a carrier shall not be reduced by reason of any action taken pursuant to the authority of this title below the number as shown by the pay rolls of employees in service during the month of May 1933 after deducting the number who have been removed from the pay rolls after the effective date of this act by reason of death, normal retirements, or resignation, but not more in any one year than 5 percent of said number in service during May 1933; nor shall any employee in such service be deprived of employment such as he had during said month of May or be in a worse position with respect to his compensation for such employment, by reason of any action taken pursuant to the authority conferred by this title.

"(c) The Coordinator is authorized and directed to establish regional boards of adjustment whenever and wherever action taken pursuant to the authority conferred by this title creates conditions that make necessary such boards of adjustment to settle controversies between carriers and employees. Carriers and their employees shall have equal representation on such boards of adjustment for settlement of such controversies, and said boards shall exercise the functions of boards of adjustment provided for by the Railway Labor Act.

"(d) The Coordinator is authorized and directed to provide means for determining the amount of, and to require the carriers to make just compensation for, property losses and expenses imposed upon employees by reason of transfers of work from one locality to another in carrying out the purposes of this title.

"(e) Carriers, whether under control of a judge, trustee, receiver, or private management, shall be required to comply with the provisions of the Railway Labor Act and with the provisions of section 77, paragraphs (o), (p), and (q), of the act approved March 3, 1933, entitled 'An act to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto.'

"SEC. 8. Any order issued by the Coordinator pursuant to this title shall be made public in such reasonable manner as he may determine and shall become effective as of such date, not less than 20 days from the date of such publication, as the Coordinator shall prescribe in the order; and such order shall remain in effect until it is vacated by him or suspended or set aside by the Commission or other lawful authority, as hereinafter provided, and such order may include provision for the creation and administration of such just pooling arrangements or for such just compensation for the use of property or for carrier services as he may deem necessary or desirable and in furtherance of the purposes of this title.

"SEC. 9. Any interested party, including, among others, any carrier, subsidiary, shipper, or employee, or any group of carriers, shippers, or employees, or any State commission, or the Governor of any State, or the official representative or representatives of any political subdivision thereof, dissatisfied with any order of the Coordinator may, at any time prior to the effective date of the order, file a petition with the Commission asking that such order be reviewed and suspended pending such review, and stating fully the reasons therefor. Such petitions shall be governed by such general rules as the Commission may establish. If the Commission, upon considering such petition and any answer or answers thereto, finds reason to believe that the order may be unjust to the petitioner or inconsistent with the public interest, the Commission is hereby authorized to grant such review and, in its discretion, the Commission may suspend the order if it finds immediate enforcement thereof would result in irreparable damage to the petitioner or work grave injury to the public interest, but if the Commission suspends an order, it shall expedite the hearing and decision on that order as much as possible. Thereupon the Commission shall, after due notice and a public hearing, review the order and take such action in accord with the purposes of this title as it finds to be just and consistent with the public interest, either confirming the order or setting it aside or reissuing it in modified form, and any order so confirmed or reissued shall thereafter remain in effect until vacated or modified by the Commission.

"SEC. 10. (a) The carriers or subsidiaries subject to the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, affected by any order of the Coordinator or Commission made pursuant to this title shall, so long as such order is in effect, be, and they are hereby, relieved from the operation of the antitrust laws, as designated in section 1 of the act entitled 'An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes', approved October 15, 1914, and of all other restraints or prohibitions by law, State or Federal, other than such as are for the protection of the public health or safety, insofar as may be necessary to enable them to do anything authorized or required by such order made pursuant to this title: Provided, however, That nothing herein shall be construed to repeal, amend, suspend, or modify any of the requirements of the Railway Labor Act or the duties and obligations imposed thereunder or through contracts entered into in accordance with the provisions of said act.

"(b) The Coordinator shall issue no order which shall have the effect of relieving any carrier or subsidiary from the operation of the law of any State or of any order of any State commission until he has advised the State commission of said State, or the Governor of said State if there be no such commission, that such order is in contemplation, and shall afford the State commission or Governor so notified reasonable opportunity to present views and information bearing upon such contemplated order, nor unless such order is necessary, in his opinion, to prevent or remove an obstruction to or a burden upon interstate commerce.

"SEC. 11. Nothing in this title shall be construed to relieve any carrier from any contractual obligation which it may have assumed, prior to the enactment of this act, with regard to the location or maintenance of offices, shops, or roundhouses at any point.

"SEC. 12. The willful failure or refusal of any carrier or subsidiary or of any officer or employee of any carrier or subsidiary to comply with the terms of any order of the Coordinator or of the Commission made pursuant to this title shall be a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof the carrier, subsidiary, or person offending shall be subject to a fine of not less than $1,000 or more than $20,000 for each offense, and each day during which such carrier, subsidiary, or person shall willfully fail or refuse to comply with the terms of such order shall constitute a separate offense. It shall be the duty of any district attorney of the United States to whom the Coordinator or the Commission may apply to institute in the proper court and to prosecute under the direction of the Attorney General of the United States all necessary proceedings for the enforcement of the provisions of this title and for the punishment of all violations thereof, and the costs and expenses of such prosecution shall be paid out of the appropriation for the expense of the courts of the United States: Provided, That nothing in this title shall be construed to require any employee or officer of any carrier to render labor or service without his consent, or to authorize the issuance of any orders requiring such service, or to make illegal the failure or refusal of any employee individually, or any number of employees collectively, to render labor or services.

"SEC. 13. It shall further be the duty of the Coordinator, and he is hereby authorized and directed, forthwith to investigate and consider means, not provided for in this title, of improving transportation conditions throughout the country, including cost finding in rail transportation and the ability, financial or otherwise, of the carriers to improve their properties and furnish service and charge rates which will promote the commerce and industry of the country and including, also, the stability of railroad labor employment and other improvement of railroad labor conditions; and from time to time he shall submit to the Commission such recommendations calling for further legislation to these ends as he may deem necessary or desirable in the public interest. The Commission shall promptly transmit such recommendations, together with its comments thereon, to the President and to the Congress.

"SEC. 14. The expenses of the Coordinator except so far as they are borne by the Commission in accordance with the provisions of section 2, but not including the expenses of the coordinating committees, shall be allowed and paid, on the presentation of itemized vouchers therefor approved by the Coordinator, out of a fund obtained from assessments on the carriers and said fund is hereby appropriated for the payment of such expenses. It shall be the duty of each carrier, within 30 days after the date of enactment of this act, to pay into this fund, for the first year of the operation of this title, $1.50 for every mile of road operated by it on December 31, 1932, as reported to the Commission, and to pay into said fund within 30 days after the expiration of such year a proportional amount covering any period of extension of this title by proclamation of the President under section 17, and it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to collect such assessments. Any amount remaining in the fund when this title ceases to have effect shall be returned by the Secretary of the Treasury to the carriers in proportion to their contributions. The carriers and the Pullman Co. shall be permitted, anything in the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, to the contrary notwithstanding, to provide free transportation and other carrier service to the Coordinator and his assistants and agents and to the employees of the Commission when engaged in the service of the Coordinator.

"SEC. 15. The Commission shall not approve a loan to a carrier under the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended, if it is of the opinion that such carrier is in need of financial reorganization in the public interest: Provided, however, That the term 'carrier' as used in this section shall not include a receiver or trustee.

"SEC. 16. Any final order made under this title shall be subject to the same right of relief in court by any party in interest as is now provided in respect to orders of the Commission made under the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended. The provisions of the Urgent Deficiencies Appropriation Act of October 22, 1913 (38 Stat.L. 219), shall be applicable to any proceeding in court brought to suspend or set aside any order of the Coordinator or of the Commission entered pursuant to the provisions of this title.

"SEC. 17. This title shall cease to have effect at the end of 1 year after the effective date, unless extended by a proclamation of the President for 1 year or any part thereof, but orders of the Coordinator or of the Commission made thereunder shall continue in effect until vacated by the Commission or set aside by other lawful authority, but notwithstanding the provisions of section 10 no such order shall operate to relieve any carrier from the effect of any State law or of any order of a State commission enacted or made after this title ceases to have effect.

"TITLE II. AMENDMENTS TO INTERSTATE COMMERCE ACT

"SECTION 201. Section 5 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended (U.S.C., title 49, sec. 5), is amended by striking out paragraphs (2) and (3) and by renumbering paragraphs (4) and (5) as paragraphs (2) and (3), respectively, and by striking out the last sentence of the paragraph so renumbered as paragraph (3).

"SEC. 202. Such section 5 is further amended by striking out paragraphs (6), (7), and (8), and by inserting in lieu thereof the following paragraphs:

"'(4). (a) It shall be lawful, with the approval and authorization of the Commission, as provided in subdivision (b), for two or more carriers to consolidate or merge their properties, or any part thereof, into one corporation for the ownership, management, and operation of the properties theretofore in separate ownership; or for any carrier, or two or more carriers jointly, to purchase, lease, or contract to operate the properties, or any part thereof, of another; or for any carrier, or two or more carriers jointly, to acquire control of another through purchase of its stock; or for a corporation which is not a carrier to acquire control of two or more carriers through ownership of their stock; or for a corporation which is not a carrier and which has control of one or more carriers to acquire control of another carrier through ownership of its stock.

"'(b) Whenever a consolidation, merger, purchase, lease, operating contract, or acquisition of control is proposed under subdivision (a), the carrier or carriers or corporation seeking authority therefor shall present an application to the Commission, and thereupon the Commission shall notify the Governor of each State in which any part of the properties of the carriers involved in the proposed transaction is situated, and also such carriers and the applicant or applicants, of the time and place for a public hearing. If after such hearing the Commission finds that, subject to such terms and conditions and such modifications as it shall find to be just and reasonable, the proposed consolidation, merger, purchase, lease, operating contract, or acquisition of control will be in harmony with and in furtherance of the plan for the consolidation of railway properties established pursuant to paragraph (3), and will promote the public interest, it may enter an order approving and authorizing such consolidation, merger, purchase, lease, operating contract, or acquisition of control, upon the terms and conditions and with the modifications so found to be just and reasonable.

"'(5) Whenever a corporation which is not a carrier is authorized, by an order entered under paragraph (4), to acquire control of any carrier or of two or more carriers, such corporation thereafter shall, to the extent provided by the Commission, for the purposes of paragraphs (1) to (10), inclusive, of section 20 (relating to reports, accounts, etc., of carriers), including the penalties applicable in the case of violations of such paragraphs, be considered as a common carrier subject to the provisions of this act, and for the purposes of paragraphs (2) to (11), inclusive, of section 20a (relating to issues of securities and assumptions of liability of carriers), including the penalties applicable in the case of violations of such paragraphs, be considered as a "carrier" as such term is defined in paragraph (1) of such section, and be treated as such by the Commission in the administration of the paragraphs specified. In the application of such provisions of section 20a in the case of any such corporation the Commission shall authorize the issue or assumption applied for only if it finds that such issue or assumption is consistent with the proper performance by each carrier which is under the control of such corporation of its service to the public as a common carrier, will not impair the ability of any such carrier to perform such service, and is otherwise compatible with the public interest.

"'(6) It shall be unlawful for any person, except as provided in paragraph 4, to accomplish or effectuate, or to participate in accomplishing or effectuating, the control or management in a common interest of any two or more carriers, however such result is attained, whether directly or indirectly, by use of common directors, officers, or stockholders, a holding or investment company or companies, a voting trust or trusts, or in any other manner whatsoever. It shall be unlawful to continue to maintain control or management accomplished or effectuated after the enactment of this amendatory paragraph and in violation of its provisions. As used in this paragraph and paragraph (7), the words "control or management" shall be construed to include the power to exercise control or management.

"'(7) For the purposes of paragraphs (6) and (11), but not in anywise limiting the application thereof, any transaction shall be deemed to accomplish or effectuate the control or management in a common interest of two carriers—

"'(a) If such transaction is by a carrier, and if the effect of such transaction is to place such carrier and persons affiliated with it, taken together, in control of another carrier.

"'(b) If such transaction is by a person affiliated with a carrier, and if the effect of such transaction is to place such carrier and persons affiliated with it, taken together, in control of another carrier.

"'(c) If such transaction is by two or more persons acting together, one of whom is a carrier or is affiliated with a carrier, and if the effect of such transaction is to place such persons and carriers and persons affiliated with any one of them and persons affiliated with any such affiliated carrier, taken together, in control of another carrier.

"'(8) For the purposes of paragraph (7) a person shall be held to be affiliated with a carrier if, by reason of the relationship of such person to such carrier (whether by reason of the method of, or circumstances surrounding organization or operation, or whether established through common directors, officers, or stockholders, a voting trust or trusts, a holding or investment company or companies, or any other direct or indirect means), it is reasonable to believe that the affairs of any carrier of which control may be acquired by such person will be managed in the interest of such other carrier.

"'(9) For the purposes of paragraphs (6), (7), (8), and (11), wherever reference is made to control it is immaterial whether such control is direct or indirect. As used in this paragraph and paragraphs (7), (8), and (11) the term "control" shall be construed to include the power to exercise control.

"'(10) The Commission is hereby authorized, upon complaint or upon its own initiative without complaint, but after notice and hearing, to investigate and determine whether any person is violating the provisions of paragraph (6). If the Commission finds after such investigation that such person is violating the provisions of such paragraph, it shall by order require such person to take such action as may be necessary, in the opinion of the Commission, to prevent continuance of such violation.

"'(11) For the proper protection and in furtherance of the plan for the consolidation of railway properties established pursuant to paragraph (3) and the regulation of interstate commerce in accordance therewith, the Commission is hereby authorized, upon complaint or upon its own initiative without complaint, but after notice and hearing, to investigate and determine whether the holding by any person of stock or other share capital of any carrier (unless acquired with the approval of the Commission) has the effect (a) of subjecting such carrier to the control of another carrier or to common control with another carrier, and (b) of preventing or hindering the carrying out of any part of such plan or of impairing the independence, one of another, of the systems provided for in such plan. If the Commission finds after such investigation that such holding has the effects described, it shall by order provide for restricting the exercise of the voting power of such person with respect to such stock or other share capital (by requiring the deposit thereof with a trustee, or by other appropriate means) to the extent necessary to prevent such holding from continuing to have such effects.

"'(12) If in the course of any proceeding under this section before the Commission, or of any proceeding before a court in enforcement of an order entered by the Commission under this section, it appears that since the beginning of such proceeding the plan for consolidation has been reopened under paragraph (3) for changes or modifications with respect to the allocation of the properties of any carrier involved in such proceeding, then such proceeding may be suspended.

"'(13) The district courts of the United States shall have jurisdiction upon the application of the Commission, alleging a violation of any of the provisions of this section or disobedience of any order issued by the Commission thereunder by any person, to issue such writs of injunction or other proper process, mandatory or otherwise, as may be necessary to restrain such person from violation of such provision or to compel obedience to such order.

"'(14) The Commission may from time to time, for good cause shown, make such orders, supplemental to any order made under paragraph (1), (4), (10), or (11), as it may deem necessary or appropriate.

"'(15) The carriers and any corporation affected by any order made under the foregoing provisions of this section shall be, and they are hereby, relieved from the operation of the antitrust laws as designated in section 1 of the act entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes", approved October 15, 1914, and of all other restraints or prohibitions by or imposed under authority of law, State or Federal, insofar as may be necessary to enable them to do anything authorized or required by such order.

"'(16) If any provision of the foregoing paragraphs of this section, or the application thereof to any person or circumstances, is held invalid, the other provisions of such paragraphs, and the application of such provision to any other person or circumstances, shall not be affected thereby.

"'(17) As used in paragraphs (4) to (16), inclusive, the term "person" includes an individual, partnership, association, joint-stock company, or corporation, and the term "carrier" means a carrier by railroad subject to this act.'

"SEC. 203. Such section 5 is further amended by renumbering as paragraph (18) the paragraph added by the act entitled 'An act to amend section 407 of the Transportation Act of 1920', approved June 10, 1921, and by renumbering the remaining three paragraphs as paragraphs (19), (20), and (21), respectively.

"SEC. 204. The provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, and of all other applicable Federal statutes, as in force prior to the enactment of this title, shall remain in force, as though this title had not been enacted, with respect to the acquisition by any carrier, prior to the enactment of this title, of the control of any other carrier or carriers.

"SEC. 205. Section 15a of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended (U.S.C., title 49, sec. 15a), is amended to read as follows:

"'SEC. 15a. (1) When used in this section, the term "rates" means rates, fares, and charges, and all classifications, regulations, and practices relating thereto.

"'(2) In the exercise of its power to prescribe just and reasonable rates, the Commission shall give due consideration, among other factors, to the effect of rates on the movement of traffic; to the need, in the public interest, of adequate and efficient railway-transportation service at the lowest cost consistent with the furnishing of such service; and to the need of revenues sufficient to enable the carriers, under honest, economical, and efficient management, to provide such service.'

"SEC. 206. (a) All moneys which were recoverable by and payable to the Interstate Commerce Commission, under paragraph (6) of section 15a of the Interstate Commerce Act, as in force prior to the enactment of this title, shall cease to be so recoverable and payable; and all proceedings pending for the recovery of any such money shall be terminated. The general railroad contingent fund established under such section shall be liquidated and the Secretary of the Treasury shall distribute the moneys in such fund among the carriers which have made payments under such section, so that each such carrier shall receive an amount bearing the same ratio to the total amount in such fund that the total of amounts paid under such section by such carrier bears to the total of amounts paid under such section by all carriers; except that if the total amount in such fund exceeds the total of amounts paid under such section by all carriers such excess shall be distributed among such carriers upon the basis of the average rate of earnings (as determined by the Secretary of the Treasury) on the investment of the moneys in such fund and differences in dates of payments by such carriers.

"(b) The income, war-profits, and excess-profits tax liabilities for any taxable period ending after February 28, 1920, of the carriers and corporations whose income, war-profits, or excess-profits tax liabilities were affected by section 15a of the Interstate Commerce Act, as in force prior to the enactment of this act, shall be computed as if such section had never been enacted, except that, in the case of carriers or corporations which have made payments under paragraph (6) of such section, an amount equal to such payments shall be excluded from gross income for the taxable periods with respect to which they were made. All distributions made to carriers in accordance with subdivision (a) of this section shall be included in the gross income of the carriers for the taxable period in which this act is enacted. The provisions of this subdivision shall not be held to affect (1) the statutes of limitations with respect to the assessment, collection, refund, or credit of income, war-profits, or excess-profits taxes or (2) the liabilities for such taxes of any carriers or corporations if such liabilities were determined prior to the enactment of this act in accordance with section 1106 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1926 or section 606 of the Revenue Act of 1928, or in accordance with a final judgment of a court, an order of the Board of Tax Appeals which had become final, or an offer in compromise duly accepted in accordance with law.

"SEC. 207. Paragraph (a) of section 19a of the Interstate Commerce, as amended (U.S.C., title 49, sec. 19a (a)), is amended to read as follows:

"'(a) That the Commission shall, as hereinafter provided, investigate, ascertain, and report the value of all the property owned or used by every common carrier subject to the provisions of this act, except any street, suburban, or interurban electric railway which is not operated as a part of a general steam railroad system of transportation; but the Commission may in its discretion investigate, ascertain, and report the value of the property owned or used by any such electric railway subject to the provisions of this act whenever in its judgment such action is desirable in the public interest. To enable the Commission to make such investigation and report, it is authorized to employ such experts and other assistants as may be necessary. The Commission may appoint examiners who shall have power to administer oaths, examine witnesses, and take testimony. The Commission shall, subject to the exception hereinbefore provided for in the case of electric railways, make an inventory which shall list the property of every common carrier subject to the provisions of this act in detail, and show the value thereof as hereinafter provided, and shall classify the physical property, as nearly as practicable, in conformity with the classification of expenditures for road and equipment, as prescribed by the Interstate Commerce Commission.'

"SEC. 208. Paragraphs (f) and (g) of such section 19a, as amended (U.S.C., title 49, sec. 19a (f), (g)), are amended to read as follows:

"'(f) Upon completion of the original valuations herein provided for, the Commission shall thereafter keep itself informed of all new construction, extensions, improvements, retirements, or other changes in the condition, quantity, use, and classification of the property of all common carriers as to which original valuations have been made, and of the cost of all additions and betterments thereto and of all changes in the investment therein, and may keep itself informed of current changes in costs and values of railroad properties, in order that it may have available at all times the information deemed by it to be necessary to enable it to revise and correct its previous inventories, classifications, and values of the properties; and, when deemed necessary, may revise, correct, and supplement any of its inventories and valuations.

"'(g) To enable the Commission to carry out the provisions of the preceding paragraph, every common carrier subject to the provisions of this act shall make such reports and furnish such information as the Commission may require.'

"SEC. 209. If any provision of this act, or the application thereof to any person or circumstances, is held invalid, the other provisions of this act or the application of such provision to any other person or circumstances shall not be affected thereby."

And the House agree to the same.

C. C. DILL,
E. D. SMITH,
B. K. WHEELER,
SIMEON D. FESS,
JESSE H. METCALF,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

SAM RAYBURN,
GEORGE HUDDLESTON,
CLARENCE LEA,
JAMES S. PARKER,
JOHN G. COOPER,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. DILL. Mr. President, there were no serious controversies between the House and the Senate, and I think there is no objection to the report. I move its adoption.

The report was agreed to.

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5755) to encourage national industrial recovery, to foster fair competition, and to provide for the construction of certain useful public works, and for other purposes.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 44, after line 12, insert the following:

USE OF WATERS OF ST. LAWRENCE RIVER

SEC. —. (a) It is hereby declared that the prior use of all the waters of the St. Lawrence River within the boundaries of the United States is necessary for the proper regulation of commerce and the improvement of navigation.

(b) In the event of the ratification of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Deep Waterway Treaty and the construction of the works provided therein, the Power Authority of the State of New York, as the accredited agency of the State and in accordance with the policy set forth in the act creating said power authority, shall be entitled to use for the generation of hydroelectric power all of the United States' share of the flow of the water in the International Rapids section of the St. Lawrence River, subject to the prior use of such water under the treaty for the purposes of navigation and the operation of reservoirs, canals, and locks, and shall have title to the power houses and works appurtenant thereto upon the United States side, together with the lands upon which they are situated, in consideration of the payment of its share of the cost as determined in the joint memorandum dated February 7, 1933, and embodying the recommendations of the United States engineers and said power authority; Provided, That no part of the United States' share of the water in the International Rapids section of the St. Lawrence River shall be diverted for the benefit of any person or private corporation, nor shall the use of any part of said water or the rights pertaining to said water be sold, leased, or otherwise alienated to any person or private corporation for the generation of hydroelectric power.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President——

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, a point of order.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I do not yield for the Senator's making a point of order.

Mr. LONG. May I not make a point of order?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I do not yield for that purpose.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. Can I make that?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The Senator may state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. LONG. I have no disposition to shut off the Senator from Wisconsin at all, but is this amendment what we might call germane to what we have under consideration?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question of germaneness is not for the Chair to decide.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. There is no question of germaneness in the Senate except with regard to appropriation bills; and if there had been, we would not have been passing the bills which the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] described on the floor this afternoon as "conglomerate."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin is correct. The Senator from Wisconsin has the floor.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I wish to state for the information of the Senate that I offered the amendment to the industrial recovery bill only after having consulted with the President of the United States. Upon being advised that I had offered an amendment, the President addressed to me a letter, which I ask unanimous consent to have read at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection the clerk will read the letter as requested.

The Chief Clerk read the letter, as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, June 8, 1933.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I do not hesitate to tell you—and I do so with complete consistency—that I favor the resolution relating to the St. Lawrence power development passed by the House. I also favor the ratification of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Deep Waterway Treaty.

The joint resolution protects the people of the State of New York who own the land under water in the St. Lawrence River as far out as the international boundary. The resolution means, in effect, that the Congress will see to it that the State of New York, in paying for the power part of the development, will pay only for that part and will thus be able to insure cheap electricity for the consuming public.

The treaty itself has been endorsed by both major political parties. The beginning of the work of construction at an early date can be made an essential part of the national public works program and will furnish employment to thousands of people.

The above are simple facts and I have no objection to your use of this letter if you so desire.

Yours sincerely,

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

Hon. ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE, Jr.,
Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, the amendment which I have now formally tendered embodies the exact language contained in the joint resolution introduced in the House of Representatives by Representative MCREYNOLDS and in the Senate of the United States by the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN]. The leaders of the majority in the House stated at the time they asked for a rule to permit action upon the joint resolution that they were acting at the request and with the approval of the President.

Mr. President, the amendment gives effect to a formal recommendation unanimously agreed upon February 7, 1933, by and between the engineers of the War Department and representatives of the Power Authority of the State of New York for allocation of water power and the cost of the work to be constructed exclusively within the State of New York under the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence deep waterway.

This recommendation was made during the last administration after nearly 2 years of correspondence, conferences, and negotiations between the Federal and State authorities.

All the elements which entered into it were carefully considered at the hearings on the treaty before the subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations. The late Senator Thomas J. Walsh took the initiative in arranging the final conferences that led to this accord. He wrote the report adopted by the subcommittee, recommending the allocation of the water power to be developed under the treaty within the boundaries of New York to the State, upon the State's assumption of a fair share of the costs of construction.

The international section forms the boundary line between the State of New York and the Province of Ontario for a distance of 115 miles east from the point where the St. Lawrence River leaves Lake Ontario. The rapids begin near Ogdensburg, N.Y., 67 miles east of Lake Ontario, providing a fall of about 85 feet in the 48 miles east to the St. Regis River. This stretch of the St. Lawrence, known as "the International Rapids section", separates the State of New York from the Province of Ontario. All dams, locks, and other works necessary to make the river navigable and to harness the stream for the generation of hydroelectricity must be constructed either in New York or in Ontario.

This stretch of the St. Lawrence River affords the greatest potential water-power development on the North American Continent. It is a prize which has been sought by private utility interests ever since the art of the generation of electricity from the power of water has been known.

The amendment pertains exclusively to the works to be constructed under the treaty on the American side of the International Rapids section in the State of New York.

REDUCES UNITED STATES' HALF OF COSTS IN INTERNATIONAL RAPIDS SECTION 65 PERCENT

The cost of all the works for both navigation and power in the International Rapids section of the river is estimated at $274,742,000 on unit cost figures for 1926. All the works of this section, including two dams, the locks, canals, and powerhouse substructures and superstructures will be built in the State of New York and the Province of Ontario.

The United States' half of construction in the International Rapids section will cost $137,371,000. By the amendment the Power Authority of the State of New York will assume $89,726,000 of this cost. This will reduce the charge upon the Federal Treasury to $47,645,000 for the United States' half of the works in the International Rapids section, a reduction of 65 percent.

On the entire St. Lawrence project as a whole the United States expenditure of new funds for providing a 27-foot channel from Duluth to the sea and for the power development will be reduced one third by the assumption of costs by the power authority under the terms of the joint resolution.

This will reduce the total amount to be expended by the United States Government for the entire Great Lakes-St. Lawrence deep waterway to not more than $168,266,000. Spread over the 7-year period of construction, the average annual appropriation will be approximately $24,000,000.

These figures are based on unit-cost estimates as of 1926. If the project is undertaken promptly and contracts are let under existing reduced costs for labor, material, and supplies, it is estimated the project can be completed at from 25 to 40 percent below the 1926 unit costs.

Thus the adoption of the amendment will not only allocate the water power to the public agency provided by the State in which it must be developed, placing it beyond the reach of exploitation by private interests; it will also for the first time since the treaty was proposed definitely limit the costs to be assumed by the Federal Government.

At this point I ask unanimous consent to include in the RECORD, without reading, as a part of my remarks, an analysis of the engineers' allocation of costs.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

ANALYSIS OF ENGINEERS' ALLOCATION OF COSTS

The agreement of February 7, 1933, which is given effect by the amendment, allocates the costs of the St. Lawrence project, as between the United States and the State of New York, as follows:

(1) The United States assumes responsibility for the cost of all works for navigation.

(2) The State assumes $23,500,000 as its share of the cost of all works common to navigation and power, the State to receive its proportionate share of any saving if the actual cost of construction is less than the estimated cost.

(3) The State assumes responsibility for $29,295,500 for power-house substructures, head and tail races, excavations, etc.; this amount to be reduced by the amount of the saving.

(4) The State assumes responsibility for the actual cost of its power-house superstructures and equipment, estimated at $36,930,500, and may construct these works through its own agencies or, by agreement, have them installed at actual cost by the United States.

(5) "In the event that the State of New York elects, the United States assumes responsibility for the construction of the works in their entirety at a cost to New York representing the sum of the costs above set forth, or a total of $89,726,000, provided that if the actual cost be less than this amount the State of New York will receive the benefits of the said savings."

The memorandum concludes:

"On the basis above set forth the estimated cost to the United States for works in the International Rapids section, to be paid from the Federal Treasury under the terms of the treaty, become $125,765,250.

"The above recommendations are based upon the assumption that the State of New York shall have the right to utilize for power all the flow of the St. Lawrence River in the International Rapids section allocated to the United States by the treaty, other than that required for navigation, together with title to the power works and the lands upon which they are situated and which may be necessary and convenient for their operation."

Engineering plans embodied in the treaty itself provide for the construction of two dams in the International Rapids section. The plans are subject to modification by agreement between the United States and the Dominion of Canada. An international committee, provided for in the treaty, will have full control over the design and contruction of the works. It is, therefore, equitable that the State of New York, which cannot control the making of the plans, the letting of contracts, or the actual construction provided for by international agreement, should have its expenditure limited and receive proportionate benefit from any saving that may accrue below the estimated cost.

PROVIDES COMPETITION WITH ONTARIO POWER

Comparison of the Ontario agreement and the recommendation given effect by the amendment shows that the Hydro Commission of Ontario and the Power Authority of the State of New York will be able to compete in the production of cheap power on substantially equal terms.

The two plans are not comparable, item by item, for the reason that under the treaty and her agreement with Canada, Ontario will be permitted to divert 4,000 cubic feet per second of Canadian water from the Ogoki River into Lake Nipigon and utilize this water at four power sites in addition to the two sites at which New York will also have power houses. With this extra water Ontario will be able to develop 915,300 firm horsepower as compared with 710,000 firm horsepower for New York.

By the terms of the Ontario agreement, Ontario's investment will be $119 per firm horsepower. By the terms of the joint resolution, New York's investment will be $122.40 per firm horsepower.

The Province of Ontario also has an interest in the development of the St. Lawrence for navigation which does not obtain in the case of New York. The chief cities of the Province, located on Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence, will benefit directly from the navigation works. In addition, the 2-stage plan incorporated in the treaty was insisted upon by Ontario as being of direct advantage to her, although the 1-stage plan presented by New York could have been constructed at a saving estimated at between $35,000,000 and $70,000,000. Nevertheless, New York will pay within $14,400,000 of the amount Ontario will pay for works for power and navigation in the International Rapids section.

ALLOCATION ESSENTIAL TO CONSIDERATION OF TREATY

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The adoption of the amendment will not only definitely fix and greatly reduce the cost assumed by the Federal Treasury in undertaking the St. Lawrence project, but it will also erect safeguards against private exploitation of the water power to be developed by the use of public funds; and that is one of the important reasons I have offered the amendment to this bill, for the amendment definitely provides that in any development of this greatest block of hydroelectric energy on the North American Continent that may take place shall be in perpetuity by and for the interests of the consumers of electricity, namely, a public development and control of the generation of that electricity.

The State Department and the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations recognized the practical necessity of covering these points in legislation to be submitted to both Houses of Congress simultaneously with the submission of the treaty for ratification. The treaty itself leaves these matters unsettled, reserving them for domestic action which must precede the consideration of the treaty, if the Senate is to have before it a definite plan for the power development and an allocation of the costs of the project as a whole. If the treaty is ratified, the adoption of my amendment will greatly expedite actual construction, so that the St. Lawrence project may be included in the program of public works to relieve existing unemployment.

FEDERAL CONTROL OF NAVIGATION CONCEDED

The State of New York has conceded the superior right and authority of the Federal Government with respect to navigation on the St. Lawrence. The amendment specifically provides that the waters to be used by the State for the generation of hydroelectric power shall be "subject to the prior use of such waters under the treaty for the purposes of navigation and the operation of reservoirs, canals, and locks."

The water power has thus far been preserved for public use by State rather than Federal action. For 25 years under Governors Hughes, Smith, Roosevelt, and other chief executives, and by acts of her legislature, the State of New York has zealously safeguarded the power resources on the St. Lawrence against private exploitation; and it is that great resource, belonging to the people of the State of New York and the people of the United States, that I seek to have preserved by the adoption of this amendment.

In chapter 772 of the Laws of New York, approved by Governor Roosevelt April 27, 1931, and unanimously adopted by both branches of the legislature, the State set up the power authority as a "corporate, municipal instrumentality of the State", charging it with the development and control of St. Lawrence power for the benefit of domestic and rural consumers through distribution of hydroelectric energy at the lowest possible rates. The power authority is "a body corporate and politic, a political subdivision of the State, exercising governmental and public powers, perpetual in duration, capable of suing and being sued", and with the power of eminent domain.

The statute provides that the natural resources of the St. Lawrence River available for the creation and development of hydroelectric power "shall always remain inalienable to, and ownership, possession, and control thereof shall always be vested in, the people of the State."

LEGAL CONFLICT AVOIDED BY JOINT RESOLUTION

The agreement entered into on February 7, 1933, between engineers of the War Department and representatives of the power authority avoids any possible legal conflict between the State and the Federal Government as to the ownership of the undeveloped resources of the St. Lawrence. The accord is based upon practical considerations and principles of equity rather than upon legal technicalities. The State thus having shown its good faith and its desire to cooperate with the Federal Government, it is extremely important that the Federal Government, acting through the instrumentality of Congress, should accept that offer of cooperation, and should "make assurance doubly sure" that this great block of power on the North American continent shall be preserved in perpetuity to the people of the State of New York and consumers everywhere in the great northwestern industrial section of the United States.

At this point I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD, as part of my remarks, certain quotations from the hearings before the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

The major points involved in the agreement were outlined before the Senate subcommittee in its hearings on the St. Lawrence Deep Waterway Treaty on December 14, 1932, by Assistant Secretary of State James Grafton Rogers. Mr. Rogers was in charge of the negotiation of the treaty with Canada and conducted the State Department's conferences with the State authorities during the last administration. He said (p. 969, hearings):

"* * * I feel that the power developed can be most wisely turned over to whatever agency the State of New York provides for the purpose of developing it as a public holding and distribution agency * * *.

"In the first place, this is a very large block of power. There is here 1,100,000 incidental horsepower on the American side, which looms as a very substantial contribution to the power available in the northern industrial area in the United States * * *.

"In the second place, New York has asserted for a long time definite legal claims to this power. I am not going to attempt to pass upon those claims. My own judgment is that the power of the United States over the development of the St. Lawrence River is predominant. But we need not settle the issue or get into difficulties about it, if there is a sound business solution of it, and I think there is in the direction I have suggested.

"In the third place, New York has a clearly developed policy and a technical organization which has been developed as a result of numerous political pronouncements and several legislative acts in the State of New York, which show a pretty well settled opinion and public attitude there, and it seems to me that that is entitled to consideration at the hands of the Government.

"In the next place, New York is a State of very considerable financial strength and stability. If, as I think, a very large social asset of this kind can be entrusted to a State government at all, surely New York State is one of the States which ought to be capable of carrying on that form of trust with safety and conservancy and sound judgment.

"Therefore, it seems to me the logical thing to look forward to an arrangement between the Federal Government and New York State whereby, upon payment of a proper proportion of the cost of the development of the project, or on some other business basis which would take into consideration the various factors, the United States should look forward to that line of action."

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I desire to quote briefly from the majority report submitted to the Committee on Foreign Relations by the subcommittee which conducted an inquiry into every phase of the treaty.

Senator Walsh wrote:

The State of New York claims to be entitled to the one half of the power developed in that section of the river (the International Rapids section), and your committee is of the opinion that it should be accorded the same upon the payment of so much of the total cost of the improvement therein as is justly allocatable to power development * * *. New funds required of this country will amount to $257,992,000, including the sum to be provided by the State of New York on account of power, which the engineers of that State and those of the War Department have agreed should be $89,000,000.

FEDERAL POLICY GIVES PREFERENCE TO STATES AND CITIES IN POWER DEVELOPMENT

The amendment is directly in line with the declared policy of the Federal Government that States and municipalities shall be granted preference in connection with the development and operation of water-power sites over which the Federal Government asserts control under the commerce clause of the Constitution.

This policy was embodied in the Federal Water Power Act of 1920 and has repeatedly received congressional approval in legislation applying to particular water-power projects.

The provisions of the Federal Water Power Act embodying this preference are as follows:

SEC. 7. That in issuing preliminary permits hereunder or licenses where no preliminary permit has been issued and in issuing licenses to new licensees under section 15 hereof, the Commission shall give preference to applications therefor by States and municipalities, provided the plans for the same are deemed by the Commission equally well adapted, or shall within a reasonable time, to be fixed by the Commission, be made equally well adapted to conserve and utilize in the public interest the navigation and water resources of the region. * * *

SEC. 4. (e) To issue preliminary permits for the purpose of enabling applicants for a license hereunder to secure the data and to perform the acts required by section 9 hereof: Provided, however, That upon the filing of any application for a preliminary permit by any person, association, or corporation the Commission, before granting such application, shall at once give notice of such application in writing to any State or municipality likely to be interested in or affected by such application; and shall also publish notice of such application for 8 weeks in a daily or weekly newspaper published in the county or counties in which the project or any part thereof or the lands affected thereby are situated.

The form in which this preference was embodied in the earlier legislation is set forth in the following provision of the Ferris bill of 1918:

That in issuing preliminary permits or licenses hereunder, the Commission shall give preference to applications therefor by States and municipalities, provided the plans for the same are deemed by the Commission adapted to conserve and utilize in the public interest the navigation and water resources of the region (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, 65th Cong., 2d sess., p. 9805).

Examination of the congressional debates indicates that no serious opposition has ever been offered on the floor of either House to the granting of such preference to States and municipalities.

It is likewise the declared policy of the Federal Government that no charge shall be imposed upon States and municipalities in connection with the development, transmission, or distribution of power where such power is sold to the public without profit or is used for State or municipal purposes.

This policy is set forth in the following proviso in section 10 (e) of the Federal Water Power Act of 1920 as follows:

Provided, That licenses for the development, transmission, or distribution of power by States or municipalities shall be issued and enjoyed without charge to the extent such power is sold to the public without profit or is used by such State or municipality for State or municipal purposes, except that as to projects constructed or to be constructed by States or municipalities primarily designed to provide or improve navigation, license therefor shall be issued without charge.

In dealing with private corporations which obtain licenses under the Federal Water Power Act, the Federal Government has limited its charges against such licensees to the amount necessary to reimburse the United States for the cost of administration of the act, except as rentals may be charged for the use and occupancy of lands and other property of the United States. To impose upon the power authority, as the public agency of a sovereign State, any charges in excess of the cost of the works properly allocatable to the development of power, would be equivalent to requiring the State-owned project to bear a heavier burden than would be imposed upon a private licensee under the terms of the Federal Water Power Act.

PUBLIC DEVELOPMENT AT LOW RATES ASSURED

Under the treaty two dams will be erected, the upper dam at Crysler Island and the lower dam at Barnhart Island. At each dam there will be two power houses, one on each side of the international boundary. The installed capacity of the power houses to be erected at these dams in the State of New York will be 1,100,000 horsepower. From one half the normal unregulated flow of the river the New York power houses will generate about 710,000 primary horsepower, available substantially all the time, and 390,000 secondary horsepower, available a large part of the time. This means that the St. Lawrence power project is comparable in magnitude to Muscle Shoals and Boulder Dam.

It is the only large undeveloped natural resource available for power generation in the northeastern section of the United States, the most highly industrialized and densely populated section of the country.

It has already been demonstrated, in the case of Muscle Shoals and Boulder Dam, that private capital cannot undertake the development of a project of such magnitude or submit bids for the operation of such projects when developed on terms acceptable to the Congress. It is inconceivable that the Federal Government would assume the entire cost of development of the St. Lawrence for both power and navigation and then attempt to lease the power plant to any of the great private power combinations which in times past have sought to wrest the control of this great natural resource from the State of New York for private exploitation.

The adoption of the amendment utilizes the public agency provided by a sovereign State for the development and operation of the power to be developed in that State. It will perpetually safeguard the use of the flow of the St. Lawrence River for the generation of hydroelectric energy at the lowest possible cost for the benefit of rural and domestic consumers.

The adoption of the amendment will enable the New York Power Authority to proceed with its plans for the power houses. It can complete its arrangements for financing. The Federal Government will know definitely what its share of the cost will be. It will strengthen the arm of the power authority in dealing with the private power companies.

More important than all else, Mr. President, this amendment declares the policy that the power shall be developed in the public interest. There is now one application pending before the Federal Power Commission by the American Superpower Corporation for a license to develop this vast resource of electric power on the St. Lawrence River. If this amendment be adopted, all opportunity for private power interests to seize this great hydroelectric development will have been foreclosed forever.

Mr. President, I hope that, in view of all the circumstances which I have cited, in view of the fact that this amendment is, so far as I know, the only amendment to this bill which has specifically received the endorsement of the President of the United States, it will be agreed to.

PURCHASE OF FORESTRY KITS

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Mr. President, I have in my hand an editorial from the Washington Daily News of June 8 entitled "Mr. Howe's Blunder." The editorial is as follows:

MR. HOWE'S BLUNDER

Mr. Howe, President Roosevelt's secretary, has not made a very happy explanation of his part in the forestry kit scandal.

The uncontested facts are these:

Basil O'Connor, friend of Mr. Howe and former law partner of the President, sent Mr. BeVier, head of a New York firm, to Mr. Howe with a letter of introduction.

After talking with Mr. BeVier, Mr. Howe sent a letter to Director Fechner, of emergency conservation work, stating:

"It has come to my attention that toilet articles for the men of the conservation corps * * * can be purchased in the form of a kit containing more items and of a much higher quality, at a considerably less price than they would cost if purchased singly or if procured through the War Department. * * * I have seen the inferior articles referred to, and I have seen the kits of superior articles. * * * If you feel that you are in need of specific authority for taking this matter into your own hands, this letter will serve the purpose."

As a result of this Howe letter, Director Fechner contracted for 200,000 BeVier kits at $1.40 each, which the Quartermaster General of the Army says could have been purchased elsewhere for 85 cents or less.

Neither Mr. Howe, who signed the letter, nor Mr. Lowery, of the Budget Bureau, whom he requested to dictate the letter for him, made any investigation to ascertain that the BeVier kit was of higher quality or cheaper. All they had, apparently, was the sales talk of Mr. BeVier.

Mr. Howe's defense is that his letter was not intended to influence the letting of the contract, but merely to give Director Fechner such authority and discretion. The Howe letter, however, obviously did influence the contract, and on the face of it could hardly have done otherwise.

No one suggests that Mr. Howe personally profited by this deal. Nor is the issue merely whether the Government lost $100,000 or $150,000 through a technical error of a Government official.

Why should the President's secretary welcome Government-contract seekers, with or without political pull? Why should he interfere with the regular Government purchasing machinery set up to prevent political favoritism and graft? Why should he have or express any opinion on the relative merits of merchandise supposed to be passed upon by nonpolitical Government experts? Why should he—if so unwise as to participate in such a transaction himself—draw in the President by permitting the President to sign a hasty approval?

The most charitable answer to these questions is that Secretary Howe has been guilty of an inexcusable blunder. We hope that the administration in its effective work will not be embarrassed by such blundering in the future.

Mr. President, I ask that there be published in the RECORD an article appearing in the Baltimore Sun on June 9, 1933, on the same matter entitled "Down the Spillway."

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Baltimore Sun, June 9, 1933]

DOWN THE SPILLWAY

It is almost time for the correspondence school of which Mr. BeVier must be an alumnus to begin capitalizing his ability as the champion go-getter who carried the message of toilet cases for foresters to the highest places of statesmanship. Perhaps it is premature now, since it is not yet certain that "he got the order," but it is not too soon to begin working up the copy:

They laughed when I told them I contacted Louis McHenry Howe, but you should have seen them when I walked away with the order for 200,000 toilet kits, with sewing outfits included!

After all, Mr. BeVier's was a real feat of sound American salesmanship. I imagine that not even the Fuller brush man has been able to get into the White House—and they must need a lot of brushes there in the course of a year. But Mr. BeVier made it, and, instead of being kicked out on his ear, he got a reference to the Director of the Budget, who must have been pleased, indeed. And then he got a letter to the Director of the C.C.C. camps, which Mr. Howe signed and which showed the latter as something of a connoisseur of toilet cases.

If Mr. Howe's experience is like that of most of us, I suspect the whole thing began like this:

Mr. HOWE. Good morning.

Mr. BEVIER. Colonel Howe, I believe? Colonel Howe, the University of Southern California, in conjunction with the Spruce-Up Toilet Kit Corporation, is sending a lot of us boys out on a personality contest. Now, just a minute, Colonel; this'll take only a couple of minutes. All you have to do is to vote for my personality and, as a token of having cast a vote, you enter your order for one of these cases, complete with razor, brush, tooth paste, and splinter extractor. In fact, Colonel Howe, I came to you because you can cast 200,000 votes for my personality at no expense to yourself and make me the undisputed winner of this contest.

Mr. HOWE. May I see the toilet case?

Mr. BEVIER. Certainly; but the case, after all, is only an evidence of good faith for the interest which you have so kindly taken in my efforts to gain votes for this personality contest, which, as a student and a young man, means a great deal to me.

Mr. HOWE. Just a minute. This fellow Lewis Douglas is a better judge of personality than I am, and I'd rather you saw him——

Mr. BEVIER. Very good, Colonel; but if you could write a little note saying I was here first. You see, there are some boys out doing the same thing for the University of South Dakota.

Mr. HOWE. Now, I don't have to tell all my friends to sell one of these toilet kits to all their friends, after which the money will begin to roll in?

Mr. BEVIER. Certainly not. That is all taken care of in one motion. I win the personality contest and the country wins 200,000 contented woodsmen. Good morning, sir; I'll be on my way to Mr. Douglas.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I rise for the purpose of informing the eminent Senator from Indiana [Mr. ROBINSON], who is always careful and exceedingly prudent as to any matters that would touch the private character of a citizen or the honor of an official, that this subject matter to which he has alluded, the investigation of the purchase of these kits, is now before a subcommittee of the Committee on Military Affairs of the Senate and is receiving an investigation which I trust—indeed, I may feel quite sure—may be complete.

In my judgment, editorials such as that read here by the able Senator, expressing, as I fancy the writer meant to express, the necessity of great caution on the part of any official occupying a trust place, is likely to invest some mind with the thought that there are those who believe that there is corruption, financial or personal, in the dealings between the President's secretary and his selected friend.

I beg to say that while the subject is under investigation no Member of the Senate, indeed, no one of just and fair mind, will allow himself to be wholly prejudiced and so adverse as to reflect upon the character of the official referred to, certainly not unless there is something developing in the examination and in the investigation that would justify.

I am pleased to say to my able friend from Indiana that there are many of us on the floor who know Colonel Howe and have known him for years, in his service here at Washington upon previous times and at other places, and all those who know him certify him to be a scrupulously honorable gentleman, a diligent official, a devoted friend, and a worthy public servant. I can assure the eminent Senator from Indiana that when these examinations have been concluded he will see that this observation I now make is wholly justified by the results.

BRIDGES ACROSS NAVIGABLE WATERS IN MONROE COUNTY, FLA.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I have a bridge bill on the calendar which has been reported favorably by the Committee on Military Affairs and also by the War Department. It is a local matter in my State, and we are very anxious to have it passed by the Senate this afternoon, in the hope that it may be passed by the House.

Mr. HARRISON. If it does not lead to any discussion, I have no objection to its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Florida asks unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of a bill, which will be read.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1783) granting the consent of Congress to the Overseas Road and Toll Bridge District, a political subdivision of the State of Florida, to construct, maintain, and operate bridges across the navigable waters in Monroe County, Fla., from Lower Matecumbe Key to No Name Key, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the Overseas Road and Toll Bridge District, a political subdivision of the State of Florida, to construct, maintain, and operate bridges and approaches thereto across the navigable waters in Monroe County, in the State of Florida, at points suitable to the interests of navigation between Lower Matecumbe Key and No Name Key (including such toll highways, bridges, viaducts, causeways, fills, embankments, roads, trestles, and other appurtenant structures as may be necessary to connect certain of the present termini of State road no. 4–A in such manner as to complete a system of highways and bridges extending from Miami to Key West, via Key Largo), in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

SEC. 2. If tolls are charged for the use of such bridges, the rates of toll shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridges and their approaches under economical management, and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to amortize the cost of the bridges and their approaches, including reasonable interest and financing cost, as soon as possible under reasonable charges, but within a period of not to exceed 40 years from the completion thereof. After a sinking fund sufficient for such amortization shall have been so provided, such bridges shall thereafter be maintained and operated free of tolls, or the rates of toll shall thereafter be so adjusted as to provide a fund of not to exceed the amount necessary for the proper maintenance, repair, and operation of the bridges and their approaches under economical management. An accurate record of the costs of the bridges and their approaches, the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same, and of the daily tolls collected, shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested.

SEC. 3. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5755) to encourage national industrial recovery, to foster fair competition, and to provide for the construction of certain useful public works, and for other purposes.

Mr. COPELAND obtained the floor.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BRATTON in the chair.) Does the Senator from New York yield for that purpose?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Copeland	Kean	Robinson, Ark.
Ashurst	Costigan	Kendrick	Robinson, Ind.
Austin	Cutting	Keyes	Russell
Bailey	Davis	King	Schall
Bankhead	Dickinson	La Follette	Sheppard
Barbour	Dieterich	Lewis	Shipstead
Barkley	Dill	Lonergan	Smith
Black	Duffy	Long	Steiwer
Bone	Erickson	McCarran	Stephens
Borah	Fess	McGill	Thomas, Okla.
Bratton	Frazier	McKellar	Thomas, Utah
Brown	George	McNary	Thompson
Bulkley	Glass	Metcalf	Townsend
Bulow	Goldsborough	Murphy	Trammell
Byrd	Gore	Neely	Tydings
Byrnes	Hale	Norris	Vandenberg
Capper	Harrison	Nye	Van Nuys
Caraway	Hastings	Overton	Wagner
Carey	Hatfield	Patterson	Walsh
Clark	Hayden	Pope	Wheeler
Connally	Hebert	Reed	White
Coolidge	Johnson	Reynolds

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-seven Senators having answered to their names, there is a quorum present.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I find myself in almost full agreement with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] regarding the virtues of power development in my State.

But this is neither the time nor the place, as I view it, to give consideration to a matter which has not yet been referred to one of our committees for consideration and recommendation. I can hardly understand why we should attach to a bill which has to do with national industry recovery and the relief of unemployment, the particular proposal submitted, which cannot operate possibly until the treaty has been ratified.

Mr. President, I should feel guilty indeed to take any of the time of the Senate tonight with this particular matter.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator from New York permit me to ask the Senator from Mississippi a question?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. LONG. Perhaps we can save a little debate. Is not the Senator from Mississippi in favor of incorporating this amendment in the bill?

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, this is a matter which, so far as I remember, was not presented at all and was not studied by the committee having the bill in charge. So far as I am concerned, I am sorry that it is here. I hope the amendment will be rejected, and I hope, likewise, that the Senator from New York will not make a long speech and delay progress of the bill.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, the amendment is here with the knowledge and approval of the President of the United States.

Mr. HARRISON. I understand the President has recommended the St. Lawrence waterway proposal; but the Finance Committee gave no consideration to it.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. No; but I offered the amendment to the bill after conference with the President and with his approval.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator from New York yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. I want to make a comment upon Senators quoting here on the floor the President of the United States.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I had a letter from the President read while the Senator from Texas was temporarily absent from the Chamber.

Mr. CONNALLY. I do not challenge the authenticity of the Senator's information. I did not hear the letter read, because I was called out of the Chamber; but at the same time that does not change the situation. The Finance Committee did not consider the matter, and they had no information as to the attitude of the administration or the President.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, there is no doubt that Mr. Roosevelt is very much interested in the development of the canal. He is in favor of ratification of the treaty, and at some time the Senate must give consideration to the treaty. I am anxious that it should have that fair consideration which the importance of the subject demands. But I have not the heart to keep the Senate here for hours to discuss the merits of the main proposal. The amendment offered by the Senator from Wisconsin is not going to give any employment. There cannot be a shovelful of earth taken out of the bank of the river until we have the treaty ratified.

Mr. President, it seems to me the thing to do is to reject the amendment. If the Senate is in a mood to spend hours debating it, I can go forward, but I do not think it is fair or right. I think the amendment is not germane at all to the question in hand.

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. DIETERICH. My understanding of the matter was that at some later time we should give this important treaty consideration. Many Members of the Senate represent States that are interested in this particular project. Until the treaty is presented here for consideration, matters incident to the treaty should not be presented. The amendment submitted by the Senator from Wisconsin involves a matter entirely incident to the treaty.

The question of someone coming before the Senate and, with due apologies to the Senator from Wisconsin, seemingly for propaganda purposes presenting some little phase of something that might happen in the event the treaty shall be ratified, is unfair and is not in keeping with the dignity of this body when we consider as important an international treaty as this one is. The entire matter should be left untouched until the Senate has such time that it can give the treaty fair consideration. All matters incident to it should be postponed until that time. Then we can take up the treaty and consider it, not with prejudice or passion, but for the purpose of determining whether or not it is in the best interests of the country to ratify the treaty or suggest such reservations as will properly protect the rights and interests of our people. I submit that this is almost an unfair attempt to bring up the matter at this time.

Another thing is the matter of disclosing private correspondence between a Senator and the President of the United States, which should not be and cannot be binding upon the Senate.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. O Mr. President.

Mr. DIETERICH. I have not yet finished.

Mr. COPELAND. I yield further to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DIETERICH. A further matter is that if the President wants to submit a message to the Congress disclosing his attitude, he has a perfect right to do so. I do not care to take any further time, but at this late hour in the closing days of the session this matter should not be brought here, because it will require considerable time for consideration.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator from New York yield to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The Senator from Illinois obviously did not listen to the letter from the President of the United States when it was read at the desk or he would not have made any accusation that I was disclosing private correspondence. The last paragraph of the letter reads:

> The above are simple facts and I have no objection to your use of this letter if you so desire.

So far as this being unfair procedure is concerned, the Senator from Illinois knows, if he has followed the legislative practice at this session, that it has become a very common practice to offer to bills amendments which were not germane to the subject. In the second place the St. Lawrence Treaty and the question of allocation of power have had more debate than any other single piece of legislation or any other matter which has been before the Senate at this session of the Congress.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, let me say to my colleagues that the proposal which the Senator from Wisconsin has presented involves the payment by my State of $90,000,000. We have not any $90,000,000. We have not any funds to use for this purpose. We might come and borrow it from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, as most of the States are doing.

I appeal to Senators, let us not take the time of the Senate to consider the matter now. So far as I am concerned, I shall not resist its being brought before the Senate in orderly fashion to be discussed on its merits, and then the matter can be settled. I think we ought to vote immediately.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. DAVIS (after having voted in the negative). Has the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN] voted?

The VICE PRESIDENT. That Senator has not voted.

Mr. DAVIS. I transfer my pair with that Senator to the senior Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WALCOTT] and let my vote stand.

Mr. McNARY. Again announcing my pair with the senior Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER], and not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote. If permitted to vote, I should vote "nay".

Mr. HEBERT. I have been requested to announce a general pair between the Senator from Vermont [Mr. DALE] and the Senator from California [Mr. McADOO].

Mr. TYDINGS. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. METCALF]. I understand that if he were present he would vote the same as I shall vote, and I am therefore at liberty to vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. GEORGE. I desire to announce that the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON], if present, would vote "nay." He is necessarily detained on official business.

Mr. REED (after having voted in the negative). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON]. I understand if he were present he would vote as I have voted, and therefore I allow my vote to stand.

Mr. PATTERSON (after having voted in the negative). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER]. However, I am informed that if present he would vote as I have voted, and therefore I let my vote stand.

Mr. LEWIS. May I be pardoned for intruding upon the time of the Senate to announce that the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BACHMAN] and the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. BULOW] are absent on official business. I am unable to say how they would vote if present.

The senior Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] is necessarily detained. I am advised that if present he would vote "nay."

I also wish to announce that the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the Senator from California [Mr. McADOO], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH], and the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] are detained on official business.

Mr. HEBERT. I was requested to announce that if the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WALCOTT] were present, he would vote "nay."

Mr. McKELLAR. My colleague, the junior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BACHMAN], is absent on official business. If present, he would vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 20, nays 59, as follows:

YEAS—20

Bone	Costigan	Duffy	Frazier
Borah	Cutting	Erickson	Johnson

Kendrick	Nye	Schall	Thomas, Utah
La Follette	Pope	Shipstead	Vandenberg
Norris	Robinson, Ind.	Steiwer	Wheeler

NAYS—59

Adams	Carey	Hastings	Patterson
Ashurst	Clark	Hatfield	Reed
Austin	Connally	Hayden	Reynolds
Bailey	Coolidge	Hebert	Russell
Bankhead	Copeland	Kean	Sheppard
Barbour	Davis	Keyes	Stephens
Barkley	Dickinson	Lewis	Thomas, Okla.
Black	Dieterich	Lonergan	Thompson
Bratton	Dill	Long	Townsend
Brown	Fess	McCarran	Trammell
Bulkley	George	McGill	Tydings
Byrd	Goldsborough	McKellar	Van Nuys
Byrnes	Gore	Murphy	Walsh
Capper	Hale	Neely	White
Caraway	Harrison	Overton

NOT VOTING—17

Bachman	Glass	Metcalf	Wagner
Bulow	King	Norbeck	Walcott
Couzens	Logan	Pittman
Dale	McAdoo	Robinson, Ark.
Fletcher	McNary	Smith

So Mr. LA FOLLETTE's amendment was rejected.

Mr. GORE obtained the floor.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President——

Mr. GORE. I yield to the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. HARRISON. I desire to offer an amendment that will clarify and perfect the Senate committee amendment.

The Senate committee amendment is in the form of one amendment, as I understand, and, with reference to the tax on dividends, some question has been raised because some of the corporations perhaps have declared a dividend, but payment has not been made. It goes into effect after the passage of the act. We have clarified it to the extent that the tax shall not apply until after the bill is enacted and until after the dividend has been declared. It seems to me that is fair. The experts have passed on it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Mississippi will be stated.

Mr. HARRISON. I ask that this amendment to the Senate committee amendment be adopted.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 35, line 12, it is proposed to strike out "after the enactment of this act", and the commas before and after such words, and after line 17 to insert a new sentence, as follows:

The tax imposed by this section shall not apply to dividends declared before the date of the enactment of this act.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 40, line 7, it is proposed to strike out all after the word "proclaimed" through the word "and" in line 9, and after line 11 to insert a new subsection, as follows:

(c) The tax on dividends imposed by section 212 shall not apply to any dividends declared on or after the first day of the calendar year following the date so proclaimed.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, before the amendment is agreed to, I desire to ask the Senator from Mississippi a question. I have had it called to my attention that there is a good deal of complaint from the building-and-loan associations with reference to this particular tax.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, it is my idea that the building-and-loan associations ought to be excluded from the capital-stock tax.

Mr. CONNALLY. From the capital-stock tax; but they contend that their dividends are paid without being able to take credit for interest, and things of that kind, which a bank or other corporation could deduct.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. REED. In a moment, after these amendments are adopted, the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] is going to offer an amendment on behalf of himself and myself to relieve building-and-loan associations from this tax.

Mr. CONNALLY. I do not know that I should be willing to relieve them entirely, but the amendment ought to be so drawn that they will be on the same level with other corporations, so that it will be fair and just to all alike. I will wait, however, until that amendment is offered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARRISON submitted the following amendments to the committee amendment:

On page 36, strike out lines 16 to 25, both inclusive, all of pages 37 and 38, and lines 1 to 18, both inclusive, on page 39, and in lieu thereof insert the following:

"SEC. 214. (a) For each year ending June 30 there is hereby imposed upon every domestic corporation with respect to carrying on or doing business for any part of such year an excise tax of $1 for each $1,000 of the adjusted declared value of its capital stock.

"(b) For each year ending June 30 there is hereby imposed upon every foreign corporation with respect to carrying on or doing business in the United States for any part of such year an excise tax equivalent to $1 for each $1,000 of the adjusted declared value of capital employed in the transaction of its business in the United States.

"(c) The taxes imposed by this section shall not apply—

"(1) to any corporation enumerated in section 103 of the Revenue Act of 1932;

"(2) to any insurance company subject to the tax imposed by section 201 or 204 of such act;

"(3) to any domestic corporation in respect of the year ending June 30, 1933, if it did not carry on or do business during a part of the period from the date of the enactment of this act to June 30, 1933, both dates inclusive; or

"(4) to any foreign corporation in respect of the year ending June 30, 1933, if it did not carry on or do business in the United States during a part of the period from the date of the enactment of this act to June 30, 1933, both dates inclusive.

"(d) Every corporation liable for tax under this section shall make a return under oath within 1 month after the close of the year with respect to which such tax is imposed to the collector for the district in which is located its principal place of business or, if it has no principal place of business in the United States, then to the collector at Baltimore, Md. Such return shall contain such information and be made in such manner as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may by regulations prescribe. The tax shall, without assessment by the Commissioner or notice from the collector, be due and payable to the collector before the expiration of the period for filing the return. If the tax is not paid when due, there shall be added as part of the tax interest at the rate of 1 percent a month from the time when the tax became due until paid. All provisions of law (including penalties) applicable in respect of the taxes imposed by section 600 of the Revenue Act of 1926 shall, insofar as not inconsistent with this section, be applicable in respect of the taxes imposed by this section. The Commissioner may extend the time for making the returns and paying the taxes imposed by this section, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, with the approval of the Secretary, but no such extension shall be for more than 60 days.

"(e) Returns required to be filed for the purpose of the tax imposed by this section shall be open to inspection in the same manner, to the same extent, and subject to the same provisions of law, including penalties, as returns made under title II of the Revenue Act of 1926.

"(f) For the first year ending June 30 in respect of which a tax is imposed by this section upon any corporation, the adjusted declared value shall be the value as declared by the corporation in its first return under this section (which declaration of value cannot be amended), as of the close of its last income-tax taxable year ending at or prior to the close of the year for which the tax is imposed by this section (or as of the date of organization in the case of a corporation having no income-tax taxable year ending at or prior to the close of the year for which the tax is imposed by this section). For any subsequent year ending June 30 the adjusted declared value in the case of a domestic corporation shall be the original declared value plus (1) the cash and fair market value of property paid in for stock or shares, (2) paid-in surplus and contributions to capital, and (3) earnings and profits, and minus (A) the value of property distributed in liquidation to shareholders, (B) distributions of earnings and profits, and (C) deficits, whether operating or nonoperating; each adjustment being made for the period from the date as of which the original declared value was declared to the close of its last income-tax taxable year ending at or prior to the close of the year for which the tax is imposed by this section. For any subsequent year ending June 30 the adjusted declared value in the case of a foreign corporation shall be the original declared value adjusted, in acordance with regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, to reflect increases or decreases (for the period specified in the preceding sentence) in the capital employed in the transaction of its business in the United States.

"(g) The terms used in this section shall have the same meaning as when used in the Revenue Act of 1932.

"SEC. 215. (a) There is hereby imposed upon the net income of every corporation, for each income-tax taxable year ending after the close of the first year in respect of which it is taxable under section 214, an excess-profits tax equivalent to 5 percent of such portion of its net income for such income-tax taxable year as is in excess of 12½ percent of the adjusted declared value of its capital stock (or in the case of a foreign corporation the adjusted declared value of capital employed in the transaction of its business in the United States) as of the close of the preceding income-tax taxable year (or as of the date of organization if it had no preceding income-tax taxable year), determined as provided in section 214. The terms used in this section shall have the same meaning as when used in the Revenue Act of 1932.

"(b) The tax imposed by this section shall be assessed, collected, and paid in the same manner, and shall be subject to the same provisions of law (including penalties), as the taxes imposed by title I of the Revenue Act of 1932."

On page 40, strike out lines 12, 13, and 14, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"(d) The capital-stock tax imposed by section 214 shall not apply to any taxpayer in respect of any year beginning on or after the 1st day of July following the date so proclaimed."

On page 40, line 15, strike out "(d)" and insert "(e)."

On page 42, line 8, after the word "fiscal", insert the word "year."

The amendments to the amendment were agreed to.

Mr. GORE obtained the floor.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President——

Mr. GORE. I yield to the Senator from Montana if his proposal does not lead to controversy.

Mr. WHEELER. I do not think my proposal will lead to controversy.

I am sending to the desk an amendment to be inserted at the proper place. The Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER], I understand, is satisfied with it, and I am told that the Director of the Budget favors it. Likewise, the Civil Service Commission has sent up a letter in favor of it; and the employees, after conferring, have all agreed upon this amendment. It is a proposition to create the position of liaison officer and to establish in the Civil Service Commission a board of appeal.

I send the amendment to the desk and ask the Senator from Mississippi if he will not accept it and let it go to conference.

Mr. HARRISON. If the matter will precipitate a discussion, I would rather accept it and let it go to conference.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Mississippi accept the amendment?

Mr. HARRISON. I do.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. WHEELER'S amendment is, on page 44, after line 12, to insert the following:

That there is hereby created the position of liaison officer, and there is hereby established in the Civil Service Commission a board of appeal consisting of the three Commissioners; that the position of liaison officer shall be independent of the executive departments and independent offices and said officer shall be empowered to hear, investigate, and adjust all differences between employees and their superiors. There shall be a right of appeal to the board of appeal by the head of the department or the employee concerned. The liaison officer shall cooperate at all times with the Commissioners on important matters and the board of appeal shall take action on appeals from the finding of the liaison officer after the head of the department or the incumbent of the position affected has objected in writing and all persons in interest have been afforded an opportunity to be heard and their decision shall be final. Appeals of employees shall be without prejudice to them. The liaison officer shall receive a salary of $6,000 per annum, and shall be a Civil Service employee with at least 20 years' service in the classified Civil Service selected by the Civil Service Commission. To carry out the provisions of this amendment, the Civil Service Commissioners shall, upon request of the liaison officer, furnish the necessary equipment and assistance by transfer from the Civil Service rolls.

Mr. GORE obtained the floor.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. GORE. I believe I will ask the Senator to excuse me. I have been waiting here all day to offer the amendment which I am now about to propose. I do not believe any other amendment will exceed it in importance. If the Senator will be kind enough to wait, I believe I will propose the amendment at this point.

Mr. WALSH. I wanted to offer an amendment to the subdivision just under consideration.

Mr. GORE. Does the Senator think it will lead to controversy?

Mr. WALSH. I yield the floor to the Senator.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I ask Senators to turn to page 34, line 18. I have offered an amendment to strike out subsection (a) of section 210. It relates to the proposed increase in the Federal gasoline tax.

Of course, this title is designed to provide for servicing the indebtedness created by this legislation. With that purpose, I am in perfect sympathy; but I do not think too large a share of that burden should be cast upon any one article.

I think that too large a share of that burden is cast upon gasoline. I resisted the gasoline tax 1 year ago. Senators will remember that 1 year ago in the revenue act Congress invaded the field of taxation heretofore reserved to the States and levied a tax of 1 cent a gallon on gasoline. This bill, as it passed the House, proposes to increase that tax to 1¾ cents a gallon.

The Senate Finance Committee reduced that proposed tax by one quarter of 1 cent per gallon. The pending proposition is, therefore, that hereafter the Federal tax on gasoline shall be 1½ cents per gallon. My amendment proposes to strike out the additional one half of 1 cent.

When I discussed this measure a year ago, I presented all the arguments that occurred to me to justify my opposition. Those arguments did not avail. I shall not repeat them now. I made one observation then, however, that I should like to reiterate at this point.

I stated that the Federal Government was invading a field of taxation which prior to that time had been reserved to the States, and that the Federal tax on gasoline then proposed was the beginning and not the end; that the tax would grow and grow, and the burden imposed by the Federal Government upon this article would be increased from time to time. That prediction has come true.

Mr. President, in support of my contention that too large a share of this burden is being cast upon gasoline, I may say that under the House proposal in this measure one third of all the revenues to be raised under the measure would have devolved on gasoline alone. One year ago, when we passed the special revenue act to balance the budget, one fourth of all the estimated tax was cast upon gasoline alone.

Senators may be surprised to hear me say that of all the revenues collected by all of our several governments, Federal, State, local, county, city, town, and township, one twentieth of the whole is derived from gasoline. Of all the taxes imposed by the Federal Government, customs, incomes, and excises, of all the taxes that are imposed by our 48 States, taxes on real estate, taxes on personal property, taxes on city lots, on buildings of all sorts, of all the taxes imposed by our various counties, 3,072 in number; of all the taxes imposed by the towns and the townships in the United States—of all that vast aggregate, amounting to fourteen billions, one twentieth of the entire burden is devolved upon gasoline alone.

I believe that our tariff laws deal with more than 3,000 articles, and they now yield approximately $300,000,000 in revenue. Gasoline alone turns into the local State and National Treasuries one twentieth of all the revenues to maintain our various governmental establishments. I insist that that is an undue proportion of this vast burden.

I submit to Senators that one of the most essential features of a sound fiscal system is that it should not dry up the sources of revenue, that it should not seal up the fountain from which future revenues are to be derived. There comes a point when the law of diminishing returns begins to operate; there comes a point where an increase in the rate brings about a decrease in the revenue. That point has been approximated if it has not been passed.

Senators will mark this: During the calendar year 1932 the 48 States of this Union received $23,000,000 less from gasoline taxes than they received from that source in 1931. There was a decrease in the aggregate of $23,000,000 plus; and that decrease occurred notwithstanding several States had increased their rate on gasoline.

Senators may say this decrease was due to the depression. Undoubtedly it was, in part, due to the depression. I think, however, I can convince Senators that it was not entirely due to the depression. It is pretty hard to find mathematical demonstration for a proposition of this sort; but take my own State of Oklahoma.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator permit an interruption?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GEORGE in the chair). Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. GORE. Yes.

Mr. TYDINGS. May I point out to the Senator that while this decrease occurred gasoline was dropping in price to the consumer, and it occurred when gasoline was perhaps the cheapest it had been in several years.

Mr. GORE. The observation of the Senator from Maryland is correct.

Take my own State. In 1930 we had a gasoline tax of 4 cents a gallon; in 1931 it was raised to 5 cents a gallon, and the revenue diminished nearly a half million dollars.

Consider this further fact: The Federal gasoline tax went into effect on June 23, 1932. It split the year in halves. In Oklahoma our receipts from the gasoline tax during the 6 months prior to the enactment of that law were only $81,000 a month less than during the corresponding month of the previous year, but during the last half of 1932, during the half in which the Federal gasoline tax had to be paid, there was a loss of $133,000 per month; in other words, we lost during the first 6 months, when there was no Federal gasoline tax, $480,000, but during the last half of the year when there was a Federal gasoline tax we lost $700,000.

Take the State of Ohio. In 1932 there was sold in Ohio 128,000,000 gallons of gasoline less than were sold in 1931. That was due to depression, we hear; but, Mr. President, of that 128,000,000 gallons, some 113,000,000 gallons were lost after the imposition of the Federal tax upon gasoline. During the 6 months prior to the enactment of that measure there was a diminution of only 15,000,000 gallons. I think what I have stated demonstrates that the Federal gasoline tax has depressed the revenues received by the several States from the gasoline tax.

Mr. President, that warns and admonishes us that we ought not to go farther in that direction; that we ought not to invade this field of State taxation. The State and Federal taxes on gasoline combined average for the country as a whole 5.1 cents per gallon, or more than 5 cents per gallon. That is a sales tax of 46 percent on the retail price of gasoline; that is a sales tax of 126 percent on the wholesale price of gasoline, the price at the refinery.

We have discussed here from time to time the imposition of a general manufacturer's sales tax. Statesmen at either end of the Capitol have shied at such a tax; they have shied at a tax of 2 percent; they have shied at a tax of 1 percent. For reasons satisfactory to themselves they have been unwilling to vote a manufacturers' sales tax of 1 percent, yet we have here on gasoline a sales tax of 126 percent. A 1-percent tax on a $5 pair of shoes would be a nickle, but a tax of 126 percent on a $5 pair of shoes—I leave for other Senators to compute the tax for themselves—it would be a tax of about $6.25. I submit to Senators that this tax is unduly high and is unduly burdensome.

During the year 1932 the consumption of gasoline in the United States declined 7 percent. That is the first time in the history of motor fuel that the curve of consumption has declined. Is not that also a warning that we have gone far enough; that we have gone too far, indeed, in that direction?

Mr. President, the pending bill proposes to appropriate $400,000,000 for the construction of highways in the several States. It is to be apportioned among the States for highway purposes. The appropriation is a gift. It is unmatched. It has come to that. A year ago we lent the several States $300,000,000 for relief purposes. At the present session we have appropriated $500,000,000; we have appropriated a half billion dollars as a gift to the several States for relief purposes. Now, in addition to that, we intend to give the States for highway purposes $400,000,000 more.

How do we propose to raise the money? By levying a tax on gasoline. If Oklahoma desires to impose an additional half cent or three fourths of a cent on gasoline for highway purposes, she has every legislative facility to impose the tax. I know there are those who think that a dollar out of the Federal Treasury has a magic potency that local taxation cannot emulate or aspire to.

Let us consider this $400,000,000 set aside for highway purposes in the several States as a basis for this gasoline tax. Nearly all the States apply the gasoline tax for highway purposes; and, barring the exigencies of depression, I think they should do so. Then this gasoline tax is imposed in this measure to amortize and to service the $400,000,000 appropriated to the States. It is to run during a period of 15 years.

Mr. President, only 10 States of the 48 States will receive more under this measure during the 15 years than they will pay into the Federal Treasury under this one half cent gasoline tax. Ten States will receive more out of the Treasury under this road fund than they will pay in under the additional tax of one half a cent on gasoline. But, sir, 38 different States will pay more money into the Treasury under this gasoline tax than they will take out of the Treasury. Thirty-eight States will under the gasoline tax pay in more than they will receive.

It might be interesting to the Senators from Florida to know that their State will pay $10,000,000 in gasoline taxes more than she will receive out of the Treasury under this $400,000,000 appropriation. It might be interesting to the Senators from Missouri to know that their State will cash in $21,000,000 in gasoline tax more than it will receive out of the Treasury. It might be interesting to the Senators from Texas to know that Texas will cash in $25,000,000 more under the gasoline tax than she will take out of the Treasury. The Senators from Connecticut might be interested to know that Connecticut's contribution will be $15,000,000. My own State—Oklahoma—will turn in $18,000,000 more than she will take out, notwithstanding she has a substantial deficit in her own treasury. Ohio pays in $49,000,000 more than she takes out. Illinois will put in $54,000,000 more than she gets back.

Pennsylvania, out of her generosity, will contribute $57,000,000 more than she takes out of the Treasury. California will contribute $75,000,000 more.

New York—and I apologize to the Senators from New York—New York will cash in $91,000,000 more than she will take out of the Treasury. Why not let New York reserve that $91,000,000 to herself, appropriate it, and apply it to highway purposes, if that be the best purpose to which that revenue could be devoted? Is Congress wiser than is the Legislature of New York in matters affecting that State? Are we better qualified to govern her citizenship and to administer their affairs than are the citizens of that imperial State? There are some who think so. I think otherwise.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oklahoma yield to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. GORE. Yes, sir.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator from Oklahoma has been submitting some amazingly interesting figures. I have here the original table in my hand showing the complete tabulation on that subject. I think it would be very useful to have the entire table inserted in the RECORD at this point, and if the Senator has no objection, I shall ask permission to do so.

Mr. GORE. I should be very glad to yield for that purpose, and I would have suggested that myself, I will say to the Senator, but for the fact that we shall vote before Senators will have a chance to see the tabulation.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I think it might be useful for the country to have specific information of this kind regarding the fallacy of so-called "Federal aid", which is a misnomer in so many States.

Mr. GORE. I agree entirely with what the Senator says.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I offer the table and ask that it may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD.

(The table appears in the RECORD at the conclusion of Mr. GORE's speech as Exhibit A.)

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, whether the State or Federal Government raises money by taxation, it comes out of the citizenship of this country. The only choice lies as to whether the taxing power shall be exerted by States or by the National Government. Out of the taxpayers' pockets come all of our revenues, both State and National. One pipe may lead from one pocket to the State treasury; another pipe may lead from the other pocket into the National Treasury; but in both cases it is the same taxpayers' pockets.

Mr. President, there is one other circumstance which tends to confirm my conclusion that too high a rate diminishes the returns. I have here a tabulation showing that those States which have gasoline taxes exceeding 3 cents a gallon have suffered a loss in the registration of their motor cars; and that all the 15 States which have, or which had when these statistics were compiled, a gasoline tax of 2 cents or not exceeding 3 cents a gallon—in each and every one of those States, saving 3 alone, there was an increase in the registration of motor cars, an increase in the registration of motor cars in those States having a low gasoline tax at the very time when there was a decrease in the registration of motor cars in those States which have an excessive tax on gasoline. I will ask to have the table I send to the desk read into the RECORD because it is brief.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read as requested.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

It is an almost unbroken rule throughout the country that where the tax rate is too high the tendency is to use less gasoline per car and to use fewer cars. There are only two States—Florida and Tennessee—in which a 7-cent tax is exacted, and Florida registered fewer cars in 1930 than in 1929. There are four States with a 6-cent tax, and in all of these—Arkansas, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina—fewer cars were registered in 1930 than in 1929. There are 10 States with a 5-cent tax, and in 7 of these fewer cars were registered in 1930 than in 1929. These 5-cent tax States which decreased their registration while maintaining so high a tax were Alabama, Kentucky, Louisiana, Montana, Oklahoma, and Virginia. There are 15 States which impose a 4-cent tax, and 6 of these had fewer registrations of cars in 1930 than in 1929. They are Nevada, Oregon, Ohio, Vermont, West Virginia, and Wisconsin.

On the other hand, there are 15 States with tax rates of only 3 or 2 cents. In 11 of these the number of registered cars increased. The three exceptions were North Dakota and Iowa, where the agricultural depression furnished explanation; and Michigan, where the reduced operations of the great automobile-manufacturing industries is the obvious reason.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, it seems to me self-evident that we ought not to continue raising this Federal tax on gasoline, when we see that the reaction on the revenues of the several States is to diminish those revenues. I do not think it is wise, I do not think it is a sound fiscal system or fiscal policy. That this effect has come about, I do not believe Senators would seriously doubt.

Mr. President, it seems to me that these considerations condemn the proposed increase, and for that reason I have made this motion. If it prevails, the existing tax on gasoline of 1 cent a gallon will be continued as the policy of the Government.

I have in my hand an editorial appearing a day or two since in the News, published here in Washington. It is a succinct statement and review of the several points supporting my contention. It is brief, and I ask that it be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

The additional tax on gasoline is inexcusable. It is a sales tax already preempted by the States and already worked to death, as shown by the House report on double taxation. Automobile taxes of various kinds already amount to more than $1,000,000,000 a year. State gasoline taxes alone are more than half a billion dollars. In addition there are the duplicating city and county gasoline taxes and the triplicating Federal gasoline tax of $138,000,000. The consumer is paying. These combined taxes account for 48 percent of the retail price of gasoline. On the wholesale price these levies amount to a sales tax running in different parts of the country from 135 to 240 percent. Under these circumstances, to propose additional Federal gasoline taxes is absurd.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I now ask to have printed in the RECORD a letter from one of the leading citizens of my State which sheds light upon this entire measure. He owns and edits one of the leading papers in the Southwest and has devoted much time and talent to questions of public interest.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., May 3, 1933.

Hon. THOMAS P. GORE,
United States Senate, Washington, D.C.

MY DEAR SENATOR GORE: I was sorry I could not stop in Washington on my return from New York.

I particularly wanted to discuss with you the proposed 30-hour labor law, for I do not believe the administration has begun to discover all of the trouble they would create by the passage of such a bill.

For instance, they may not realize that all dairies have been declared factories by the Treasury Department and their use of electricity has been exempt from Federal taxes on the ground that the refrigeration of milk, the operation of cream separators in separating cream from the milk, and the bottling and capping of the milk constitute a factory process, so that milk and cream and butter and buttermilk and other dairy products would come under the regulations of the 30-hour week.

Now, it happens that the State of Wisconsin is largely interested in dairies which supply the city of Chicago, and under this bill dairies could not employ any individual for more than 30 hours in a 7-day week. It happens that cows have to be milked twice a day and 7 days a week, and in many dairies cows are milked three times a day. As the milking for city markets is usually done about 3 o'clock in the morning and 3 in the afternoon, the employees of a dairy have to live on the farm and the owner of the dairy has to provide houses for his employees.

Even two shifts of employees would not cover the 7 days' work in a dairy, and how is a dairyman to bring in extra help at 3 o'clock in the morning from a distance of probably several miles, especially in winter weather?

Even if the dairies in Wisconsin could arrange to work two shifts, their expenses would be so enormous as compared with dairies that are in the State of Illinois that they could not compete in the Chicago market. What is true of Wisconsin is also true of New Jersey and the New England States, which largely contribute the supply of milk in New York and Philadelphia markets.

I am wondering how many people would have to be employed to censor and inspect the United States mails, for no store or mail-order house could ship anything across the State border through the mail if anyone had been employed more than 30 hours a week in the making of an article. In fact, shoppers who live in Jersey City and shop in New York would have to be stopped at the State line and their purchases taken away from them if they happened to be manufactured in a factory where the janitor or anyone else had worked more than 30 hours in a week.

The newspapers in New York and Philadelphia could not send a paper across the State line, and of course that would apply to every other State. My own papers are fortunately situated, for we have only a few thousand circulation in the Panhandle of Texas and the borders of Texas and Arkansas, and rather than have all of our reporters and editors and advertising men and myself work only 30 hours a week I would cancel all of our out-of-State circulation, but a newspaper in St. Louis which covers Southern Illinois would not be so fortunately situated, and the Kansas City Star would be paralyzed if it cut off its out-of-State circulation.

If I were to send an advertising man to New York City to solicit advertising, it would take him more than 30 hours to get there and he would be in the pay of the company all that time. After he arrived I suppose he would have to remain idle for a week before he could start to work. A traveling man who is being sent from New York to the Pacific coast would have to stop off half way across the continent and wait a week before he finished his journey.

If we want to know what labor legislation can do to a country, all we have to do is to look at Australia. In that country business was paralyzed long before the depression and the government itself is practically bankrupt, due to their labor laws.

As I understand our Constitution, it provides that States have the sole power to regulate their home industries and the Federal Government is forbidden to interfere with the internal affairs of a State. The Government is trying now to do indirectly what it is specifically forbidden to do and is using its power of control of interstate commerce to break down a section of our Constitution which has heretofore been honored.

Whenever the principle is once established that the Federal Government can issue embargoes against transportation of products from one State to another by regulating the kind or quantity of labor employed in the production of the articles, then this country's business will be at the mercy of labor lobbies and subservient politicians.

I am certainly pleased that you are not going to sacrifice the interests of the country as a whole to support the pipe dream of a well-meaning woman labor official.

With very best regards,

Sincerely yours,

E. K. GAYLORD, Editor.

EXHIBIT A

How States will fare with road-fund receipts and gasoline-tax costs under industrial recovery bill's $400,000,000 road fund and one-half cent gasoline tax

	Gallons of gas taxed by States in 1932	Total tax payments in 15 years at one-half cent per gallon	State share of the $400,000,000 road fund	Gain or loss to each State	Cost of one-half cent tax per year per State
Alabama	136,421,614	$10,230,000	$8,527,432	$1,702,568	$682,000
Arizona	58,004,441	4,350,000	[1] 5,869,236	[1] 1,519,236	290,000
Arkansas	86,082,940	6,450,000	7,003,940	[1] 553,940	430,000
California	1,204,295,149	90,315,000	15,557,296	74,757,704	6,021,000
Colorado	136,730,489	10,245,000	7,528,712	2,716,288	683,000
Connecticut	234,229,379	17,565,000	2,596,020	14,968,980	1,171,000
Delaware	36,338,331	2,715,000	2,000,000	715,000	181,000
Florida	207,268,239	15,540,000	5,415,840	10,124,160	1,036,000
Georgia	198,980,154	14,910,000	10,410,992	4,499,008	944,000
Idaho	45,554,550	3,405,000	5,019,708	[1] 1,614,708	227,000
Illinois	958,468,356	71,880,000	16,942,820	54,937,180	4,792,000
Indiana	418,489,040	31,380,000	10,196,600	21,183,000	2,092,000
Iowa	299,004,568	22,425,000	10,571,680	11,878,320	1,495,000
Kansas	247,349,852	18,555,000	10,883,492	7,671,508	1,237,000
Kentucky	164,057,785	12,300,000	7,548,788	4,751,212	820,000
Louisiana	166,014,436	12,450,000	5,818,532	6,631,468	830,000
Maine	105,167,540	7,875,000	3,556,932	4,318,068	525,000
Maryland	187,505,794	14,070,000	3,398,568	10,671,432	938,000
Massachusetts	550,642,607	41,295,000	5,722,040	35,572,960	2,753,000
Michigan	681,044,263	51,075,000	12,599,020	38,475,980	3,405,000
Minnesota	333,351,913	25,005,000	11,228,528	13,776,472	1,667,000
Mississippi	96,732,445	7,260,000	7,200,548	59,452	484,000
Missouri	447,484,670	33,570,000	12,511,512	21,227,400	2,238,000
Montana	53,803,120	4,035,000	8,416,904	[1] 4,381,904	269,000
Nebraska	195,236,623	14,640,000	8,482,576	6,157,424	976,000
Nevada	18,177,920	1,365,000	5,252,520	[1] 3,887,520	91,000
New Hampshire	65,971,040	4,950,000	2,000,000	2,950,000	330,000
New Jersey	553,914,175	41,550,000	5,525,776	36,024,224	2,770,000
New Mexico	43,845,055	3,285,000	6,551,576	[1] 3,266,576	219,000
New York	1,485,127,929	111,390,000	20,197,460	91,192,540	7,426,000
North Carolina	231,727,434	17,385,000	9,627,504	7,757,496	1,159,000
North Dakota	61,190,398	4,590,000	6,446,336	[1] 1,856,336	306,000
Ohio	856,729,484	64,260,000	14,967,248	49,292,752	4,284,000
Oklahoma	241,527,434	18,120,000	9,629,080	8,490,920	1,208,000
Oregon	140,066,134	10,500,000	6,672,468	3,827,532	700,000
Pennsylvania	1,009,663,827	75,735,000	17,556,868	58,178,056	5,049,000
Rhode Island	92,701,236	6,960,000	2,000,000	4,960,000	464,000
South Carolina	103,748,781	7,785,000	5,555,848	2,229,152	519,000
South Dakota	74,083,694	5,550,000	6,681,912	[1] 1,131,912	370,000
Tennessee	174,076,575	13,050,000	8,683,864	4,366,136	870,000
Texas	676,593,941	50,745,000	25,548,736	25,196,264	3,383,000
Utah	54,297,788	4,080,000	4,651,104	[1] 571,104	272,000
Vermont	46,866,212	3,510,000	2,000,000	1,510,000	234,000
Virginia	216,191,996	16,215,000	7,520,592	8,694,408	1,081,000
Washington	220,930,195	16,575,000	6,401,564	10,173,436	1,105,000
West Virginia	123,544,775	9,270,000	4,413,040	4,856,960	618,000
Wisconsin	373,710,495	28,035,000	9,970,252	18,064,748	1,869,000
Wyoming	35,453,612	2,655,000	5,138,536	[1] 2,483,536	177,000
Dist. of Columbia	101,774,858	7,635,000	----------	7,635,000	509,000
Total	14,250,173,269	1,068,765,000	400,000,000	668,765,000	71,251,000

[1] Gain.

Mr. CAPPER. Mr. President, I am glad to support the motion of the Senator from Oklahoma to strike out the increased gasoline tax.

It is not necessary to elaborate on this amendment. Its effect will be to leave the Federal gasoline tax at 1 cent a gallon instead of increasing that tax to 1½ cents a gallon.

I believe it generally is recognized that the oil industry and the motorist are paying the heaviest taxes of any groups in the United States today. We are not justified in assessing any heavier taxes on an already overburdened industry.

My home State of Kansas is not a large State. We have some half million motor cars licensed. The net gasoline tax collected in Kansas last year, according to the bureau of public roads, was nearly 7½ million dollars.

If this additional half cent-per-gallon tax is placed on gasoline it will increase gasoline-tax collections approximately 1¼ million dollars a year. If the tax is collected for 15 years on an amortization basis that extra half cent a gallon will cost the people of my State some 19 million dollars. In return we may get $9,700,000 of highway aid under this act.

It is proposed to make the motorists of the country as a whole pay 27 percent of the entire cost of this public-works program, as I read the measure. The extra one-half cent gasoline tax will amount to about $61,000,000 a year, more than one fourth of the amount it is proposed to collect annually to pay for the public-works program, presuming that the entire $3,300,000,000 is expended. If all the money authorized is not expended, then the percentage of the cost borne by motorists will be even larger.

I am perfectly aware that whatever is expended must be paid for. But it seems to me there is no justice in assessing one industry, the oil industry, such a disproportionate tax, especially in view of the fact that Congress so far has almost completely failed to make any provision even to give the oil industry the protection it is entitled to receive against imports of cheaply produced foreign oil.

There are many phases of the oil situation. There are many crimes for which the oil industry itself should have to answer. But that does not justify the Government in charging up to the motorists of this country the additional gasoline tax proposed. I earnestly hope the Senate will adopt this amendment and refuse to increase the tax on an already overtaxed industry.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I merely wish to say, in connection with what the Senator from Kansas has said, that we have been trying to relieve the farmer, to rehabilitate agriculture. The farmers buy and pay for one fourth of all the motor fuel used. In addition to the automobiles owned by farmers, there are a million tractors in this country and also a million stationary gasoline engines on the farms, and this tax would be an added burden upon the backs of those we are trying to relieve.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I feel that it is my duty to say a few words in behalf of the people whom I represent in this Chamber upon this subject. I will be brief, however.

Within my own State the legislature a number of years ago selected gasoline as one of the sources on which levies should be made for the support of the Government, beginning at first with a tax for the purpose of road construction. At that time the building of highways and the expansion of our public-road system were exceedingly popular, and the people, generally speaking, made no objection to the tax of 3 cents a gallon on gasoline, that being the first such tax that was levied in Florida.

The people responded to their duty and the demands of the legislative authorities of the State with such cheerfulness, because they were anxious about extending throughout the States a splendid road system, that the legislature next raised the tax to 4 cents a gallon, then to 5, then to 6, then to 7 cents a gallon, and a few towns and cities also placed a tax upon gasoline.

My position is that the people of my own State already, long prior to the Government's invading this field as a source of revenue, has been burdened almost to the breaking point with taxation upon motor fuel and this added tax should not be placed upon them. Of course there are other taxes, the taxes upon accessories, and so forth, levied both by the State and by the Federal Government. We recall that the Federal Government has invaded the field of taxation on accessories.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I wish to inject into the RECORD at this point the statement that there is one city in the country where the aggregate taxes on gasoline amount to 11 cents a gallon.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I did not know of that. I felt and my people feel that 8 cents a gallon, which we will have to pay if this additional half cent is imposed, is entirely too much. I believe the high taxes have had the effect of causing a smaller consumption of gasoline than when the tax was lower. I believe it has caused a smaller registration of automobiles in my own State than when the tax was more reasonable than it is at the present time.

We are fighting in Florida the situation as it exists with respect to State taxation. It has reached a point where the taxpayers quite generally are rebelling against conditions which exist there in regard to local impositions of taxes on motor fuel and every character of accessory for the automobile. I have had not merely hundreds but I have had thousands of telegrams and letters from my State in opposition to a further increase of half a cent. I want to join with those who feel as I do in voting to eliminate this additional half cent a gallon that is sought to be placed upon gasoline.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, just one word. Let it not be forgotten that the House put a tax of 1¾ cents a gallon on gasoline. The Senate committee worked very hard in order to take off a quarter of a cent, and the committee is recommending the additional tax of only one-half cent a gallon. We will raise thereby $62,000,000. When we reduce this from three quarters of a cent to half a cent, that represents a loss of $31,000,000. Where we will get the $62,000,000, if the pending amendment shall prevail, I do not know. I imagine we will have to go to a sales tax or something else, which I hope we will not have to do.

If the program which the Committee on Finance has recommended can go through, we can keep from imposing a sales tax, and we hope at some early date to be able to reduce the tax on gasoline, which is necessary at the present time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE].

Mr. REED. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, it seems to me, as stated by the Senator from Oklahoma, that an unfair and extraordinary burden is sought to be placed upon gasoline in the way of a tax. I am perfectly aware of the fact, as the Senator from Mississippi has said, that it is very difficult to find sources of taxation on which we can draw without great injury to someone. However, the figures which have been presented here this evening by the Senator from Oklahoma disclose that this particular item has been singled out for an extraordinary burden of taxation, and I think we ought to eliminate the one-half-cent addition to the tax.

I ask that we may have a yea-and-nay vote upon this amendment.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

Mr. BORAH. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Copeland	King	Russell
Ashurst	Cutting	La Follette	Schall
Austin	Davis	Lonergan	Sheppard
Bachman	Dickinson	Long	Shipstead
Bailey	Dieterich	McAdoo	Smith
Bankhead	Dill	McCarran	Steiwer
Barbour	Duffy	McGill	Stephens
Barkley	Erickson	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Black	Frazier	McNary	Thomas, Utah
Bone	George	Metcalf	Thompson
Borah	Goldsborough	Murphy	Townsend
Bratton	Gore	Neely	Trammell
Brown	Hale	Norris	Tydings
Bulow	Harrison	Nye	Vandenberg
Byrd	Hastings	Overton	Van Nuys
Byrnes	Hatfield	Patterson	Wagner
Capper	Hayden	Pope	Walcott
Carey	Johnson	Reed	Walsh
Clark	Kean	Reynolds	Wheeler
Connally	Kendrick	Robinson, Ark.	White
Coolidge	Keyes	Robinson, Ind.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-three Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE].

Mr. BORAH. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I desire to make only a brief statement. The Committee on Finance worked very hard to try to raise the $220,000,000 needed. We finally worked out a program. We adopted the capital stock tax of one tenth of 1 percent in order to raise some $80,000,000. By doing that we reduced the gasoline tax which had been adopted by the House. By that action we lost $31,000,000. If the amendment now proposed is adopted, it will take from the bill $62,000,000. It will then be impossible to pass the bill tonight because we must go into the question of raising that additional amount of revenue. We could not pass the bill without having it in form to produce the needed revenue.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Oklahoma. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MCADOO (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Vermont [Mr. DALE]. Not knowing how he would vote on this question, I withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. DAVIS (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN]. Has that Senator voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That Senator has not voted.

Mr. DAVIS. I transfer my pair with that Senator to the senior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. HEBERT] and let my vote stand.

Mr. AUSTIN. I desire to announce the following general pairs:

The Senator from Oregon [Mr. MCNARY] with the Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER]; and

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. FESS] with the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY].

Mr. KENDRICK. I desire to announce that the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], and the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN] are necessarily detained.

The result was announced—yeas 35, nays 46, as follows:

YEAS—35

Barbour	Davis	McGill	Steiwer
Black	Goldsborough	Metcalf	Thomas, Okla.
Borah	Gore	Nye	Townsend
Bulow	Hale	Patterson	Trammell
Byrd	Hastings	Pope	Tydings
Capper	Hatfield	Reed	Vandenberg
Carey	Kean	Robinson, Ind.	Walcott
Connally	Keyes	Russell	White
Cutting	King	Shipstead

NAYS—46

Adams	Coolidge	Johnson	Robinson, Ark.
Ashurst	Copeland	Kendrick	Schall
Austin	Costigan	La Follette	Sheppard
Bachman	Dickinson	Lonergan	Stephens
Bankhead	Dieterich	Long	Thomas, Utah
Barkley	Dill	McCarran	Thompson
Bone	Duffy	McKellar	Van Nuys
Bratton	Erickson	Murphy	Wagner
Brown	Frazier	Neely	Walsh
Bulkley	George	Norris	Wheeler
Byrnes	Harrison	Overton
Clark	Hayden	Reynolds

NOT VOTING—15

Bailey	Fess	Lewis	Norbeck
Caraway	Fletcher	Logan	Pittman
Couzens	Glass	McAdoo	Smith
Dale	Hebert	McNary

So Mr. GORE's amendment was rejected.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GEORGE in the chair). The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 36, at the end of section 212, it is proposed to insert:

(e) The taxes imposed by this section shall not apply to the dividends of any corporations enumerated in section 103 of the Revenue Act of 1932 nor to any insurance company subject to the tax imposed by sections 201 and 204 of such act.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED] has on the table an amendment similar to that offered by myself, and therefore I offer this amendment in his name as well as my own.

Under the laws taxing earnings of corporations certain classes of corporations are exempted. Among them are labor, agricultural and horticultural organizations, mutual savings banks, fraternal orders, domestic building and loan associations, cemetery companies, charitable, religious, and educational organizations, business leagues, civic leagues, clubs organized for pleasure, benevolent life-insurance associations, ditch and irrigation companies not organized for profit, farmers' insurance companies, farmers' cooperatives, crop cooperatives, Federal land banks, employees' benefit associations, and teachers' retirement-fund associations.

Unless the amendment proposed by the Senator from Pennsylvania and myself is adopted, the earnings of these corporations, when remitted to individuals as dividends, will be taxed 5 percent, the tax to be deducted at the source.

The purpose of this amendment, to which I assume there is no objection, is to keep the earnings of these particular classes of corporations from being taxed, even though they are distributed in dividends to people over the country.

Mr. METCALF. Mr. President, do I understand that this amendment will take in mutual savings banks?

Mr. WALSH. It will.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. WALSH. I yield.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Why should we exempt from tax dividends distributed by this kind of corporation perhaps to a widow, perhaps to some poor family who have lost all that they had, any more than we exempt dividends distributed to people who have stocks in other corporations and are in equally distressed condition but whose dividends are not exempt?

Mr. WALSH. Because of the policy of this country that the earnings of all business and industrial corporations shall be taxed. They are taxed 12½ percent. However, this particular class of corporations have always been exempt from the corporation tax on their earnings.

Unless the amendment I have proposed is adopted, that portion of their earnings which will be distributed as dividends will be taxed and deducted from those who are shareholders in these corporations.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Of course there might be some companies that are purely mutual; but the set-up of most companies of this character, so far as I know, is just the same as that of any other corporation, as far as profit-making is concerned.

Mr. WALSH. I do not know that that is exactly true. There are 11,442 corporations in this country that are engaged solely and alone in helping working people to build homes; and if this amendment is not adopted, for the first time in our taxing laws the people who have shares in these 11,442 home-making and home-building corporations will be subject to the dividend tax.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Of course I should not care to tax those who had taken stock in an association for the purpose of acquiring a fund with which to build; but that does not include all the stockholders engaged in the business. Very frequently a large amount of the capital stock is held by the company, or invested.

Mr. WALSH. These corporations are a special class of corporations that have always been exempted from the corporation income tax because of the philanthropic and educational and religious and charitable purposes in which they are engaged. I think it was an accident not to include this amendment in the committee amendments and exclude them from this tax.

Mr. TRAMMELL. If the Senator has restricted his amendment to that class, of course I think it is proper that they should be exempt.

Mr. WALSH. I assure the Senator that it is restricted, as the amendment itself shows, to those corporations that are already excluded from the corporation tax, and none other.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts. [Putting the question.] By the sound, the noes seem to have it.

Mr. REED and Mr. WALSH called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, may I at this moment impose on the Senate to announce that the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], the Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER], and the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] are detained on official business, and thus are absent. I do not know how they would vote if present.

Mr. McNARY. Again referring to my pair, and not knowing how my pair would vote, I withhold my vote. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. DAVIS (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN]. Not knowing how he would vote, I withdraw my vote.

Mr. AUSTIN (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], who is necessarily absent; but I feel at liberty to let my vote stand.

Mr. LEWIS. I desire to announce the general pair of the Senator from California [Mr. McADOO] with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. DALE].

I also desire to announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING], and the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] are necessarily detained on official business.

The result was announced—yeas 72, nays 7, as follows:

YEAS—72

Adams	Dickinson	La Follette	Schall
Ashurst	Dieterich	Lewis	Sheppard
Austin	Duffy	Lonergan	Shipstead
Bachman	Erickson	Long	Smith
Barbour	Fess	McCarran	Steiwer
Barkley	Frazier	McGill	Stephens
Borah	George	Metcalf	Thomas, Utah
Bratton	Goldsborough	Murphy	Thompson
Brown	Gore	Norris	Townsend
Bulkley	Hale	Nye	Trammell
Byrnes	Harrison	Overton	Tydings
Capper	Hastings	Patterson	Vandenberg
Carey	Hatfield	Pope	Van Nuys
Clark	Hayden	Reed	Wagner
Connally	Hebert	Reynolds	Walcott
Coolidge	Kean	Robinson, Ark.	Walsh
Copeland	Kendrick	Robinson, Ind.	Wheeler
Cutting	Keyes	Russell	White

NAYS—7

Bankhead	Bulow	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Bone	Dill	Neely

NOT VOTING—17

Bailey	Couzens	Johnson	Norbeck
Black	Dale	King	Pittman
Byrd	Davis	Logan
Caraway	Fletcher	McAdoo
Costigan	Glass	McNary

So Mr. WALSH's amendment was agreed to.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, no one with the least perception of the state of mind of the Senate could contemplate at this hour exposing it to a lengthy speech on any subject. I am perfectly well aware that most of the Senators are as tired as I myself am, and I know I am incapable of taking in a new thought.

On behalf of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], and myself, I have proposed an amendment providing for an excise tax on sales by manufacturers. It seems a pity that a subject of this extreme importance should have to come up for disposition at this hour of the night. I am aware, however, that the whip is cracking and that no matter how important the subject is we must dispose of this bill tonight.

We have overturned the whole industrial system of the United States, if this bill which we are about to pass shall be held valid, by what we did in a 13-hour session yesterday, and today we are passing on the tax system of the United States in a similar condition of fatigue and disinclination to think.

I send the amendment to the desk, Mr. President, with no more than the statement that it proposes a general manufacturers' excise tax upon articles sold by the manufacturer or the importer, excepting, first, farm products not processed otherwise than by the original producer thereof; second, food, foodstuffs, coffee, tea, and feed; third, wearing apparel for any part of the body; and fourth, medicines other than patent or proprietary medicines.

It will be obvious that the incidence of the tax upon the ordinary workingman will fall upon something less than one fifth of his spending, whereas the taxes that we have already provided in the shape of sales taxes under the so-called "farm relief bill" will fall upon not less than 40 percent of his spending.

The rate proposed by this amendment is 1¾ percent, while the rate in the farm bill, for which we voted with such enthusiasm, may go as high as 100 percent.

As the concluding part of the amendment which I have sent to the desk appears a number of repealing clauses. If this tax shall be adopted, Mr. President, these repealing clauses will carry a repeal of the following special excise taxes now in existence:

The tax on lubricating oil, which is paid by every person who owns an automobile, a tractor, or a gasoline-propelled boat.

The tax on tires and inner tubes.

The tax on toilet preparations, which is paid by the "better half" of American citizenship.

The tax on furs.

The tax on jewelry—a cruel excise tax we have put upon the first business to suffer in any depression. Most of the jewelers of America are bankrupt today.

The tax on automobiles, trucks, and parts thereof.

The tax on radio receiving sets. If this amendment shall be adopted one may hear Colonel Howe more cheaply. [Laughter.]

The tax on mechanical refrigerators.

The tax on sporting goods.

The tax on firearms, shells, and cartridges.

The tax on cameras.

The tax on matches.

The tax on candy. We will not longer tax at such high rates the lollypop of every school child.

The tax on chewing gum. Personally, I am sorry we cannot make it 100 percent, but we have included that among the taxes that are to be repealed.

The tax on soft drinks.

The tax on electrical energy.

The tax on conveyances. Heaven knows that real estate is carrying enough burden today.

The tax on checks which pesters every citizen who has a bank account and makes it impossible for every one of us to tell what his bank balance is.

The tax on boats; and

The half-a-cent tax which we have just put on gasoline.

All that we will get for the price of a 1¾-percent sales tax on articles other than necessaries.

The amendment proposed by Mr. REED to the bill (H.R. 5755) to encourage national industrial recovery, to foster fair competition, and to provide for the construction of certain useful public works, and for other purposes, is as follows:

Amendments proposed by Mr. REED, Mr. WALSH, and Mr. BYRD to the bill (H.R. 5755) to encourage national industrial recovery, to foster fair competition, and to provide for the construction of certain useful public works, and for other purposes, viz:

On page 34, line 18, strike out all after "section 210" down through "(b)" in line 22.

On page 34, line 23, strike out "such act", and insert in lieu thereof "the Revenue Act of 1932."

On page 40, line 8, strike out the comma and all of lines 9, 10, and 11.

On page 42, after line 24, insert a new title, as follows:

"TITLE—GENERAL MANUFACTURERS' EXCISE TAX

"SEC. 251. Imposition:

"(a) In addition to any other tax imposed by law, there is hereby imposed on every article sold in the United States by the manufacturer or producer thereof, if licensed or required to be licensed under this title, a tax equivalent to 1¾ percent of the sale price, except in the case of—

"(1) Sales by a licensed manufacturer to another licensed manufacturer of articles for further manufacture.

"(2) Sales by a licensed manufacturer to a registered dealer of articles for tax-exempt resale.

"(3) Sales by a licensed manufacturer to any person of articles for tax-exempt resale, but only if such articles are delivered by such licensed manufacturer to the person to whom his vendee so resells the articles.

"(4) Sales for exportation, if the articles are in due course exported.

"(5) Sales to a State or political subdivision thereof of articles for use solely in the exercise of an essential governmental function.

"(b) In addition to any other tax or duty imposed by law, there is hereby imposed a compensating tax of 1¾ percent ad valorem on every imported article removed from customs custody or control, unless—

"(1) The article is entered or withdrawn for consumption by a licensed manufacturer (or his agent) and the article is an article for further manufacture.

"(2) The article is entered or withdrawn for consumption by a registered dealer (or his agent) and the article is an article for tax-exempt resale.

"(3) The article is exported from continuous customs custody or control.

"(4) The article is entered or withdrawn for consumption by a State or political subdivision thereof for use solely in the exercise of an essential governmental function.

"(5) The article is free of customs duty (A) as an article returned after having been exported, (B) under paragraphs 1607, 1632, 1717, 1739, 1747, or 1798 of the Tariff Act of 1930, or (C) as a temporary importation or an importation for exhibition; but in the event of any violation of the conditions of the free entry of such article, it shall be subject to tax under this subsection.

"(c) The tax imposed under subsection (b) shall be collected and paid under regulations prescribed by the Secretary. The value on which such tax shall be based shall be the sum of the dutiable value (under sec. 503 of the Tariff Act of 1930) of the article plus (A) any duties imposed thereon under any provision of the customs laws and (B) any tax on importation under section 601 (c) (4) to (7), inclusive, of the Revenue Act of 1932, and (C) any tax under the act of May 12, 1933. Such tax shall not be imposed on any importation upon which the total of taxes and duties would be less than $1, provided that the articles are not so imported to evade payment of duties or taxes.

"(d) No tax shall be imposed under this title upon any of the following articles:

"(1) Farm products not processed otherwise than by or for the original producer thereof.

"(2) Food, foodstuffs, coffee, tea, and feeds.

"(3) Wearing apparel for any part of the body.

"(4) Medicines (other than patent or proprietary medicines).

"(e) Exemption from tax under this section shall be allowed or granted only upon compliance with the regulations.

"SEC. 252. Tax on sales by registered dealers:

"(a) There is hereby imposed on the sale or other disposition by a registered dealer of any article obtained by him free of tax by virtue of his registration, other than tax-exempt resale, a tax of 1¾ percent of the price at which such article was sold to such registered dealer, plus, in the case of an imported article, if not included in such price, (1) any duties imposed thereon under any provision of the customs laws, (2) any tax on importation under section 601 (c) (4) or (7), inclusive, of the Revenue Act of 1932, and (3) any tax under the act of May 12, 1933. If the Commissioner determines that the records of the registered dealer with respect to the disposition of any article are inadequate, such article shall be held to have been resold otherwise than in a tax-exempt resale.

"(b) If the Commissioner determines that it is not necessary in the interests of the revenue to trace the identity of articles of any class in the hands of registered dealers, the regulations may provide a method of determining the proper tax liability of registered dealers with respect to articles of that class without requiring that the identity of the individual articles be traced.

"(c) Articles of such classes as the Commissioner may prescribe may (in accordance with the regulations) be obtained by registered dealers free of tax notwithstanding that it is impracticable to determine whether or not they will be resold in a tax-exempt resale, and the tax provided for in subsection (a) shall be imposed with respect to such articles if disposed of otherwise than in a tax-exempt resale.

"SEC. 253. Sale price:

"(a) Generally: In determining the sale price of an article there shall be included any charge for coverings and containers of whatever nature, and any charge incident to placing the article in condition packed ready for shipment, but there shall be excluded the amount of tax imposed by this title, and any other tax imposed upon such article, whether or not stated as a separate charge. A transportation, delivery, insurance, installation, or other charge (not required by the foregoing sentence to be included) shall be excluded from the sale price only if the amount thereof is established to the satisfaction of the Commissioner, in accordance with the regulations.

"(b) Sales on consignment: In the case of an article sold on consignment, the sale price shall be the fair manufacturer's price for the article.

"(c) Retail sales by licensed manufacturer: In the case of an article sold by the manufacturer or producer thereof at retail (or directly to the consumer or user), the tax shall be imposed upon the price at which so sold, except that in the case of any such article ordinarily sold at wholesale (or directly to the consumer or user at prices varying with the quantity or character of use) by manufacturers or producers, the tax shall be imposed upon the fair manufacturer's price for the article.

"(d) Installment sales: In the case of a contract for the sale by a licensed manufacturer of an article, wherein it is provided that the sale price shall be paid to the manufacturer by installments, and the title to the article sold does not pass to the purchaser thereof until a future date notwithstanding partial payment by installments, or in the case of a conditional sale, there shall be imposed upon each payment that part of the tax which is proportionate to the part of the sale price represented by such payment.

"(e) Leases and royalties: If a licensed manufacturer leases an article or transfers the right of using the article but not the title thereto, or imposes a royalty on the use of an article, each payment with respect to the article shall be treated as a sale and the tax shall be imposed upon the amount of such payment. Any such lease, transfer, or imposition of royalty on the use of any article by a registered dealer shall be treated as a sale.

"(f) Manufacture under contract: For the purpose of this title a person who manufactures or produces an article for another person who furnishes materials and retains title thereto shall be regarded as the manufacturer or producer of the article, and the tax shall be imposed upon payment as if the article were sold by him, or, if there is more than one payment, the tax shall be imposed pro rata upon each payment; except that the person so furnishing materials shall be regarded as the manufacturer or producer of the article if the article is to be resold by him and (1) the effect of the application of this provision is to require him to be licensed under this title, or (2) he is a licensed manufacturer.

"(g) Use or transfer of article in special cases: If a manufacturer or producer—

"(1) uses, otherwise than as an article for further manufacture, an article manufactured or produced by him, or obtained by him free of tax by virtue of his license;

"(2) transfers the title to an article by gift; or

"(3) transfers the title to, or the right to use, an article to any person (otherwise than through an arm's-length transaction) at less than the fair market price; such use or transfer shall be considered a sale for the purposes of this title, and the sale price shall be the fair manufacturer's price for such article.

"(h) For the purposes of this section the fair manufacturer's price for an article shall be a fair manufacturer's or producer's sale price for the article at the place of manufacture or production, as determined by the Commissioner, by reference to actual sales or to costs of manufacture or production, or otherwise.

"SEC. 254. Overpayments, credits, and refunds:

"(a) A credit against tax under this title, or a refund, may be allowed or made—

"(1) To a licensed manufacturer, in the amount of any tax under this title which has been paid with respect to an article for further manufacture purchased by him.

"(2) To a manufacturer or producer when he becomes licensed, in the amount of any tax paid under this title with respect to articles for further manufacture on hand, or theretofore used in the manufacture or production of articles on hand, when the license is granted.

"(3) To the exporter, in the case of an article sold for exportation or exported for sale, in the amount of any tax paid under this title with respect to the article.

"(4) To a licensed manufacturer or registered dealer who has paid tax under this title with respect to an article, when the sale price on which the tax was based is readjusted by reason of return or repossession of the article or a covering or container, or by a bona-fide discount, rebate, or allowance, in the amount of that part of the tax proportionate to the part of the sale price which is refunded or credited.

"(5) To a licensed manufacturer or registered dealer in the amount of tax paid by him under this title with respect to any article, if the licensed manufacturer or registered dealer has in his possession such evidence as the regulations may prescribe that (A) such article has been delivered by his vendee to a State or political subdivision thereof for use in the exercise of an essential governmental function and (B) the licensed manufacturer or registered dealer has repaid or agreed to repay the amount of such tax to his vendee or has obtained the consent of his vendee to the allowance of the credit or refund.

"(b) Credit or refund under subsection (a) shall be allowed or made only upon compliance with the regulations.

"(c) In no case shall interest be allowed with respect to any amount of tax under this title credited or refunded.

"(d) Credit or refund of tax (except tax under section 251 (b)) paid under this title shall be made by the Commissioner. Credit or refund of tax paid under section 251 (b) shall be made in such manner as shall be prescribed by the Secretary.

"(e) No overpayment of tax under this title shall be credited or refunded (otherwise than under subsection (a)), in pursuance of a court decision or otherwise, unless the person who paid the tax establishes, in accordance with regulations, (1) that he has not included the tax in the price of the article with respect to which it was imposed or collected the amount of tax from the vendee, or (2) that he has repaid the amount of the tax to the last purchaser of the article, or (3) that he has obtained written consent of such last purchaser to the allowance of the credit or refund.

"SEC. 255. Licensed manufacturers and registered dealers:

"(a) Manufacturers and producers: Every manufacturer or producer (except as hereinafter provided) is hereby required to be licensed, in accordance with regulations, and shall pay a fee of $2 for such license. Licenses under this section shall expire upon June 30, 1934, and thereafter upon June 30 of each year.

"(b) Exemptions: No license shall be required (but a license may be granted upon application) in the case of a manufacturer or producer—

"(1) if for the preceding year the total sale price of all articles (other than exempt articles) manufactured or produced by him was less than $20,000; or

"(2) if, in the case of a manufacturer or producer not engaged during the whole of the preceding year in the sale of articles (other than exempt articles) manufactured or produced by him, such manufacturer or producer files with the Commissioner a statement under oath that to the best of his knowledge and belief the probable total sale price of all articles (other than exempt articles) manufactured or produced by him to be sold by him during the year for which the exemption is claimed will be less than $20,000;

but in the case of any manufacturer or producer exempted or claiming exemption under paragraph (1) or (2) of this subsection, if the Commissioner determines that the probable total sale price of all articles (other than exempt articles) manufactured or produced by such manufacturer or producer to be sold by him during the year for which the exemption was granted or is claimed will not be less than $20,000, or if the total sale price of all articles (other than exempt articles) manufactured or produced by such manufacturer or producer and sold during such year by him reaches $20,000, such manufacturer or producer shall thereupon be required to be licensed.

"(c) Dealers and importers: A dealer in or importer of articles for tax-exempt resale may be granted registration as a registered dealer by the Commissioner, upon application in accordance with regulations and payment of a fee of $100. Registrations under this subsection shall expire upon June 30, 1934, and thereafter upon June 30 of each year.

"(d) Revocation or cancelation of dealer's registration: If the Commissioner finds that a registered dealer has violated any provision of law applicable with respect to the tax imposed by this title, he may revoke his registration. If the registration of any registered dealer is revoked, he shall not be entitled to registration within a period of 1 year after such revocation. The registration of any registered dealer may be canceled upon application by him.

"(e) Tax on revocation, cancelation, or expiration of registration: If a registered dealer's registration is revoked or canceled under subsection (d), or if a registered dealer's registration expires and is not renewed, he shall pay the tax imposed by this title (as if on a taxable sale by him at the time of revocation, cancelation, or expiration) on all articles obtained by him free of tax by virtue of his registration and not disposed of by him prior to such revocation, cancelation, or expiration.

"(f) Tax on expiration of manufacturer's or producer's license: If a manufacturer or producer ceases to be licensed before the date on which the tax imposed by this title ceases to be in effect he shall pay the tax which would be imposed on a sale to him, as of the date on which he ceases to be licensed, of all articles obtained by him free of tax by virtue of such license and not used as articles for further manufacture in the manufacture or production of articles sold prior to such date.

"SEC. 256. Returns, records, and payment and collection of tax:

"(a) Every licensed manufacturer or registered dealer and every person liable for any tax under this title (other than tax under section 251 (b)) shall make monthly returns under oath and pay the tax to the collector for the district in which is located his principal place of business, or if he has no principal place of business in the United States, to the collector at Baltimore, Md. Such returns shall be made on or before the last day of each month for the preceding month and shall contain such information and be made in such manner as the regulations prescribe. Under regulations, returns, and payment of tax may be made on the basis of the monthly periods used by the taxpayer in his accounting records.

"(b) The tax shall, without assessment by the Commissioner or notice from the collector, be due and payable to the collector at the time for filing the return. If the tax is not paid when due, there shall be added as part of the tax interest at the rate of 1 percent a month from the time when the tax became due until paid.

"(c) Every licensed manufacturer and registered dealer, and every person liable for any tax imposed by this title (except tax under section 251 (b)) shall keep such records, render under oath such statements, and comply with such regulations, as the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary may from time to time prescribe. Whenever in the judgment of the Commissioner necessary, he may require any person, by notice served upon him, to make a return, render under oath such statements, or keep such records as the Commissioner deems sufficient to show whether or not such person is liable for tax under this title (except tax under section 251 (b)), and the amount of any such liability. All records required under authority of this section with respect to any sale shall be kept in such manner as to be readily accessible to the Commissioner or his agents for a period of 4 years from the last day of the month after the month in which such sale was made, unless the Commissioner authorizes the destruction of such records at an earlier date, or unless an agreement under section 259 determining the amount of liability under this title with respect to such sale is approved by the Secretary or Under Secretary.

"SEC. 257. Tax on special cases:

"(a) Tax on sales to or withdrawals by licensed manufacturers or registered dealers: When the Commissioner deems such action to be in the interest of the revenue, he may require that the tax shall be imposed on the sale to, or the removal from customs custody or control by, any licensed manufacturer or registered dealer, or any class of licensed manufacturers or registered dealers, of any class of articles (even though articles for further manufacture or for tax-exempt resale). Credit or refund of tax so imposed may be allowed on proof by a licensed manufacturer that such articles have been used or resold as articles for further manufacture, or on proof by a registered dealer that such articles have been resold in a tax-exempt resale.

"(b) Sale of article obtained as article for further manufacture: If a licensed manufacturer sells an article obtained free of tax by virtue of his license he shall be liable for tax under this title in the same manner as if such article were an article manufactured or produced by him.

"(c) Tax on others than licensed manufacturers or registered dealers: In case any other person acquires from a licensed manufacturer or registered dealer, by operation of law or as a result of any transaction not taxable under this title, the right to sell any article, the disposition of such article by such person shall be taxable as if made by such licensed manufacturer or registered dealer, and such person shall be liable for the tax.

"SEC. 258. Existing contracts for sale—Regulated rates:

"(a) If any person (1) is subject to governmental regulation with respect to the sale price of an article with respect to which a tax is imposed under this title, or (2) has, prior to the date of the enactment of this act, made a contract for the sale on or after the effective date of this title of an article, with respect to which sale a tax is imposed by this title, or with respect to which article a tax is imposed by this section, and such contract does not permit the adding to the amount to be paid thereunder of the whole of such tax, and does not provide that the vendor shall pay such tax, then the vendee shall, in lieu of the vendor, pay so much of the tax as is not so permitted to be added to the contract price or the price subject to regulation, as the case may be. If (A) any article has, under a contract of the character above described, been delivered prior to the date of the enactment of this act to any person (other than a dealer) or (B) a contract of the character above described was made with the United States, no tax shall be collected under this title.

"(b) The taxes payable by the vendee shall be paid to the vendor at the time the sale is consummated, and shall be collected, returned, and paid to the United States by such vendor in the same manner and shall be subject to the same provisions of law (including penalties) as the tax imposed by section 701 of the Revenue Act of 1932. In case of failure or refusal by the vendee to pay such taxes to the vendor, the vendor shall report the facts to the Commissioner, who shall cause collection of such taxes to be made from the vendee.

"SEC. 259. Final agreements:

"The Commissioner (or any officer or employee of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, including the field service, authorized in writing by the Commissioner) is authorized to enter into an agreement in writing with any person relating to the liability of such person (or of the person for whom he acts) in respect of the tax imposed by this title (including the basis or method upon which such liability shall be determined or computed) for any period (past or future) specified in such agreement. If such agreement is approved by the Secretary or the Under Secretary within such time as may be stated in such agreement, or later agreed to, such agreement shall be final and conclusive and, except upon a showing of fraud or malfeasance or misrepresentation of a material fact, (1) the case shall not be reopened as to the matter agreed upon or the agreement modified by any officer, employee, or agent of the United States, and (2) in any suit, action, or proceeding such agreement or any determination, assessment, collection, payment, abatement, refund, or credit made in accordance therewith shall not be annulled, modified, set aside, or disregarded; except that in its application to sales made after the date on which it is approved or agreed to such agreement shall be held to be modified to the extent necessary to conform to any change in the law after such date.

"SEC. 260. Effect of changes in administrative decisions:

"If any regulation, ruling, or decision of the Commissioner or Secretary (or any official authorized by regulations to make rulings or decisions which shall be subject to this section) in force at the time of the sale of an article, is amended or revoked, such amendment or revocation shall not have the effect of increasing the liability under this title of any person with respect to such sale beyond his liability determined in accordance with such regulation, ruling, or decision in force at the time of such sale.

"SEC. 261. Applicability of administrative provisions:

"All provisions of law (including penalties) applicable in respect of the taxes imposed by section 600 of the Revenue Act of 1926, shall, insofar as not inconsistent with this act, be applicable in respect of the tax imposed by this title.

"SEC. 262. Penalties:

"Any person willfully violating any provision of this title or any provision of law, in respect of the tax imposed by this title, shall (if no other criminal penalty is provided for therein) be fined an amount not more than $10,000, or imprisoned not more than 1 year, or both, together with the costs of prosecution.

"SEC. 263. Regulations:

"The Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, shall prescribe and publish such regulations as he may deem necessary for the enforcement of this title, except that the Secretary shall prescribe and publish such regulations as he may deem necessary for the enforcement of this title insofar as it relates to taxes under section 251(b).

"SEC. 264. Definitions:

"(a) When used in this title—

"(1) The term 'article' means commodities of every description, including gases and electrical energy; but does not include real property.

"(2) The term 'licensed manufacturer' means a manufacturer or producer licensed or required to be licensed under this title.

"(3) The term 'registered dealer' means a dealer or importer registered under this title.

"(4) The term 'manufacturer or producer' means any person (including a State, political subdivision thereof, or agency thereof) who manufactures or produces in the United States any article, and includes, in the case of electrical energy produced outside of the United States, the person making the first sale thereof within the United States. For the purposes of this title, such energy shall not be considered an imported article.

"(5) The term 'manufacture or produce' includes grow, mine, fabricate, assemble, cure, tan, dress, dye, bleach, blend, bottle, can, repackage, spin, weave, refine, and process or manipulate in any manner, but does not include laundering or repairing, nor the reconditioning of an article for reuse and not resale, nor the cleaning or ginning of cotton, nor the cleaning or threshing of grain, nor the preparation of beverages for consumption on the premises where prepared.

"(6) The term 'article for further manufacture' means only an article which is to be used by a licensed manufacturer (A) as material in the manufacture or production of, (B) as a component part of, (C) as a covering or container for, or (D) as an accessory to, another article.

"(7) The term 'tax-exempt resale' means resale (A) as an article for further manufacture to a licensed manufacturer or to a registered dealer, (B) to a State or political subdivision thereof for use solely in the exercise of an essential governmental function, (C) to any person for resale by him as described in clause (A) or (B) if the articles are delivered by his vendor to his vendee, or (D) for exportation, if the article is in due course exported.

"(8) The term 'exempt article' means an article enumerated in section 251 (d).

"(9) The term 'United States', when used in a geographical sense, includes only the States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii, and the District of Columbia.

"(10) The term 'imported' means brought into the United States from any foreign country or any possession of the United States.

"(11) The terms 'exported' and 'exportation' mean, respectively, shipped and shipment to any foreign country or any possession of the United States, or laden and lading as supplies, stores, or legitimate equipment on vessels of war of any foreign nation, vessels employed in the fisheries or in the whaling business, or actually engaged in foreign trade or trade between the Atlantic and Pacific ports of the United States or between the United States and any of its possessions.

"(12) The term 'obtained by' means sold to or removed from customs custody or control by.

"(13) The term 'regulations' means regulations prescribed under this title.

"(14) The term 'Secretary' means the Secretary of the Treasury.

"(15) The term 'Commissioner' means the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

"(16) The term 'collector' means collector of internal revenue.

"(b) The terms 'includes' and 'including' when used in a definition contained in this act shall not be deemed to exclude other things otherwise within the meaning of the term defined.

"SEC. 265. Personnel:

"The Secretary is authorized to appoint, in the office of the Assistant Secretary in Charge of Fiscal Offices, two officers at salaries of $9,000 per annum, and in the Bureau of Internal Revenue, one Deputy Commissioner at a salary of $9,000 per annum, and, subject to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, such other officers and employees as are necessary to administer the provisions of this title.

"SEC. 266. Effective date:

"This title shall take effect on the thirtieth day after the date of the enactment of this act, except that section 255, 259, 263, 265, and this section shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this act. No sale or removal from customs custody or control after June 30, 1935, shall be taxable under this title.

"SEC. 267. Short title:

"This title may be cited as the 'Manufacturers' Excise Tax Act of 1933.'

"SEC. 268. Repeals:

"The following sections of the Revenue Act of 1932 are repealed, effective as of the thirtieth day after the date of the enactment of this act: Sections 601 (c), (1), 603, 604, 605, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 725, 751, and 761.

"Sections 602 and 606 (a) to (e), inclusive, of such act are repealed, effective as of the sixtieth day after the date of the enactment of the act.

"Section 606 (f) of such act is amended by striking out 'August 1, 1934', and inserting 'the thirtieth day after the date of the enactment of the National Industrial Recovery Act.'"

On page 43, line 1, strike out "Title III" and insert in lieu thereof "Title IV."

Mr. ASHURST and Mr. CONNALLY addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. REED. Just a moment and I will yield the floor. There is no good to be accomplished by my arguing this amendment at length. Every Senator here has made up his mind. There is a noticeable change in the sentiment of the Finance Committee; there is a noticeable change in the sentiment in the Senate; there has been a noticeable change in the sentiment of the newspapers of the country; but I am perfectly aware that no effort of mine at this late hour of the night can change any vote, and in kindness to my fellow Senators I will not prolong my remarks. Now I yield to the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, the Senator from Pennsylvania is too modest—though it is becoming in him—when he says that no remarks of his would change votes. If the Senator will accept an amendment which I propose, I believe that the sales tax will be adopted and that all these "nuisance taxes", as they may be characterized, will be eliminated. Will the Senator accept an amendment which will provide that—

Hereafter all Government bonds and all securities issued by the Federal Government shall be subject to the income tax, as all other income may be?

The securities in America exempt from taxation in 1921 amounted to $14,000,000,000. That vast reservoir which in 1921 was worth $14,000,000,000 is now probably three times or certainly double that much. The time has arrived in America when there should be no tax-exempt bonds. Of course, it is impossible to have, and no one seeks to have, the Federal Government tax securities of a State, and likewise no State may tax securities of the Federal Government. True, there is no direct provision in the Constitution prohibiting the Federal Government from taxing State securities. But if the Senator from Pennsylvania will consent to an amendment that will subject Government bonds to the income tax——

Mr. REED. Bonds hereafter issued or those already issued?

Mr. ASHURST. It should be those hereafter issued, but I see no objection, in morals or in law, to the Federal Government's levying a tax upon Federal securities issued heretofore that were exempt——

Mr. REED. Excepting the fact that they contain the promise that they cannot be taxed; that is the trouble.

Mr. ASHURST. It is true that many of the bonds heretofore issued bear upon their face a proviso that they shall not be subjected to any tax; but, Mr. President, I have so much faith in the inborn and the ineradicable patriotism of the American people that I believe if we were to disregard that provision, nominated and written in the bond, and subject not the bonds but the income thereof to the income tax, nine hundred and ninety-nine out of every thousand bondholders in America would say, "Yes, I shall gladly make the contribution."

I do not want to be put in the attitude of violating any contract that has been made by our Government, but I do say, Mr. President, here is a vast source of revenue represented by property now escaping taxation, the owners of which I believe—and I have reason to believe it, and I assert it to be a fact—are ready and willing, and many of them anxious, to make their contribution in the form of an income tax on the income of such bonds.

Mr. REED. Mr. President——

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator from Pennsylvania has the floor.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President——

Mr. REED. I yield to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. WALSH. Does the Senator realize that the best way to collect a tax upon the incomes of those who own tax-exempt bonds is through a sales tax?

Mr. ASHURST. I do not say it is the best way. The Senator drives me into cul-de-sac. I do not say it is the best way, but it is the most effective way.

Mr. WALSH. Figures from the Treasury Department show that there are $20,000,000,000 of tax-exempt securities bearing no tax burden whatever. Furthermore, there are $12,000,000,000 more tax-exempt securities paying no normal tax. I have on my desk information from the Treasury Department that there are millions of dollars received in annuities that never pay a tax. There are others in this country who are now living on their capital because their income is suspended, and they are paying no taxes, though their capital may be extensive.

The one feature about the proposition which I have presented that is challenging is that every resident in America earning and spending money would be taxed and would pay a tax measured by his capacity to live beyond the necessities of life; that these tax-exempt men and women with their tremendous incomes amounting to more than a billion dollars a year, free from all burdens of taxation, shall be reached, and as they spend so shall they pay taxes to the Federal Government, though they have chosen to invest their money where it is protected from the tax burdens that other incomes and profits pay.

We cannot under the Constitution tax these incomes, but we can tax them when they spend their incomes, and we ought to do it. One of the best features about this proposal is that it is the only method of reaching the great amount of income from securities and investments that now go untaxed.

Do you know, Mr. President, how large an amount that is? The amount of tax-exempt securities in this country is more than all the capital and surplus of all the industries of this country. Put all the capital together, put all the surplus together of the industries of the country, and it amounts to $28,000,000,000, which is an amount much greater than our national debt, as the Senator from Maryland says; and here are $32,000,000,000 in tax-exempt securities the income from which is largely free from taxation. Why should those receiving incomes from such sources not bear a tax burden in this emergency, especially when the very situation in this country today is inviting them, yea, urging them to get their money out of business enterprises that provide employment and increase prosperity and put it safely and securely in tax-exempt investments?

Let no Senator go home to his constituents and say, "I have not voted for a sales tax. I am against a consumption tax. I do not believe in it." Do not dare say that, for the bill is reeking with unfair, unscientific, and ruinous sales taxes levied upon many industries. Over 100,000 returns are made by business concerns showing the extent to which these nuisance taxes extend. Let me present an example. Take the tax on lubricating oil. Lubricating oil sells at prices varying from 8 cents to $1 a gallon. Black lubricating oil is used very extensively by nearly all industries, and yet the tax levied in this bill upon lubricating oil in the case of 8-cent lubricating oil is 50 percent and in the case of the dollar lubricating oil it is only 4 percent.

Mr. President, if you will concede that an honest attempt has been made here to remove this burden of taxation from the working class and his family, then what? Where is this tax money to come from? It will come from those who spend money and who have the money to spend for these goods. The more one spends the greater his tax, and the higher the prices they pay the higher the tax. It is, I repeat, a tax to make those who have large incomes, who are heavy spenders, pay more to the Federal Government than those who have no incomes or have limited incomes and are unable to spend except most frugally.

I repeat these special advantages: First, it reaches the tax dodger, it reaches the enormous incomes of those who are escaping taxation because of exemptions and because of tax-exempt securities; and second, it begins by removing the tax burden upon the consumption of the man and woman low down in the scale of income and increases it as the scale of income goes up, so that the more one has the more he spends and the more he spends the more tax he has to pay.

Furthermore, the principle of ability to pay is carried out again by exempting the small manufacturer whose business is under $20,000 annually from the tax. While the small producer will pay a slight tax on his unfinished materials, he is exempt from the tax other competitors with larger business units pay on their finished product.

Mr. ASHURST. Yes, Mr. President; if this amendment should be adopted the citizen of ordinary means would be precluded from saying, and he would be glad to be precluded from saying, "We have a number of gentlemen, estimable enough in character perhaps, who fill their vest pockets with tax-exempt securities, and whose safety vaults are engorged with tax-exempt securities." The ordinary citizen would then not have to feel that there was a class of citizens which was not contributing its just share to the burden of government.

I am not going to argue any further. I have stated what I think about the principle of the proposal. Now I wish to refer to the expediency of the suggestion.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator let me ask him a question?

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator from Pennsylvania has the floor.

Mr. REED. I do not want to cut the Senator off, but I should like to ask him a question.

Mr. ASHURST. Certainly.

Mr. REED. I agree with the Senator that the existence of tax-exempt securities of any kind is a great injustice. I wish the Supreme Court had construed the words in the sixteenth amendment, "from whatever source derived", in the way they strike me, and that is to include any kind of income that any person receives from any source. That is the way I think the words should have been construed. I should be most happy to include in this amendment a provision preventing any sort of tax exemption in future issues of Federal Government bonds, but I do not want to try to repudiate the promise that is contained in our outstanding bonds; not that I would not gladly tax those who own them, but I am not happy about breaking a promise. That is what we would do. We can, however, as the Senator from Massachusetts pointed out, tax the spending of that income, although we cannot, in honor, tax the receipt of it.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. President, I should like to inquire of the Senator from Pennsylvania whether or not the taxation of these particular securities would be any more a violation of a promise than that which has been accomplished by a provision in a bill recently passed in which we say we shall not pay in gold, after we promised to pay in gold?

Mr. REED. That is true, but two wrongs do not make a right, and it would be just as wrong if now we tried to break this promise. Let us break no more promises. Never in any amendment I am sponsoring am I going to recommend the breaking of promises.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

Mr. ASHURST. Let me answer, if I may, the Senator from Pennsylvania on one point of law. The able Senator spoke about the construction the Supreme Court had given to the sixteenth amendment. I said this morning—and I do not need to repeat it—that it is not an easy thing to disagree with the Senator from Pennsylvania on a question of law, but my conception of the Constitution is that the general power is given to Congress to lay and collect taxes of every kind and nature without any restraint except on exports——

Mr. REED. Oh, no; Mr. President, the sixteenth amendment——

Mr. ASHURST. Wait a moment; provided, however, there is uniformity and apportionment——

Mr. REED. Ah!

Mr. ASHURST. Wherever there is uniformity and apportionment.

Mr. REED. Of course, that was why the old income-tax law was knocked out, because it was not apportioned. Then we passed the sixteenth amendment, providing that we could have income taxes without apportionment. The Supreme Court held that the words "from whatever source derived" were to be construed in a restricted sense, so we have not the power to tax incomes of State employees.

Mr. ASHURST. I agree with that.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, what decision of the Supreme Court held that we cannot tax the incomes from tax-exempt securities?

Mr. REED. There is a decision that we cannot tax the interest on State bonds.

Mr. BORAH. Oh, yes; I agree to that.

Mr. REED. There is no decision that we cannot break our promise and tax income or interest on outstanding Federal bonds which we have promised not to tax.

Mr. BORAH. Is taxing them when we promised not to tax anything more than repealing a statute which we have heretofore enacted? We enacted a statute providing that certain securities should be tax-exempt. We have a perfect right to repeal that statute.

Mr. REED. Yes; we have a right to repeal any statute we have enacted, but if we made a distinct promise that a creditor shall receive certain rights it is dishonorable for us to repudiate any part of that promise.

Mr. BORAH. I do not suppose there is any justification for getting into an argument over that matter tonight, but it seems to me the sixteenth amendment to the Constitution provides that we may tax incomes from whatever source derived.

Mr. REED. Quite true.

Mr. BORAH. We saw fit at a certain time and under certain circumstances to exempt certain property from taxation.

Mr. REED. Pardon me. We saw fit to offer to the people who had that money to lend, which money we wanted, to make a bargain with them that if they loaned it to us we would not tax them on the normal income.

Mr. BORAH. Exactly. We enacted a statute to that effect.

Mr. REED. No; we made a bargain to that effect.

Mr. BORAH. It was in the form of a legislative act. It could not have been made in any other way.

Mr. REED. The legislative act authorized the bargain to be made, and it was made.

Mr. BORAH. Exactly. But suppose it was some other kind of property, church property or anything else that we saw fit to exempt for a certain time from taxation under a statute, it could not be said that for all time we were going to exempt that property from taxation.

Mr. REED. It could be said if we sold it to a church and induced a church to buy it from us on the faith of that promise. The Senator from Idaho would not apply any such philosophy to his own bargains. If he had made a promise to pay under the same circumstances that the Nation did in these bonds, he would never dream of repudiating that promise.

Mr. BORAH. I would as a citizen know perfectly well that if I purchased a tax-exempt security it was always within the power of the Government to change its taxing system.

Mr. REED. Oh, yes; and it is always within the power of all of us to repudiate our promises.

Mr. BORAH. No one can secure a vested right in a governmental favor which may become contrary to public policy.

The Senator is asking the Government of the United States to forego for all time the power to tax these tax-exempt securities because it saw fit at a particular time to exempt them from taxation.

Mr. REED. Not at all. I am not asking anything of the sort, and I think I am up a side alley. I am offering to tax future issues of these bonds, and the amendment I have sent to the desk has nothing to do with past issues. I think we have become drawn off into a side issue.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, does the Senator's amendment repeal the electric-power tax?

Mr. REED. Yes; it does.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Pennsylvania yield?

Mr. REED. I am glad to yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LEWIS. I am attracted by the observation of our able friend from Pennsylvania when he would leave the impression that the Senator in charge of the bill has brought the bill to us at so late an hour as to make practically impossible a consideration of an important feature, and that the lateness of the hour in bringing the bill before the Senate would indicate that we are seeking to cut off some form of debate or understanding or hearing from some who may desire to be heard.

Mr. REED. If the Senator will let me answer him, no one has made such a suggestion. My only suggestion was that the Senate has been in session so long that we are all tired out, and I myself am too tired and too hungry to argue the thing any further. I am not blaming anybody for that.

Mr. LEWIS. I want to invite the attention of the able Senator from Pennsylvania that at the last Congress, just before the Hoover administration went out and the Senator's party in the majority, it was the Senator from Pennsylvania who led the tax bill looking to what he termed "the balancing of a Budget", and we were here fighting upon those clauses deep into the night; he and his leadership kept us busy beyond midnight carrying out the wishes, as he felt they were suggested by his eminent leader, the President. By the time we got to where the proposition which is now being presented was then presented, it then being presented by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH], it was not until 1 o'clock, past midnight, that he got his chance to make his representations by speech. I am calling the able Senator's attention that that which has transpired here now is not subject to the charge inferentially or in any other form to go to the public that this mad rush in an uncertain hour has some design behind it. It repeats by crowded events.

Now I ask the question of the Senator——

Mr. REED. May I answer that question before the second one is asked?

Mr. LEWIS. Yes; but I wanted to bring to the attention of the Senator the parallel conditions by which he would do justice to this side of the Chamber.

Mr. REED. I want to disclaim any semblance of criticism of the Senator from Mississippi, who has the bill in charge. He has stuck to it faithfully and well. The bill is important. It ought to be acted upon soon. I am not reflecting on him. But the plain truth of the matter is that, without his fault, the sun has risen and set, the clock has turned, and it is now 10 minutes of 9 o'clock at night and everybody is tired. I am not blaming anyone for that.

Mr. LEWIS. At this particular point let me say to the Senator, having understood his remark, Does his amendment exempt certain agricultural products? May I invite the Senator's attention that the Supreme Court of Illinois, lately passing upon the State income tax or what may be called a "State sales tax", has held invalid that act, resting upon the construction of the Supreme Court of the United States on a State statute upon the ground that the omission of agricultural products as described there violates the basis of uniformity, and held the tax invalid. Does the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania see any parallel in that and a possible danger to the present amendment?

Mr. REED. No; because there is no such provision whatever in the Federal statute. Our taxes need not be uniform and have not been uniform.

Mr. LEWIS. Does the Senator regard the sixteenth amendment with its phraseology of uniformity as applying here at all to the income tax?

Mr. REED. It applies a tax on incomes, but the tax which I am proposing is a tax upon spending.

Mr. LEWIS. The Senator sees no parallel?

Mr. REED. No; I do not.

Mr. LEWIS. I think that we understand each other, whether we agree with each other or not.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is upon agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. HASTINGS. Let us have the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REED (when Mr. DAVIS' name was called). My colleague the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS] asked me to announce that he is absent on account of illness. If present, he would vote "yea." He has a general pair with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN].

Mr. MCADOO (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Vermont [Mr. DALE]. Not knowing how he would vote on this question, I withhold my vote.

Mr. MCNARY (when his name was called). On this vote I have a pair with the senior Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER]. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. LEWIS. I beg the privilege of announcing that the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] is absent. He is paired with the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. NORBECK]. Were the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] present, he would vote "yea." I am told that, if present, the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. NORBECK] would vote "nay."

May I also be permitted to announce that the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS] is necessarily detained, and that the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] is necessarily absent, being a delegate to the Economic Conference in London.

The result was announced—yeas 28, nays 57, as follows:

YEAS—28

Austin	Fess	Keyes	Townsend
Bachman	Goldsborough	Lewis	Tydings
Barbour	Hale	Lonergan	Vandenberg
Carey	Hastings	Metcalf	Wagner
Coolidge	Hebert	Patterson	Walcott
Copeland	Kean	Reed	Walsh
Dickinson	Kendrick	Schall	White

NAYS—57

Adams	Clark	King	Russell
Ashurst	Connally	La Follette	Sheppard
Bailey	Costigan	Long	Shipstead
Bankhead	Cutting	McCarran	Smith
Barkley	Dieterich	McGill	Steiwer
Black	Dill	McKellar	Stephens
Bone	Duffy	Murphy	Thomas, Okla.
Borah	Erickson	Neely	Thomas, Utah
Bratton	Frazier	Norris	Thompson
Brown	George	Nye	Trammell
Bulkley	Gore	Overton	Van Nuys
Bulow	Harrison	Pope	Wheeler
Byrnes	Hatfield	Reynolds
Capper	Hayden	Robinson, Ark.
Caraway	Johnson	Robinson, Ind.

NOT VOTING—11

Byrd	Davis	Logan	Norbeck
Couzens	Fletcher	McAdoo	Pittman
Dale	Glass	McNary

So Mr. REED's amendment was rejected.

Mr. WALCOTT. Mr. President, I should like to submit an amendment, on page 19, line 3, after the word "of", to add certain language, which I send to the desk.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, will not the Senator from Connecticut permit us to finish with the Senate committee amendment before going to another part of the bill?

Mr. WALCOTT. Certainly.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment, which I ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. THOMAS of Utah in the chair). The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 41, line 11, after the expression "23 (t)", it is proposed to insert the following:

Provided, That no deduction shall be disallowed by reason of this provision to any member of a partnership which is a dealer in securities, with respect to any loss sustained by the partnership as to stocks or bonds acquired for resale to customers.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I have worked this amendment out with the experts of the Treasury Department. It simply provides that where there is a regular dealer in securities, he shall be allowed to inventory those securities in order to find out whether he has lost, the same as if he were a dealer in coal, or poultry, or grain, or any other product. It would not apply, I am told by the Treasury expert, to concerns like Morgan & Co., who are not dealers in securities within the regulations of the Department of the Treasury.

I have tried to have the amendment drawn so that it would permit partners to take losses where losses in securities really should be taken through inventory. That is all the amendment would do. I have conferred with the chairman of the committee, and he himself is not out of accord with the amendment.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I should prefer that the amendment not be offered.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, in view of what the Senator has said, I may state that as I have had the amendment sent to the desk, it is not in the form I had it originally drawn, but I toned it down considerably in order to meet objections.

It would be grossly unfair where there has been an actual loss in the inventory of a dealer in securities that he not be permitted to take that loss in making up his income-tax return. There is no more reason why he should pay in that case than that a dealer in coal or poultry or hogs or any other commodity should pay. There has been an actual loss, we will assume, and I think it would be unfair to pick out this one partnership and discriminate against it when privileges are given to every other class of partnership in this regard.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, would it lower or raise the tax of the House of Morgan.

Mr. TYDINGS. It would not touch the House of Morgan at all. They would be entitled to no benefit, I am told by the Treasury experts, under this amendment. They are not dealers in securities under the regulations of the Treasury Department.

Mr. WHEELER. Would it lower the tax or raise the tax?

Mr. TYDINGS. It would not affect the tax except where the partnership has an actual loss, as diclosed in taking the inventory at the end of the year of securities on hand. The partners would be permitted to deduct the actual losses from the partnership earnings.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I want to ask the Senator from Maryland a question. Would this amendment apply only to dealers in securities?

Mr. TYDINGS. That is all.

Mr. BARKLEY. What sort of dealers does the Senator have in mind, brokers?

Mr. TYDINGS. According to the Treasury Department regulations, a dealer in securities is a man or person or firm, differentiated from a banking house, or underwriting agents, like Morgan & Co. According to the Treasury Department regulations, a dealer in securities is the same for securities as a dealer in coal would be for the coal business. If a coal dealer buys a hundred tons of coal and carries it all through the year, and the coal is worth half as much in December as it was in January, he is entitled to have his loss deducted, as shown by the inventory, as in the case of any other partnership, and to charge off the shrinkage in investment. All I am attempting to do is to give the man who is a dealer in securities the same rights the dealer in any other commodity would have.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, he would also have to report his gains?

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes; he would have to report his gains.

Mr. BARKLEY. There is no necessary analogy between a dealer in coal, who buys coal and sells it at retail to his customers, and a firm or association who may be dealers in securities. Any brokerage office may be a dealer. They may not buy themselves, but they act as agents for others buying and selling securities, or they carry on the business of dealing in securities, while they do not actually buy them in their own name.

Mr. TYDINGS. I understand that a dealer in securities, if the securities increase in value, has to pay a tax; but if they decrease in value, he cannot take anything off for a loss as shown by his inventory.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, he does not have to report his profits until he sells his securities.

Mr. TYDINGS. I am not talking about Morgan, or investment dealers; I am talking about dealers whose securities are stocks upon the shelves.

Mr. CONNALLY. If they are on the shelves, and they go up in value, he does not have to report until he disposes of them.

Mr. BARKLEY. The ordinary dealer in securities does not buy a lot of securities and salt them away.

Mr. TYDINGS. Quite often he does.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is not necessarily his business. He may pay an income tax on his profits if he has sold them, if he has disposed of them. Any private person has to do that. At the end of the year the ordinary dealer in securities, as I understand it, does not have a lot of securities salted away. If he has bought the securities for investment, he is not a dealer. I do not know that it is a matter of any great importance, so far as the amount of revenue involved is concerned.

Mr. TYDINGS. I think the Senator from Kentucky has a misunderstanding of the situation. A dealer in securities would be a person who would purchase a certain percentage, all or part of an issue of stocks and bonds, or what not. He would keep those in his concern and sell them to his customers.

Mr. BARKLEY. Such a person might be a dealer. There might be a lot of dealers who bought and sold securities on an entirely different basis.

Mr. TYDINGS. As I said at the start, I had the amendment drawn with the advice of the Treasury Department expert, and I understand that firms like Morgan, Kuhn, Loeb, and others in that category are not dealers in securities. There are a number of legitimate dealers.

Mr. BARKLEY. They take over a certain percentage of a given issue of a corporation and distribute their portion of it out to their clients. As a matter of fact, they have dealt in securities. They have bought them and agreed to pay a certain price; and they have resold them to their customers, either at the same price or at a different price, whatever the agreement may be. It may be that under the regulations, which I have not read for some time, they are not dealers, but they are certainly dealing in securities.

Mr. TYDINGS. They are dealing in securities, of course.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. TYDINGS. I will yield; but before the Senator asks his question, let me say to the Senator from Kentucky that I am not interested in the security business any more than in any other business, but it occurred to me that if we are going to tax a man when he makes a gain, common justice dictates that we should allow him to deduct his loss when he has a loss.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, in connection with that, I might make this suggestion. Such a person or association on the 31st of December might take an inventory of the stocks he had on hand and, if it showed a loss, under this amendment he would be allowed to deduct that loss from his income tax for that particular year. He might continue to hold those securities and in 3 months sell them at a profit.

Mr. TYDINGS. Then he would have to pay a tax on them.

Mr. BARKLEY. Probably that is true.

Mr. TYDINGS. It is as broad as it is long.

Mr. BARKLEY. But when the transaction has not been completed, why should he be allowed to deduct an artificial loss, which he has not suffered, in order to reduce his income tax?

Mr. TYDINGS. Because under the law we allow a dealer in commodities to take a loss, a dealer in merchandise to take a loss, a dealer in property of any kind to take a loss, but we do not allow dealers in securities to take a loss. We allow inventories in every other category of business, but we do not allow a loss in this category of business.

I can see no reason at all why prejudice against the House of Morgan should cause us to make a discrimination against everybody who deals in securities when we do not apply that same rule to other commodities.

I realize that the philosophy of the Senate at the present time is such, and there is such a situation in the country, that we are going to pass all legislation with an eye to the House of Morgan. I am not talking for the House of Morgan, and they would not benefit under this amendment, but I do think that other dealers in securities in the country who come within the Treasury regulations are entitled to equal and exact justice.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I agree with the Senator that we should not get Morgan into this matter, because it does not affect him. Morgan does not pay taxes. [Laughter.]

Mr. TYDINGS. That is right.

Mr. NORRIS. So this cannot apply to him. Unless our law has legal effect over in Great Britain, Morgan is perfectly clear from any injury.

Mr. TYDINGS. The Senator helped me out indirectly, because we do not need to pass any laws to take care of Morgan. He will take care of himself.

Mr. NORRIS. Unless we can repeal the law in England that makes him pay a tax over there, I do not see why we should mix him into this discussion; but I want to ask the Senator a question.

Under existing law, as I understand, a dealer in securities takes his loss or his gain, whichever it may be, whenever he disposes of the securities. Is not that right?

Mr. TYDINGS. That is right, I think. I am not sure.

Mr. NORRIS. That is my idea of it. I may be wrong. The Senator's amendment, however, applies only to the loss; does it not?

Mr. TYDINGS. No.

Mr. NORRIS. Under his amendment, if I were a dealer in stocks or bonds, I would have to take an inventory of those that I owned on the 1st of January of each year in order to know whether I had to pay a tax or would be entitled to a credit for a loss.

Mr. TYDINGS. This is a proviso to be added to the committee amendment. The committee amendment, consisting of six and one-half lines, reads as follows:

> No deduction from gross income shall be allowed to a partner on account of any excess of the deductions allowed the partnership under this title over the gross income of the partnership to the extent that such excess is attributable to loss from the sale or other disposition of stocks and bonds as defined in section 23(t).

My amendment is simply a proviso—it is up on the desk at present—but in substance it says that this provision shall not apply to any deduction by a member of a partnership with respect to any transaction entered into by the partnership as a dealer in securities as to stocks and bonds acquired for resale to customers.

Mr. NORRIS. I confess that I do not quite understand that—"resale to customers." I take it that if they were acquired for resale, the object would be to make a profit on them; and they could sell them to anybody, whether he was a customer or not. Why does the Senator confine it to customers?

Mr. TYDINGS. A customer would be anybody who bought them.

Mr. NORRIS. Then the Senator might just as well leave off the words "to customers" and just say "resale."

Mr. TYDINGS. In order to get my point before the Senator, personally I do not know anybody that will benefit by this amendment. I probably know some, but I do not know those people as beneficiaries; but in every other line of business where there is a partnership, whether it be in coal or wagons or automobiles or what not, the partners are allowed at the end of the year to take an inventory. It might be a textile mill.

Mr. NORRIS. I am asking my questions because I do not fully understand just how this is going to work. Would the principle be any different if a man was engaged in his individual capacity, and not as a partnership?

Mr. TYDINGS. Not a bit.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator's amendment applies only to partnerships.

Mr. TYDINGS. Because the committee amendment applies only to partnerships.

Mr. NORRIS. Then, to get the benefit of the provision, a person would have to be in a partnership.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is right.

Mr. NORRIS. If he were doing an individual business, he would not be entitled to the same credit that he would be if he were a member of a partnership.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is my understanding.

Mr. NORRIS. That would hardly be fair; would it?

Mr. TYDINGS. He would be entitled to the same benefit if he were an individual that he would be in the partnership, except that he might have both an individual income and a partnership income, and therefore it is necessary to draw the regulation in both categories.

Mr. NORRIS. This applies only to partnerships, as I understand.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is all, because the committee amendment applies only to partnerships.

Mr. NORRIS. I understand that; but if we agree to this, we have no provision of a similar nature giving to an individual that privilege if he was not in a partnership.

Mr. TYDINGS. I think we have.

Mr. NORRIS. That is why I am calling attention to that, because it seems to me there would be an injustice there.

Mr. TYDINGS. I think we have. In the case of an individual, he would be entitled to take an inventory.

Mr. NORRIS. Suppose he took an inventory of his bonds, and, just to illustrate, suppose he had a million dollars in Government bonds on the 1st of January and on that day they were worth 100. He had bought them 3 months before for 85. They are worth more when he takes his inventory than when he bought them. Would he be required to take that inventory and then pay the tax on that profit?

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes, he would be; but he would not be able to take a loss.

Mr. NORRIS. But if it were the other way, he would be entitled to a credit somewhere.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is right.

May I interrupt the Senator long enough to say that my point is this: Every other kind of business is permitted to take an inventory except the securities business. The reason why the securities business is not permitted to take an inventory is because an effort has been made to tax Mr. Morgan's firm.

Mr. NORRIS. It never has succeeded.

Mr. TYDINGS. I am not going to argue that; but I have sat down with Treasury experts and tried to draw an amendment, not applicable to the Morgan firm at all but to the dealers in securities generally, so that they would have only the same rights as are given to partners in any other business, whether it be silks, or textiles, or what.

Mr. NORRIS. Let me ask the Senator a question. Suppose the Senator is in the real-estate business. He buys a piece of property on the 1st of June for $10,000, and on the 1st of January, when he makes his return, it is worth $25,000. He still owns it. He has not sold it. He pays no tax on that property.

Mr. TYDINGS. In a partnership?

Mr. NORRIS. No; if he is an individual. He pays no tax if he does not sell it. He never pays a tax on the profit he makes from the property, even though it doubles a thousand times.

Mr. TYDINGS. But may I say to the Senator that I think the committee amendment deals only with cases where there might be a loss in one part of the partnership business and a profit in another part of the partnership business. This is to prevent him from taking credit for losses, to make him pay on all of his profits, but allow him no credit for honest, legitimate losses in the proper conduct of the business.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote!

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I am not going to detain the Senate longer. I doubt very much if, at this late hour, anybody understands what is involved. The injustice is going to be done, and then the houses which are penalized will write to their various Representatives; and at the next session of Congress, after we have permitted this injustice to prevail for a year, we will probably correct it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. WALCOTT. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment, which I ask to have read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 19, line 3, after the word " of ", it is proposed to insert " commercial airports."

Mr. WALCOTT. Mr. President, commercial airports are increasing very rapidly. The speed of the airplanes having increased by 50 percent in the last 10 or 12 years, more landing fields and better ones are required.

There are now in the United States 2,167 airports in all; and 646 of them, almost a third, are commercial airports.

Many States are very much interested in this problem. The States having the largest number of commercial airports are California, Illinois, Indiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, and Wisconsin.

This amendment merely puts commercial airports in the category of those concerns which are self-liquidating, and which may ask for loans, provided the loans are adequately secured. I merely ask that these two words be put in the bill so that commercial airports may borrow if, in the judgment of the lending agency of the Government, the loans can be adequately secured.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I hope the amendment will not prevail.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Connecticut.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 42, between lines 8 and 9, it is proposed to insert the following new paragraph:

Section 55 of the Revenue Act of 1932 is amended by inserting before the period at the end thereof a semicolon and the following: " except that all returns made under this act after the date of enactment of the National Industrial Recovery Act shall constitute public records, and shall be open to examination and inspection.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, several amendments have been adopted by the committee in an effort to close some of the loopholes in the income tax laws exposed by the investigation of the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Insofar as those amendments achieved their objectives, I believe the committee is to be commended for having recommended them to the Senate; but, in my judgment, the pending amendment will do more to force an honest and adequate return of incomes by the taxpayers of the United States than all the other amendments which could be proposed and adopted.

So far as property-tax returns in the United States are concerned, in every State of the Union, so far as I know, they are a matter of public record. It is only around the income tax that the Federal Government has thrown the shroud of secrecy.

It seems to me that the experience of my own State in this regard is of particular and compelling interest in connection with this amendment.

From 1916 to 1923 the income-tax returns in the State of Wisconsin were shrouded in secrecy by the identical provisions which now prevail so far as Federal returns are concerned.

In 1921 an audit was ordered by the government of the State of Wisconsin into the back income taxes for the years 1916 to 1920, the lush years of war profits. As a result of that investigation, it was discovered that there had been willful understatement of income by corporations and by individuals in that State, and $3,500,000 in back income taxes was assessed as a result of that audit.

As a consequence of the exposure of the willful understatement of income by taxpayers, the State of Wisconsin adopted an amendment making income-tax records public records; and that amendment has been upon the statute books from that day to this.

The startling and significant fact is, Mr. President, that as a result of making income-tax returns public records in the State of Wisconsin there has been discovered no such wholesale and willful understatement of income by the taxpayers of that State. On the other hand, there have been none of the abuses from making income-tax returns public records that I know will be anticipated by those who oppose this amendment.

These returns in the State of Wisconsin are simply public records, as are the property-tax returns, and all other public records.

Mr. President, this amendment is not to be confused in the minds of Senators with the compromise that was adopted in the income tax law of 1924. The Senate then, by an overwhelming vote, adopted practically the identical amendment which I now propose. It went to conference; and in the conference committee a compromise was adopted, simply providing that the amount of tax paid by the taxpayer should be made a matter of public record. That did not bring to bear upon the individual and the corporation making out their income-tax returns the full knowledge that their understatements of tax income would become public, and would be a matter of public record. No person reading the amount of tax of an individual or a corporation could come to any conclusion as to whether or not the return of that individual or that corporation was honestly executed.

It may be of interest to some Members of this body to know that during the early years of the income tax law, income-tax returns were public records in the United States. I desire to quote briefly from a speech made by my illustrious father in this Chamber, showing some of the startling results that followed from placing the shroud of secrecy over income-tax returns.

The statistics published by the Internal Revenue Bureau are such that comparisons in all the classes of incomes taxed are not possible, but a comparison of the returns of those reporting incomes over $2,000 is almost conclusive.

In 1870, when the returns were published, the number showing incomes over $2,000 were 94,887. In 1871, when publicity was prohibited, the number fell to 74,000—that is, from 94,000 to 74,000—then to 72,000 in 1872, and this in spite of the fact that, as shown by individual bank deposits, bank clearings, etc., 1871 and 1872 were more prosperous years than 1870.

Mr. KEAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I do.

Mr. KEAN. Were not those years of panics—1872, and so forth?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. They were more prosperous years, according to the individual bank statements, than the year of 1870 when publicity prevailed.

Similarly in North Carolina, when the income-tax returns under State law were published—tax collections immediately more than doubled.

In the newspapers—

Mr. President, I wish to quote from a well-known and well-recognized tax authority upon this question. I quote from Prof. C. C. Plehn in his book Introduction to Public Finance. I remind the Senate that Professor Plehn is one of the leading tax authorities in this country. For 25 or 30 years he has been connected with the University of California and is the former president of the American Economic Association and of the National Tax Conference. He says:

To a people unaccustomed to an income tax it may seem that one's income is a very intimate, personal, and private affair, and there is a natural dread of letting one's business rivals know one's business. But, as a matter of fact, the income-tax statement or return would be no more likely to be examined out of sheer curiosity or for purposes of gossip than are the property-tax returns, about which no such veil of secrecy is drawn—

I interpolate the observation, Mr. President, that that has been the experience of the State of Wisconsin after having had income-tax returns matters of public record for about 10 years.

And the business rival generally has better information already than he could possibly obtain from the returns. Against such dark secrecy it may well be urged that it is very important to feel assured that all incomes—my neighbors, as well as mine—are fairly and truly assessed, a thing that can never be if the final assessments never see the light of day. Fear of publicity is a bogie man. This does not mean, however, that publicity should be used as a means of duress, to force assessments in excess of what is right, just, and equal.

Mr. President, in conclusion, may I say that if this amendment shall be adopted, in my judgment it will do more to cure the abuses which have been revealed by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee's investigation than any other amendment or any other group of amendments which could be suggested by the tax experts or by the members of the Finance Committee.

Does any Senator believe that Mr. Mitchell would have made out his income-tax returns as he did if he had known full well that they were to become a public record and a matter of inspection? Does any Senator suppose that other evasions which have been revealed by the committee would ever have taken place if the taxpayer had known as he sat down to make out his return that it was to become a matter of public record and open to the inspection of those who desired to inquire into it?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I ask for the yeas and nays, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays were asked for. Is the demand seconded? [A pause.] Not a sufficient number.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I suggest the absence of a quorum. I ask Senators to give me a roll call on this amendment. If they will do so, I will withdraw my point of no quorum.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I think we should have the yeas and nays.

Mr. HARRISON. Let us have the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays are called for.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I withdraw my point of no quorum, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. McNARY (when his name was called). Again announcing my pair, I withhold my vote. If permitted to vote, I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I wish to announce the necessary absence of the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], with whom I have a general pair. However, I feel at liberty to vote, and I vote "nay."

Mr. KENDRICK. I wish to announce that the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] is detained in official business of the Government, being a delegate to the London Economic Conference.

I also desire to announce that the following Senators are necessarily detained from the Senate: The senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the junior Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE], and the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS].

Mr. HEBERT. I wish to announce the following general pairs:

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS] with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN]; and

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. DALE] with the Senator from California [Mr. McADOO].

The result was announced—yeas 56, nays 27, as follows:

YEAS—56

Adams	Clark	Kendrick	Robinson, Ind.
Ashurst	Connally	King	Russell
Bachman	Coolidge	La Follette	Sheppard
Barkley	Costigan	Long	Shipstead
Black	Cutting	McCarran	Smith
Bone	Dickinson	McGill	Thomas, Okla.
Borah	Dill	McKellar	Thomas, Utah
Bratton	Duffy	Neely	Thompson
Brown	Erickson	Norris	Trammell
Bulkley	Frazier	Nye	Vandenberg
Bulow	George	Overton	Van Nuys
Byrnes	Hatfield	Patterson	Wagner
Capper	Hayden	Pope	Walsh
Caraway	Johnson	Reynolds	Wheeler

NAYS—27

Austin	Fess	Keyes	Steiwer
Bailey	Goldsborough	Lonergan	Stephens
Bankhead	Hale	Metcalf	Townsend
Barbour	Harrison	Murphy	Tydings
Carey	Hastings	Reed	Walcott
Copeland	Hebert	Robinson, Ark.	White
Dieterich	Kean	Schall

NOT VOTING—13

Byrd	Fletcher	Lewis	McNary
Couzens	Glass	Logan	Norbeck
Dale	Gore	McAdoo	Pittman
Davis

So Mr. LA FOLLETTE's amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CLARK. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 42, between lines 8 and 9, it is proposed to insert the following new paragraphs:

Effective as of January 1, 1933:

(1) Section 22 (a) of the Revenue Act of 1932 is amended by inserting before the period at the end of the first section thereof a comma and the following: "including obligations of the United States or its possessions, and of any State, Territory, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia."

(2) Paragraph (4) of section 22 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1932 is amended to read as follows:

"(4) Tax-free interest: Interest upon securities issued under the provisions of the Federal Farm Loan Act, or under the provisions of such act, as amended: Every person owning any of such securities shall in the return required by this title submit a statement showing the number and amount of such securities owned by him and the income received therefrom, in such form and with such information as the Commissioner may require."

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, at this hour of the night I do not desire to detain the Senate by debating this amendment. It is a subject on which every Member of the Senate has, undoubtedly, already made up his mind. It is a question upon which the equity, the wisdom, and the legality have been debated on both sides at great length. Suffice it to say, I believe that closing the door to what are called tax-exempt securities will close the greatest gap in our income-tax system, with the possible exception of the gap which now occurs through the capital-losses provision of the present income tax law. I believe it is desirable from every standpoint to close those gaps, because of the glaring injustices in the administration of the income tax law.

Briefs have been written, speeches have been made, about the question of the power of Congress, under the present state of the Constitution, to tax these tax-exempt securities. As was said earlier in the evening by the Senator from Idaho, I cannot read the sixteenth amendment to the Constitution in any other way than as giving Congress the power to tax these hitherto tax-exempt securities. I believe that the sixteenth amendment, when it declared that Congress had power to tax incomes from whatever source, meant exactly what it said, and that it overruled the previous rulings of the Supreme Court to the effect that Congress had no power to tax these securities.

I offer this amendment for the purpose of testing the sense of the Senate, and do not desire to debate it at any length.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK].

Mr. CLARK. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. McNARY (when his name was called). Again referring to my pair, I withhold my vote. If permitted to vote, I would vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. HEBERT. I desire to announce the following general pairs:

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. DALE] with the Senator from California [Mr. McADOO], and

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS] with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN].

Mr. KENDRICK. I desire to announce that the Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE], the junior Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], and the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS] are necessarily detained from the Senate.

I also wish to announce that the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] is absent in attendance on the London Economic Conference.

The result was announced—yeas 45, nays 37, as follows:

YEAS—45

Ashurst	Clark	La Follette	Sheppard
Bachman	Coolidge	Long	Shipstead
Bankhead	Costigan	McGill	Smith
Barbour	Cutting	McKellar	Steiwer
Black	Dickinson	Murphy	Thomas, Okla.
Borah	Dill	Neely	Thomas, Utah
Bratton	Duffy	Norris	Trammell
Brown	Erickson	Nye	Walsh
Bulow	Frazier	Pope	Wheeler
Byrnes	Hayden	Reynolds
Capper	Kean	Robinson, Ind.
Caraway	Kendrick	Russell

NAYS—37

Adams	George	Lonergan	Townsend
Austin	Goldsborough	McCarran	Tydings
Bailey	Gore	Metcalf	Vandenberg
Barkley	Hale	Overton	Van Nuys
Bulkley	Harrison	Patterson	Wagner
Carey	Hastings	Reed	Walcott
Connally	Hatfield	Robinson, Ark.	White
Copeland	Hebert	Schall
Dieterich	Keyes	Stephens
Fess	King	Thompson

NOT VOTING—14

Bone	Davis	Lewis	Norbeck
Byrd	Fletcher	Logan	Pittman
Couzens	Glass	McAdoo
Dale	Johnson	McNary

So Mr. CLARK's amendment was agreed to.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I have an amendment which I desire to propose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 24, line 23, after the word "parkways", to insert the words "and such highway beautification."

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I hope the Senator will not offer the amendment, because I do not think we want to get into this parkway-beautification question.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I think the amendment will be in order now, or at some other time.

Mr. HARRISON. There will be no objection when we have acted on the pending amendment. The committee amendment as amended has not yet been agreed to.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I understand there is no objection to this amendment's being offered at this time. It will take me but about 2 minutes to explain the purpose of the amendment.

Mr. HARRISON. Will not the Senator permit us to have the Senate committee amendment as amended agreed to?

Mr. TRAMMELL. Very well.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I want to ask the Senator from Mississippi a question. In the bill as it passed the House the income-tax rates were increased by a flat 2 percent in the normal rate. The Senate committee struck out all income taxes. I want to ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an amendment which I had prepared for offering in the committee as a substitute for the House income-tax rate, together with a table, so that the committee may have them in conference if the House conferees bring up the question of the income-tax rates.

My amendment was, instead of the raise of 2 percent in the normal tax on all incomes, a substitute providing that the rate of tax should be computed under the present law, and then 10 percent added to that tax. It would simply carry out the graduated principle on all taxes, rather than a flat 2-percent increase of the normal tax.

The result of increasing the normal tax would bear more heavily on the small taxpayer, whereas this plan would simply increase every taxpayer's tax by 10 percent.

I ask the Senator from Mississippi, in the event this matter is in conference, that he not agree to the House income-tax rate until the Senate should have an opportunity again to express itself on this particular subject.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, may I say to the Senator from Texas that I am very much opposed to the increase in the normal rates of income tax, and I very much prefer his scheme to the House scheme, if we could adopt it.

Mr. CONNALLY. Can the Senator give us some assurance that before he will agree to the House income-tax rate the Senate will have an opportuuity to express itself on some other plan?

Mr. HARRISON. I would say that the Senate conferees are going to stand by most of the Senate committee amendments, and especially the tax features; and if there were a substantial part of the Senate which wanted us to come back before we acted on the proposition, I am sure the conferees would accept the admonition.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas asks unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD certain data.

There being no objection, the matters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Page 30, to strike out subsections (a) and (b) of section 208 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"(a) Effective as of January 1, 1933, there is hereby imposed upon every person liable to an income tax under title I of the Revenue Act of 1932 an additional income tax equal to 10 percent of the amount of the income tax payable by such person under that act.

"(b) Except as otherwise provided in this section, the tax imposed by subsection (a) shall be assessed, collected, and paid in the same manner and subject to the same provision of law (including penalties) as the tax imposed by title I of the Revenue Act of 1932."

Married men, no dependents

Net income (all from salary)	Total tax, present law	Total tax under House bill	Total tax under Connally amendment
$2,000	0	0	0
$3,000	$20	$30	$22
$4,000	60	90	66
$5,000	100	150	110
$6,000	140	210	154
$7,000	210	300	231
$10,000	480	630	528
$14,000	900	1,130	990
$20,000	1,680	2,030	1,848
$30,000	3,480	4,030	3,828
$40,000	5,800	6,550	6,380
$50,000	8,600	9,550	9,460
$70,000	15,700	17,050	17,270
$100,000	30,100	32,050	33,110
$200,000	86,600	90,550	95,260
$500,000	263,600	273,550	289,960
$1,000,000	571,100	591,050	628,210

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. A parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I desire to offer an amendment, to be inserted on page 44, after line 12. If this committee amendment shall be agreed to, will I be precluded from offering that amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator may offer it when that amendment is reached.

The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Is it now in order for me to propose the amendment which I have at the desk?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is in order now.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I ask that the amendment may be reported.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Senator from Florida proposes, on page 24, line 23, after the word "parkways", to insert "and such highway beautification."

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, in my State and probably in a good many other States throughout the United States others have urged, and also there is at present considerable effort being made, to bring about highway beautification. The bill in its present form authorizes expenditures for what are called main parkways along the highways. Doubting whether there would be any authority for expending funds for beautification in the way of plants and flowers and such adornments that would add to the appearance of highways, I have proposed the amendment. I hope it will be adopted. It is purely discretionary. I do not know of any State where there is a regular system of beautification of highways. We desire very much in Florida to have the highways, which we are constructing at the present time and shall construct in the future, adorned with our beautiful palms and other attractive flowers.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Delaware?

Mr. TRAMMELL. I yield.

Mr. HASTINGS. I am wondering, in view of the fact that we have been very careful in specifying what may be done under the provisions of the bill, whether it would not be well to specify how the highways shall be beautified, or is it the intention of the Senator to leave that to the President?

Mr. TRAMMELL. That is handled by the State road department and the Chief of the Bureau of Roads representing the Government. Of course, while the Senator from Delaware attempts to make me appear silly for offering such an amendment, he makes himself silly by suggesting the idea that we should go into all the details as to the character of plants that might be placed along highways or as to the character of other adornments that might be used in beautifying highways. I do not know of any other legislation of this character that carries any such ridiculous or absurd details as that.

Mr. HASTINGS. I merely wish to suggest that we have been so careful in the bill all through not to give any discretion to anybody that it seemed to me in beautifying the highways we ought to be specific also.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I want to be sure to have authority to use funds in that connection. The question of the beautification of highways involves the utilization of labor.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. BARKLEY. I want to offer an amendment to the Senator's amendment.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I am about through. I suppose the Senator from Kentucky has gotten into a frivolous mood like the Senator from Delaware, and thinks that some more of the time of the Senate could be occupied this evening in that way, so I will proceed to occupy a little of the time before he has an opportunity to do so, and then I shall yield to him. I do not know what kind of merriment is throbbing within the breast of the distinguished Senator from Kentucky, but it seems he wants the Senate to be delayed. I was about to take my seat and let a vote be taken upon the merits of the issue.

Mr. BARKLEY. Certainly, I have a right to offer an amendment, have I not?

Mr. TRAMMELL. Oh, no doubt.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, why not postpone the facetiousness until tomorrow?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Florida.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote! Vote!

Mr. TRAMMELL. All I ask is to have the amendment considered upon its merits. So far as my State is concerned, we should like very much to have the authority so extended that the fund may be used for this purpose under the State highway commission and the representative of the Bureau of Roads in the Department of Agriculture.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Florida.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 43, line 21, strike out the period and insert a colon and the following proviso:

Provided further, That prior to the date of termination under this section of the power of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to approve applications, the Corporation may approve a pending application of, and effect a loan to, any State university and agricultural and mechanical college offering bonds or certificates of indebtedness reasonably secured by pledge of the receipts from fees, rentals, and other charges, and from revenues derived from the operation of university and college plants and facilities, when, in the judgment of the directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, such bonds or certificates constitute a firm, moral obligation of such university and college.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Louisiana.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Senator from Missouri proposes, on page 42, line 20, to insert a new subsection, as follows:

(b) Section 605 of the Revenue Act of 1932 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"For the purposes of this section an assembler of completely finished component parts of jewelry is not deemed a manufacturer or producer: Provided, however, That completely finished component parts of jewelry purchased by an assembler tax free subsequent to June 21, 1932, and prior to the effective date of this amendment, shall be subject to the tax under this section upon sale thereof by the assembler."

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, the amendment has been submitted to the Chairman of the Committee on Finance and he has said that he had no objection to it going to conference.

Mr. HARRISON. As I understand, there is no loss of revenue involved.

Mr. CLARK. No; there is not. Under the manufacturers' sales tax on jewelry, by reason of a ruling of the Department, retail jewelers who simply assemble completely manufactured articles are taxed as manufacturers. It does not make any difference to the Government whether the original manufacturer has to pay the tax or whether the retailer has to pay it. To illustrate: A retail jeweler who puts a completely finished stone in a completely manufactured ring would be taxed under the ruling of the Department as a manufacturer and the original manufacturer would not be taxed. A retail jeweler who simply took a completely manufactured set of watch works and put them in a completely manufactured watchcase would have to pay the tax.

The amendment provides that in the case of retailers who now have in their possession component parts which have not heretofore paid the tax under the present ruling of the Department, they shall not be exempted from payment of the tax in the future. It is simply a question of whether the tax shall be collected from two or three thousand manufacturers or from 30,000 or 40,000 retail jewelers.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Missouri. [Putting the question.] The noes seem to have it.

Mr. CLARK. I ask for a division.

On a division, the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, have all the committee amendments been disposed of?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. The next amendment of the Committee on Finance is on page 43, line 10——

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, there seems to have been a completion of the title and I want to offer an amendment to this title.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from Texas is in order.

Mr. CONNALLY. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk. I hope there will be no objection to it. The Chairman of the Finance Committee is not averse to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 19, line 3——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Before the amendment of the Senator from Texas can be considered, the vote by which the committee amendment was agreed to will have to be reconsidered.

Mr. CONNALLY. I ask unanimous consent to reconsider the vote by which the committee amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CLARK in the chair). The Senator from Texas asks unanimous consent to reconsider the vote by which the amendment on page 19, line 3, was agreed to. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will state the amendment offered by the Senator from Texas.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 19, line 3, after the word "plants", insert the words "and gas-distribution plants."

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, this, including many other public utilities——

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, let me interrupt the Senator from Texas to say that I have no objection to his amendment going to conference. Let us vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Texas.

The amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Senator from Louisiana proposes to insert at the proper place in the bill the following:

The President, through the Secretary of War and with the consent of the lessee, may in his discretion and in such manner as he may consider desirable reduce the consideration or obligation and otherwise modify the terms, consideration, and stipulations of any lease now or hereafter entered into pursuant to the provisions of the acts of Congress approved July 28, 1892 (27 Stat.L. 321; U.S.C., title 40, sec. 303), July 11, 1919 (41 Stat.L. 129; U.S.C., title 10, sec. 1263), and June 30, 1932 (47 Stat.L. 412), whenever it appears that full performance of lessee's obligations under such contract of lease will result in default by, or impose undue hardship upon, the lessee.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I have no objection to the amendment going to conference. Let us vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Louisiana.

The amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, under the heading "Title III—Amendments to Emergency Relief and Construction Act and Miscellaneous Provisions", on page 43, line 5, after the word "which", to strike out "Administrator has" and insert "two members of the Board have", and in line 10, after the word "the", to strike out "Administrator" and insert "Board", so as to read:

SEC. 301. After the expiration of 10 days after the date upon which two members of the Board have qualified and taken office, (1) no application shall be approved by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation under the provisions of subsection (a) of section 201 of the Emergency Relief and Construction Act of 1932, as amended, and (2) the Board shall have access to all applications, files, and records of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation relating to loans and contracts and the administration of funds under such subsection.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Decrease of borrowing power of Reconstruction Finance Corporation", on page 44, line 4, after the word "by", to strike out "$1,200,000,000" and insert "$400,000,000", so as to read:

SEC. 302. The amount of notes, debentures, bonds, or other such obligations which the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is authorized and empowered under section 9 of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended, to have outstanding at any one time is decreased by $400,000,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 44, after line 4, to insert:

LOANS FOR MINERAL-RIGHTS POOLS

SEC. 303. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is authorized and empowered to make adequately secured loans, based on mineral acreage, and self-liquidating in character, to recognized and established managing agencies of farmers' cooperative mineral-rights pools not engaged in drilling or mining operations, said loans to be made for the purpose of defraying the cost of organizing such pools.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection the clerks will be authorized to renumber the sections in the bill. That completes the committee amendments. The question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I desire to have only a few moments.

This bill, in my opinion, has many very commendable features, but it has in it also some very objectionable features. Because of its having been suggested and recommended by our President, in whom I have confidence, and who I realize is laboring desperately and with ability in an effort to restore our country to its old-time prosperity and to bring back happiness and contentment among the American people, I feel disposed to support the legislation.

I think we are making a mistake, however, if it is the purpose or intention of the Senate to adjourn without considering certain important legislation in which millions and millions of American citizens are involved, millons of whom are entitled to some relief.

I thought of offering here tonight as an amendment the bankruptcy bill in behalf of cities and towns, which passed the House on yesterday. Had I done that, however, it would have caused a delay of probably 1½ or 2 days. I should be willing to devote that time to the performance of my duty toward the people who constitute these governmental subdivisions of our country, who are sorely in need of some legislation at the hands of Congress.

The House of Representatives on yesterday did its duty. It passed a splendid measure for this purpose. That measure has arrived in the Senate and has been referred to a committee. Now, instead of the Senate taking up this measure and trying to do something for the cities and other subdivisions throughout this country that will relieve them from the great burden and hardship of the debts which are impending upon them, Congress is rushing pell-mell, helter-skelter, to get an adjournment and ignoring the interests of the people of these cities and of these towns who need relief.

I do not approve of that. Other Senators may do as they please; but as far as I am concerned I feel that it is my duty, if I can get a sufficient number of Senators to cooperate with me, to stay here and deal with that problem.

In the very early part of this session of Congress there was no delay or tardiness in providing revised and enlarged bankruptcy laws for the purpose of accommodating the transportation lines of our country.

Mr. HEBERT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Rhode Island?

Mr. TRAMMELL. I yield for a question.

Mr. HEBERT. For the information of the Senator, I may say that the bill to which he alludes has been referred to the Judiciary Committee of the Senate, and by it has been referred to a subcommittee, which proposes to hold a hearing on it tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I appreciate very much the splendid and expeditious manner in which the bill is being handled by the distinguished chairman of the committee, and his forethought in appointing a subcommittee, and appreciate the action of the subcommittee in meeting so promptly; but even in spite of all that diligence, of course, we cannot consider the measure if Congress is going to adjourn tomorrow. I should like very much to try to do something to secure action by the Senate on the bill.

I think the taxpayers in the cities and the different subdivisions of the different States and counties of America are deserving of some consideration, as well as the transportation companies of this country; yet, while with lightning-like speed, as it were, legislation was passed here in the early days of the session to provide a remedy in the nature of a change and enlargement of the bankruptcy laws so as to accommodate the situation of the transportation companies, the poor taxpayer back in your home town or city, or my home town or city, needing urgently to be relieved of the bonded indebtedness that is pressing down upon him, has had no special provision made for him under the bankruptcy law. We have the opportunity, if the Congress will just remain in session a few days longer, to do something for his relief.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President——

Mr. TRAMMELL. I yield to the Senator from Michigan for a question.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I desire cordially to agree with the Senator's statement that it is utterly necessary for this legislation to be passed before Congress adjourns.

Mr. TRAMMELL. It should be passed.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I remind the Senator that a similar bill, which still had a great deal of controversy in it, was reported within 48 hours at the close of the last session; and I have confidence that we may yet get a report tomorrow, and action upon this bill before we adjourn, even if we adjourn tomorrow night.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I shall be very thankful if we do that.

I may mention some other matters that are upon my heart. There is the matter of a bank guarantee or insurance. I think the best we could obtain was the provisions placed in the bill which passed the Senate a week or two ago; and yet it seems that Congress is going to adjourn, if some can direct what shall be done, without giving the American people anything in the nature of a bank guarantee or insurance, either as to national banks or as to State banks. I think that is one of the greatest needs of the day; and Congressmen and Senators could well afford to spend a week or two more working in Washington, when they are being paid for an entire year's service, trying to correct that situation.

Another condition which exists—I am going to enumerate these things, and then I am going to stop—is this: Under the regulations promulgated by the Veterans' Bureau in regard to the veterans of our country, there is still a deplorable condition as to hundreds and thousands of them. Is Congress going supinely to fold its arms and leave Washington without seeing that laws are enacted that will do justice by these veterans of the World War and of the Spanish-American War—men who have always been patriots and defenders of their Nation? Are we going to ignore them? Are we going to permit a veteran such as I saw yesterday in the corridor outside the Senate Chamber with both legs off, 1 arm gone, and 3 fingers off 1 hand, having been amputated, to have to sleep in the streets, and his family to go in poverty and in distress because his compensation has been cut from $200 to $20 a month, and his attendant has been denied him?

I think Congress has some serious problems still confronting it; and I hope we shall remain in session long enough at least to consider them.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. REED and other Senators called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LEWIS (when Mr. McADOO's name was called). I rise to announce the absence of the Senator from California [Mr. McADOO], and to state that he is paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. DALE]. Were the Senator from California to cast his vote, I am informed that it would be "yea." I have no information as to how the Senator from Vermont would vote.

Mr. McNARY (when his name was called). On this question I am advised that my general pair, the Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER], has been specially paired, and I am therefore at liberty to vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. WHEELER (when his name was called). On this question I have a pair with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS]. If he were present, he would vote "nay", and if I were at liberty to vote I should vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. KING. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SCHALL], and withhold my vote.

Mr. LEWIS. I rise to announce the absence of the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] attending the Economic Conference in London, there to remain for the rest of the session.

I desire also to announce that the Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER] has a special pair on this question with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD]. If present, the Senator from Florida would vote "yea", and the Senator from Virginia would vote "nay."

Mr. LONG (after having voted in the negative). Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. How should a vote be cast when a Senator is half against and half in favor of a bill?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator would have to cut himself in two, which would be difficult to do. [Laughter.]

Mr. LONG. I desire to change my vote from "nay" to "yea."

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I should like to inquire if that vote represents the Senator's upper or lower half? [Laughter.]

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, if it were the Senator from West Virginia, it would not make any difference which it was. [Laughter.]

Mr. NEELY. Because either would be better than either half of the Senator from Louisiana. [Laughter.]

Mr. HEBERT. Mr. President, I announce that the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS] has a general pair with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN]. I am not informed how either of those Senators would vote on this question.

The result was announced—yeas 58, nays 24, as follows:

YEAS—58

Adams	Coolidge	Lewis	Robinson, Ind.
Ashurst	Copeland	Lonergan	Russell
Bachman	Costigan	Long	Sheppard
Bailey	Cutting	McCarran	Shipstead
Bankhead	Dieterich	McGill	Steiwer
Barkley	Dill	McKellar	Stephens
Black	Duffy	McNary	Thomas, Okla.
Bone	Erickson	Murphy	Thomas, Utah
Bratton	Frazier	Neely	Thompson
Brown	George	Norris	Trammell
Bulkley	Harrison	Nye	Van Nuys
Bulow	Hayden	Overton	Wagner
Byrnes	Johnson	Pope	Walsh
Capper	Kendrick	Reynolds
Caraway	La Follette	Robinson, Ark.

NAYS—24

Austin	Clark	Goldsborough	Hatfield
Barbour	Connally	Gore	Hebert
Borah	Dickinson	Hale	Kean
Carey	Fess	Hastings	Keyes

Metcalf	Reed	Tydings	Walcott
Patterson	Townsend	Vandenberg	White

NOT VOTING—14

Byrd	Fletcher	McAdoo	Smith
Couzens	Glass	Norbeck	Wheeler
Dale	King	Pittman
Davis	Logan	Schall

So the bill was passed.

Mr. HARRISON. I ask unanimous consent that there may be a reprint of the bill with the amendments numbered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. HARRISON. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, ask for a conference with the House on the bill and amendments, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Vice President appointed Mr. HARRISON, Mr. KING, Mr. GEORGE, Mr. REED, and Mr. KEYES conferees on the part of the Senate.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] has requested me to make a motion. After the motion shall be disposed of, which it is intended shall be made at once, there will be a brief executive session, and then I shall move that the Senate take a recess.

The VICE PRESIDENT. May the Chair call the attention of the Senator to the fact that there are on the desk a conference report and amendments of the House of Representatives to a Senate bill, in which the Chair understands the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BULKLEY] and the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STEPHENS], respectively, desire disposed of. The Chair is informed that they will require no debate.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Very well.

CONSTRUCTION AND INSPECTION OF BOILERS, UNFIRED PRESSURE VESSELS, ETC.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1129) to amend sections 361, 392, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, and 412 of title 46 of the United States Code relating to the construction and inspection of boilers, unfired pressure vessels, and the appurtenances thereof, which were, on page 1, line 3, after "sections", to strike out all down to and including "Code" in line 4 and insert "4399, 4418, 4428, 4429, 4430, 4431, 4432, 4433, and 4434 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (U.S.C., title 46, secs. 361, 392, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, and 412)"; on page 1, line 6, to strike out "361" and insert "4399"; on page 2, line 4, to strike out "392" and insert "4418"; on page 2, line 24, to strike out "406" and insert "4428"; on page 3, line 4, to strike out "407" and insert "4429"; on page 4, line 9, to strike out "construed" and insert "constructed"; on page 4, line 13, to strike out "408" and insert "4430"; on page 4, line 15, to strike out "the"; on page 5, line 24, to strike out "409" and insert "4431"; on page 6, line 9, to strike out "410" and insert "4432"; on page 6, line 20, to strike out "411" and insert "4433"; on page 7, line 8, to strike out "412" and insert "4434"; and to amend the title so as to read: "An act to amend sections 4399, 4418, 4428, 4429, 4430, 4431, 4432, 4433, and 4434 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, relating to the construction and inspection of boilers, unfired pressure vessels, and the appurtenances thereof."

Mr. STEPHENS. Mr. President, I move that the Senate concur in the House amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

LOANS TO HOME OWNERS—CONFERENCE REPORT

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the conference report on the House bill 5240, which was submitted by Mr. BULKLEY on the 8th instant, and appears at pages 5229 to 5232 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the report is agreed to.

FARM CREDIT ADMINISTRATION

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 5790.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I should like to inquire what the bill is before voting on the question of proceeding to its consideration.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, it is the bill (H.R. 5790) to provide for organizations within the Farm Credit Administration to make loans for the production and marketing of agricultural products, to amend the Federal Farm Loan Act, to amend the Agricultural Marketing Act, to provide a market for obligations of the United States, and for other purposes.

It is a bill to legalize and provide for organizations in the Farm Credit Administration. I do not ask for the consideration of the bill at this time, but if the motion to proceed to its consideration shall prevail, it is my purpose then to move an executive session.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Arkansas.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H.R. 5790) to provide for organizations within the Farm Credit Administration to make loans for the production and marketing of agricultural products, to amend the Federal Farm Loan Act, to amend the Agricultural Marketing Act, to provide a market for obligations of the United States, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Banking and Currency, with amendments.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

LOANS TO HOME OWNERS

Mr. REYNOLDS presented a letter from the High Point (N.C.) Chamber of Commerce, signed by F. J. Sizemore, secretary-treasurer, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

HIGH POINT, N.C., June 6, 1933.

Senator ROBERT R. REYNOLDS,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR: I note from the morning newspaper that the Senate passed the small home owners' loan bill, and that it will be sent to the House for concurrence in some of the changes.

The passage of this bill and the administration of same, if carried out according to the bill, will mean a great thing to many small-home owners.

I hardly think there is any question about this bill becoming a law this week.

Even in the face of the almost sure passage of this bill, some of the mortgage holders are proceeding with foreclosures, even though the home owner has offered to go as far as is humanly possible to make the mortgage holder safe and to pay accrued interest.

The President has already stated, according to news dispatches, that he would ask for a moratorium on foreclosures immediately upon passage of this bill.

I hope that you will get word to the President asking that he include in his request, relief for those upon which foreclosure has already been started.

As an illustration of what many of us are up against, the holders of my mortgage has stated that they will start foreclosure tomorrow. It is too bad that this extra expense and this embarrassment is being placed on me and it would be still worse, should the foreclosure proceedings be carried through to a sale before the machinery necessary under the bill is organized and functioning.

Such cases as mine is why I think the President should include in his proclamation relief for those where foreclosure proceedings have been started.

I greatly appreciate the interest you have shown in my several letters, and many others in this community join me in this. I have had dozens of people discuss this matter with me since it was known that we had interested ourselves in this particular bill. I have read your letters to every one of the inquirers.

Yours very truly,

HIGH POINT CHAMBER OF COMMERCE,
F. J. SIZEMORE, Secretary-Treasurer.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The VICE PRESIDENT. Reports of committees are in order.

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nomination of Harrison Parkman, of Kansas, to be purchasing agent for the Post Office Department, vice Robert S. Regar, which was ordered to be placed on the calendar.

Mr. KING, from the Committee on Finance, reported favorably sundry nominations of collectors of customs and collectors of internal revenue, which were ordered to be placed on the calendar.

He also, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of Harold M. Stephens, of Utah, to be Assistant Attorney General, to fill an existing vacancy, which was ordered to be placed on the calendar.

Mr. GEORGE, from the Committee on Finance, reported favorably the nomination of William E. Page, of Columbus, Ga., to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Georgia, in place of Josiah T. Rose, which was ordered to be placed on the calendar.

Mr. DILL, from the Committee on Interstate Commerce, reported favorably the following nominations, which were ordered to be placed on the calendar:

Vincent Y. Dallman, of Illinois, to be a member of the Board of Mediation for a term expiring 5 years after January 1, 1933, vice G. Wallace W. Hanger, term expired;

Basil Manly, of the District of Columbia, to be a member of the Federal Power Commission for a term of 5 years from June 22, 1933, vice Ralph B. Williamson, deceased;

Raymond B. Stevens, of New Hampshire, to be Federal Trade Commissioner for the term expiring September 25, 1933, vice Edgar A. McCulloch, deceased; and Carroll Miller, of Pennsylvania, to be an Interstate Commerce Commissioner for a term expiring December 31, 1939, vice Ernest I. Lewis.

He also, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of Carl L. Sackett, of Wyoming, to be United States attorney, district of Wyoming, to succeed A. D. Walton, resigned, which was ordered to be placed on the calendar.

Mr. BARKLEY, from the Committee on Banking and Currency, reported favorably the nomination of C. B. Merriam, of Kansas, to be a member of the board of directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for the unexpired portion of the term of 2 years from January 22, 1932, vice Charles A. Miller, which was ordered to be placed on the calendar.

He also (for Mr. FLETCHER), from the same committee, reported favorably the nomination of Walter H. Newton, of Minnesota, to be a member of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board for the unexpired portion of the term of 2 years from July 22, 1932, vice H. Morton Bodfish, which was ordered to be placed on the calendar.

Mr. NEELY, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of William Stanley, of Maryland, to be Assistant to the Attorney General, vice John Lord O'Brian, resigned, which was ordered to be placed on the calendar.

Mr. VAN NUYS, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of Louis FitzHenry, of Illinois, to be United States circuit judge, seventh circuit, to succeed George T. Page, retired, which was ordered to be placed on the calendar.

Mr. SHEPPARD, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported favorably sundry nominations of transfers, appointments, and promotions in the Army, which were ordered to be placed on the calendar.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas, from the Committee on Foreign Relations reported favorably the following nominations, which were ordered to be placed on the calendar:

Francis White, of Maryland, now an Assistant Secretary of State, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to Czechoslovakia.

Robert P. Skinner, of Ohio, now Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Estonia, to be Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to Turkey.

Alvin Mansfield Owsley, of Texas, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to Rumania.

John Flournoy Montgomery, of California, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to Hungary.

Robert Granville Caldwell, of Texas, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to Portugal.

Mr. McNARY (for Mr. STEIWER), reported favorably from the Committee on Banking and Currency the nomination of Russell Hawkins, of Oregon, to be a member of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board for the unexpired portion of the term of 4 years from July 22, 1932, vice C. B. Merriam, which was ordered to be placed on the calendar.

Mr. ASHURST, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of William J. Barker, of New Mexico, to be United States attorney, district of New Mexico, to succeed Hugh B. Woodward, term expired, which was ordered to be placed on the calendar.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, from the Committee on the Judiciary I report favorably the nomination of Carl C. Donaugh, of Oregon, to be United States attorney for that State, and I call the attention of the Senator from Oregon to it. It is a matter of some emergency, and I am going to ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the nomination. Likewise there is an emergency existing in the case of a nomination from Texas.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, until we shall have taken action on the calendar, I will have to object.

Mr. ASHURST. Very well. I will withhold the request for the moment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The nomination reported by the Senator from Arizona will be placed on the calendar.

Mr. STEPHENS, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of Bertram Money Bates, Jr., of Tennessee, to be United States marshal for the western district of Tennessee, which was ordered placed on the calendar.

He also, from the same committee, reported the nomination of William McClanahan, of Tennessee, to be United States attorney for the western district of Tennessee, which was ordered placed on the calendar.

Mr. McCARRAN (for Mr. LOGAN), from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of South Trimble, Jr., of Kentucky, to be Solicitor for the Department of Commerce, to succeed E. F. Morgan, resigned, which was ordered placed on the calendar.

Mr. LONG, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of Frank J. Wideman, of Florida, to be Assistant Attorney General, which was ordered to be placed on the calendar.

Mr. HARRISON, from the Committee on Finance, reported favorably the nomination of Peter J. Haggerty, of San Francisco, Calif., to be superintendent of the United States Mint at San Francisco, Calif., which was ordered placed on the calendar.

He also, from the same committee, reported favorably sundry nominations of collectors of customs and collectors of internal revenue, which were ordered to be placed on the calendar.

TENNESSEE VALEY AUTHORITY

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there be no further reports of committees, the calendar is in order. The clerk will state the first nomination on the calendar.

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Harcourt Alexander Morgan, of Tennessee, to be member of the board of directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority for the term expiring 6 years after May 18, 1933.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, may I ask that that nomination go over?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the nomination being confirmed?

Mr. STEPHENS. I object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I inquire if that is the nomination of a member of the board of directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is.

Mr. McKELLAR. I inquire who objected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STEPHENS] objected, and also the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN].

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, the nomination comes to a vote, then. The question before the Senate is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination?

The VICE PRESIDENT. That is in order. The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination? [Putting the question.]

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I beg the Chair's pardon, but I was occupied with another matter. Will the Chair kindly state what the question is?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination?

Mr. STEPHENS. Mr. President, what nomination?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The nomination of Mr. Morgan, of Tennessee, to be member of the board of directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Mr. STEPHENS. I object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question before the Senate is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination? One objection does not prevail in this instance.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, as to the nomination of Mr. Morgan, I object to it and ask that it go over.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, the objection does not lie.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Not at all.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. This is the regular order of procedure.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator is correct.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, certain matters have come to my attention. I have taken them up with the Senator from Nebraska. Perhaps I may be entirely content by tomorrow, but I am making an investigation, and I think for the nomination to go over would do no harm.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I had a talk with the Senator from Nevada. I supposed this was perfectly satisfactory to him. I do not want to be put in the attitude of having any of these nominations go over, so far as I can help it, until the Senate shall have finally adjourned.

Mr. McCARRAN. I do not intend to do that.

Mr. NORRIS. If the Senator will agree that at some stipulated time tomorrow we may vote on the question of confirming the nomination, I will not have any objection.

Mr. McCARRAN. I will agree to that.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, can we not have a unanimous-consent agreement to that effect?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Nevada has the floor. Does he yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President——

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I am willing to take it up tonight, but the Senator from Nevada is not and wants to discuss it.

Mr. McCARRAN. I am not willing to take it up tonight, and I ask unanimous consent that it may go over for the purpose of an investigation. I will say, in all sincerity, that I will be ready to act tomorrow.

Mr. NORRIS. That might mean several weeks.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I ask unanimous consent that at not later than 2 o'clock tomorrow the Senate shall proceed to the consideration of executive business, and that at not later than 3 o'clock the Senate shall proceed to vote on the nomination.

Mr. McCARRAN. That is satisfactory to me.

Mr. STEPHENS. I object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Mississippi objects. The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I have never yet known an instance in the Senate where a request has been made that a nomination just reported go over 1 day that objection was made.

I have no interest in this matter; so far as I know, the nominee is competent; and yet it does seem to me that it is violating the traditions and procedure of the Senate, where the objectors only ask that a nomination go over for a day, that the request should be denied. The nomination has just come in this evening. I do not think it is quite in harmony with our former procedure. If there were any purpose of delay and prevent a vote, that would be one thing.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, there is no disposition to delay. I am willing to take the nomination up right now. I am perfectly willing to go ahead now or I am willing that it shall go over until tomorrow; but unless there is an agreement to vote at a particular time, the Senator knows what it would mean if the Senate is going to adjourn tomorrow.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. It would mean that it would become imperative that an extraordinary session of the Senate be convened for some time in the future.

Mr. NORRIS. This Board will not be able to organize unless confirmation takes place, and, if the Senate adjourns without action, the whole thing will be held in the air. I am not objecting to anything reasonable. The Senator from Nevada and I will have no trouble about this. He is agreeable to a vote being taken tomorrow.

Mr. McCARRAN. Certainly; and I understand the Senate will be in session tomorrow. Am I right?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. That is correct.

Mr. NORRIS. But unless we agree to an hour for a vote tomorrow it will be very easy to start a filibuster toward evening tomorrow and prevent the confirmation taking place.

Mr. McCARRAN. I will say that so far as I am concerned there will be no filibuster; but I am sincere in the matter.

Mr. NORRIS. I do not doubt that a particle; but the Senator from Mississippi objects to any specific time for taking a vote, and I do not want to be caught in that kind of a trap.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination? [Putting the question.] The ayes have it, and the nomination is confirmed.

Mr. STEPHENS. Mr. President, I ask for a yea-and-nay vote.

Mr. HARRISON. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Carey	Hastings	Neely
Ashurst	Clark	Hatfield	Norris
Austin	Connally	Hayden	Nye
Bachman	Coolidge	Hebert	Overton
Bailey	Copeland	Kean	Patterson
Bankhead	Costigan	Kendrick	Pope
Barbour	Cutting	Keyes	Reed
Barkley	Dickinson	King	Reynolds
Black	Dieterich	La Follette	Robinson, Ark.
Bone	Dill	Lewis	Robinson, Ind.
Bratton	Duffy	Lonergan	Russell
Brown	Erickson	Long	Sheppard
Bulkley	Fess	McCarran	Shipstead
Bulow	Frazier	McGill	Smith
Byrd	George	McKellar	Steiwer
Byrnes	Goldsborough	McNary	Stephens
Capper	Hale	Metcalf	Thomas, Okla.
Caraway	Harrison	Murphy	Thomas, Utah

Thompson	Tydings	Wagner	Wheeler
Townsend	Vandenberg	Walcott	White
Trammell	Van Nuys	Walsh

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-three Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I am going to submit a unanimous-consent request, and I ask the attention of Senators, particularly the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STEPHENS].

I ask unanimous consent that the vote by which the nomination of Harcourt Alexander Morgan, of Tennessee, was confirmed be reconsidered; that at 2 o'clock tomorrow the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business; and that at not later than the hour of 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon the Senate proceed to vote successively and without further debate upon the nominations of Harcourt Alexander Morgan, of Tennessee, and David E. Lilienthal, of Wisconsin.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. STEPHENS. Mr. President, I have no objection. I am glad to yield to the suggestion of the Senator from Arkansas.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arkansas? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The clerk will state the next order of business on the calendar.

DIPLOMATIC AND FOREIGN SERVICE

The Chief Clerk read the names of William F. Cavenaugh, Hooker A. Doolittle, Louis G. Dreyfus, Jr., Clarence E. Gauss, and Bernard Gufler to be secretaries, Diplomatic Service.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nominations are confirmed.

That completes the calendar.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, from the Committee on the Judiciary I report back favorably the nomination of Clyde O. Eastus, of Texas, to be United States attorney for the northern district of Texas; and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Nevada asks unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of a nomination, which the clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Clyde O. Eastus, of Texas, to be United States attorney for the northern district of Texas.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the nomination?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I did not understand the request of the Senator from Nevada because there is so much confusion in the Chamber.

Mr. McCARRAN. I have presented the report of the Judiciary Committee on Mr. Eastus to be United States attorney for the northern district of Texas, and I have asked for immediate consideration of the nomination.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, would it not be well to let it go over until tomorrow, when we are to have an executive session?

Mr. McCARRAN. I have no objection, except that I should like to have it disposed of.

Mr. McNARY. I appreciate the Senator's desire. There is a nomination from my own State that will be reported by the Senator from Arizona, in which I am likewise interested; but I think the better practice is to have them go over until tomorrow.

Mr. McCARRAN. Very well.

RECESS

The Senate resumed legislative session.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I move that the Senate take a recess until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 11 o'clock and 3 minutes p.m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Saturday, June 10, 1933, at 10 o'clock a.m.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate June 9 (legislative day of June 6), 1933

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

Patrick T. Stone, of Wisconsin, to be United States district judge for the western district of Wisconsin, to succeed Claude Z. Luse, deceased.

UNITED STATES ATTORNEYS

Charles C. Wyche, of South Carolina, to be United States attorney, western district of South Carolina, to succeed Joseph A. Tolbert, term expired.

Joseph A. McNamara, of Vermont, to be United States attorney, district of Vermont, to succeed Harry B. Amey, term expired.

MEMBERS OF THE FEDERAL HOME LOAN BANK

Russell Hawkins, of Oregon, to be a member of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board for the unexpired portion of the term of 4 years from July 22, 1932, vice C. B. Merriam.

John H. Fahey, of Massachusetts, to be a member of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board for the unexpired portion of the term of 3 years from July 22, 1932, vice Nathan Adams.

MEMBERS OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION

C. B. Merriam, of Kansas, to be a member of the board of directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for the unexpired portion of the term of 2 years from January 22, 1932, vice Charles A. Miller.

John J. Blaine, of Wisconsin, to be a member of the board of directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for the unexpired term of 2 years from January 22, 1932, vice Atlee Pomerene.

MEMBER OF THE FEDERAL POWER COMMISSION

Basil Manly, of the District of Columbia, to be a member of the Federal Power Commission for a term of 5 years from June 22, 1933, vice Ralph B. Williamson, deceased.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSIONER

Raymond B. Stevens, of New Hampshire, to be Federal Trade Commissioner for the term expiring September 25, 1933, vice Edgar A. McCulloch, deceased.

MEMBER OF THE BOARD OF MEDIATION

Vincent Y. Dallman, of Illinois, to be a member of the Board of Mediation for a term expiring 5 years after January 1, 1933, vice G. Wallace W. Hanger, term expired.

MEMBER OF THE UNITED STATES EMPLOYEES' COMPENSATION COMMISSION

Jewell W. Swofford, of Missouri, to be a member of the United States Employees' Compensation Commission for a term of 6 years from March 15, 1933, vice Bessie Parker Brueggeman.

COMPTROLLER, BUREAU OF ACCOUNTS, POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

William L. Slattery, of Massachusetts, to be Comptroller, Bureau of Accounts, Post Office Department, vice William E. Buffington.

COLLECTORS OF INTERNAL REVENUE

Fred H. Kanne, of Honolulu, Hawaii, to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Hawaii, in place of Albert H. Tarleton.

John R. T. Viley, of Idaho, to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Idaho, in place of Evan Evans.

Alvin F. Fix, of York, Pa., to be collector of internal revenue for the first district of Pennsylvania, in place of Albert H. Ladner, Jr.

Thomas K. Cassidy, of Gillette, Wyo., to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Wyoming, in place of Marshall S. Reynolds.

John C. Bowen, of Seattle, Wash., to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Washington, in place of Burns Poe.

Will H. Smith, of Indianapolis, Ind., to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Indiana, in place of Everett E. Neal.

Ralph Nicholas, of Fort Collins, Colo., to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Colorado, in place of Frank W. Howbert.

Fred C. Martin, of Bennington, Vt., to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Vermont, to fill an existing vacancy.

Alexander S. Walker, of Texas, to be collector of internal revenue for the first district of Texas, in place of James W. Bass.

William A. Thomas, of Dallas, Tex., to be collector of internal revenue for the second district of Texas, in place of George C. Hopkins.

Robert M. Cooper, of Wisacky, S.C., to be collector of internal revenue for the district of South Carolina, to fill an existing vacancy.

Steven P. Vidal, of Gallup, N.Mex., to be collector of internal revenue for the district of New Mexico, in place of Benigno C. Hornandez.

Harry D. Baker, of Wichita, Kans., to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Kansas, in place of Harvey H. Motter.

Henry Clifford Jones, of Carnegie, Okla., to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Oklahoma, in place of Acel C. Alexander.

Charles D. Huston, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Iowa, in place of Gerald A. Jewett.

Charles H. Robertson, of Hillsboro, N.C., to be collector of internal revenue for the district of North Carolina, in place of Gilliam Grissom.

COLLECTORS OF CUSTOMS

Saul Haas, of Seattle, Wash., to be collector of customs for customs-collection district no. 30, with headquarters at Seattle, Wash., in place of George D. Hubbard.

Charles O. Dunbar, of Santa Rosa, Calif., to be collector of customs for customs-collection district no. 28, with headquarters at San Francisco, Calif., in place of William B. Hamilton.

Verda Allison Wright, of Huntington, Tenn., to be collector of customs for customs-collection district no. 43, with headquarters at Memphis, Tenn., in place of Mrs. Eddie McCall Priest.

Joseph H. Lyons, of Mobile, Ala., to be collector of customs for customs-collection district no. 19, with headquarters at Mobile, Ala., in place of Joseph C. Swann.

Fred C. Pabst, of Galveston, Tex., to be collector of customs for customs collection district no. 22, with headquarters at Galveston, Tex., in place of Robert B. Morris.

John O'Keefe, of Cavalier, N.Dak., to be collector of customs for customs-collection district no. 34, with headquarters at Pembina, N.Dak., to fill an existing vacancy.

Joseph A. Maynard, of Massachusetts, to be collector of customs for customs-collection district no. 4, with headquarters at Boston, Mass., in place of Willfred W. Lufkin.

REGISTER OF THE LAND OFFICE

Maurice F. Miera, of New Mexico, to be register of the land office at Santa Fe, N.Mex., vice Alfred M. Bergere.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY

Admiral William H. Standley to be Chief of Naval Operations in the Department of the Navy with the rank of admiral, for a term of 4 years, from the 1st day of July 1933.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate June 9 (legislative day of June 6), 1933

SECRETARIES IN THE DIPLOMATIC SERVICE

William F. Cavenaugh
Hooker A. Doolittle
Louis G. Dreyfus, Jr.
Clarence E. Gauss
Bernard Gufler

WITHDRAWAL

Executive nomination withdrawn June 9 (legislative day of June 6), 1933

MEMBER OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION

Russell Hawkins, of Oregon, to be a member of the board of directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for the unexpired portion of the term of 2 years from January 22, 1932.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

FRIDAY, JUNE 9, 1933

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, may we live this day which Thou hast given us as we should, with grateful hearts and with a healthy faith that Thou dost all things well. We thank Thee that Thou dost still whisper to willing minds. O let not our weakness eclipse the luster of Thy light. Impress us, gracious Lord, that a narrow faith and a narrow hope fetter our spirits. Be with us, Thou who didst love the lilies of the field and the fowls of the air. Hear us, O Thou who answerest the laborer's appeal: "Raise the stone and thou shalt find Me; cleave the wood, and there am I." Grant us, Heavenly Father, when the day is done that personal satisfaction, that we have omitted no duty which is due our fellow countrymen. O may we harken unto the pathetic music made up of the mingled joy and sorrow of our brother men and claim the high privilege of serving them. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Horne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4589) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of such District for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed a bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 1783. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Overseas Road and Toll Bridge District, a political subdivision of the State of Florida, to construct, maintain, and operate bridges across the navigable waters in Monroe County, Fla., from Lower Matecumbe Key to No Name Key.

INVESTIGATION OF OFFICIAL CONDUCT OF HALSTED L. RITTER

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I present a privileged report from the Committee on Accounts for immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 172

Resolved, That the expenses of conducting the investigation authorized by House Resolution 163, authorizing the Judiciary Committee to investigate the official conduct of Halsted L. Ritter, a district judge of the United States for the southern district of Florida, including such printing and binding and the employment of such clerical, stenographic, and other assistance as the committee may deem necessary, and all other expenditures, shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House on vouchers authorized by the committee signed by the chairman thereof and approved by the Committee on Accounts, but shall not exceed $5,000.

With the following committee amendment:

In line 11, strike out "$5,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$2,500."

Mr. SNELL. Is the gentleman presenting this as a privileged resolution from the Committee on Accounts?

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Yes. It is in the usual form and at the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUM-

NERS], Chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, the amount has been reduced from $5,000 to $2,500 to carry out the order of the House.

Mr. SNELL. Have you not had experience enough in investigating Federal judges and throwing money away along that line?

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. That is for the House to decide.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The resolution was agreed to.

EMERGENCY RAILROAD TRANSPORTATION BILL

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I present a conference report on the bill (S. 1580) to relieve the existing national emergency in relation to interstate railroad transportation, and to amend sections 5, 15a, and 19a of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 1580) to relieve the existing national emergency in relation to interstate railroad transportation, and to amend sections 5, 15a, and 19a of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following:

"That this act may be cited as the 'Emergency Railroad Transportation Act, 1933.'

"TITLE I—EMERGENCY POWERS

"SECTION 1. As used in this title—

"(a) The term 'Commission' means the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"(b) The term 'Coordinator' means the Federal Coordinator of Transportation hereinafter provided for.

"(c) The term 'committee' means any one of the regional coordinating committees hereinafter provided for.

"(d) The term 'carrier' means any common carrier by railroad subject to the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, including any receiver or trustee thereof.

"(e) The term 'subsidiary' means any company which is directly or indirectly controlled by, or affiliated with, any carrier or carriers. For the purpose of the foregoing definition a company shall be deemed to be affiliated with a carrier if so affiliated within the meaning of paragraph (8) of section 5 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended by this act.

"(f) The term 'employee' includes every person in the service of a carrier (subject to its continuing authority to supervise and direct the manner of rendition of his service) who performs any work defined as that of an employee or subordinate official in accordance with the provisions of the Railway Labor Act.

"(g) The term 'State commission' means the commission, board, or official, by whatever name designated, exercising power to regulate the rates or service of common carriers by railroad under the laws of any State.

"SEC. 2. In order to foster and protect interstate commerce in relation to railroad transportation by preventing and relieving obstructions and burdens thereon resulting from the present acute economic emergency, and in order to safeguard and maintain an adequate national system of transportation, there is hereby created the office of Federal Coordinator of Transportation, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, or be designated by the President from the membership of the Commission. If so designated, the Coordinator shall be relieved from other duties as Commissioner during his term of service to such extent as the President may direct; except that the Coordinator shall not sit as a member of the Commission in any proceedings for the review or suspension of any order issued by him as Coordinator. The Coordinator shall have such powers and duties as are hereinafter set forth and prescribed, and may, with the approval of the President, and without regard to the Civil Service laws and the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, appoint and fix the compensation of such assistants and agents, in addition to the assistance provided by the Commission, as may be necessary to the performance of his duties under this act. The office of the Coordinator shall be in Washington, D.C., and the Commission shall provide such office space, facilities, and assistance as he may request and it is able to furnish. The Coordinator shall receive such compensation as the President shall fix, except that if designated from the Commission, he shall receive no compensation in addition to that which he receives as a member of the Commission.

"SEC. 3. The Coordinator shall divide the lines of the carriers into three groups, to wit, an eastern group, a southern group, and a western group, and may from time to time make such changes or subdivisions in such groups as he may deem to be necessary or desirable. At the earliest practicable date after the Coordinator shall have initially designated such groups, three regional coordinating committees shall be created, one for each group, and each committee shall consist of five regular members and two special members. The carriers in each group, acting each through its board of directors or its receiver or receivers or trustee or trustees or through an officer or officers designated for the purpose by such board, shall select the regular members of the committee representing that group, and shall prescribe the rules under which such committee shall operate; but no railroad system shall have more than one representative on any such committee. In such selection each carrier shall have a vote in proportion to its mileage lying within the group. The two special members of each committee shall be selected in such manner as the Coordinator may approve, one to represent the steam railroads within the group which had in 1932 railway operating revenues of less than $1,000,000 and the other to represent electric railways within the group not owned by a steam railroad or operated as a part of a general steam railroad system of transportation. Each such special member shall have reasonable notice of all meetings of his committee at which any matter affecting any carrier which he represents is to be considered, and may participate in the consideration and disposition of such matter. Members of the committees may be removed from office and vacancies may be filled in like manner.

"SEC. 4. The purposes of this title are (1) to encourage and promote or require action on the part of the carriers and of subsidiaries subject to the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, which will (a) avoid unnecessary duplication of services and facilities of whatsoever nature and permit the joint use of terminals and trackage incident thereto or requisite to such joint use: Provided, That no routes now existing shall be eliminated except with the consent of all participating lines or upon order of the Coordinator; (b) control allowances, accessorial services and the charges therefor, and other practices affecting service or operation, to the end that undue impairment of net earnings may be prevented, and (c) avoid other wastes and preventable expense; (2) to promote financial reorganization of the carriers with due regard to legal rights, so as to reduce fixed charges to the extent required by the public interest and improve carrier credit; and (3) to provide for the immediate study of other means of improving conditions surrounding transportation in all its forms and the preparation of plans therefor.

"SEC. 5. It shall be the duty of the committees on their own initiative, severally within each group and jointly where more than one group is affected, to carry out the purposes set forth in subdivision (1) of section 4, so far as such action can be voluntarily accomplished by the carriers. In such instances as the committees are unable, for any reason, legal or otherwise, to carry out such purposes by such voluntary action, they shall recommend to the Coordinator that he give appropriate directions to the carriers or subsidiaries subject to the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, by order; and the Coordinator is hereby authorized and directed to issue and enforce such orders if he finds them to be consistent with the public interest and in furtherance of the purposes of this title.

"SEC. 6. (a) The Coordinator shall confer freely with the committees and give them the benefit of his advice and assistance. At his request, the committees, the carriers, the subsidiaries, and the Commission shall furnish him, or his assistants and agents, such information and reports as he may desire in investigating any matter within the scope of his duties under this title; and the Coordinator, his assistants, and agents, and the Commission, shall at all times have access to all accounts, records, and memoranda of the carriers and subsidiaries. If, in any instance, a committee has not acted with respect to any matter which the Coordinator has brought to its attention and upon which he is of the opinion that it should have acted, under the provisions of section 5, he is hereby authorized and directed to issue and enforce such order; giving appropriate directions to the carriers and subsidiaries subject to the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, with respect to such matter, as he shall find to be consistent with the public interest.

"(b) Insofar as may be necessary for the purposes of this title, the Commission and the members and examiners thereof shall have the same power to administer oaths and require by subpena the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of books, papers, tariffs, contracts, agreements, and documents and to take testimony by deposition, relating to any matter under investigation, as though such matter arose under the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended and supplemented; and any person subpenaed or testifying in connection with any matter under investigation under this title shall have the same rights, privileges, and immunities and be subject to the same duties, liabilities, and penalties as are provided in the case of persons subpenaed or testifying in connection with any matter under investigation under the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended.

"SEC. 7. (a) A labor committee for each regional group of carriers may be selected by those railroad labor organizations which, as representatives duly designated and authorized to act in accordance with the requirements of the Railway Labor Act, entered into the agreements of January 31, 1932, and December 21, 1932, with duly authorized representatives of the carriers, determining the wage payments of the employees of the carriers. A similar labor committee for each regional group of carriers may be selected by such other railroad labor organizations as may be duly designated and authorized to represent employees in accordance with the requirements of the Railway Labor Act. It shall be the duty of the regional coordinating committees and the Coordinator to give reasonable notice to, and to confer with, the appropriate regional labor committee or committees upon the subject matter prior to taking any action or issuing any order which will affect the interest of the employees, and to afford the said labor committee or committees reasonable opportunity to present views upon said contemplated action or order.

"(b) The number of employees in the service of a carrier shall not be reduced by reason of any action taken pursuant to the authority of this title below the number as shown by the pay rolls of employees in service during the month of May 1933, after deducting the number who have been removed from the pay rolls after the effective date of this act by reason of death, normal retirements, or resignation, but not more in any one year than 5 percent of said number in service during May 1933; nor shall any employee in such service be deprived of employment such as he had during said month of May or be in a worse position with respect to his compensation for such employment, by reason of any action taken pursuant to the authority conferred by this title.

"(c) The Coordinator is authorized and directed to establish regional boards of adjustment whenever and wherever action taken pursuant to the authority conferred by this title creates conditions that make necessary such board of adjustment to settle controversies between carriers and employees. Carriers and their employees shall have equal representation on such boards of adjustment for settlement of such controversies, and said boards shall exercise the functions of boards of adjustment provided for by the Railway Labor Act.

"(d) The Coordinator is authorized and directed to provide means for determining the amout of, and to require the carriers to make just compensation for, property losses and expenses imposed upon employees by reason of transfers of work from one locality to another in carrying out the purposes of this title.

"(e) Carriers, whether under control of a judge, trustee, receiver, or private management, shall be required to comply with the provisions of the Railway Labor Act and with the provisions of section 77, paragraphs (o), (p), and (q) of the act approved March 3, 1933, entitled 'An act to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto.'

"SEC. 8. Any order issued by the Coordinator pursuant to this title shall be made public in such reasonable manner as he may determine and shall become effective as of such date, not less than 20 days from the date of such publication, as the Coordinator shall prescribe in the order; and such order shall remain in effect until it is vacated by him or suspended or set aside by the Commission or other lawful authority, as hereinafter provided, and such order may include provision for the creation and administration of such just pooling arrangements or for such just compensation for the use of property or for carrier services as he may deem necessary or desirable and in furtherance of the purposes of this title.

"SEC. 9. Any interested party, including, among others, any carrier, subsidiary, shipper, or employee, or any group of carriers, shippers, or employees, or any State commission, or the Governor of any State, or the official representative or representatives of any political subdivision thereof, dissatisfied with any order of the Coordinator may, at any time prior to the effective date of the order, file a petition with the Commission asking that such order be reviewed and suspended pending such review, and stating fully the reasons therefor. Such petitions shall be governed by such general rules as the Commission may establish. If the Commission, upon considering such petition and any answer or answers thereto, finds reason to believe that the order may be unjust to the petitioner or inconsistent with the public interest, the Commission is hereby auhorized to grant such review and, in its discretion, the Commission may suspend the order if it finds immediate enforcement thereof would result in irreparable damage to the petitioner or work grave injury to the public interest, but if the Commission suspends an order, it shall expedite the hearing and decision on that order as much as possible. Thereupon the Commission shall, after due notice and a public hearing, review the order and take such action in accord with the purposes of this title as it finds to be just and consistent with the public interest, either confirming the order or setting it aside or reissuing it in modified form, and any order so confirmed or reissued shall thereafter remain in effect until vacated or modified by the Commission.

"SEC. 10. (a) The carriers or subsidiaries subject to the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, affected by any order of the Coordinator or Commission made pursuant to this title shall, so long as such order is in effect, be, and they are hereby, relieved from the operation of the antitrust laws, as designated in section 1 of the act entitled 'An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes', approved October 15, 1914, and of all other restraints or prohibitions by law, State or Federal, other than such as are for the protection of the public health or safety, insofar as may be necessary to enable them to do anything authorized or required by such order made pursuant to this title: Provided, however, That nothing herein shall be construed to repeal, amend, suspend, or modify any of the requirements of the Railway Labor Act or the duties and obligations imposed thereunder or through contracts entered into in accordance with the provisions of said act.

"(b) The Coordinator shall issue no order which shall have the effect of relieving any carrier or subsidiary from the operation of the law of any State or of any order of any State commission until he has advised the State commission of said State, or the Governor of said State if there be no such commission, that such order is in contemplation, and shall afford the State commission or Governor so notified reasonable opportunity to present views and information bearing upon such contemplated order, nor unless such order is necessary, in his opinion, to prevent or remove an obstruction to or a burden upon interstate commerce.

"SEC. 11. Nothing in this title shall be construed to relieve any carrier from any contractual obligation which it may have assumed, prior to the enactment of this act, with regard to the location or maintenance of offices, shops, or roundhouses at any point.

"SEC. 12. The willful failure or refusal of any carrier or subsidiary or of any officer or employee of any carrier or subsidiary to comply with the terms of any order of the Coordinator or of the Commission made pursuant to this title shall be a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof the carrier, subsidiary, or person offending shall be subject to a fine of not less than $1,000 or more than $20,000 for each offense, and each day during which such carrier, subsidiary, or person shall willfully fail or refuse to comply with the terms of such order shall constitute a separate offense. It shall be the duty of any district attorney of the United States to whom the Coordinator or the Commission may apply to institute in the proper court and to prosecute under the direction of the Attorney General of the United States all necessary proceedings for the enforcement of the provisions of this title and for the punishment of all violations thereof, and the costs and expenses of such prosecution shall be paid out of the appropriation for the expense of the courts of the United States: Provided, That nothing in this title shall be construed to require any employee or officer of any carrier to render labor or service without his consent, or to authorize the issuance of any orders requiring such service, or to make illegal the failure or refusal of any employee individually, or any number of employees collectively, to render labor or services.

"SEC. 13. It shall further be the duty of the Coordinator, and he is hereby authorized and directed, forthwith to investigate and consider means, not provided for in this title, of improving transportation conditions throughout the country, including cost finding in rail transportation and the ability, financial or otherwise, of the carriers to improve their properties and furnish service and charge rates which will promote the commerce and industry of the country and including, also, the stability of railroad labor employment and other improvement of railroad labor conditions; and from time to time he shall submit to the Commission such recommendations calling for further legislation to these ends as he may deem necessary or desirable in the public interest. The Commission shall promptly transmit such recommendations, together with its comments thereon, to the President and to the Congress.

"SEC. 14. The expenses of the Coordinator except so far as they are borne by the Commission in accordance with the provisions of section 2, but not including the expenses of the coordinating committees, shall be allowed and paid, on the presentation of itemized vouchers therefor approved by the Coordinator, out of a fund obtained from assessments on the carriers, and said fund is hereby appropriated for the payment of such expenses. It shall be the duty of each carrier, within 30 days after the date of enactment of this act, to pay into this fund, for the first year of the operation of this title, one and one half dollars for every mile of road operated by it on December 31, 1932, as reported to the Commission, and to pay into said fund within 30 days after the expiration of such year a proportional amount covering any period of extension of this title by proclamation of the President under section 17, and it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to collect such assessments. Any amount remaining in the fund when this title ceases to have effect shall be returned by the Secretary of the Treasury to the carriers in proportion to their contributions. The carriers and the Pullman Co. shall be permitted, anything in the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, to the contrary notwithstanding, to provide free transportation and other carrier service to the Coordinator and his assistants and agents and to the employees of the Commission when engaged in the service of the Coordinator.

"SEC. 15. The Commission shall not approve a loan to a carrier under the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended, if it is of the opinion that such carrier is in need of financial reorganization in the public interest: Provided, however, That the term 'carrier' as used in this section shall not include a receiver or trustee.

"SEC. 16. Any final order made under this title shall be subject to the same right of relief in court by any party in interest as is now provided in respect to orders of the Commission made under the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended. The provisions of the Urgent Deficiencies Appropriation Act of October 22, 1913 (38 Stat.L. 219), shall be applicable to any proceeding in court brought to suspend or set aside any order of the coordinator or of the Commission entered pursuant to the provisions of this title.

"SEC. 17. This title shall cease to have effect at the end of 1 year after the effective date, unless extended by a proclamation of the President for 1 year or any part thereof, but orders of th eCoordinator or of the Commission made there under shall continue in effect until vacated by the Commission or set aside by other lawful authority, but notwithstanding the provisions of section 10 no such order shall operate to relieve any carrier from the effect of any State law or of any order of a State commission enacted or made after this title ceases to have effect.

"TITLE II—AMENDMENTS TO INTERSTATE COMMERCE ACT

"SEC. 201. Section 5 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended (U.S.C., title 49, sec. 5), is amended by striking out paragraphs (2) and (3) and by renumbering paragraphs (4) and (5) as paragraphs (2) and (3), respectively, and by striking out the last sentence of the paragraph so renumbered as paragraph (3).

"SEC. 202. Such section 5 is further amended by striking out paragraphs (6), (7), and (8), and by inserting in lieu thereof the following paragraphs:

"'(4) (a) It shall be lawful, with the approval and authorization of the Commission, as provided in subdivision (b), for two or more carriers to consolidate or merge their properties, or any part thereof, into one corporation for the ownership, management, and operation of the properties theretofore in separate ownership; or for any carrier, or two or more carriers jointly, to purchase, lease, or contract to operate the properties, or any part thereof, of another; or for any carrier, or two or more carriers jointly, to acquire control of another through purchase of its stock; or for a corporation which is not a carrier to acquire control of two or more carriers through ownership of their stock; or for a corporation which is not a carrier and which has contol of one or more carriers to acquire control of another carrier through ownership of its stock.

"'(b) Whenever a consolidation, merger, purchase, lease, operating contract, or acquisition of control is proposed under subdivision (a), the carrier or carriers or corporation seeking authority therefor shall present an application to the Commission, and thereupon the Commission shall notify the governor of each State in which any part of the properties of the carriers involved in the proposed transaction is situated, and also such carriers and the applicant or applicants, of the time and place for a public hearing. If after such hearing the Commission finds that, subject to such terms and conditions and such modifications as it shall find to be just and reasonable, the proposed consolidation, merger, purchase, lease, operating contract, or acquisition of control will be in harmony with and in furtherance of the plan for the consolidation of railway properties established pursuant to paragraph (3), and will promote the public interest, it may enter an order approving and authorizing such consolidation, merger, purchase, lease, operating contract, or acquisition of control, upon the terms and conditions and with the modifications so found to be just and reasonable.

"'(5) Whenever a corporation which is not a carrier is authorized, by an order entered under paragraph (4), to acquire control of any carrier or of two or more carriers, such corporation thereafter shall, to the extent provided by the Commission, for the purposes of paragraphs (1) to (10), inclusive, of section 20 (relating to reports, accounts, and so forth, of carriers), including the penalties applicable in the case of violations of such paragraphs, be considered as a common carrier subject to the provisions of this act, and for the purposes of paragraphs (2) to (11), inclusive, of section 20a (relating to issues of securities and assumptions of liability of carriers), including the penalties applicable in the case of violations of such paragraphs, be considered as a "carrier" as such term is defined in paragraph (1) of such section, and be treated as such by the Commission in the administration of the paragraphs specified. In the application of such provisions of section 20a in the case of any such corporation the Commission shall authorize the issue or assumption applied for only if it finds that such issue or assumption is consistent with the proper performance by each carrier which is under the control of such corporation of its service to the public as a common carrier, will not impair the ability of any such carrier to perform such service, and is otherwise compatible with the public interest.

"'(6) It shall be unlawful for any person, except as provided in paragraph (4), to accomplish or effectuate, or to participate in accomplishing or effectuating, the control or management in a common interest of any two or more carriers, however such result is attained, whether directly or indirectly, by use of common directors, officers, or stockholders, a holding or investment company or companies, a voting trust or trusts, or in any other manner whatsoever. It shall be unlawful to continue to maintain control or management accomplished or effectuated after the enactment of this amendatory paragraph and in violation of its provisions. As used in this paragraph and paragraph (7), the words "control or management" shall be construed to include the power to exercise control or management.

"'(7) For the purposes of paragraphs (6) and (11), but not in anywise limiting the application thereof, any transaction shall be deemed to accomplish or effectuate the control or management in a common interest of two carriers—

"'(a) If such transaction is by a carrier, and if the effect of such transaction is to place such carrier and persons affiliated with it, taken together, in control of another carrier.

"'(b) If such transaction is by a person affiliated with a carrier, and if the effect of such transaction is to place such carrier and persons affiliated with it, taken together, in control of another carrier.

"'(c) If such transaction is by two or more persons acting together, one of whom is a carrier or is affiliated with a carrier, and if the effect of such transaction is to place such persons and carriers and persons affiliated with any one of them and persons affiliated with any such affiliated carrier, taken together, in control of another carrier.

"'(8) For the purposes of paragraph (7) a person shall be held to be affiliated with a carrier if, by reason of the relationship of such person to such carrier (whether by reason of the method of, or circumstances surrounding organization or operation, or whether established through common directors, officers, or stockholders, a voting trust or trusts, a holding or investment company or companies, or any other direct or indirect means), it is reasonable to believe that the affairs of any carrier of which control may be acquired by such person will be managed in the interest of such other carrier.

"'(9) For the purposes of paragraphs (6), (7), (8), and (11), wherever reference is made to control, it is immaterial whether such control is direct or indirect. As used in this paragraph and paragraphs (7), (8), and (11) the term "control" shall be construed to include the power to exercise control.

"'(10) The Commission is hereby authorized, upon complaint or upon its own initiative without complaint, but after notice and hearing, to investigate and determine whether any person is violating the provisions of paragraph (6). If the Commission finds after such investigation that such person is violating the provisions of such paragraph, it shall by order require such person to take such action as may be necessary, in the opinion of the Commission, to prevent continuance of such violation.

"'(11) For the proper protection and in furtherance of the plan for the consolidation of railway properties established pursuant to paragraph (3) and the regulation of interstate commerce in accordance therewith, the Commission is hereby authorized, upon complaint or upon its own initiative without complaint, but after notice and hearing, to investigate and determine whether the holding by any person of stock or other share capital of any carrier (unless acquired with the approval of the Commission) has the effect (a) of subjecting such carrier to the control of another carrier or to common control with another carrier, and (b) of preventing or hindering the carrying out of any part of such plan or of impairing the independence, one of another, of the systems provided for in such plan. If the Commission finds after such investigation that such holding has the effects described, it shall by order provide for restricting the exercise of the voting power of such person with respect to such stock or other share capital (by requiring the deposit thereof with a trustee, or by other appropriate means) to the extent necessary to prevent such holding from continuing to have such effects.

"'(12) If in the course of any proceeding under this section before the Commission, or of any proceeding before a court in enforcement of an order entered by the Commission under this section, it appears that since the beginning of such proceeding the plan for consolidation has been reopened under paragraph (3) for changes or modifications with respect to the allocation of the properties of any carrier involved in such proceeding, then such proceeding may be suspended.

"'(13) The district courts of the United States shall have jurisdiction, upon the application of the Commission, alleging a violation of any of the provisions of this section or disobedience of any order issued by the Commission thereunder by any person, to issue such writs of injunction or other proper process, mandatory or otherwise, as may be necessary to restrain such person from violation of such provision or to compel obedience to such order.

"'(14) The Commission may from time to time, for good cause shown, make such orders, supplemental to any order made under paragraphs (1), (4), (10), or (11) as it may deem necessary or appropriate.

"'(15) The carriers and any corporations affected by any order made under the foregoing provisions of this section shall be, and they are hereby, relieved from the operation of the antitrust laws as designated in section 1 of the act entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes", approved October 15, 1914, and of all other restraints or prohibitions by or imposed under authority of law, State or Federal, insofar as may be necessary to enable them to do anything authorized or required by such order.

"'(16) If any provision of the foregoing paragraphs of this section, or the application thereof to any person or circumstances, is held invalid, the other provisions of such paragraphs, and the application of such provision to any other person or circumstances, shall not be affected thereby.

"'(17) As used in paragraphs (4) to (16), inclusive, the term "person" includes an individual, partnership, association, joint-stock company, or corporation, and the term "carrier" means a carrier by railroad subject to this act.'

"SEC. 203. Such section 5 is further amended by renumbering as paragraph (18) the paragraph added by the act entitled 'An act to amend section 407 of the Transportation

Act of 1920', approved June 10, 1921, and by renumbering the remaining three paragraphs as paragraphs (19), (20), and (21), respectively.

"SEC. 204. The provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, and of all other applicable Federal statutes, as in force prior to the enactment of this title, shall remain in force, as though this title had not been enacted, with respect to the acquisition by any carrier, prior to the enactment of this title, of the control of any other carrier or carriers.

"SEC. 205. Section 15a of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended (U.S.C., title 49, sec. 15a), is amended to read as follows:

"'SEC. 15a. (1) When used in this section, the term "rates" means rates, fares, and charges, and all classifications, regulations, and practices relating thereto.

"'(2) In the exercise of its power to prescribe just and reasonabe rates the Commission shall give due consideration, among other factors, to the effect of rates on the movement of traffic; to the need, in the public interest, of adequate and efficient railway-transportation service at the lowest cost consistent with the furnishing of such service; and to the need of revenues sufficient to enable the carriers, under honest, economical, and efficient management, to provide such service.'

"SEC. 206. (a) All moneys which were recoverable by and payable to the Interstate Commerce Commission, under paragraph (6) of section 15a of the Interstate Commerce Act, as in force prior to the enactment of this title, shall cease to be so recoverable and payable; and all proceedings pending for the recovery of any such moneys shall be terminated. The general railroad contingent fund established under such section hall be liquidated and the Secretary of the Treasury shall distribute the moneys in such fund among the carriers which have made payments under such section, so that each such carrier shall receive an amount bearing the same ratio to the total amount in such fund that the total of amounts paid under such section by such carrier bears to the total of amounts paid under such section by all carriers; except that if the total amount in such fund exceeds the total of amounts paid under such section by all carriers such excess shall be distributed among such carriers upon the basis of the average rate of earnings (as determined by the Secretary of the Treasury) on the investment of the moneys in such fund and differences in dates of payments by such carriers.

"(b) The income, war-profits, and excess-profits tax liabilities for any taxable period ending after February 28, 1920, of the carriers and corporations whose income, war-profits, or excess-profits tax liabilities were affected by section 15a of the Interstate Commerce Act, as in force prior to the enactment of this act, shall be computed as if such section had never been enacted, except that, in the case of carriers or corporations which have made payments under paragraph (6) of such section, an amount equal to such payments shall be excluded from gross income for the taxable periods with respect to which they were made. All distributions made to carriers in accordance with subdivision (a) of this section shall be included in the gross income of the carriers for the taxable period in which this act is enacted. The provisions of this subdivision shall not be held to affect (1) the statutes of limitations with respect to the assessment, collection, refund, or credit of income, war-profits, or excess-profits taxes or (2) the liabilities for such taxes of any carriers or corporations if such liabilities were determined prior to the enactment of this act in accordance with section 1106 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1926 or section 606 of the Revenue Act of 1928, or in accordance with a final judgment of a court, an order of the Board of Tax Appeals which had become final, or an offer in compromise duly accepted in accordance with law.

"SEC. 207. Paragraph (a) of section 19a of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended (U.S.C., title 49, sec. 19a (a)), is amended to read as follows:

"'(a) That the Commission shall, as hereinafter provided, investigate, ascertain, and report the value of all the property owned or used by every common carrier subject to the provisions of this act, except any street, suburban, or interurban electric railway which is not operated as a part of a general steam-railroad system of transportation; but the Commission may in its discretion investigate, ascertain, and report the value of the property owned or used by any such electric railway subject to the provisions of this act whenever in its judgment such action is desirable in the public interest. To enable the Commission to make such investigation and report, it is authorized to employ such experts and other assistants as may be necessary. The Commission may appoint examiners who shall have power to administer oaths, examine witnesses, and take testimony. The Commission shall, subject to the exceptions hereinbefore provided for in the case of electric railways, make an inventory which shall list the property of every common carrier subject to the provisions of this act in detail, and show the value thereof as hereinafter provided, and shall classify the physical property, as nearly as practicable, in conformity with the classification of expenditures for road and equipment, as prescribed by the Interstate Commerce Commission.'

"SEC. 208. Paragraphs (f) and (g) of such section 19a, as amended (U.S.C., title 49, sec. 19a (f), (g)), are amended to read as follows:

"'(f) Upon completion of the original valuations herein provided for, the Commission shall thereafter keep itself informed of all new construction, extensions, improvements, retirements, or other changes in the condition, quantity, use, and classification of the property of all common carriers as to which original valuations have been made, and of the cost of all additions and betterments thereto and of all changes in the investment therein, and may keep itself informed of current changes in costs and values of railroad properties, in order that it may have available at all times the information deemed by it to be necessary to enable it to revise and correct its previous inventories, classifications, and values of the properties; and, when deemed necessary, may revise, correct, and supplement any of its inventories and valuations.

"'(g) To enable the Commission to carry out the provisions of the preceding paragraph, every common carrier subject to the provisions of this act shall make such reports and furnish such information as the Commission may require.'

"SEC. 209. If any provision of this act, or the application thereof to any person or circumstances, is held invalid, the other provisions of this act or the application of such provision to any other person or circumstances shall not be affected thereby."

And the House agree to the same.

SAM RAYBURN,
GEORGE HUDDLESTON,
CLARENCE LEA,
JAMES S. PARKER,
JOHN G. COOPER,
Managers on the part of the House.

C. C. DILL,
E. D. SMITH,
B. K. WHEELER,
SIMEON D. FESS,
JESSE H. METCALF,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (S. 1580) to relieve the existing national emergency in relation to interstate railroad transportation, and to amend sections 5, 15a, and 19a of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The House struck out all of the Senate bill after the enacting clause and inserted one amendment. The Senate recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the House with an amendment which is a substitute for both the Senate bill and the House amendment. The differences between the House amendment and the substitute agreed upon by the conferees, with the exception of clerical corrections, are noted in the following discussion:

Title I of the bill as passed by the Senate contained a definition of the term "subsidiary", which, taken together with the use of the term in various provisions of the title, had the effect of subjecting those companies covered by the definition to control and regulation by the Coordinator. These provisions as to subsidiaries were omitted from the amendment passed by the House. The substitute restores the definition of the term "subsidiary", but confines the operation of certain of the provisions of sections 4, 5, 6, and 10 to subsidiaries subject to the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, and omits the term from that part of section 5 relating to voluntary action by the regional committees. The words "and the Commission", omitted from section 6 by the House amendment, are restored in the substitute.

Section 4 of the bill as passed by the Senate, contained a proviso that no existing routes should be eliminated except with the consent of all participating lines or upon order of the Coordinator. This was omitted from the House amendment. The substitute restores this provision.

The House amendment omitted "cost finding in rail transportation" from the matters which, under section 13 of the bill as passed by the Senate, are to be investigated by the Coordinator. The words are restored in the substitute.

The bill as passed by the Senate provided for an assessment upon the carriers of $1 per mile for the payment of the expenses of administration of title I. This was increased in the House amendment to $2. The substitute fixes the amount at $1.50.

The House amendment rewrote section 203 of the bill as passed by the Senate, so as to include a provision authorizing the Interstate Commerce Commission to approve agreements for consolidation, acquisition, or control by or between cable and/or telegraph companies or the companies controlling them. This provision is omitted from the substitute.

Section 19 of the bill as passed by the Senate was omitted from the House amendment. This section was added at the end of title II, although it was intended to operate as a limitation with respect to the effect of orders of the Coordinator relating to intrastate commerce upon the operation of State laws and State commission orders. It appears in the substitute at the end of subsection (b) of section 10, rephrased so as to fit with the provisions to which it relates.

The Senate bill contained the following sentence added at the end of paragraph (6) of section 5 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended by this act: "Nothing in this paragraph shall be construed or taken to ratify, validate, or recognize the validity of any act of any person accomplishing or effectuating or tending to accomplish or effectuate, prior to the enactment hereof, such control or management in any manner forbidden hereby after the enactment hereof." This sentence was intended to negative any possible implication in the bill that making certain future acquisitions unlawful had the effect of validating past acquisitions which might have been accomplished in violation of the law in existence at the time of the passage of this act. The sentence was omitted from the House amendment and from the bill as agreed to in conference on the ground that it was purely surplusage, as the same idea was already adequately covered in section 204, which appears in the Senate bill and the House amendment and the bill as agreed to in conference. The purpose of section 204 is to leave the legality of acquisitions made before the enactment of the act to be governed by the law in existence at the time of passage of the act, but it should be pointed out in this connection that nothing in section 204 will in any way interfere with the application of the provisions of paragraph (11) of section 5 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended by the bill, to holdings of stock by a carrier merely because such stock was acquired by the carrier before the enactment of this act.

SAM RAYBURN,
GEORGE HUDDLESTON,
CLARENCE LEA,
JAMES S. PARKER,
JOHN G. COOPER,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, the House adjourned so early yesterday we did not get an opportunity to file our report at that time and I am asking for immediate consideration of the conference report.

Mr. SNELL. Is the report available now?

Mr. RAYBURN. The report is not available, but I shall ask to have the statement read. I may say to the gentleman there are very few changes in the bill.

Mr. SNELL. I shall not object to taking it up at this time.

Mr. RAYBURN. And it is a unanimous report signed by every member of the conference on the part of the House and the Senate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the clerk will read the statement in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. RAYBURN, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was agreed to was laid on the table.

HOME LOAN BANK BILL

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I call up conference report on the bill (H.R. 5240) to provide emergency relief with respect to home-mortgage indebtedness, to refinance home mortgages, to extend relief to the owners of homes occupied by them and who are unable to amortize their debt elsewhere, to amend the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, to increase the market for obligations of the United States, and for other purposes, and ask unanimous consent that the statement may be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 5240) to provide emergency relief with respect to home-mortgage indebtedness, to refinance home mortgages, to extend relief to the owners of homes occupied by them and who are unable to amortize their debt elsewhere, to amend the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, to increase the market for obligations of the United States, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"That this act may be cited as the 'Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933.'

"DEFINITIONS

"SEC. 2. As used in this act—

"(a) The term 'Board' means the Federal Home Loan Bank Board created under the Federal Home Loan Bank Act.

"(b) The term 'Corporation' means the Home Owners' Loan Corporation created under section 4 of this act.

"(c) The term 'home mortgage' means a first mortgage on real estate in fee simple or on a leasehold under a renewable lease for not less than 99 years, upon which there is located a dwelling for not more than four families, used by the owner as a home or held by him as his homestead, and having a value not exceeding $20,000; and the term 'first mortgage' includes such classes of first liens as are commonly given to secure advances on real estate under the laws of the State in which the real estate is located, together with the credit instruments, if any, secured thereby.

"(d) The term 'association' means a Federal savings and loan association chartered by the Board as provided in section 5 of this act.

"REPEAL OF DIRECT-LOAN PROVISION OF FEDERAL HOME LOAN BANK ACT

"SEC. 3. Subsection (d) of section 4 of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (providing for direct loans to home owners) is hereby repealed.

"CREATION OF HOME OWNERS' LOAN CORPORATION

"SEC. 4. (a) The Board is hereby authorized and directed to create a corporation to be known as the 'Home Owners' Loan Corporation', which shall be an instrumentality of the United States, which shall have authority to sue and to be sued in any court of competent jurisdiction, Federal or State, and which shall be under the direction of the Board and operated by it under such bylaws, rules, and regulations as it may prescribe for the accomplishment of the purposes and intent of this section. The members of the Board shall constitute the board of directors of the Corporation and shall serve as such directors without additional compensation.

"(b) The Board shall determine the minimum amount of capital stock of the Corporation and is authorized to increase such capital stock from time to time in such amounts as may be necessary, but not to exceed in the aggregate $200,000,000. Such stock shall be subscribed for by the Secretary of the Treasury on behalf of the United States, and payments for such subscriptions shall be subject to call in whole or in part by the Board and shall be made at such time or times as the Secretary of the Treasury deems advisable. The Corporation shall issue to the Secretary of the Treasury receipts for payments by him for or on account of such stock, and such receipts shall be evidence of the stock ownership of the United States. In order to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to make such payments when called, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is authorized and directed to allocate and make available to the Secretary of the Treasury the sum of $200,000,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, and for such purpose the amount of the notes, bonds, debentures, or other such obligations which the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is authorized and empowered under section 9 of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended, to have outstanding at any one time, is hereby increased by such amounts as may be necessary.

"(c) The Corporation is authorized to issue bonds in an aggregate amount not to exceed $2,000,000,000, which may be sold by the Corporation to obtain funds for carrying out the purposes of this section, or exchanged as hereinafter provided. Such bonds shall be issued in such denominations as the Board shall prescribe, shall mature within a period of not more than 18 years from the date of their issue, shall bear interest at a rate not to exceed 4 percent per annum, and shall be fully and unconditionally guaranteed as to interest only by the United States, and such guaranty shall be expressed on the face thereof. In the event that the Corporation shall be unable to pay upon demand, when due, the interest on any such bonds, the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay to the Corporation the amount of such interest, which is hereby authorized to be appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and the Corporation shall pay the amount of such interest to the holders of the bonds. Upon the payment of such interest by the Secretary of the Treasury the amount so paid shall become an obligation to the United States of the Corporation and shall bear interest at the same rate as that borne by the bonds upon which the interest has been so paid. The bonds issued by the Corporation under this subsection shall be exempt, both as to principal and interest, from all taxation (except surtaxes, estate, inheritance, and gift taxes) now or hereafter imposed by the United States or any District, Territory, dependency, or possession thereof, or by any State, county, municipality, or local taxing authority. The Corporation, including its franchise, its capital, reserves and surplus, and its loans and income, shall likewise be exempt from such taxation; except that any real property of the Corporation shall be subject to taxation to the same extent, according to its value, as other real property is taxed.

"(d) The Corporation is authorized, for a period of 3 years after the date of enactment of this act, (1) to acquire in exchange for bonds issued by it, home mortgages and other obligations and liens secured by real estate (including the interest of a vendor under a purchase-money mortgage or contract) recorded or filed in the proper office or executed prior to the date of the enactment of this act, and (2) in connection with any such exchange, to make advances in cash to pay the taxes and assessments on the real estate, to provide for necessary maintenance and make necessary repairs, to meet the incidental expenses of the transaction, and to pay such amounts, not exceeding $50, to the holder of the mortgage, obligation, or lien acquired as may be the difference between the face value of the bonds exchanged plus accrued interest thereon and the purchase price of the mortgage, obligation, or lien. The face value of the bonds so exchanged plus accrued interest thereon and the cash so advanced shall not exceed in any case $14,000, or 80 percent of the value of the real estate as determined by an appraisal made by the Corporation, whichever is the smaller. In any case in which the amount of the face value of the bonds exchanged plus accrued interest thereon and the cash advanced is less than the amount the home owner owes with respect to the home mortgage or other obligation or lien so acquired by the Corporation, the Corporation shall credit the difference between such amounts to the home owner and shall reduce the amount owed by the home owner to the Corporation to that extent. Each home mortgage or other obligation or lien so acquired shall be carried as a first lien or refinanced as a home mortgage by the Corporation on the basis of the price paid therefor by the Corporation, and shall be amortized by means of monthly payments sufficient to retire the interest and principal within a period of not to exceed 15 years; but the amortization payments of any home owner may be made quarterly, semiannually, or annually, if in the judgment of the Corporation the situation of the home owner requires it. Interest on the unpaid balance of the obligation of the home owner to the Corporation shall be at a rate not exceeding 5 percent per annum. The Corporation may at any time grant an extension of time to any home owner for the payment of any installment of principal or interest owed by him to the Corporation if, in the judgment of the Corporation, the circumstances of the home owner and the condition of the security justify such extension, and no payment of any installment of principal shall be required during the period of 3 years from the date this act takes effect if the home owner shall not be in default with respect to any other condition or covenant of his mortgage. As used in this subsection, the term 'real estate' includes only real estate held in fee simple or on a leasehold under a lease renewable for not less than 99 years, upon which there is located a dwelling for not more than four families used by the owner as a home or held by him as a homestead and having a value not exceeding $20,000. No discrimination shall be made under this act against any home mortgage by reason of the fact that the real estate securing such mortgage is located in a municipality, county, or taxing district which is in default upon any of its obligations.

"(e) The Corporation is further authorized, for a period of 3 years from the date of enactment of this act, to make loans in cash subject to the same limitations and for the same purposes for which cash advances may be made under subsection (d) of this section, in cases where the property is not otherwise encumbered; but no such loan shall exceed 50 percent of the value of the property securing the same as determined upon an appraisal made by the Corporation. Each such loan shall be secured by a duly recorded home mortgage, and shall bear interest at the same rate and shall be subject to the same provisions with respect to amortization and extensions as are applicable in the case of obligations refinanced under subsection (d) of this section.

"(f) The Corporation is further authorized, for a period of 3 years from the date of enactment of this act, in any case in which the holder of a home mortgage or other obligation or lien eligible for exchange under subsection (d) of this section does not accept the bonds of the Corporation in exchange as provided in such subsection and in which the Corporation finds that the home owner cannot obtain a loan from ordinary lending agencies, to make cash advances to such home owner in an amount not to exceed 40 percent of the value of the property for the purposes specified in such subsection (d). Each such loan shall be secured by a duly recorded home mortgage and shall bear interest at a rate of interest which shall be uniform throughout the United States, but which in no event shall exceed a rate of 6 percent per annum, and shall be subject to the same provisions with respect to amortization and extensions as are applicable in cases of obligations refinanced under subsection (d) of this section.

"(g) The Corporation is further authorized for a period of 3 years from the date of the enactment of this act, to exchange bonds and to advance cash, subject to the limitations provided in subsection (d) of this section, to redeem or recover homes lost by the owners by foreclosure or forced sale by a trustee under a deed of trust or under power of attorney, or by voluntary surrender to the mortgagee within 2 years prior to such exchange or advance.

"(h) The Board shall make rules for the appraisal of the property on which loans are made under this section so as to accomplish the purposes of this act.

"(i) Any person indebted to the Corporation may make payment to it in part or in full by delivery to it of its bonds which shall be accepted for such purpose at face value.

"(j) The Corporation shall have power to select, employ, and fix the compensation of such officers, employees, attorneys, or agents as shall be necessary for the performance of its duties under this act, without regard to the provisions of other laws applicable to the employment or compensation of officers, employees, attorneys, or agents of the United States. No such officer, employee, attorney, or agent shall be paid compensation at a rate in excess of the rate provided by law in the case of the members of the Board. The Corporation shall be entitled to the free use of the United States mails for its official business in the same manner as the executive departments of the Government, and shall determine its necessary expenditures under this act and the manner in which they shall be incurred, allowed, and paid, without regard to the provisions of any other law governing the expenditure of public funds. The Corporation shall pay such proportion of the salary and expenses of the members of the Board and of its officers and employees as the Board may determine to be equitable, and may use the facilities of Federal home-loan banks, upon making reasonable compensation therefor as determined by the Board.

"(k) The Board is authorized to make such bylaws, rules, and regulations, not inconsistent with the provisions of this section, as may be necessary for the proper conduct of the affairs of the Corporation. The Corporation is further authorized and directed to retire and cancel the bonds and stock of the Corporation as rapidly as the resources of the Corporation will permit. Upon the retirement of such stock, the reasonable value thereof as determined by the Board shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States and the receipts issued therefor shall be canceled. The Board shall proceed to liquidate the Corporation when its purposes have been accomplished, and shall pay any surplus or accumulated funds into the Treasury of the United States. The Corporation may declare and pay such dividends to the United States as may be earned and as in the judgment of the Board it is proper for the Corporation to pay.

"FEDERAL SAVINGS AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS

"SEC. 5. (a) In order to provide local mutual thrift institutions in which people may invest their funds and in order to provide for the financing of homes, the Board is authorized, under such rules and regulations as it may prescribe, to provide for the organization, incorporation, examination, operation, and regulation of associations to be known as 'Federal Savings and Loan Associations', and to issue charters therefor, giving primary consideration to the best practices of local mutual thrift and home-financing institutions in the United States.

"(b) Such associations shall raise their capital only in the form of payments on such shares as are authorized in their charter, which shares may be retired as is therein provided. No deposits shall be accepted and no certificates of indebtedness shall be issued except for such borrowed money as may be authorized by regulations of the Board.

"(c) Such associations shall lend their funds only on the security of their shares or on the security of first liens upon homes or combination of homes and business property within 50 miles of their home office: Provided, That not more than $20,000 shall be loaned on the security of a first lien upon any one such property; except that not exceeding 15 percent of the assets of such association may be loaned on other improved real estate without regard to said $20,000 limitation, and without regard to said 50-mile limit, but secured by first lien thereon: And provided further, That any portion of the assets of such associations may be invested in obligations of the United States or the stock or bonds of a Federal home-loan bank.

"(d) The Board shall have full power to provide in the rules and regulations herein authorized for the reorganization, consolidation, merger, or liquidation of such associations, including the power to appoint a conservator or a receiver to take charge of the affairs of any such association, and to require an equitable readjustment of the capital structure of the same; and to release any such association from such control and permit its further operation.

"(e) No charter shall be granted except to persons of good character and responsibility, nor unless in the judgment of the Board a necessity exists for such an institution in the community to be served, nor unless there is a reasonable probability of its usefulness and success, nor unless the same can be established without undue injury to properly conducted existing local thrift and home-financing institutions.

"(f) Each such association, upon its incorporation, shall become automatically a member of the Federal home-loan bank of the district in which it is located, or if convenience shall require and the Board approve, shall become a member of a Federal home-loan bank of an adjoining district. Such associations shall qualify for such membership in the manner provided in the Federal Home Loan Bank Act with respect to other members.

"(g) The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized on behalf of the United States to subscribe for preferred shares in such associations which shall be preferred as to the assets of the association and which shall be entitled to a dividend, if earned, after payment of expenses and provision for reasonable reserves, to the same extent as other shareholders. It shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to subscribe for such preferred shares upon the request of the Board; but the subscription by him to the shares of any one association shall not exceed $100,000, and no such subscription shall be called for unless in the judgment of the Board the funds are necessary for the encouragement of local home financing in the community to be served and for the reasonable financing of homes in such community. Payment on such shares may be called from time to time by the association, subject to the approval of the Board and the Secretary of the Treasury; but the amount paid in by the Secretary of the Treasury shall at no time exceed the amount paid in by all other shareholders, and the aggregate amount of shares held by the Secretary of the Treasury shall not exceed at any time the aggregate amount of shares held by all other shareholders. To enable the Secretary of the Treasury to make such subscriptions when called, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $100,000,000, to be immediately available and to remain available until expended. Each such association shall issue receipts for such payments by the Secretary of the Treasury in such form as may be approved by the Board, and such receipts shall be evidence of the interest of the United States in such preferred shares to the extent of the amount so paid. Each such association shall make provision for the retirement of its preferred shares held by the Secretary of the Treasury, and beginning at the expiration of 5 years from the time of the investment in such shares, the association shall set aside one third of the receipts from its investing and borrowing shareholders to be used for the purpose of such retirement. In case of the liquidation of any such association, the shares held by the Secretary of the Treasury shall be retired at par before any payments are made to other shareholders.

"(h) Such associations, including their franchises, capital, reserves, and surplus, and their loans and income, shall be exempt from all taxation now or hereafter imposed by the United States, and all shares of such associations shall be exempt both as to their value and the income therefrom from all taxation (except surtaxes, estate, inheritance, and gift taxes) now or hereafter imposed by the United States; and no State, Territorial, county, municipal, or local taxing authority shall impose any tax on such associations or their franchise, capital, reserves, surplus, loans, or income greater than that imposed by such authority on other similar local mutual or cooperative thrift and home-financing institutions.

"(i) Any member of a Federal home-loan bank may convert itself into a Federal savings and loan association under this act upon a vote of its stockholders as provided by the law under which it operates; but such conversion shall be subject to such rules and regulations as the Board may prescribe, and thereafter the converted association shall be entitled to all the benefits of this section and shall be subject to examination and regulation to the same extent as other associations incorporated pursuant to this act.

"ENCOURAGEMENT OF SAVING AND HOME FINANCING

"SEC. 6. To enable the Board to encourage local thrift and local home financing and to promote, organize, and develop the associations herein provided for or similar associations organized under local laws, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $150,000, to be immediately available and remain available until expended, subject to the call of the Board, which sum, or so much thereof as may be necessary, the Board is authorized to use in its discretion for the accomplishment of the purposes of this section without regard to the provisions of any other law governing the expenditure of public funds.

"SEC. 7. The provisions of this act shall apply to the continental United States, to the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii, and to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

"PENALTIES

"SEC. 8. (a) Whoever makes any statement, knowing it to be false, or whoever willfully overvalues any security, for the purpose of influencing in any way the action of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation or the Board or an association upon any application, advance, discount, purchase, or repurchase agreement, or loan, under this act, or any extension thereof by renewal deferment, or action or otherwise, or the acceptance, release, or substitution of security therefor, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000, or by imprisonment for not more than 2 years, or both.

"(b) Whoever (1) falsely makes, forges, or counterfeits any note, debenture, bond, or other obligation or coupon, in imitation of or purporting to be a note, debenture, bond, or other obligation, or coupon, issued by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation or an association; or (2) passes, utters, or publishes, or attempts to pass, utter, or publish, any false, forged, or counterfeited note, debenture, bond, or other obligation, or coupon, purporting to have been issued by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation or an association, knowing the same to be false, forged, or counterfeited; or (3) falsely alters any note, debenture, bond or other obligation, or coupon, issued or purporting to have been issued by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation or an association; or (4) passes, utters, or publishes, or attempts to pass, utter, or publish, as true any falsely altered or spurious note, debenture, bond, or other obligation, or coupon, issued or purporting to have been issued by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation or an association, knowing the same to be falsely altered or spurious, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $10,000, or by imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

"(c) Whoever, being connected in any capacity with the Board or the Home Owners' Loan Corporation or an association (1) embezzles, abstracts, purloins, or willfully misapplies any moneys, funds, securities, or other things of value, whether belonging to it or pledged or otherwise intrusted to it; or (2) with intent to defraud the Board or the Home Owners' Loan Corporation or an association, or any other body politic or corporate, or any individual, or to deceive any officer, auditor, or examiner of the Board or the Home Owners' Loan Corporation or an association, makes any false entry in any book, report, or statement of or to the Board or the Home Owners' Loan Corporation or an association, or, without being duly authorized, draws any order or issues, puts forth, or assigns any note, debenture, bond, or other obligation, or draft, mortgage, judgment, or decree thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $10,000, or by imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

"(d) The provisions of sections 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, and 117 of the Criminal Code of the United States (U.S.C., title 18, secs. 202 to 207, inclusive), insofar as applicable, are extended to apply to contracts or agreements of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and an association under this act, which, for the purposes hereof, shall be held to include advances, loans, discounts, and purchase and repurchase agreements; extensions and renewals thereof; and acceptances, releases, and substitutions of security therefor.

"(e) No person, partnership, association, or corporation shall make any charge in connection with a loan by the Corporation or an exchange of bonds or cash advance under this act, except ordinary charges authorized and required by the Corporation for services actually rendered for examination and perfecting of title, appraisal, and like necessary services. Any person, partnership, association, or corporation violating the provisions of this subsection shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $10,000, or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

"SEPARABILITY PROVISION

"SEC. 9. If any provision of this act, or the application thereof to any person or circumstances, is held invalid, the remainder of the act, and the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances, shall not be affected thereby."

And the Senate agree to the same.

HENRY B. STEAGALL,
T. ALAN GOLDSBOROUGH,
ROBERT LUCE,
Managers on the part of the House.

ROBERT J. BULKLEY,
ROBERT F. WAGNER,
J. G. TOWNSEND, Jr.,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 5240) to provide emergency relief with respect to home-mortgage indebtedness, to refinance home mortgages, to extend relief to the owners of homes occupied by them and who are unable to amortize their debt elsewhere, to amend the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, to increase the market for obligations of the United States, and for other purposes, submit the following written statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

Section 2 of the House bill defined the term "home mortgage" as "a first mortgage on real estate in fee simple or on a leasehold under a renewable lease for not less than 99 years, upon which there is located a dwelling for not more than three families, used by the owner as a home or held by him as his homestead, and having a value not exceeding $15,000." The corresponding section of the Senate amendment has a similar definition, but the dwelling referred to is one "for not more than four families" and having a value not exceeding "$25,000." The conference agreement refers to a dwelling "for not more than four families" and having a value of not exceeding "$20,000." A corresponding change is made under the conference agreement in the definition of the term "real estate."

Section 3 of the House bill repealed section 4(d) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, providing for direct loans to home owners. There is no corresponding provision in the Senate amendment. The conference agreement retains the provision of the House bill.

Section 4 of the House bill provided for the creation by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board of a Corporation to be known as the "Home Owners' Loan Corporation" which was to be an instrumentality of the United States and under the direction of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. The corresponding section of the Senate amendment (sec. 3) adds to the House provision that the Corporation so formed shall have authority to sue and be sued in any court of competent jurisdiction, Federal or State, and for the purposes of clarification, provides that the members of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board shall constitute the board of directors of the Corporation and shall serve as such directors without additional compensation. The conference agreement retains the provisions added by the Senate amendment.

Under the House bill the Corporation was authorized, for a period of 3 years after the date of enactment of the bill, to exchange its bonds for home mortgages and other obligations and liens secured by real estate, and in connection with any such exchange, to make advances in cash to pay taxes and assessments on the real estate, to provide for necessary maintenance and make necessary repairs, to meet the incidental expenses of the transaction, and to make a cash adjustment in an amount not exceeding $50 in any case where there is a difference between the face value of the bonds exchanged plus accrued interest thereon and the purchase price of the mortgage, obligation, or lien acquired by the Corporation. A limitation was imposed, however, that the face value of the bonds so exchanged plus accrued interest and the cash advanced should not exceed in any case $10,000, or 80 percent of the value of the real estate as determined by an appraisal made by the Corporation, whichever is the smaller.

Under the Senate amendment the fixed maximum amount of $10,000 as a limitation upon the amount of the bonds, interest, and cash which the Corporation might pay to the holder of the mortgage, obligation, or lien is omitted. The conference agreement fixes a maximum amount of $14,000 in any such case, or 80 percent of the value of the real estate as determined by an appraisal made by the Corporation, whichever is the smaller.

Under the House bill the Corporation is authorized to grant an extension of time to any home owner for the payment of any installment of principal or interest owed by him to the Corporation if in the judgment of the Corporation the circumstances of the home owner and the condition of the security justify the extension. The Senate amendment adds a provision that no payment of principal shall be required during a period of 3 years from the effective date of the bill if the home owner shall not be in default with respect to any other condition or covenant of his mortgage. The conference agreement retains the provision added by the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment contains a provision that no discrimination shall be made under the act against any home mortgage by reason of the fact that the real estate securing the mortgage is located in a municipality, county, or taxing district which is in default upon any of its obligations. There was no corresponding provision in the House bill. The conference agreement retains the provision contained in the Senate amendment.

Under the House bill the Corporation was authorized, for a period of 3 years, to make loans in cash in cases where the property is not otherwise encumbered for the same purposes and subject to the same limitations as the cash advances above referred to which are made by the Corporation in connection with an exchange of its bonds for home mortgages. A limitation was imposed, however, that no such loan should exceed 80 percent of the value of the property securing the same as determined upon an appraisal made by the Corporation. Under the Senate amendment this limitation was decreased to 50 percent of such value, and the conference agreement retains the Senate provision.

Under the House bill the Corporation was further authorized in cases where the mortgagee or seller under purchase-money mortgage or contract does not accept bonds of the Corporation in exchange for home mortgages, and if the Corporation, within its discretion, finds that the necessary amount of the loan could not be obtained from ordinary lending agencies, to purchase by cash or otherwise the equity and/or interest of the mortgagee or seller if the amount of such equity and/or interest and the cash advances made by the Corporation do not exceed 30 percent of the appraised value of the property. Under the Senate amendment this provision of the House bill is retained and clarified and the limitation is fixed at 50 percent instead of 30 percent. The Senate amendment also provides that interest on any such loan shall be uniform throughout the United States, but shall not exceed 6 percent per annum. The conference agreement retains the provisions of the Senate amendment as to interest but fixes the limitation at 40 percent of the appraised value of the property.

Under the House bill provision is made for the exchanges of bonds and advances of cash by the Corporation to redeem or recover homes lost by the owners by foreclosure or forced sale by a trustee under a deed of trust within 2 years prior to the exchange or advance. The Senate amendment extends this power of the Corporation to homes lost by the owners under power of attorney or by voluntary surrender to the mortgagee. The conference agreement retains the provision added by the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment also contains a provision authorizing the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to make rules for the appraisal of the property on which loans are made by the Corporation so as to accomplish the purposes of the bill. There was no corresponding provision in the House bill. The conference agreement retains the provision of the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment also provides that the President should appoint a home-loan agent for each State, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, the salary of each such agent to be fixed by the Corporation at not to exceed $6,000 per annum. Each such agent is to be under the direction of the Corporation, is to perform such duties as the Corporation may direct, and, subject to the approval of the Corporation, is to have authority to appoint and fix the compensation of such officers, employees, attorneys, and agents as the Corporation finds to be necessary, without regard to the provisions of other laws applicable to the employment or compensation of employees of the United States. There was no corresponding provision in the House bill. The conference agreement omits this provision of the Senate amendment.

Under the Senate amendment the President was also authorized to establish a national board of rehabilitation and conciliation, and to appoint in each State a board of State rehabilitation and conciliation which in turn is to appoint or designate a suitable number of local boards for the purpose of bringing about between farm and home mortgagors and mortgagees an adjustment of farm and home mortgage indebtedness wherever it may be found practical to do so. There was no corresponding provision in the House bill. The conference agreement omits the provision of the Senate amendment.

The House bill prohibited the establishment of a Federal savings and loan association in any community unless it can be established without undue injury to properly conducted existing local thrift and home-financing institutions. The Senate amendment provides that no such association may be established if one or more properly conducted local thrift and home-financing institutions is then in existence. The conference agreement retains the language of the House bill.

Under the House bill $100,000 was authorized to be appropriated for expenditure by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board for encouraging local thrift and home-financing and the promotion, organization, and development of Federal savings and loan associations, or similar associations. The Senate amendment authorizes an appropriation of $250,000 for this purpose. The conference agreement fixes the amount at $150,000.

The Senate amendment contains a provision for appointment by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board of directors of Federal home-loan banks and Federal savings and loan associations on the basis of capital stock in such banks and associations held by the Government. There was no corresponding provision in the House bill. The conference agreement omits the provisions of the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment also adds a provision prohibiting commissions or other charges in connection with loans made by the Corporation under the bill, except as authorized and required by the corporation for services actually rendered for examination and perfecting of title, appraisals, and like necessary services. There was no corresponding provision in the House bill. The conference agreement retains the substance of this provision of the Senate amendment and clarifies the language.

The conference agreement also makes certain minor clarifying changes.

HENRY B. STEAGALL,
T ALAN GOLDSBOROUGH,
ROBERT LUCE,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The conference report was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. STEAGALL, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the conference report was agreed to was laid on the table.

HOUR OF MEETING TOMORROW

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to meet at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

LEAVE TO FILE REPORTS

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Rules may have until 12 o'clock tonight to file reports.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

[House Report No. 228, Seventy-third Congress, first session]

CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 5389

Mr. POU, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following report (to accompany H.Res. 185):

The Committee on Rules having had under consideration House Resolution 185, reports the same to the House with the recommendation that the resolution do pass.

"Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution, the bill, H.R. 5389, with Senate amendments thereto, be, and the same hereby is, taken from the Speaker's table; that Senate amendments nos. 1 to 46, inclusive, and Senate amendment no. 48 be, and the same are hereby, disagreed to; that the House shall immediately proceed to the consideration of said Senate amendment no. 47 and that in the consideration of said Senate amendment no. 47 the following motion to concur with an amendment shall be in order and no other intervening motion shall be in order until said motion is fully disposed of.

"In lieu of the matter inserted by said Senate amendment no. 47 insert the following:

"'The President is hereby authorized under the provisions of Public, No. 2, Seventy-third Congress, to establish such number of special boards (the majority of the members of which were not in the employ of the Veterans' Administration at the date of enactment of this act) as he may deem necessary to review all claims (where the veteran entered service prior to November 11, 1918, and whose disability is not the result of his own misconduct), in which presumptive service connection has heretofore been granted under the World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended, wherein payments were being made on March 20, 1933, and which are held not service connected under the regulations issued pursuant to Public, No. 2, Seventy-third Congress. Members of such boards may be appointed without regard to the Civil Service laws and regulations and their compensation fixed without regard to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended. Such special boards shall determine, on all available evidence, the question whether service connection shall be granted under the provisions of the regulations issued pursuant to Public, No. 2, Seventy-third Congress, and shall in their decisions resolve all reasonable doubts in favor of the veteran. For the purposes of this section, the granting of service connection shall not be confined to the periods authorized by regulation no. 1, part I, subparagraph (c), or instruction no. 2, regulation no. 1, issued under Public, No. 1, Seventy-third Congress, it being the intent of this section to preserve service connections as granted by section 200, World War Veterans' Act of 1924, as amended (other than disability resulting from the claimant's own misconduct), unless affirmative evidence clearly discloses that the disease or disability had its inception before or after the period of military or naval service and not aggravated thereby.

"'Notwithstanding the provisions of Public, No. 2, Seventy-third Congress, the decisions of such special boards shall be final in such cases, subject to such appellate procedure as the President may prescribe, and, except for fraud, mistake, or misrepresentation, 75 percent of the payments being made on March 20, 1933, therein shall continue to October 31, 1933, or the date of special board decision, whichever is the earlier date: Provided, That where any case is pending before any one of the special boards on October 31, 1933, the President may provide for extending the time of payment until decision can be rendered. The President shall prescribe such rules governing reviews and hearings as may be deemed advisable. Payment of salaries and expenses of such boards and personnel assigned thereto shall be paid out of and in accordance with appropriations for the Veterans' Administration.

"'Notwithstanding any of the provisions of Public, No. 2, Seventy-third Congress, in no event shall the rates of compensation payable for directly service-connected disabilities to those veterans who entered the active military or naval service prior to November 11, 1918, and whose disabilities are not the result of their own misconduct, where they were except by fraud, mistake, or misrepresentation in receipt of compensation on March 20, 1933, be reduced more than 25 percent; and in no event shall death compensation, except by fraud, mistake, or misrepresentation, being paid to widows, children, and dependent parents of deceased World War veterans under the World War Veterans' Act of 1924, as amended, on March 20, 1933, be reduced or discontinued, whether the death of the veteran on whose account compensation is being paid was directly or presumptively connected with service.'"

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Banking and Currency have until midnight to file committee reports on S. 1425, S. 1634, and S. 1648. These are minor measures making amendments to bills that have already passed, unanimously reported by the committee.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

The following Members asked for and were given leave to extend their remarks in the RECORD:

Mr. MCCORMACK, Mr. TREADWAY, to include certain tables; Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri, to include a resolution; Mr. BRUNNER, Mr. ZIONCHECK, Mr. CARPENTER of Nebraska, Mr. TRUAX, Mr. GRANFIELD, Mr. GAVAGAN, Mr. WEARIN, Mr. REILLY, Mr. LUCE, Mr. MOTT, Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania, Mr. BEITER, and Mr. HOIDALE.

VETERANS' PENSIONS

Mr. CARPENTER of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, it is only after considerable thought that I rise to make the following observations and statements.

On Wednesday, with 10 other new Members, I went to the White House. We had an appointment with the President to discuss with him the liberalization of the recent reductions to veterans caused by the enactment of the economy bill and to learn at first hand the President's views and the aim of the administration. After this conference it was the opinion of our small group that no one could reasonably question the President's genuine sympathy with the veterans of all wars. He implied that he favored the Connolly amendment to the independent offices appropriation bill, with a few small changes that would not, in our judgment, be an injustice to any deserving veterans, whether his claims were service-connected or not.

I challenge anyone on the floor of this House to show that he is any more in sympathy with the veterans than I am. I am willing to stay here all summer to see that the veterans receive a square deal and are given proper care and consideration. However, I am not in favor of being made a party to the mistaken and partisan leadership of the Republican Party. If new taxes will be required for taking care of the veteran, I am in favor of levying them—but not as we have levied taxes in the past.

The Secretary of the Treasury has asked the public to subscribe to a billion dollars' worth of Government notes to meet the cost of the public-works program. Now, the contractors will not be paid with bonds or notes but will be paid with money printed and backed by the United States Government. Why not print this money and pay it to them instead of borrowing it and then paying interest on Government bonds? The money with the Government's name on it is exactly as good as a bond or note with the Government's name on it. Why do we insist on putting out these notes and bonds to make more taxes in order to pay the billions of interest in the next 20 years?

If the Government borrows three billions and takes 20 years to repay the interest will amount to twice as much as the money that was borrowed. Why pay $6,000,000,000 interest on three billions? Why pay out nine billions when three billions will do the work? Currency can be retired as orderly as bonds and much more rapidly because there will not be the additional burden of interest.

I have said before, and I say again, that the Government can become bankrupt by issuing too many bonds just as easily as overinflation can destroy our credit. If we can control bond issues, we can also control currency issues.

We now have some twenty-one billions of tax-free bonds outstanding, most of which are in the hands of J. P. Morgan & Co. and other large financiers. It has been shown that these bankers have been forced to pay taxes to foreign countries on bonds, but in this country they have been able legally to evade tax payments because of the loopholes in the lopsided income tax laws passed by the Republican leadership in the past few years. Personally, I am not yet ready to admit that income taxes cannot be collected. Nor do I favor saying that men who are able to pay income taxes shall be exempt and the tax load placed on the shoulders of the little man through a sales tax. I do not want to admit that we are not able to make laws and administer justice to all our people.

But why should we pay interest on $21,000,000,000? Take these twenty-one billions of bonds out of the hands of the rich and place them in the United States Treasury and issue money in full payment to the holders of these bonds. The bonds remain as security for the money and can be retired easily with the same amount that would be necessary for interest under the present plan. In 20 years you will have the debt paid and you will not have paid out double the debt in interest.

By this procedure you can save the taxpayers of this country around eight hundred millions a year! The Budget will then be balanced and there will be money to spare. Let us—just once—look at these matters as they really are instead of forever looking back toward the past and forever believing in the fallacies which have brought on our troubles. Through the short-sightedness of our past leadership, or through the influence of men like J. P. Morgan and his associates, we have continued in the old rut and have been unwilling to change the present unworkable financial setup. What this country needs is new thought and younger men with the courage of their convictions who will not be guided entirely by precedent. President Roosevelt, our new leader, has shown us the way through his new deal. Let us now follow the way.

Of particular interest to me is the Spanish War veteran. I am determined to see that he is given more consideration. It is quite difficult after 35 years for those men to prove their service in the Army was the direct cause of their present disabilities. The President has assured us that whenever there is a question of a doubt about a presumptive case the Spanish War veteran will receive the benefit of the doubt. These men are mostly old men, over the age of 60 years, and it is an obligation of this Government to see that not one of them or their immediate families is in want.

The World War veteran, wounded in service or disabled from his service in the Army, should receive the same consideration as the Spanish War veteran. The President has given us to understand that these ex-soldiers will be cared for in a very humane way and in a manner that is a credit to our country and to the great Democratic Party. There are so many thousands of veterans to be considered that it is quite possible that some mistakes in judgment will be made. When such cases come up among the men I represent, I will do everything I can to see that they are given due consideration and compensation.

I come from a State where independent thought and action are recognized and expressed. We of Nebraska never surrender that right, and it is too late now for the newer men from that State to push aside the principles of good government and fair dealing that have long been championed by such men as Senator GEORGE W. NORRIS.

With these few remarks, I cast my ballot for the passage of the Connolly amendment and the liberalization of the provisions of the Economy Act. Also, I am proud to stand by one of the greatest Presidents this country has ever had—Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

PERSECUTION OF THE GERMAN JEWISH PEOPLE

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I have watched with increasing anxiety developments in Germany since Adolf Hitler assumed controlling power. The time has come when I may no longer refrain from expressing my condemnation of the policy being pursued by the present German Government, particularly as it applies to a ruthless agonizing of the Jews.

To me as an American such relentless disregard for the principles of liberty, justice, and equality was at first too grotesque to believe. To me as a human being such truculent instigation of human suffering seemed too diabolical to be an occurrence in this age of spiritual enlightenment and social and scientific progress. But as later events confirmed the truth of the early reports, as the word of trusted and responsible persons told all too sorrowfully that in Germany a minority race was being subjected to a malevolent persecution such as we had hoped the world would never see again, I no longer can sit back quietly and neutrally trust that Germany will sooner or later come to her senses and that the threatening clouds of an outmoded tyranny will disappear.

Christianity cannot ignore the debt she owes to Judaism. The tenets of toleration for all, freedom for all, peace among all, were sounded by the prophets of Israel long before Christ was born. These same principles of liberty, freedom, and peace form the very bedrock of the Republic of the United States. Believing in them as I do, fighting for them as I always have and always will, the attempt of the Hitler regime to destroy them strikes a note of fear and of repugnance within me.

In previous years such violation of the fundamental concepts of our modern civilization have been permitted by other nations. An irate justice, fighting with both pen and sword, word and deed, bled to bring those erring nations to a comprehension of their crime.

But Germany is not a nation that can be spanked and put to bed supperless, as we would a naughty child. Hers is a powerful people, intelligent and ambitious. Her contribution to the advancement of science, the arts, legislation, philosophy, the professions, in short to every phase of the civilization to which we point with pardonable pride has been noteworthy and valuable. Her influence among other nations has been considerable. Her prowess and accomplishments in the past have won the unstinted admiration of all men.

Germany will not rest until she has once again resumed her place of prominence in the economic, social, and cultural sphere.

This is the thing that worries me. Due to the unrest and discontent prevailing among the European peoples today, and because of the concentrated energy with which she is pursuing her end, Germany is likely to reach her goal sooner than is generally expected. Once again able to command respect from lesser nations, to what pernicious limits may not the execrable influence of Adolf Hitler extend? What other nations, aping Germany, may not adopt her policy, oblivious, as in Germany, to the protests of the world?

Many able men have already expressed themselves regarding the deplorable situation that exists in Germany today. I share their feelings and their fears, and not only protest the barbarities now being committed but exhort you to prevent their spread.

I fervently trust that the efforts being made to bring to an end the crimes now perpetrated against the Jewish people in Germany will bear such successful fruition that racial persecution will forever be a thing of an unhappy past.

PERSECUTION OF JEWS IN GERMANY

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I represent a district composed, I would say, of 50 percent of citizens of German extraction. They are a law-abiding, God-fearing people, and are a credit to the community. They have largely contributed toward making St. Louis the great city that it is. Like all Americans who are opposed to intolerance, I am sure that they resent the persecution of people of the Jewish faith in the German Republic.

Within the boundaries of my district there also reside thousands of law-abiding citizens of the Jewish faith. They are greatly exercised over the tragic situation that confronts the Jewish citizens of Germany. For a long time they remained silent until positive proof was established that physical violence persisted.

Numerous mass meetings and conferences have been held, and I include as part of my remarks a resolution adopted on April 23, 1933, at a conference attended by representatives of every Jewish organization of St. Louis. The resolution follows:

This conference assembled in the Young Men's Hebrew Association auditorium in St. Louis, Mo., Sunday afternoon, April 23, 1933, and composed of accredited delegates of local Jewish organizations, after appropriate discussion and a unanimous vote, respectfully submits, in behalf of the Jewish community of St. Louis, to the United States Government, the following statement and petition, with reference to the present tragic condition of the Jews in Germany:

Since the accession to power of the Hitler government there has existed for the Jews of Germany a veritable reign of terror. Countless numbers of cases have been reported of physical violence perpetrated on defenseless Jews by the Nazi troops, resulting in numerous deaths and in severe bodily injuries to hundreds. These atrocities have been confirmed by some of the victims themselves, by numbers of eye witnesses, by impartial non-Jewish investigators and correspondents of the leading journals of many lands, and by governmental agencies, including our own State Department.

Innocent Jews are subjected to every manner of outrage and indignity, and men are not spared who have won international fame in their callings, through distinctive contributions to human thought and scientific knowledge. Jewish property has been confiscated without a semblance of justification. Boycotts against Jewish tradesmen, industrialists and professional men; wholesale discharge and virtual exclusion by governmental decree of Jews from public office, educational institutions, hospitals, courts, etc., and restrictions ousting and barring Jews from the professions, excepting a negligible percentage, are threatening to reduce the Jewish population to a state of pauperism and degradation. Such decrees of exclusion and restriction, ruthlessly enforced and imposed upon even scholars and scientists of world renown, have been promulgated by a government which complains through its well-organized propaganda agencies that Germany is being maligned by its enemies abroad.

The Hitler Administration now threatens to divest the Jews of Germany of their fundamental rights and to reduce them to second-class citizens or, in other words, to a status of unprotected aliens, if not "untouchables."

This conference submits that the Jews of Germany have well earned their citizenship, through age-long citizenship dating as far back, in some communities, as the fourth century; through consistent patriotic service in peace and in war—including the recent World War, in which 25 percent of the Jewish population, aggregating 100,000 Jews, served and 12,000 died on the various battlefields; and also through illustrious achievements in every field of human endeavor—contributions which have added luster to the German flag and which have brought fame and honor to the German people the world over.

This conference voices the deep concern of St. Louis Jewry with reference to the fate of German Jewry, and respectfully petitions the Congress and the President of the United States to intercede as early as possible in behalf of a people that is being crushed in every respect by a government which has revived the hatreds and persecutions of the Middle Ages and threatens the peace of the world.

This conference further appeals to the conscience of the great German people to rise up and protect the lives and property of their Jewish citizens as well as their rights and their privileges of citizenship, which they have so genuinely appreciated and so well deserved. The honor and the peace of Germany are at stake.

This conference resolves that copies of this statement and petition be sent to the President of the United States, to the Secretary of State, to the Senators of this State and to all the Missouri Representatives in Congress, and to the press.

Mr. Speaker, I have repeatedly presented to the Secretary of State the appeal of the people of Jewish faith that I represent, urging that this country use its offices to put an end to this intolerable situation. I join with these good people in the hope that our Government will express itself to the Hitler government in behalf of the individual rights of and social justice for citizens of all faiths.

A REVIEW OF THE ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF THE SPECIAL SESSION OF THE SEVENTY-THIRD CONGRESS

Mr. BEITER. Mr. Speaker, like every American citizen, I am deeply concerned in the courageous and able manner in which our President is attempting to bring order out of chaos, and I believe the program that has been adopted at this special session of Congress is one that will do much to relieve the distress that has been prevalent for the past few years.

At present the most accurate forecastings of events must be accepted with mental reservation. Prophets, wise in their own estimation, assured us that the crisis was of short duration, that we would soon see the dawn of a brighter day. Many of us believed that a nation so rich in natural resources, so far advanced in every line of human endeavor, so secure by reason of the dauntless spirit of its people, would quickly recover from its appalling shock. But since then we have grown more cautious and demand more convincing evidence than mere predictions born of emotional optimism. Whatever steps have thus far been taken to ameliorate conditions, it must be obvious to the most casual observer that the end of this stupendous national drama is not yet in sight. The sure way to prosperity has not yet been found. Countless theories for economic recovery have been advanced, but as yet many of the most perplexing as well as momentous problems facing us today remain wholly or partially unsolved. The fact is we are not entirely sure of ourselves regarding many vital matters. In a situation such as the present one, working practically every enterprise, as well as the interests of nearly all our citizens, progress is essentially slow. It should be unnecessary to remind anyone of the deplorable and alarming conditions which exist everywhere throughout our land. In many respects the present crisis is without a precedent in our Nation's history. Particular references need not be made. Our national plight, the countless failures, the impoverished millions, the general prostration of industry, the decay of agriculture—all these distressing calamities which confront us today have been so widely discussed that we are all more or less aware of the magnitude of the task which at this moment commands our attention.

What I have stated may seem to some as an admission of defeat; at least that my observations are confessedly discouraging. Assuming that to be the case, I am still reluctant to revise any of the statements which I have thus far made, for I see no advantage in distorting the facts. Moreover, we will be able to more fully appreciate what has already been accomplished when we realize the many difficulties and trying ordeals which beset our pathway. That we have made progress and are fully justified in demanding continued confidence in the new administration is unquestionably the prevailing sentiment of the American people.

There is a reason for this sudden change in the mental attitude of the average citizen. He has seen the gradual unfolding and development of a comprehensive program. Already amazing results have ben achieved by the operation of laws enacted in Washington. The matchless courage and determination displayed by the President, together with the loyalty and cooperation of Congress, have stimulated new hope and confidence in millions of languishing hearts. From every section of the country reports are received of improvements, of advancing progress, of fundamental changes in business and enterprise, which plainly indicate that this Nation is gradually but surely "emerging from the depths" of despair. The tide of events has changed. We may look into the future with assured hope and confidence. In the short time allotted to me may I review briefly some of the important measures which have engaged the attention of Congress.

EMERGENCY BANKING LEGISLATION

In the years of depression the banking system became demoralized. Each succeeding year we witnessed an increased number of failures. National as well as State banks everywhere were collapsing in increasing numbers. Millions were involved in this terrible catastrophe. The aggregate losses stifle the imagination. Almost immediately upon the convening of Congress the President brought this existing emergency in banking to the attention of the House and Senate. A law was passed providing instant relief. The President's proclamation, declaring a holiday for all operating banks, was a master stroke. Further delay in approaching this dire situation might have proved fatal to the financial structure of this country. Since, however, this emergency measure was enacted and an investigation undertaken to determine the actual condition of each bank, fear and hysteria have in a large measure vanished, all sound banks have resumed their normal functions, and a general feeling of confidence and security has been restored.

The Economy Act was another timely measure. We were near the threshold of bankruptcy. It was imperative to formulate some plan whereby the credit of our Government would not be totally and possibly permanently impaired. While the action of Congress in conferring drastic authority upon the President received some criticism, it is apparent now, even to those who were skeptical of the results sought to be accomplished, that its proposal as an emergency measure was fully justified. In this connection I wish to explain my vote on the measure. I opposed the passage of the bill in its original form. I disapproved of the economies contemplated in the act at the expense of the war veterans and widows of veterans.

It is gratifying to me to know that I had a part in bringing about the revision which will become effective under the President's new orders. It seems like a travesty upon justice that those who have been our defenders, risking life and all in the defense of flag and country, should now be called upon to make another sacrifice in order that the institutions of our Government—in fact the very existence of our Nation—may endure, when we know that we have permitted economic evils to flourish, political vice and corruption to go on unchecked, or unfinished projects, both costly and untimely, to be promoted, public funds to be used in the most extravagant manner. However, these are past mistakes. The real causes of this depression and its disastrous consequences must not command our attention for the present. We are concerned with possible remedies, policies, and principles which will enable us as a nation to carry on, and in the fullness of time insure a complete and permanent restoration. The financial credit of the Nation must be maintained at any cost. Almost half a billion of dollars has been cut from governmental expenditures by the operation of the Economy Act.

BEER BILL

The passage of the beer bill, so called, followed in close succession. To provide new and additional revenue it was necessary to find new and additional sources of taxation. Without delay or unnecessary ceremony the bill was passed by Congress and approved by the President. The manufacture and sale of beer and wines with not more than 3.2 percent of alcohol by weight have been legalized. More than $10,000,000 has already been collected. In addition to the direct benefit derived from this legislation thousands have found steady employment. It has been conservatively estimated that the returns from the beer tax will yield approximately $500,000,000. It is one of the important factors in balancing the National Budget.

HOME OWNERS' AND FARM-RELIEF LEGISLATION

I will not attempt to discuss at length the legislation proposed and that is already in effect pertaining to farm relief. The plight of the farmer presents problems of major economic importance. The loss which the farm has sustained during the past years of the depression by reason of the violent decline of prices and the deflation of land values is appalling. It is proposed to give immediate relief to those in dire distress. To enable him to refinance his indebtedness in more convenient terms, to provide working capital in reasonable amounts, to assist him to redeem or repurchase his foreclosed farm home, to provide for liquidating in an orderly manner the affairs of joint-land banks—these are some of the important provisions incorporated in the general plan. I feel confident, notwithstanding the criticism heard in reference to the method or plan proposed, that the action taken to help the farmer in his misfortune will prove feasible and produce far-reaching results. I might dwell briefly upon a kindred proposal. Not only is the farmer oppressed by the burden of mortgage debt, but the small home owner has suffered likewise. Those threatened by foreclosure have found it difficult and in most instances impossible to obtain financial help from their local banks, with the result that they were obliged to lose their homes. The equity claimed in the property often represents the savings of years, and yet under a foreclosure sale it is completely wiped out. For this worthy purpose an amount not to exceed $2,000,000,000 will be made available. A newly created corporation, called "home owners' loan corporation", will be in charge of the funds and will, within prescribed limitations, carry out the purposes of the bill. It is possible in this arrangement to get sufficient cash to pay delinquent taxes and assessments or to make repairs where necessary.

It must be apparent to every citizen who believes in the preservation of American ideals that the bills to which I am referring are of the most vital importance. J. G. Holland's observatons, "The homes of a nation are the bulwarks of personal and national safety and thrift", are indeed appropriate at this time.

SECURITIES ACT

Legislation has been enacted designed to protect the innocent investor against dishonest practices heretofore indulged in by unscrupulous salesmen. Included among the list of unfortunates who have suffered severe losses are many of our smaller banks and financial institutions. The major purposes of the act will be to furnish correct information relative to each issue, and thereby enable the investor to judge intelligently the character of the securities which are being offered to the purchasing public from time to time.

Perhaps one of the most intricate problems which is commanding attention is the financial plight in which we find so many of our cities and smaller municipalities. In the years of prosperity great projects were undertaken, many of which are far in advance of their needs. Bond issues were authorized with a reckless disregard. It was not only the individual who was then seized with the mania of spending; municipalities were equally careless and overventuresome. The result is that many of our once prosperous communities are on the verge of bankruptcy. The bonds have depreciated and in some cases will never be paid in full. Some relief by moratorium or otherwise seems necessary. Shall we permit such municipalities to repudiate their obligations? This has been suggested and approved by some on the ground of expediency; but I entertain a different view. The sale of public securities in general would be immediately impaired. Continued confidence in the integrity of our political subdivision, large or small, is essential to future development and progress. Some way must be devised to enable impoverished communities to meet their obligations some time or another.

Laws permitting the refunding of their indebtedness might be desirable in many cases. In extending the maturity dates or reducing the installments of principal would enable many communities to pay their obligations in full and without default or loss. I feel certain that some action will be taken to meet such emergencies.

INFLATION

We have gone off the gold standard with the march of events here and abroad; and expansion of our currency became necessary. While some have become much alarmed over our sudden departure from the gold standard, it should be noted in this connection that the President was vested with power and authority to direct the policies so far as currency expansion is concerned. Of course the immediate results expected are inflation and stabilization of prices. No one is prepared to say what may be the outcome of this rather drastic innovation in our financial system. My confidence in the leadership of the Chief Executive leads me to believe that we have nothing to fear. The integrity of the American dollar will be preserved.

UNEMPLOYMENT

The reforestation project so zealously advocated by the President, even before he became President, has already been undertaken. It is affording employment to hundreds who are and have been dependent on public charity for food and shelter. Relief measures are being enacted to aid the unemployed in various ways. The Federal Government is cooperating with several States and smaller political subdivisions in extending relief to the millions who have been forced to endure not only physical hardship but mental anguish. Every effort will be exerted to make this once more the land of opportunity for all.

RAILROAD LEGISLATION

The enactment of the Emergency Railroad Transportation Act, providing for a consolidation of railroad operations, will do much to foster and protect interstate commerce in relation to railroad transportation by preventing and relieving obstructions and burdens thereon resulting from the present acute economic emergency. Under this act a safe and adequate national system of transportation will be maintained.

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY

Congress has provided for the machinery necessary for a great cooperative movement throughout all industry in order to obtain wide reemployment, to shorten the working week, to pay a decent wage for the shorter week, and to prevent unfair competition and disastrous overproduction.

The act provides that any trade or industrial association or group is authorized to prepare and submit to the President for approval a code of fair competition, which will regulate the competitive practices within the industry or trade represented. This gives each trade or industry an opportunity to adjust itself and is of particular benefit to our independent merchants.

The act also gives the President full power to start a large program of direct employment. Approximately $3,300,000,000 will be spent for useful and necessary public construction and at the same time put a large number of people to work.

Grants are permitted to the States (not to exceed $400,000,000 in aggregate amount) for emergency construction of public highways and extensions and for the elimination of hazards to highway traffic, such as grade crossings, the widening of narrow bridges and roadways.

The provisions of the National Industrial Recovery Act, which have been heretofore briefly described, should be considered as providing an interrelated program for the relief of unemployment and a substantial increase in mass purchasing power, through the construction of public works combined with measures for stabilizing private industrial operations. By establishing maximum hours of work and minimum wages we may insure the continued employment of those now employed and furnish work for a substantial percentage of those now idle, and this brings about security of employment for millions of our people at wages sufficient to provide for living in decency and comfort. By raising the standard of labor conditions throughout trade and industry, through voluntary cooperation with the aid of the Government, unfair competition, based upon the employment of underpaid and overworked labor, should be generally eliminated. As the result of such a program, we may confidently expect a further stimulation of industrial operations, greater security of capital, greater security of labor, and a steady increase in the prosperity of the Nation. The public-works program should produce immediate substantial revival of business. The industrial-recovery program should not only add to this stimulation but should insure the permanence of a return to better, healthier, and happier conditions throughout the industries of the Nation.

MUSCLE SHOALS

Muscle Shoals is located in the northwest corner of the State of Alabama on the Tennessee River. In point of potential hydroelectric energy it is one of the greatest streams in the world. Eliminating the Columbia, the Colorado, and the Niagara Rivers, it is the greatest in continental United States.

President Wilson located the nitrate plants at Muscle Shoals by the authority given him in the National Defense Act of 1916. The nitrate plants were constructed for two fundamental purposes—for the manufacture of munitions in time of war and fertilizer for the benefit of American agriculture in peace time. The plants were completed just as the war ended, and the Wilson Dam and hydroelectric development were completed afterwards. Various attempts to have the fertilizer plants put into operation since 1920 have failed, owing to the opposition of the power and fertilizer interests. Two bills have been sent to the White House, bupt neither met with the approval of either President Coolidge or President Hoover.

President Roosevelt made a full and complete inspection of the Muscle Shoals plants and recommended legislation providing for the operation of the plants and development of the Tennessee River Basin. The bill was passed and will give the people of that section of the Nation cheap water transportation, cheap electric power, the production of cheap concentrated fertilizer for the benefit of the farmers, provide food control, and preserve the natural resources of the Tennessee Valley. At the same time it will establish a great laboratory for the purpose of determining the cheapest and best method of manufacturing fertilizer, which is one of the greatest needs of agriculture at this time.

The surplus of electric power under the terms of this act will be disposed of at wholesale prices to cities, towns, States, corporations, partnerships, and individuals and cooperative organizations of farmers and citizens—preference always to be given to those who are not procuring it for the purpose of selling for a profit. Should it become necessary to assure low rates for the people, the corporation controlling the Muscle Shoals property is authorized to lease or build transmission lines to carry electric current to towns, communities, or cities. The building of transmission lines by the Authority at Muscle Shoals will depend on the success of efforts first to be made to have it transmitted by firms or companies engaged in the distribution and sale of electricity at fair and reasonable rates.

The surplus power is primarily for the benefit of the people as a whole, particularly domestic and rural consumers, who are given preference over industrial users. By making maximum developments on the Tennessee and its tributaries, industries no doubt will be able to procure power for their use and the cost of developing on a large scale will make the price to the domestic user very much less by reason of this large load factor.

In reviewing recent events and happenings—the activities of Congress and the President—I regret that much valuable and interesting information must be omitted. The purpose of this address is to point out rather than to discuss in detail some of the most important achievements accomplished in the comparatively few months during which Congress has been in session. I trust that you, my fellow citizens, may be able to form some conception of the great aims of the President and all those cooperating with him in one of the greatest battles waged in time of peace.

THE DEMOCRATIC PROPOSAL FOR TARIFF RECIPROCITY

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, since the beginning of this special session of Congress there have been constant rumors of the intention of the President to ask for special authority in regard to the tariff similar to that which he has requested and received in practically every other line of governmental activity. It appears that he desired to have delegated to him, for use in connection with the World Economic Conference, certain general powers enabling him to enter into reciprocal tariff agreements with foreign countries in the hope of expanding the present volume of foreign trade.

One day we would hear that a tariff message was on the way to the Capitol, and the next day that it probably would not be sent up at all. This has been going on for weeks. It is known that a bill granting the necessary authority to the President has been prepared, but its introduction has been withheld pending the receipt of the long-awaited tariff message. Now, as we are approaching what presumably are the final days of the session, it would seem that for once, at least, the courage to ask has been somewhat weakened. The adage says, "Ask and ye shall receive", but asking for special authority over the tariff might result in receiving something entirely different from that asked for.

Notwithstanding the nonreceipt of the expected tariff message, it would seem that the present is an opportune time for an academic discussion of the tariff from the Republican standpoint and for a renewal of the Republican pledge of protection to American industry, agriculture, and labor, at the same time pointing out the fallacies of the Democratic tariff doctrine. Such a discussion would seem to be especially timely in view of the tariff plank in the 1932 Democratic platform and of the expressed sentiments of Democratic leaders, as well as the known views of the American delegates to the Economic Conference who are representing this country abroad today.

THE DEMOCRATIC TARIFF POLICY

Following is the Democratic tariff policy as contained in the platform of the party adopted at the Chicago convention:

> We advocate a competitive tariff for revenue, with a fact-finding Tariff Commission free from executive interference, reciprocal tariff agreements with other nations, and an international economic conference designed to restore international trade and facilitate exchange.

Thus the circumstance that the President during the present session has failed to ask for authority to conclude reciprocal tariff agreements cannot change the fact that the Democratic Party is committed to such a program—a program which the President undoubtedly would have carried out if he had felt that the necessary legislation could have been enacted without jeopardizing other important matters and without throwing the Congress into an extended discussion of this explosive subject. It is well known that he desired to have the Congress out of the way before the opening of the London Economic Conference on June 12.

In proposing to ask for power over the tariff, the President was but carrying out in his own way the tariff plank of his party. He stands committed to that plank, having publicly declared that the Democratic platform represents his program of legislation. This tariff plank also represents the views of 5 out of 6 of the American delegates to the London Conference. It also represents the views of the Democratic leadership in Congress. Therefore, even though the reciprocity plank is not to be translated into legislation immediately, we do know that, from the President down, the leadership of the Democratic Party is desirous that it be done as soon as practicable. No doubt the subject will be brought up at the January session of Congress.

In connection with the Democratic proposal for reciprocal tariff bargaining, it should also be kept in mind that the Democratic platform also calls for a "competitive tariff for revenue only." This means that the Republican principle of protection is to be cast aside, to be superseded by a principle which encourages foreign competition in the domestic market. Undoubtedly this part of the platform will also be given consideration at the next session of Congress. Therefore it becomes doubly important to lay the tariff issue squarely before the people.

DEMOCRATIC PROPOSAL WOULD DESTROY AMERICAN STANDARD OF LIVING

For nearly a century and a half our country has grown and prospered under the protective-tariff system. Every schoolboy knows that one of the first acts passed in the first session of Congress in 1789 was a tariff measure. The tariff has nurtured our early industries and fostered the growth of new ones. It has enabled our workers to receive higher wages than are paid in any other country in the world. It has built up our American standard of living. It has made possible the enjoyment by the common people of some of the comforts and luxuries of life which are unknown to a majority of the people in other countries. Now, the Democratic Party proposes to destroy that system by substituting a so-called "competitive tariff." Such a tariff will not enable us to maintain a great many of our present industries, and will throw thousands of additional workers out of employment. This means reduced wages, reduced purchasing power, a lowering of the standard of living, and a reduction of the domestic market for other home products.

WHAT IS A COMPETITIVE TARIFF?

Now, what is a competitive tariff? We had one in this country during the administration of Woodrow Wilson—the Underwood-Simmons Act—and only by reason of the fact that the European nations were thrown into war just after it was enacted was this country saved from the disastrous effects which otherwise would have followed. The World War made us a large exporting nation and gave us almost complete immunity from destructive foreign competition.

I will let the late Woodrow Wilson tell us in his own words what the competitive tariff is. He said that its theory is "to introduce in every line of industry a competitive basis providing for a substantial amount of importation." Thus, the basic test of a Democratic competitive tariff is to be found in the volume of imports which are allowed to come into this country to compete in the home market with domestic industry, agriculture, and labor. To this kind of a tariff the Democratic Party has again pledged itself, and the President is duty-bound to carry it into execution.

If the tariff had been the sole issue of the last political campaign, the Democratic Party would never have been swept into office on a proposal to substitute a competitive tariff for the Republican policy of protection. It is therefore idle to say that the people have spoken upon this issue. Other issues were predominant. But the people will certainly be heard from if the Democratic Party ever enacts into law its proposed bill letting the other nations of the world write our tariff laws and monopolize our home market, and they will speak in terms that can be understood.

"NO TIME TO REDUCE TARIFF"—RAINEY

My friends, this is no time to talk about reducing the tariff. I say this on the authority of one of the leaders of the administration, the distinguished Speaker of the House. When the Collier tariff measure was before the House in the Seventy-second Congress, the Speaker, then majority leader, said:

> Lower this tariff drastically? You [Republicans] will not do it and we [Democrats] dare not do it with conditions as they are. We do not want this market flooded with the products of cheap labor in other countries.

This statement of the Speaker I commend to you Democrats today. It may have been uttered in an unguarded moment, but I am sure it was spoken from the heart. It is common sense. It is good Republican doctrine. We do not want our market flooded with the products of cheap foreign labor, especially at this time when there are plenty of idle hands in this country that could be put to work.

RECIPROCITY AGREEMENTS WOULD PERMIT INCREASED FOREIGN IMPORTS

Like the competitive tariff policy of the Democratic Party, its reciprocity proposal likewise has no other purpose than to tear down our present tariff and admit increased quantities of foreign merchandise to displace the products of our own farms and factories. I know it is said that its real object is to expand our export trade, but we cannot expect to sell more goods abroad without buying more in return, and under the proposed bargaining agreements we would be expected to sacrifice some great domestic industry in order to sell more of the products of some other domestic industry to foreign nations. That is what reciprocity means—to give and take. In any such exchange with foreign countries I am sorely afraid that Uncle Sam would come out of the conference with the short end of the bargain. It is well known, as someone has said, that we have a habit of winning all our wars and losing all our conferences. There is no reason to think that a tariff conference would be an exception.

FOREIGN TARIFF RATES PADDED FOR BARGAINING PURPOSES

In connection with the matter of foreign trade conferences, I want to utter a word of warning, and this same warning is suggested in the Tariff Commission's recent report to the Senate on Tariff Bargaining Under Most-Favored Nation Treaties. It is common knowledge that foreign countries, especially in the last few years, have frequently revised their tariffs upward with a view, as the Tariff Commission points out, "to including in the revised rates bargaining margins which could be conceded to foreign countries without reducing the rates below those which are considered desirable from the point of view of national policy." In other words, tariff rates are "padded" for bargaining purposes. Now, it is obvious that any concessions made in these so-called "padded rates" would be purely illusory.

The following quotation from the Tariff Commission's report is of interest in relation to this matter:

> At this moment, when so many countries are maintaining emergency tariff rates and trade barriers, care must be taken to avoid the possibility that the United States would obtain in return for its tariff concessions only the abandonment of measures too cumbersome and oppressive, and of tariff rates too high, to outlast the depression. For example, the tariff rates imposed by certain European countries on wheat as measures of price stabilization and to save their producers from the effects of the abnormally low price of the commodity will inevitably be reduced if and when there is a substantial increase in the world price for cereals; and reciprocal tariff agreements by which concessions were made in return for the reduction of such temporary duties might mean the grant of valuable concessions in return for totally illusory concessions.

DEMOCRATS WORSHIP FETISH OF INTERNATIONALISM

Mr. Speaker, the fetish of internationalism is worshipped by the Democratic Party. This has been especially so since the influence of Woodrow Wilson upon its policies. But let me say to my Democratic friends that so far as the American people are concerned they will not stand for any further attempt to entangle us in the affairs of the Old World or to allow foreign nations to become entangled in our affairs by helping to determine our tariff policy. The last Democratic administration is still fresh in the minds of the present generation, and I am sure that the repudiation which was given to Woodrow Wilson's policies of internationalism in the election of 1920 must also be fresh in the minds of the present Democratic leadership.

The adjustment of our tariff duties has always been regarded solely as a domestic function and the home market has been considered the birthright of our own people. Like all other nations, we, as a people, possess the inherent power to limit and control the importation of goods from outside the borders of this country. This power has always been used to promote the general welfare of our citizens. Just as charity begins at home, so it is the duty of the Government to give first consideration to its own people. The tariff is an instrument of national policy, and we do not need any help from abroad in determining what that policy shall be.

DEMOCRATIC ILLUSIONS ABOUT INTERNATIONAL TRADE

The present Democratic administration, influenced by the Secretary of State, is laboring under strange illusions about international trade. It takes the position that if tariff barriers and other trade restrictions are removed we will be able to expand our export business to unprecedented proportions. It overlooks the fact, however, that the old order of things has changed. We no longer have strictly manufacturing countries and strictly agricultural countries. Most of the leading nations of the world are now industrialized and there is not the same opportunity as there formerly was for international exchange. Competition in world markets is becoming keener. There has been a rising tide of nationalism and self-containment. Each nation tries to produce what it needs within its own borders to a large extent, and is a competitor of every other nation in almost every commodity in world markets. Each has very much the same exportable surpluses to sell abroad, and the result is that the old markets have disappeared. We would like to sell our excess agricultural products in foreign markets, but so would all the other nations.

There is one fact in connection with our post-war foreign trade that must be faced frankly, and it is one that is so often overlooked. At the close of the war Europe was prostrate, while our country was rich and prosperous. Our production was geared up to the highest level, and we were able to produce the goods needed by other countries until they should be able to rehabilitate themselves. While these countries needed our goods, they had no funds to buy them, and so we made them loans, both through governmental channels and privately, which enabled our producers to reap a rich harvest in foreign trade. Thus, we financed our own export business. Now these countries are able to supply themselves, but I have no doubt that if we would lend them more money they would gladly buy more of our goods. However, in view of the difficulty we are having collecting the money we have already loaned, I am afraid we will hesitate a long time before again trying to finance a profitable export business.

HEADS THEY WIN—TAILS WE LOSE

The people of this country should not allow themselves to be deluded into thinking that just as soon as our tariff is reduced foreign nations are going to rush to trade with us. The removal of domestic and foreign trade barriers alone will not ipso facto expand our export trade. Naturally foreign nations will be glad to ship more goods into our markets, but how much will they take away with them? That is the important question, and it is also where the uncertainty lies. International trade is absolutely devoid of moral obligation, and we can sell abroad only that which we can furnish cheaper than other countries. If we cannot undersell our foreign competitors, we cannot expect to sell our goods in world markets.

RELATIVE UNIMPORTANCE OF FOREIGN TRADE

It is argued that to increase our export trade we must permit a larger volume of imports. This, of course, is true, but let me call your attention to the fact that in the banner year of 1929 our export trade was approximately $5,000,000,000 and our domestic production of movable goods about $53,000,000,000. Now, if we lower our tariff so as to cut our domestic production, say, 2 percent, or in the neighborhood of $1,000,000,000, then in order to offset this loss in the domestic market we would have to expand our export trade by 20 percent. Thus, by destroying one fiftieth of our domestic production, we would need to expand our foreign markets one fifth to make up the loss to domestic producers. The proposition, therefore, is very one-sided.

In 1931, according to Professor Donham, of Harvard University, our per capita exports were only 4 percent of our per capita income and 6 percent of our per capita production. It may well be asked, therefore, how our Democratic friends can expect to find prosperity by increasing 5 percent of our production and neglecting 95 percent.

Normally we consume 90 percent of our domestic production within this country, and anyone with the slightest spark of intelligence should be able to see that our prosperity depends to a much greater extent upon our home trade than it does upon our export business. The economic well-being of this country is based almost wholly upon the consuming power of our own people, and the problem before us today is to restore their buying power, not to decrease it. Let this be understood!

RECIPROCITY WOULD INCREASE UNEMPLOYMENT

It has long been said that the protective tariff never closed a domestic factory nor threw a worker out of employment. If the Democratic proposal to tear down the tariff would create jobs for our unemployed, it might be justified. However, such a program is not calculated to open up possibilities for employment, but rather to reduce them. The price which we have to pay to sell more goods abroad is too great to result in any net benefit to this country. We have everything to lose and nothing to gain. Our rich domestic market, the greatest in the world, would be sacrificed in order to enlarge our relatively small foreign trade. For a chance to increase our present export trade of one and one half billion dollars per year we are asked to throw open our home market to foreign competition—a market which in 1929 produced a national income of approximately $90,000,000,000.

Those who are advocating the reciprocity proposal may try to say that at the present time American workers have nothing to lose by being thrown into competition with labor in other countries. Nothing could be further from the truth. In spite of the fact that millions are out of employment the wage scale of those who still have jobs is above that of any other country in the world, and when prosperity returns, as some day it must, the men who are put back to work will receive this higher wage scale, provided, in the meantime, the maintenance of the American standard of living has not been made impossible as a result of destroying the protective tariff system. But in any event how can buying more textiles from the United Kingdom reopen our own textile plants? How can buying more steel goods from Germany give employment to our own steel workers? How can buying more wheat, milk, and other agricultural products from Canada help our American farmers? How can buying more meats from Argentina be of any assistance to our own cattle raisers? How can buying more shoes from Czechoslovakia put our own shoe factories back on the road to prosperity? How can buying more fruits and vegetables from Caribbean countries put any more money in the pockets of our own orchardists and truck gardeners? How can buying more oil from Venezuela help the domestic oil producers? My friends, such a question answers itself.

AMERICAN WAGES HIGHEST IN WORLD

If American workers think they are no better off than their foreign competitors, let them examine the figures on world wages. The higher scale of wages paid in this country cannot possibly be continued under a Democratic tariff law or under such rates as may be agreed upon by foreign countries. I shall insert in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks a table showing comparative wages in selected industries in this country and sundry other nations. (See exhibit A.) For the purpose of emphasizing the tremendous advantage our workers have over those in other countries, I will give the general averages of the industries named for each country, which are based on a 48-hour week:

United States	$26.30
England	11.37
Sweden	10.20
Germany	9.02
France	7.25
Belgium	6.21
Japan	5.37
Hungary	5.08
China	1.31

Among the industries included in this table are the following: Leather and shoes, chemicals, ceramics and pottery, iron and steel, paper making, cotton goods, cement, and woodworking. All of these industries are represented in my section of the country, and I do not hesitate to say that I would be sorry to see our workers forced by Democratic policies to compete with workers in China receiving an average of $1.31 per week or with those in France receiving an average of $7.25. Even the English average of $11.37 is less than half the average wage in this country in the industries named.

WAGES IN NEW ENGLAND INDUSTRIES

In connection with this general discussion of wage scales I should like to call attention to the wages paid in western Massachusetts for making certain products as compared with those paid in foreign countries for comparable articles. In my district we make a large quantity of small tools. The American wage for toolmakers is 60 cents per hour; the German rate, 16 cents. We also produce a considerable amount of wire cloth, which is used in paper making. The American wage in this industry is 56 cents per hour; the French rate, 20 cents. In the case of cutlery, of which my district is also a large producer, the American wage rate is 60 cents per hour, the British rate 17½ cents, the German rate 16 cents, and the Japanese rate only 7 cents.

In the production of darning cotton the American wage is 35 cents per hour; the French wage, 16 cents. In the firearms industry our workers receive 58 cents per hour, as against only 10 cents in Germany. Certain classes of cheap rugs are made by Japanese workers for 6 cents an hour. Sandals are made by Czechoslovakian workers for as little as 5 cents per hour. Now, the reason I mention these wage scales is simply this: Without a protective tariff our workers will have to labor for the same wages paid in competing foreign countries. Otherwise, we will be unable to produce these products in competition with such countries. Thus, the effect of the Democratic tariff proposal upon my district would be to destroy many of our industries, because my people will not, and certainly ought not to be expected to, work for such starvation wages as are paid in many foreign countries. Think of our shoe workers trying to subsist on 5 cents per hour! Imagine them trying to maintain a home, provide themselves and their families with even the ordinary comforts of life, and educate their children on such a wage! Yet that is precisely what the administration proposes to force upon them. It is an outrage, and I protest against it! I appeal to some of my Democratic friends to throw off their party yoke and help us Republicans kill this proposal when it is presented, not only to save our people from its disastrous effects but their own people as well.

NEW TRENDS IN COMPETITION

American workers are constantly being flattered by being told that they produce more than the workers in other countries, and hence that they are entitled to more wages. This is largely true. But let them also understand that with the improvement of machinery, less and less skill is required to produce manufactured goods than has been the case in times past. We have only recently witnessed the industrialization of such countries as Soviet Russia, Japan, and Czechoslovakia, which formerly were not competitors in the manufacturing field.

In this connection, I want to point out that there has been a drift in our import trade during the past few years which I think is rather significant in pointing to the kind of competition our domestic producers are going to have to meet. I refer to the fact that in many lines our imports are no longer coming from countries having living conditions and wage scales which tend to approximate our own, but rather from other countries with standards of living and wage scales known to be much lower than ours. For example, take the case of electric lamps. In 1923, our imports of lamps from Germany totaled nearly 8,000,000 units. By 1930, they had dropped to only a little over 700,000. During this same period, however, imports of lamps from Japan increased from 3,000,000 to nearly 29,000,000 units.

In 1923 we imported 42,000,000 pounds of window glass from Belgium; in 1930, 5,500,000 pounds. In the meantime, our imports from Czechoslovakia increased from 800,000 pounds to 6,000,000 pounds. In 1923, the United Kingdom was our principal source of embroidered and lace linen handkerchiefs—630,000 dozens as against 822 dozen from China. In 1930, the United Kingdom sent us 327,000 dozen and China, 1,271,000 dozen. Between 1926 and 1930, our imports of earthen tableware from England dropped from 2,000,000 dozen pieces to 1,000,000 dozen, while our imports from Japan in the same period jumped from 500,000 dozen to 1,600,000 dozen. I refer to these changes merely to show that competition is increasing from low-wage-standard countries, not alone in world markets but in our own market as well. To place our manufacturers in free competition with these countries means ruin to the home market and to American labor.

INCONSISTENCY OF DEMOCRATIC PROGRAM IN REGARD TO WAGES

Mr. Speaker, the President has just recently requested our employers to increase the wage level of their workers as quickly as they can. The inconsistency of this request with his proposal to destroy the protective tariff is at once apparent. How in heaven's name can we even maintain our American wage standard, let alone increase it, if we are to throw our workers into competition with the cheap labor of Europe and the Orient by reducing existing tariff rates? It cannot be done. Moreover, we cannot expect to find foreign markets for our goods unless we are prepared to meet the world price, and to meet this price we must lower our production costs, not increase them. Thus, the President's proposal for tariff reciprocity is doubly inconsistent with his request for wage increases. Low wages and low prices are necessary to compete in world markets, and this means a lowering of our standard of living, longer instead of shorter hours of employment, and less leisure and comfort.

How can our workers be expected to compete with those of the rest of the world without being reduced to the same wage scales and the same standards of living? How can the American farmer sell his surplus crops abroad except by meeting the price of his Russian, Canadian, or Argentinian competitor? In the domestic market, with a proper tariff, we do not need to be so much concerned with world prices. Our producers receive American prices, they pay their employees American wages, and these wages are spent in maintaining the American standard of living.

DEMOCRATS CHANGE CRY OF "BUY AMERICAN" TO "BUY FOREIGN"

There is now going on in this country a campaign to educate our people to "Buy American." The purpose of this campaign, of course, is to give employment to labor in this country by favoring our own products over those which are imported. The shelves of our jobbing houses and retail stores are crowded with foreign merchandise. Most of the articles could be and are being made in this country. If these shelves were filled instead with domestic goods, employment would thereby be given to American labor, and the workers engaged in producing these merchandise would be able to purchase other domestic products. Now, the administration would have us change the cry of "Buy American" to "Buy Foreign." The Democratic heart goes out to the workers of other countries who are without jobs, but it does not respond to the entreaties of our own workers for an opportunity to produce the merchandise consumed in this country. Instead of putting more domestic goods on the shelves of our retail stores the administration would have us purchase more and more foreign goods and try to sell our own products in the markets of the world at prices that we are unable to meet.

ATTITUDE OF EXPORT INDUSTRIES AND INTERNATIONAL BANKERS

Mr. Speaker, this agitation for tariff reduction and reciprocity in order to attempt to expand our export trade is being given impetus by two great groups in this country. I refer to the so-called "export industries" and the international bankers. As long as the export industries can sell their goods abroad, they do not care a continental about what happens to other domestic industries, and as long as the international bankers can collect the debts which are owed to them by foreign nationals they have no concern about the havoc which would be wrought in the home market by the adoption of their program.

What is it going to benefit us to shut down one industry for the benefit of another? The more we diversify our industries, the less apt we are to produce surpluses in any one of them. Moreover, an industry once destroyed cannot easily be restored; and when we have no domestic production of an article, we are absolutely at the mercy of foreign nations so far as the price of that article is concerned. If we are to have a monopoly, let it be in this country where it can be controlled. A few years ago we witnessed the British rubber producers raise the price of rubber beyond all reason; and sice we had no supply of our own, we could have been made to pay any price they might have asked. This experience should be an object lesson for us.

WHAT INDUSTRIES ARE TO BE SACRIFICED IN TARIFF BARGAINING?

Now, what would the administration do with the power desired? The Executive wishes to secure easier access to foreign markets through reciprocal tariff concessions. In other words, we would agree to reduce our tariff on a certain product or products in return for some other country reducing its tariff on some other product. Foreign nations would be allowed freer access to our market and we would be allowed freer access to theirs.

Knowing that the concessions made will have to be reciprocal, it becomes important for us to know what products would likely be involved in this trading. We have surpluses of almost everything we produce in this country, but of course it will be impossible to find a market for all of these surpluses abroad without granting foreign countries almost complete freedom in our own markets. Only certain products can be singled out for preferential treatment. Some of our domestic industries would have to be sacrificed to compensate foreign countries for the concessions granted to the products of our country singled out for special treatment in their markets.

In order to determine what industries at home would likely be bargained away, we should look to our foreign competitors and see what products they may wish to sell us. The United Kingdom, being a manufacturing nation and having no adequate domestic food supply, will naturally want to sell us manufactured products and in return will be most apt to grant us concessions with respect to foodstuffs. On the other hand, Canada, being an agricultural country, will wish to sell us food products and in return will no doubt be willing to take manufactured products. At the same time, there is no guarantee that the United Kingdom will take our food supplies. She may find it more advantageous to buy from Canada or one of the other Empire countries.

Even if we were able to secure additional trade with these two nations, it would have to be done by lowered tariffs on two of our basic industries, farming and manufacturing. Canada, for example, would expect to sell us more wheat and more dairy products, and the United Kingdom would expect to sell us more textiles. Hence, the rates of duty on these commodities would have to be lowered. Moreover, it may be supposed that there would be more than one product of each country concerned in the proposed reciprocal bargaining. Besides textiles, the United Kingdom produces machinery, iron and steel manufactures, woolen goods, and other products in large quantities. Canada is a large exporter of fish, lumber, and nonferrous metals. France exports large quantities of cotton, silk, and wool fabrics, raw wool, clothing and lingerie, heavy iron and steel products, and other commodities in addition to her perfumes and wines. Germany produces metal products, machinery, textiles, coal, dyes, and other commodities which compete with ours. Italy is a large exporter of cotton fabrics, cheese, fruits and vegetables, olive oil, and rayon.

To give a more complete picture of the export trade of the countries mentioned, I will insert in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks some tables showing the value of their exports by commodity groups. (See exhibit B.) If the producers and workers of this country will just go over these tables they will at once be able to see what commodities they will have to compete with in the domestic market if this tariff-reciprocity proposal is enacted into law. One important fact to be remembered is that the very circumstance that a country is not at present a particularly large exporter of a certain product does not mean that it is not anxious to expand the market for that product.

Let the administration suggest what industries would be placed upon the bargain counter and what great classes of workmen would be deprived of a livelihood in this mutual exchange of surplus products. Who would be the first victim? What do the other countries of the world propose to offer us, and in exchange for what? Are we going to throw open our home market for agricultural products in order to sell the world more automobiles? Are we going to sacrifice the textile industry of New England and the South in order to sell more apples to the United Kingdom? Are we going to close our steel mills and buy our steel products abroad in order to sell the world more typewriters? Are we going to buy our cotton from Russia and India in order to sell these countries more machinery? These questions must be answered, because if we are going into a trade we must have something to offer.

WHAT PRICE RECIPROCITY?

Those who are going to accept blindly this proposal from the President should stop and ponder the matter for a while. It may be that they have in their own districts some industry that is to be offered up. It may be the dairy industry; it may be the pottery industry; it may be the rayon industry; or some other industry vital to the welfare of their people. We cannot go into this world conference and offer to exchange our wheat for cross-word puzzles, or our cotton for toy dolls. On the other hand, we must sacrifice some large industry to compensate some foreign country for giving some other large domestic industry freer access to its market. Is it worth the price?

While there is still time to stop the enactment of this Democratic proposal, every farmer and every worker in this country should demand that he be told whether he will have to face ruinous competition with the products of other countries in the home market. No farmer and no worker can be sure that his own particular product or products will be spared, because each country has something different to sell; and in order to get freer access to foreign markets, we will have to make different concessions to each country until we have exhausted the whole group of our domestic industries.

SECRETARY HULL'S VIEWS ON THE TARIFF

It seems appropriate that some reference should be made to the man who will largely be responsible for carrying on reciprocity negotiations with foreign countries and who is now the chairman of the American delegation to the World Economic Conference, which will deal, among other things, with the tariff question. I refer, of course, to the present Secretary of State, Hon. Cordell Hull, who for a quarter of a century was a Member of this House and until his elevation to the Cabinet was a Senator from his State.

Mr. Hull has in the past taken the position that we should not produce in this country any commodity the production of which is not economically justifiable. Under such a principle many of our basic industries would be destroyed because we would produce only those things which cannot be produced to a considerably greater advantage in other countries. This theory died with Adam Smith, and all attempts to revise it up to this time have failed. However, it is about to be foisted upon the country at the present time, and it is high time that our people awoke to a full realization of its implications. In my own State of Massachusetts there is very little produced which could not be produced cheaper in Japan, or Czechoslovakia, or Germany, or some other country having a much lower wage scale than is paid in this country. Secretary Hull would apparently make us all fishermen.

As a member of the Ways and Means Committee, Secretary Hull said in his minority report on the tariff bill of 1930 that "every tariff rate is an injury to export trade." Therefore the converse of this proposition would be that in order to enlarge our export business to the utmost we should remove all tariff restrictions. He does not consider what would happen to our domestic industries if this were done.

In the same minority report Secretary Hull emphatically stated that the tariff should be "revised downward", and said that the major effect of tariffs is to "transfer wealth from one class to another without affecting the Nation's total."

On May 19, 1932, Secretary Hull said on the floor of the Senate that tariffs only stimulate production and cause artificial prices to topple to the ground. Taking the tariff off, therefore, would rid us of our surplusage. According to this view, our present wheat surplus would disappear if the duty on wheat were removed. What logic! I will admit that the end which he mentions would be accomplished, but it would be done by making it unprofitable for American farmers and American producers to compete in their own market. This policy would destroy our farming and manufacturing industries.

Secretary Hull does not believe in the yardstick of difference in the cost of production of the foreign and domestic article in fixing tariff rates. Thus, he does not feel that the foreign producer should be put on an equal competitive footing with the domestic producer in our own market, but would leave the foreign producer with a cost advantage. This accords with the Democratic theory of competitive tariffs.

Secretary Hull is always talking about exports. Tearing down the tariff does not automatically result in increased exports, but it does automatically result in increased imports. We are to allow freer access to our own markets in the vain hope that perchance we will be able to expand our export trade.

In referring to the Republican principle that Americans have the primary right to their own market, Secretary Hull said on this floor during the debate on the Tariff Act of 1930:

> Who, here or anywhere, has ever thought of questioning the absolute jurisdiction of every government everywhere over its domestic markets?

My answer to that statement is that he today questions that right by aiding and abetting the movement to commit the United States to a policy of letting foreign nations dictate our tariff rates. Yes, he is even the father of the proposition. If there is any question about this, let anyone who is interested read his public remarks for the past 10 years or so. The resolution which he introduced in the Sixty-ninth Congress calling for a world-trade conference was but the forerunner of the plan sponsored by the Democratic House in the Seventy-second Congress, which was vetoed by President Hoover.

Under the Democratic proposal, we will be asked to place the tariff-making power in the hands of one who is unfriendly to the protective-tariff principle, to place it in the hands of one committed to a downward revision of existing duties. Everyone knows what the result of lowering the tariff will be. I do not need to remind anyone that it will cause a flooding of the domestic market with the products of cheap foreign labor, and make it impossible for domestic producers to compete with such goods; that any slight expansion of our export trade will be more than offset by the damage done to domestic trade and commerce; that workers thrown out of employment in one industry will be forced upon other industries, and a general lowering of wage scales will result; that the vain hope to secure greater world markets cannot be realized without meeting world prices; and that these prices cannot be met without reducing our workers to the status of those in European and Oriental countries. We have the greatest market in the world; let us keep it for our own people.

PAST EXPERIENCES WITH RECIPROCITY

Mr. Speaker, it is true that we have concluded reciprocity treaties in the past, but these treaties have never been successful, nor are they any precedent for such a transfer of power to the Executive as is contemplated in the Democratic proposal. The Canadian reciprocity treaty of 1854 virtually established free trade between that country and the United States. History shows that this treaty was of more benefit to Canada than it was to this country, and it was abrogated by us during the Civil War. The Hawaiian reciprocity treaty of 1875 was concluded for political, rather than economic, purposes. The reciprocity agreements concluded under authority of the Tariff Act of 1890 did not involve any concessions on the part of the United States, since this country only refrained from imposing penalty duties on certain otherwise free imports in return for fair treatment of our agricultural products in foreign markets. These treaties were abrogated by the Democratic Tariff Act of 1894.

The treaties concluded under the Tariff Act of 1897 were limited in their scope, and were concluded by the President under authority given to him to reduce the duties in the case of certain articles, including argols, wines, paintings, and statuary, to a lower rate, which Congress fixed, in return for concessions made to products of this country. The Cuban reciprocity treaty concluded by President Theodore Roosevelt in 1902 is still in effect, and stands, of course, upon a peculiar footing all its own due to our close relationship to that nation.

The 2-schedule set-up of the Tariff Act of 1909 amounted to imposing maximum rates by way of penalty against unequal treatment of American products in foreign markets. The attempt to establish a second reciprocity agreement with Canada in 1910 and 1911 came to naught by reason of the failure of Canada to ratify the treaty drawn up, although the concessions made were mostly on the part of the United States. Finally the provision of the Democratic Tariff Act of 1913 authorizing the President to conclude reciprocity agreements never resulted in a single treaty being made.

In recent years we have abandoned the old method of international negotiation, and have sought to institute in its place a national policy of equal treatment for all nations. To abandon our present policy would, as President Hoover well said in his veto message on the Collier bill in the Seventy-second Congress—

> Start our country upon the road of a system of preferential tariffs between nations with all the trade wars, international entanglements, etc., which we have sought to avoid.

The Democratic platform of 1932 contains the following plank with respect to reciprocity:

> We favor * * * reciprocal tariff agreements with other nations, and an international economic conference designed to restore international trade and facilitate exchange.

Now it is well known who wrote that plank. It was the same man who is the present economic advisor to the President, Hon. Cordell Hull. For years he has preached the doctrine of competitive tariffs and reciprocity agreements. His views are a matter of record, and I have already commented upon them. But in connection with this plank in the Democratic platform, which he wrote, I want to mention a rather curious incident which occurred just about a month before the Chicago nominating convention. In Collier's Weekly for May 21, 1932, there is an article by our distinguished Speaker upon the subject of reciprocity agreements and most-favored-nation treaties. In this article Mr. RAINEY pointed out that it was "utterly impossible", to use his own phrase, for us to think about reciprocity treaties because of existing "most-favored-nation" treaties and agreements. Yet the Democratic convention, disregarding his counsel, 1 month later adopted a platform favoring reciprocity. Both Mr. Hull and the Speaker are acknowledged leaders of the Democratic Party, and have been its counsellors for a quarter of a century. Yet there seems to be some difference of opinion among them as to the possibilities of reciprocity.

EFFECT OF MOST-FAVORED-NATION AGREEMENTS ON RECIPROCITY

We have, as pointed out by the gentleman from Illinois in his article, some 45 trade treaties and agreements with other nations which contain what are known as "most-favored-nation" clauses. Under the terms of these agreements, we are bound to grant to other contracting countries the same favors granted to the most favored nation, and we are granted the same concessions in return. Now there are two kinds of most-favored-nation clauses—conditional and unconditional. Under the conditional type, the concession granted to any one nation is not allowed to other contracting nations unless the same or an equivalent quid pro quo is given in return.

Thus, where a concession is granted to one country in exchange for an equivalent, a country wishing to take advantage of its most-favored-nation agreement is entitled to the same concession only after making a similar compensation. On the other hand, the unconditional clause requires no quid pro quo, and if this country grants a preferential rate to one country, then any other country with whom it has an unconditional most-favored-nation agreement may claim the same rate without even making a compensation in return. Some of our treaties are conditional, others are unconditional.

Now, what does all this mean? I will let our Speaker answer that question by quoting from his article. He says:

> We are practically stopped from negotiating any reciprocity treaties with other countries because we are bound, hand and foot, by the so-called "most-favored-nation" treaties which we have with other countries.

Perhaps the administration will say, "We must get rid of these treaties." But there is an answer to that, too, for in our Speaker's article he says on that point:

> We cannot correct these reciprocity agreements. We cannot get rid of these treaties.

As bearing out the Speaker in this statement, I may say that the treaty with Austria cannot be terminated until 1938, and then only after 1 year's notice. The treaty with El Salvador must run until 1940. Most all the other treaties have several years to run before they may be terminated. Thus the bill now before us seems to be a rather futile thing unless it has for its purpose a lowering of the rates to all countries. At the conclusion of my remarks, I shall insert in the RECORD a list of the countries with whom we have most-favored-nation treaties or agreements. (See exhibit C.)

In order to carry out the purpose of the administration's proposed reciprocity agreements, this Government would have to abandon its existing treaties and agreements and expose itself to worse discrimination than we have been experiencing. Under our policy of equal treatment for all, no nation can have any cause for complaint on the ground of discrimination. At the same time, under an unconditional most-favored-nation treaty, we are not at present obliged to grant any concessions to any other country to secure any benefits accruing to us thereunder, since no country except Cuba has any preference under our tariff, and on account of our close relationship to that country our concessions to it are always excepted from such agreements. Why abandon our present policy and set up in its stead one that will only breed tariff wars, reprisals, and unfair discrimination against us?

CONSTITUTIONAL PHASES OF DELEGATING TARIFF POWERS TO PRESIDENT

Mr. Speaker, I should like for a few moments to refer to the constitutional phase of the Democratic tariff proposal and to the views of some of our Democratic colleagues upon the subject of delegating tariff-making powers to the President.

Under the Constitution, the power to fix customs duties is laid in the Congress. The reciprocity proposal would give the President authority to change tariff rates without restriction. For this reason, it would constitute an unconstitutional delegation of legislaive power. Of course, I know that since the 4th day of March the administration has closed its eyes to the Constitution, but it is still the law of the land and stands supreme over any act of Congress.

We are told that the proposed delegation of legislative power to the President would be nothing more than was done under the flexible-tariff provisions of the 1922 and 1930 Tariff Acts. It will be recalled that the President is thereby given the power to increase or decrease duties within a range of 50 percent, based upon the Tariff Commission's finding of the difference in the cost of production of the domestic and foreign article. It is not true that the present proposal can be compared with the powers of the President under the flexible provisions. There is quite a fundamental difference between the two propositions. The flexible tariff was sustained by the Supreme Court on the ground that Congress had laid down a definite rule which the President was to follow in fixing the rates, namely, that the duty on a particular article should be such as would make up the difference between the cost of the domestic and the foreign product. The act of the President in proclaiming the rate therefore became purely an administrative function.

Under the proposal to give the President the power to conclude reciprocal agreements, he would have absolute power to fix rates without reference to any rule laid down by Congress. His act in fixing rates would be a legislative, not an administrative, one. The yardstick of difference of cost of production would be thrown out. Carte-blanche authority to fix new duties would be given.

DEMOCRATIC VIEWS ON FLEXIBLE-TARIFF PROVISIONS OF PRESENT LAW

It may seem strange that when the 1922 and 1930 tariff acts were under consideration, the then Democratic minority opposed with all their might this delegation of administrative power under the flexible-tariff provisions, which the Supreme Court has upheld, yet they now come forward with a bill which goes far beyond the delegation of power contained in those acts. They see nothing wrong in granting to a Democratic Chief Executive one of the legislative powers of Congress, but it is utterly wrong to grant a Republican President a purely administrative function to be carried out under rules laid down by the Congress. Let us see what our Democratic friends had to say about the flexible-tariff provisions.

In his minority report on the tariff bill of 1930, our former colleague, the present Secretary of State, referred to this section of the bill as follows:

> The Republican Party would not only retain section 315, the flexible-tariff provisions, but would considerably enlarge and expand it for purposes of broader tariff legislation by the executive department. The President would thereby be enabled to change the whole objects and purposes of the tariff law enacted by Congress. * * * It is clearly unsound, unwise, impracticable, subversive of the plain functions of Congress, and should be speedily repealed.

On May 9, 1932, Secretary Hull, then a Member of the Senate, quoted with approval his own remarks in the House when the flexible-tariff provisions were enacted. It is interesting to note what he said at that time of giving the President the power to change tariff rates. Following is the excerpt from his former speech which he quoted:

> I am unalterably opposed to section 315 of the tariff act and demand its speedy repeal. I strongly condemn the proposed course of the Republican Party, which contemplates the enlargement and retention of this provision with such additional authority to the President as would practically vest in him the supreme taxing power of the Nation, contrary to the plainest and most fundamental provisions of the Constitution.

The Democrats in those days read the Constitution—

> a vast and uncontrolled power, larger than had been surrendered by one great coordinate department of government to another since the British House of Commons wrenched the taxing power from an autocratic king.

To use another of Senator Hull's statements, I say that the present proposal is an "unprecedented and unusual and wholly unjustifiable arrogance of power and authority to the President."

Let us see what the present Vice President had to say about delegating power to the President. During the debate on the 1930 tariff bill, when he was the ranking minority member of the Ways and Means Committee, Mr. Garner said:

> Remember this, gentleman: When the legislative body surrenders its tariff power and its obligations to the Executive—under our system of government a majority can do that, but you can never recover them except by a two-thirds vote of the House and Senate.
>
> Remember that when you surrender this power of taxation you surrender it for all time to come or until the two bodies, by a two-thirds vote, can take it away from the Executive.

The Vice President was then fearful of giving administrative power to the President, who is elected by the people. How much more, then, should he be afraid of giving legislative power to the President and the representatives of foreign nations who are responsible to no one in this country and who are anxious to secure access to our domestic market?

Listen to the eloquence of our former colleague from Georgia, Mr. Crisp, who thus spoke of the flexible-tariff provisions:

> O gentlemen, you are surrendering your right under the Constitution. Our forefathers fought for that right—the right that the elected members of the people, the representatives of the people, should alone have to levy taxes against them. And here you are surrendering it; and when you have surrendered it, do not expect that you will get it back soon.

I particularly want to call to the attention of the House a speech made by the distinguished Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee [Mr. DOUGHTON] during the consideration of the 1930 tariff bill. In referring to the flexible-tariff provisions, he said:

> The fathers who formed the Constitution wisely, in my opinion, left to Congress the initiating and enacting of laws raising revenue. The flexible-tariff provisions giving the President the power to raise or lower tariff rates to the amount of 50 percent renders nugatory in spirit and practical effect this provision of the Constitution.

Continuing, the gentleman from North Carolina said:

> My friends, this is too dangerous and alarming to contemplate. With all this power vested in the President of the United States, he becomes a colossus. It is too much power and authority to lodge in any man who ever has been or ever will be President of the United States.

At that time, of course, the gentleman did not know that the present Chief Executive would be in the White House.

The gentleman concluded with the following warning:

> It seems that the more power men are given the more they are obsessed with a morbid gluttony for increased power. My friends, it is time to pause and call a halt, to stop, think, look, and listen before we go over the yawning precipice just ahead of us.

Mr. Speaker, I commend this language to the gentleman from North Carolina today and to his Democratic brethren. Yes; I even commend it to my Republican colleagues. It is well put. We should "stop, think, look, and listen."

I say to my Democratic friends today that if you opposed with all your might the flexible-tariff provisions of the present tariff law, then, to be consistent, you should be all the more opposed to the present proposal, which goes far beyond that delegation of power and gives the President absolute authority to fix rates without control by Congress. It is the most complete abdication of power that could be made. It is contrary to both the letter and spirit of the Constitution.

OUR FOREIGN TRADE TODAY

Mr. Speaker, we hear much about how this country has suffered in its foreign trade as a result of the enactment of the Tariff Act of 1930. I would remind the House, however, and I would also remind the country that in spite of all that has been said about the Hawley-Smoot Act we are today the leading export nation of the world. It was said that this law would make it impossible for foreign nations to trade with us and that it would cause reprisals against our goods in foreign countries. Instead, we still rank ahead of all other nations in the value of our exports, just as we did when the Hawley-Smoot Act was written. In the volume of our imports we occupy our usual place next to the United Kingdom. It is natural that the United Kingdom should outrank us in imports because she is dependent upon the rest of the world for her food supply, whereas we are almost completely a self-contained nation.

It cannot be denied that our foreign trade has declined considerably in the past few years, but so has the foreign trade of the world at large. In 1929 the total international trade of all countries was $68,000,000,000, but in 1932 it was only $26,000,000,000. Our share of the world trade in 1929 was $9,640,000,000; in 1932 it was $2,935,000,000. In both years it was 11 percent of the total trade between all the nations of the world. I shall insert in the RECORD at the end of my remarks a table showing the foreign trade of this country from 1913 to 1932, inclusive. (See exhibit D.)

CAUSE OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE COLLAPSE

What caused this tremendous decline in international trade? The answer is that it resulted in the first instance from reduced purchasing power and the contraction of credit. Take this country as an example. Our foreign trade was on the increase up to the latter part of 1929, when the stock-market crash occurred. It was only after that time that our foreign trade began to decline. Imports and exports for September 1929 showed an increase over September 1928 and the 9-month period ending September 30, 1929, showed an increase over the same period in 1928 in both imports and exports. However, in October 1929 our export trade began to fall, but imports still remained ahead of October 1928. The same situation existed in November, with exports taking a still greater slump. In December both exports and imports dropped off from the 1928 figures. From then on the decline in both exports and imports has been steady. Thus the charge that our tariff caused the depression in this country and was responsible for the economic collapse throughout the world is completely refuted. The Hawley-Smoot Act was not enacted until June 1930, and under the Fordney Act of 1922 our foreign trade continued to grow year by year up to the time our internal trade was disrupted in the latter part of 1929.

Another proof of the fact that the present tariff law has had little or nothing to do with the decline in foreign trade lies in the fact that the value of imported merchandise which is free of duty continues to be two thirds of the total value of all imported merchandise. If the tariff act were operating to prevent the importation of foreign products, the decline in dutiable articles would naturally be greater than the decline in free merchandise. Instead the ratio between dutiable and free goods remains practically constant. I shall insert in the RECORD as exhibit E a comparison of our dutiable and free imports for the years 1927 to 1932, inclusive, and call attention to the fact that our trade with foreign countries is proportionately no less in one class than in the other.

With respect to the cause of the trade collapse, I should like to read the following excerpt from an address delivered by Prof. Wallace B. Donham, of Harvard, Dean of the Graduate School of Business Administration, before the Warton Alumni Institute in Philadelphia. He said:

> In my own opinion the collapse of international trade results mainly from serious overproduction of raw materials stimulated by competition among the industrial nations and followed by the sharp fall of commodity prices. The living habits of vast numbers of people have changed. This overproduction and price collapse is the primary fact and trade restrictions are mainly a result. Insofar as this is true, removal of trade restrictions would not only fail to revive foreign trade but would accentuate our domestic difficulties.

Why are foreign countries selling us less coffee, less tea, less rubber, less raw silk, less bananas? These articles are all on the free list. There is no restriction on their importation. Certainly the tariff has nothing to do with the decrease in the volume of the imports of these commodities. The reason is, as I have already stated, that we have less purchasing power. When our purchasing power increases we will buy more of these products again. But buying agricultural products from abroad and manufactured products from abroad is not going to increase our purchasing power. Selling a little more merchandise abroad is not going to offset this loss in our domestic market. My friends, consider the fact that in 1929 our domestic trade produced an income to our people of over $90,000,000,000, while the total international trade of the whole world was only $68,000,000,000.

As purchasing power declines at home it is natural that there should follow a decline in imports. This is just as true of other countries as it is of the United States. To say that foreign trade is responsible for the prosperity of domestic trade is to say that the tail wags the dog. Such is not the case. Of course, there is no question but what tariffs and trade restrictions have tended to hinder international exchange, but they have grown up to a great extent since the depression began. Quotas and direct prohibitions have been imposed by many countries. Depreciation of foreign currencies has made it difficult for gold-standard countries to market their goods and has intensified competition for world markets. Nationalistic movements, such as the "Buy British" campaign, have discouraged foreign purchases. The British policy of giving preference to Empire products has affected the trade of the British Empire with other nations. Thus we cannot lay the blame for all the economic ills of the world on the Hawley-Smoot tariff.

As a matter of fact, the United States Chamber of Commerce suggests that perhaps our domestic trade has declined to a greater extent than our foreign trade. In its publication Our World Trade in 1932, this organization states that by taking carloadings as an indicator of the volume of our domestic trade, it will be found that they declined 25.3 percent in 1932 over 1931 whereas the decline in the quantity of exports was only 22.4 percent and that of imports only 19.4 percent.

OUR CHIEF CUSTOMERS AND SOURCES OF SUPPLY

In order to acquaint the Members of the House and the people at large with the extent of our trade with the respective nations of the world, I shall place in the RECORD two tables, one showing the sources of our imports, the other the destination of our exports. (See exhibit F.)

It will be observed from glancing at these tables that whereas the United Kingdom is our best customer, taking nearly 18 percent of our exports in 1932, it ranks fifth in the value of merchandise sold to us by other countries. On the other hand Brazil is third in the value of merchandise sold to us and fourteenth in the value of its purchases. Thus, we have favorable balances of trade with some countries and unfavorable balances with others. The same situation exists throughout the world. This illustrates the fact that goods are not necessarily exchanged in two directions, but that rather trade tends to run in circles. Our unfavorable balance of trade with Brazil is turned into a favorable balance with the United Kingdom, and the unfavorable balance of the United Kingdom with us is turned into a favorable balance with some other nation.

It is noteworthy that in this interchange of commodities among nations, we have had the balance of trade in our favor continuously since 1894. Immediately prior to that time our imports often exceeded our exports, and in the early period of our history the balance of trade was almost always against us.

Unmanufactured cotton retains its place as our chief export product, amounting to narly 22 percent of the total value of exportations in 1932. Automobiles, which formerly ranked second in value, have been forced into third place by gasoline and related products. Coffee, which formerly ranked second in value of imports to silk, now occupies first place. Cane sugar is third. I shall insert in the RECORD as exhibit G a list of our chief exports and imports in 1932.

Regardless of economic conditions, we will always be forced to import certain articles which we do not produce in this country. On the other hand, foreign countries will find it necessary or advantageous to buy certain articles from us. But if we produce merchandise in this country sufficient to meet our needs, there is no reason why we should buy the same merchandise from some other country. The more different kinds of goods we produce, and the more we diversify our industries, the more we expand our home market, because every time a thousand workers are put to work in one industry, they at once become potential purchasers of products manufactured or produced by those engaged in other industries, and at the same time they reduce the number of workers available to the other industries.

Each of the countries of the world has its chief export item. Brazil has its coffee, Cuba its sugar, Japan its raw silk, and so on. International trade in these chief export articles will continue to a certain extent regardless of the state of domestic business in the various countries of the world, and as domestic business increases foreign trade in these articles will increase.

DEMOCRATIC CRITICS OF PRESENT TARIFF RATES

Before concluding, I should like for a few moments to refer to the rates of our present tariff law. Our Democratic friends have referred to the Hawley-Smoot Act as having exorbitant rates. They never say that a particular rate is too high, but the charge is always in general terms. No mention is made of the rates that they think should be reduced. Now, what does all this mean? Simply this, that the allegations which are made against the law are purely for political effect. In the Democratic platform of 1924 the Fordney-McCumber law was denounced as the most "unjust, unscientific, and dishonest tariff tax measure ever enacted in our history"; yet in the Seventy-first Congress, following the enactment of the Hawley-Smoot Act, a Democratic member of the Ways and Means Committee introduced in the House his idea of a tariff bill and stated that it contained the industrial rates of the Fordney-McCumber law and the higher agricultural rates of the Hawley-Smoot Act.

Under existing law the President may raise or lower tariff duties within 50 percent of the rate fixed in the law. Thus, if any duties are too high, the Executive has the machinery at hand to lower them.

This machinery may be put in motion by the President himself, by resolution of either House of Congress, or by the Tariff Commission upon its own motion or upon the application of any interested party. If rates have not been lowered, it is either because no one has requested such action or because a decrease has not been deemed justified.

The Republican yardstick for the determination of proper tariff duties is the difference in the production cost at home and abroad. This differential enables domestic producers to compete upon equal terms with foreign goods in our own market. As President Hoover pointed out in his veto of the Collier bill in the Seventy-second Congress, if the other nations of the world would adopt this principle instead of fixing arbitrary and retaliatory rates, it would automatically remove excessive duties and unequal treatment throughout the world.

Reference is often made to the effect that we have some duties running to 100 percent and more. They are called embargo rates by some critics of the law. But, my friends, if the cost of production of an article in Japan is 1 cent and in this country it is 2 cents, due to higher wage standards, then a duty of 100 percent is necessary in order to place the foreign article on an equal competitive footing with the domestic article. While a duty of 100 percent may sound shocking, it is thus evident that it is not necessarily an embargo rate. If a tariff rate does not at least equal the difference in the cost of production of the domestic and foreign article, there is no benefit to the domestic producer. A Democratic tariff, which disregards the cost of production in fixing the rate, can only mean unfair and ruinous competition for American producers and American workers in the home market.

EFFECT OF DEPRECIATED CURRENCY UPON FOREIGN TRADE

Now, a few words about the depreciated-currency situation. I think every Member realizes the effect of depreciated foreign currencies upon international trade. It is a subject too complicated to give much attention to in a general tariff discussion, and I shall only briefly refer to it in order that we may have the whole picture before us.

With the currency of many leading foreign nations on a depreciated basis, our export trade has been curtailed because our prices are quoted in terms of United States dollars, and the dollar, of course, became dearer in proportion to the depreciation of the foreign currency. Conversely, goods imported into this country are quoted in terms of the currency of the country of exportation. When that currency is debased, the invoice price, translated into United States dollars, becomes less in proportion to the amount of depreciation of the currency of the export nation. The result is that our export trade is hurt because of the artificial increase in our prices when converted into the currency of the foreign nation, and our domestic trade is hurt by the destructive competition of imported merchandise which results from the lowered foreign cost when translated into United States dollars.

Usually, when a currency is depreciated prices rise to offset the effect of the depreciation. However, such has not been the case in the experience of most countries which went off the gold standard. Thus, if a foreign currency depreciates 40 percent, as has the Japanese yen, it follows that the cost of Japanese goods in the United States market has fallen to the same extent. It is quite apparent, therefore, what this means to American industry. Instead of a lowered tariff, it appears that what we really need is a special duty to compensate for the depreciation in foreign currencies, such as France levies against countries which have gone off the gold standard.

Our own recent action in abandoning the gold standard has resulted in a slight depreciation of the United States dollar in foreign countries. However, our prices have shown a tendency to rise as a result of this step, and any depreciation of our currency will probably be offset by higher prices. Thus, the depreciation of our own currency will not aid us much in competing with other depreciated-currency countries whose prices have not risen.

CONCLUSION

In conclusion, I wish to summarize my objections to the Democratic reciprocity tariff proposal as follows:

First. It contemplates an unconstitutional delegation of the power of Congress to lay and collect duties and imposts and to regulate commerce with foreign countries.

Second. It would destroy the principle of the protective tariff and substitute a competitive tariff, or tariff for revenue, which can only result in a flooding of the domestic market with cheap foreign goods with which domestic producers cannot compete.

Third. The granting of reciprocal concessions to foreign countries would result in destroying one domestic industry in an attempt to benefit another.

Fourth. The reduction of our own tariff rates would not insure greater foreign purchases from us because foreign countries will buy in the cheapest market, no matter how much of their goods we import.

Fifth. In order to obtain greater foreign markets, we must meet world prices. To do this we would have to reduce production costs to world levels, which would involve lower wages to labor and longer hours of employment.

Sixth. The purpose of the bill is inconsistent with the present policy to increase wage levels, because without tariff protection our higher standard of living cannot be maintained in competition with the cheap labor of Europe and the Orient.

Seventh. Buying more goods abroad will not help to reopen our own factories producing the same merchandise.

Eighth. The importance of our foreign trade has been overemphasized, since our exports even in normal times only amount to about one tenth the value of our domestic production.

Ninth. What this country needs is more purchasing power, and this cannot be brought about by denying American workmen and producers the right to produce the goods consumed in the home market.

Tenth. To abandon our present policy of equal treatment to all nations would only breed more bitter tariff wars and result in retaliation and unfair discrimination against our goods in foreign markets.

EXHIBIT A

Approximate wages paid in some of the principal industries of the United States and certain foreign countries

Industry	United States	England	Sweden	Germany	France	Belgium	Japan	Hungary	China
Leather and shoes	$21.12	$8.36	$10.59	$8.23	$7.00	$6.00	$8.88	$5.15	$1.35
Chemicals	26.72	11.82	10.20	9.53	[1] 6.27	6.72	5.58	4.89	.92
Ceramics and pottery	[1] 26.68	8.38	11.82	9.31	7.20	6.72	4.74	3.99	1.45
Iron and steel	31.05	16.08	9.24	10.83	[1] 8.11	6.30	6.08	5.54	1.68
Papermaking	25.39	11.35	9.54	10.03	[1] 7.38	5.88	4.38	5.67	1.09
Printing	38.40	11.65	10.32	9.62	8.35	6.72	5.22	7.14	1.79
Silk mills	22.65	8.78	8.64	6.92	[1] 6.09	3.84	2.70	3.61	1.62
Cotton	19.15	8.31	7.78	6.87	[1] 6.09	3.84	2.49	4.14	1.04
Cement	[1] 26.68	13.45	12.48	8.83	[1] 7.62	6.72	5.76	5.29	[1] 1.08
Glass	[1] 25.72	11.26	10.50	9.29	7.68	7.95	7.50	5.80	1.08
Woodworking	25.82	15.62	11.16	9.81	7.96	7.68	5.79	4.71	1.35
General average	26.30	11.37	10.20	9.02	7.25	6.21	5.37	5.08	1.31

[1] Estimates from wages in kindred industries.

NOTE.—The above figures were compiled from Department of Labor and National Industrial Conference Board reports for 1931 and cover a 48-hour week. Since late 1931 most of the above foreign countries have gone off the gold basis, bringing a still further reduction in wage scales, as much as 51 percent.

Source: National Association of Manufacturers, Tariff Facts.

EXHIBIT B

Principal exports of certain foreign countries

[Source: Monthly Bulletin, American Tariff League, December 1932, January 1933]

EXPORTS (EXCLUSIVE OF REEXPORTS) FROM THE UNITED KINGDOM OF ARTICLES WHOLLY OR MAINLY MANUFACTURED, 1931

Coke and manufactured fuel		£2,965,000
Pottery, glass, abrasives, etc.		8,381,000
Pottery	£3,462,000
Glass and glassware	1,367,000
Iron and steel and manufactures		30,410,000
Steel	1,447,000
Plates and sheets	5,531,000
Tinplate, etc.	6,777,000
Pipes and tubes	3,741,000
Railway, etc., material	2,323,000
Wire and manufactures	1,744,000
Nonferrous metals and manufactures		6,935,000
Cutlery, hardware, etc.		5,334,000
Cutlery	642,000
Hardware (except hollow ware)	799,000
Implements and tools	1,594,000
Scientific instruments	2,062,000
Electrical goods and apparatus		7,438,000
Machinery		32,839,000
Agricultural	967,000
Electrical	4,359,000
Machine tools	2,062,000
Prime movers (except electrical)	2,893,000
Textile	5,281,000
Manufactures of wood		1,427,000
Manufactures of cotton		56,593,000
Yarns	10,895,000
Piece goods, unbleached	4,423,000
Piece goods, bleached	10,727,000
Piece goods, colored, dyed, etc.	22,173,000
Thread	4,047,000
Manufactures of wool		25,150,000
Tops	2,022,000
Worsted yarns	3,609,000
Woolen tissues	10,192,000
Worsted tissues	5,101,000
Manufactures of silk		1,038,000
Manufactures of other textiles		12,889,000
Artificial silk	3,363,000
Cordage, ropes of hemp, etc.	1,000,000
Linen manufactures	5,432,000
Jute manufactures (except cordage, etc.)	1,980,000
Wearing apparel		14,015,000
Chemicals, drugs, dyes and colors		17,043,000
Drugs, medicines, etc.	2,659,000
Dyes, colors, etc.	3,471,000
Sodium compounds	2,851,000
Oils, fats, and resins, manufactured		5,306,000
Leather and manufactures		3,314,000
Paper and cardboard		6,323,000
Vehicles		28,418,000
Railway vehicles and parts	4,164,000
Motor cars, etc., and parts	6,412,000
Motorcycles, bicycles, and parts	3,187,000
Rubber tires and tubes	3,237,000
Ships and boats (new)	9,283,000
Rubber manufactures (except tires)		2,137,000
Miscellaneous articles		22,618,000
Arms, ammunition, stores, etc.	3,281,000
Books	3,619,000
Linoleum and cork carpet	1,048,000
Musical instruments	1,397,000
Stationery, other than paper	1,110,000

PRINCIPAL EXPORTS (EXCLUSIVE OF REEXPORTS) FROM CANADA, YEAR ENDING MAR. 31, 1932

Agricultural and vegetable products		$204,398,000
Fruits	$7,507,000
Vegetables	5,554,000
Wheat	115,739,000
Other grain	17,191,000
Milled products	22,882,000
Whisky	11,622,000
Rubber products	10,988,000
Seeds	1,992,000
Tobacco	2,621,000
Animal and animal products		68,799,000
Living animals	4,367,000
Fishery products	24,437,000
Furs	12,218,000
Leather	3,203,000
Meats	4,961,000
Butter	2,363,000
Cheese	10,594,000
Fibers, textiles, and products		5,512,000
Binding twine	1,499,000
Wood, unmanufactured and manufactured		68,255,000
Paper		107,485,000
Newsprint	103,003,000
Iron and its products		15,463,000
Farm implements and machinery	2,485,000
Vehicles	4,385,000
Nonferrous metals and products		69,073,000
Aluminum and its products	3,766,000
Copper and its products	19,803,000
Lead and its products	4,441,000
Nickel and its products	12,109,000
Zinc and its products	5,262,000
Precious metals	20,446,000
Electrical apparatus	1,297,000
Nonmetallic minerals and products		13,457,000
Asbestos and its products	4,734,000
Coal and its products	2,422,000
Stone and its products	3,254,000
Chemical and allied products		10,535,000
Fertilizer	1,946,000
Acids	2,093,000
Inorganic chemicals	3,860,000
Miscellaneous commodities		13,367,000
Films	4,012,000

PRINCIPAL EXPORTS (EXCLUSIVE OF REEXPORTS) FROM FRANCE, 1930

	Francs
Cotton fabrics	2,146,000,000
Silk fabrics	1,873,000,000
Rayon fabrics	994,000,000
Wool fabrics	1,572,000,000
Cotton yarns	453,000,000
Rayon yarns	328,000,000
Wool yarns	1,010,000,000
Raw wool, all sorts	1,200,000,000
Clothing and lingerie	1,662,000,000
Millinery, artificial flowers	86,000,000
Iron ore	437,000,000
Iron and steel:
Heavy	2,433,000,000
Construction	250,000,000
Tools	111,000,000
Copper, crude or rolled	382,000,000
Metal manufactures, n.e.s.	1,372,000,000
Machinery	2,168,000,000
Automobiles	959,000,000
Ships	134,000,000
Aircraft	212,000,000
Rubber tires	368,000,000
Chemicals, dyes, etc.	2,073,000,000
Vegetable oils, fixed	341,000,000
Medicines, prepared	410,000,000
Perfumery and soaps	787,000,000
Coal	550,000,000
Earthenware and china	173,000,000
Glass and glassware	408,000,000
Cement and other building materials	339,000,000
Pearls and other precious stones	858,000,000
Rags, waste paper	122,000,000
Paper and cardboard	622,000,000
Books	253,000,000
Furniture of wood	218,000,000
Hides, skins, furs	959,000,000
Leather	776,000,000
Leather manufactures	434,000,000
Vegetables and fruits	922,000,000
Butter, cheese, and eggs	440,000,000
Wines and spirits	1,419,000,000

PRINCIPAL EXPORTS (EXCLUSIVE OF REEXPORTS, BUT INCLUSIVE OF REPARATIONS) FROM GERMANY, 1931

	Reichsmarks	Reichsmarks
Products of lands and forests		834,596,000
Farm products	210,284,000
Animals and animal products	251,402,000
By-products of farm industry	216,974,000
Cultivated forest products	89,668,000
Mineral and fossil raw materials; mineral oils		786,976,000
Earth and stone	78,535,000
Ores	20,364,000
Fossil fuels (coal, coke, etc.)	608,715,000
Mineral oils and other raw materials	46,719,000
Coal tar, coal-tar oils and materials	32,643,000

PRINCIPAL EXPORTS (EXCLUSIVE OF REEXPORTS, BUT INCLUSIVE OF REPARATIONS) FROM GERMANY, 1931—continued

	Reichsmarks	Reichsmarks
Chemical and pharmaceutical products		974,446,000
Basic chemical materials	426,048,000
Dyes and dye materials	259,378,000
Varnishes, shellacs, cement	17,019,000
Perfumery and materials, etc	45,170,000
Artificial fertilizers	48,800,000
Textiles		1,330,183,000
Silk and rayon manufactures	302,058,000
Wool and manufactures	375,933,000
Cotton and manufactures	314,984,000
Tracing cloth, prepared woven goods, etc	34,163,000
Clothing	191,588,000
Leather, furs, and products		465,311,000
Leather	179,547,000
Leather products	108,996,000
Furs	174,029,000
Rubber products		93,076,000
Products of white rubber	84,251,000
Hard-rubber products	8,825,000
Wood and cork products		93,077,000
Paper and manufactures		387,087,000
Books, etc		84,190,000
Pottery		129,445,000
Glass and glass products		189,487,000
Nonprecious metals and products		1,919,846,000
Iron and steel products	1,374,753,000
Aluminum and products	52,209,000
Lead and products	23,897,000
Copper and products	290,859,000
Machinery, electrical products, and vehicles		1,791,962,000
Machines	1,057,199,000
Electrical products	488,323,000
Vehicles	246,440,000
Firearms, watches, and toys		135,435,000
Watches	47,435,000
Toys	81,503,000

PRINCIPAL EXPORTS (EXCLUSIVE OF REEXPORTS) FROM ITALY, 1930

	Lire
Eggs	66,880,000
Cheese	368,391,000
Rice	276,165,000
Potatoes	94,088,000
Tomatoes, preserved	195,016,000
Other vegetables	234,764,000
Oranges	152,627,000
Lemons	287,717,000
Almonds	221,787,000
Other fruits and nuts	499,890,000
Oil cake	43,415,000
Wine	155,344,000
Cattle hides	122,968,000
Other hides and skins	95,228,000
Leather gloves	96,729,000
Hemp and tow	261,611,000
Silk, raw	993,263,000
Schappe silk	73,606,000
Rayon, raw or dyed	466,393,000
Cotton yarn	332,538,000
Cotton fabrics	1,041,504,000
Wool fabrics	453,321,000
Silk and rayon fabrics	669,598,000
Hats of felt, men's	190,893,000
Hats, other	68,248,000
Pneumatic tires	147,288,000
Marble	206,226,000
Sulphur	114,817,000
Precious stones	280,972,000
Zinc ore	45,999,000
Machinery	240,730,000
Automobiles	193,895,000
Olive oil	351,823,000
Essential oils of citrus fruits	76,589,000
Chemicals, medicines, colors	345,249,000

EXHIBIT C

List of treaties and agreements containing the most-favored-nation clause

[Source: Department of State, Treaty Information Bulletin No. 43]

TREATIES IN FORCE CONTAINING UNCONDITIONAL MOST-FAVORED-NATION CLAUSE

Country	Date in force	When and how terminable
Austria	May 27, 1931	1 year after notice by either party, but not before Feb. 11, 1935.
China	June 20, 1929	Contains no provision regarding termination.
Estonia	May 22, 1926	1 year after notice by either party, but not before May 22, 1936.
Germany	Oct. 14, 1925	1 year after notice by either party, but not before Oct. 14, 1935.
Honduras	July 19, 1928	1 year after notice by either party, but not before July 19, 1938.
Hungary	Oct. 4, 1926	1 year after notice by either party, but not before Oct. 4, 1936.
Latvia	July 25, 1928	1 year after notice by either party, but not before July 25, 1938.
Morocco	Jan. 28, 1837[1]	12 months after notice by either party.

[1] Date of ratification by the President of the United States; no date is specified in treaty for its going into force and no ratification by Morocco was necessary.

TREATIES IN FORCE CONTAINING UNCONDITIONAL MOST-FAVORED-NATION CLAUSE—continued

Country	Date in force	When and how terminable
Muscat (in force also with Zanzibar).[3]	Sept. 30, 1835[2]	Contains no provision regarding termination.
Norway	Sept. 13, 1932	1 year after notice by either party, but not before Sept. 13, 1935.
El Salvador	Sept. 5, 1930	1 year after notice by either party, but not before Sept. 5, 1940.
Siam	Sept. 1, 1921	1 year after notice by either party.
Turkey	Apr. 22, 1930	1 year after notice by either party, but not before Apr. 22, 1933.
Yugoslavia	Nov. 15, 1882	1 year after notice by either party.
Zanzibar (see Muscat)

[2] Date of exchange of ratifications; the treaty does not specify the date of its going into force.

[3] Accepted by Zanzibar after separation from Muscat, Oct. 20, 1879.

EXECUTIVE AGREEMENTS IN FORCE CONTAINING UNCONDITIONAL MOST-FAVORED-NATION CLAUSE

Country	Date in force	When and how terminable
Albania	July 28, 1922[1]	Contains no provision regarding termination.
Brazil	Oct. 18, 1923	Do.
Bulgaria	Aug. 18, 1932	3 months' notice by either party or by legislative action of either party.
Chile	Sept. 28, 1931[2]	15 days after notice by either party.
Czechoslovakia[3]	Nov. 5, 1923	30 days after notice by either party.
Danzig, Free City of (See Poland).
Dominican Republic	Sept. 25, 1924	30 days after notice by either party or by legislative action of either party.
Egypt	May 24, 1930	90 days after notice by either party or by legislative action of either party.
Finland	May 17, 1925	30 days after notice by either party or by legislative action of either party.
Greece	Dec. 9, 1924	Do.
Guatemala	Aug. 14, 1924	Do.
Haiti	Oct. 1, 1926	Do.
Lithuania	July 10, 1926	Do.
Nicaragua	July 11, 1924	Do.
Persia	May 10, 1928[4]	Do.
Poland (in force also with the Free City of Danzig).	Feb. 10, 1925	Do.
Rumania	Sept. 1, 1930	Do.
Spain[5]	Nov. 27, 1927	3 months' notice by either party.

[1] Date of official recognition of Albania by the United States.

[2] Also retroactively, from May 22, 1931, in respect of certain tariff reductions extended to France.

[3] The original agreement was to expire on Jan. 1, 1925, but was continued in force by agreement of Dec. 5, 1924.

[4] Retroactively.

[5] Extending previous regime.

TREATIES IN FORCE CONTAINING CONDITIONAL MOST-FAVORED-NATION CLAUSE

Country	Date in force	When and how terminable
Argentina	Dec. 20, 1854[1]	Contains no provision regarding termination.
Belgium	June 11, 1875	12 months after notice by either party.
Bolivia	Nov. 9, 1862	1 year after notice by either party.
Borneo	July 11, 1853[1]	Contains no provision regarding termination.
Colombia	June 10, 1848[1]	12 months after notice by either party.
Costa Rica	May 26, 1852[1]	Contains no provision regarding termination of covering most-favored-nation clause; 12 months after notice by either party, vis-a-vis other equality-of-treatment provisions.
Denmark[2]	Apr. 26, 1826[3]	1 year after notice by either party.
Ethiopia	Sept. 19, 1914	1 year after notice by either party, but no before Sept. 19, 1938.
Great Britain[4] (In force also with Irish Free State.)	July 3, 1815[5]	12 months after notice by either party
Irish Free State (see Great Britain).
Italy	Nov. 18, 1871	Do.
Japan	July 17, 1911	6 months after notice by either party.
Liberia	Feb. 17, 1863[6]	Contains no provision regarding termination.
Paraguay	Mar. 7, 1860	12 months after notice by either party.

[1] Date of exchange of ratifications.

[2] Abrogated by notice, 1856; renewed by convention of which ratifications were exchanged Jan. 12, 1858.

[3] The date given is that of signature. Though subject to ratification, the treaty provides that it shall be in force from its date.

[4] Extended by the conventions of Oct. 18, 1818, and Aug. 6, 1927.

[5] The date given is that of signature. Though subject to ratification, the treaty provides that it shall be in force from its date.

[6] Date of exchange of ratifications.

EXECUTIVE AGREEMENT IN FORCE CONTAINING CONDITIONAL MOST-FAVORED-NATION CLAUSE

Country	Date in force	When and how terminable
Portugal	June 28, 1910	Contains no provision regarding termination.

EXHIBIT D

Foreign trade of the United States, 1913–32

[Source: U.S. Chamber of Commerce, Foreign Commerce Department, Our World Trade in 1932]

Year	Exports	Imports	Total trade	Excess of exports
1913	$2,484,018,292	$1,792,596,480	$4,276,614,772	$691,421,812
1914	2,113,624,050	1,789,276,001	3,902,900,051	324,348,049
1915	3,554,670,847	1,778,596,695	5,333,267,542	1,776,074,152
1916	5,482,641,101	2,391,635,335	7,874,276,436	3,091,005,766
1917	6,223,512,597	2,952,467,955	9,185,980,552	3,281,044,642
1918	6,149,087,545	3,031,212,710	9,180,300,255	3,117,874,835
1919	7,920,425,990	3,904,364,932	11,824,790,922	4,016,061,058
1920	8,228,016,307	5,278,481,490	13,506,497,797	2,949,534,817
1921	4,485,031,356	2,509,147,570	6,994,178,926	1,975,883,786
1922	3,831,777,469	3,112,746,833	6,944,524,302	719,030,636
1923	4,167,493,080	3,792,065,963	7,959,559,043	375,427,117
1924	4,590,983,845	3,609,962,579	8,200,946,424	981,021,266
1925	4,909,847,511	4,226,589,263	9,136,436,774	683,258,248
1926	4,808,660,235	4,430,888,366	9,239,548,601	377,771,869
1927	4,865,375,325	4,184,742,416	9,050,117,741	680,632,909
1928	5,128,356,434	4,091,444,394	9,219,800,828	1,036,912,040
1929	5,240,995,202	4,399,361,066	9,640,356,268	841,634,136
1930	3,843,181,282	3,060,908,489	6,904,089,771	782,272,793
1931	2,424,288,588	2,090,634,725	4,514,923,313	333,653,863
1932	1,612,305,818	1,322,745,439	2,935,051,257	289,560,379

EXHIBIT E

Ratio of dutiable and free imports, 1927–32

[Imports for consumption]

Year	Percent free	Percent dutiable
1927	64.4	35.6
1928	65.7	34.3
1929	66.4	33.6
1930	66.8	33.2
1931	66.6	33.4
1932	66.9	33.1

Source: Computed from foreign trade statistics of Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, U.S. Department of Commerce.

EXHIBIT F

TABLE 1.—Chief foreign markets for United States exports in 1932

Rank	Country[1]	Value of United States exports
1	United Kingdom (17.9 percent)	$288,463,000
2	Canada (15 percent)	241,425,000
3	Japan (8.3 percent)	134,537,000
4	Germany (8.3 percent)	133,472,000
5	France (6.9 percent)	111,562,000
6	China (3.5 percent)	56,171,000
7	Italy (3 percent)	49,135,000
8	Netherlands (2.8 percent)	45,407,000
9	Philippine Islands (2.8 percent)	44,987,000
10	Belgium (2.5 percent)	40,350,000
11	Mexico (2 percent)	32,575,000
12	Argentina (2 percent)	31,670,000
13	Cuba (1.8 percent)	28,775,000
14	Brazil (1.8 percent)	28,600,000
15	Australia (1.7 percent)	26,818,000
16	Spain (1.7 percent)	26,688,000
17	British India (1.5 percent)	24,915,000
18	Sweden (1.1 percent)	17,457,000
19	British South Africa (1 percent)	15,979,000
20	Panama (1 percent)	15,609,000
21	Soviet Russia	12,648,000
22	Denmark	11,981,000
23	Colombia	10,670,000
24	Venezuela	10,235,000
25	Hong Kong	9,695,000
26	New Zealand	9,233,000
27	Greece	7,942,000
28	Dutch East Indies	7,816,000
29	Switzerland	7,300,000
30	Poland and Danzig	7,108,000
31	Norway	6,916,000
32	Dutch West Indies	6,476,000
33	Dominican Republic	4,630,000
34	Portugal	4,614,000
35	Irish Free State	4,487,000
36	Honduras	4,474,000
37	Newfoundland-Labrador	4,174,000
38	Haiti	4,005,000
39	Peru	$3,965,000
40	British West Africa	3,810,000
41	Chile	3,568,000
42	Uruguay	3,217,000
43	Guatemala	2,820,000
44	Jamaica	2,815,000
45	Finland	2,775,000
46	Bermudas	2,753,000
47	Algeria and Tunisia	2,720,000
48	Egypt	2,707,000
49	British Malaya	2,497,000
50	Costa Rica	2,435,000
51	French West Indies	2,334,000
52	Salvador	2,289,000
53	Mozambique	2,182,000
54	Bolivia	2,160,000
55	Morocco	2,142,000
56	Nicaragua	1,993,000
57	Czechoslovakia	1,872,000
58	Ecuador	1,754,000
59	Palestine	1,673,000
60	Trinidad and Tobago	1,651,000
61	Turkey in Europe and Asia	1,540,000
62	French Indo-China	1,484,000
63	Syria	1,460,000
64	Rumania	1,262,000
65	Kwantung	1,186,000
66	Canary Islands	1,179,000
67	British East Africa	1,148,000
68	Iraq	1,139,000
69	Persia	1,082,000
	All others	15,695,000
	Total exports	1,612,306,000

[1] Figures in parentheses following name of a country indicate percentage of total exports taken by that country.

TABLE 1.—Chief foreign markets for United States exports in 1932—Continued

TABLE 2.—Chief source of United States imports in 1932

Rank	Country[1]	Value of United States imports
1	Canada (13.2 percent)	$174,101,000
2	Japan (10.1 percent)	134,011,000
3	Brazil (6.2 percent)	82,263,000
4	Philippine Islands (6.1 percent)	80,877,000
5	United Kingdom (5.6 percent)	74,639,000
6	Germany (5.6 percent)	73,521,000
7	Colombia (4.6 percent)	60,846,000
8	Cuba (4.4 percent)	58,330,000
9	France (3.2 percent)	44,736,000
10	Italy (3.2 percent)	42,433,000
11	Mexico (2.8 percent)	37,423,000
12	British Malaya (2.6 percent)	34,806,000
13	British India (2.5 percent)	33,204,000
14	Dutch East Indies (2.3 percent)	29,825,000
15	China (2 percent)	26,176,000
16	Sweden (1.9 percent)	24,480,000
17	Dutch West Indies (1.8 percent)	24,182,000
18	Netherlands (1.7 percent)	22,448,000
19	Belgium (1.7 percent)	21,927,000
20	Venezuela (1.5 percent)	20,294,000
21	Argentina (1.2 percent)	15,654,000
22	Czechoslovakia (1 percent)	13,020,000
23	Switzerland (1 percent)	12,492,000
24	Chile	12,278,000
25	Spain	11,406,000
26	Norway	10,439,000
27	Soviet Russia	9,704,000
28	Honduras	9,004,000
29	British West Africa	8,932,000
30	Finland	8,179,000
31	Greece	7,550,000
32	Newfoundland-Labrador	7,133,000
33	Ceylon	5,915,000
34	Turkey in Europe and Asia	5,390,000
35	Egypt	4,849,000
36	Australia	4,643,000
37	Guatemala	4,501,000
38	Hong Kong	4,277,000
39	Costa Rica	3,687,000
40	Peru	3,685,000
41	Panama	3,530,000
42	Trinidad and Tobago	3,390,000
43	Dominican Republic	3,380,000
44	Jamaica	3,234,000
45	Portugal	2,798,000
46	Persia	2,764,000
47	Austria	2,616,000
48	Ecuador	2,386,000
49	British South Africa	2,350,000
50	New Zealand	2,158,000
51	Uruguay	2,104,000
52	Nicaragua	1,964,000
53	Iraq	1,905,000
54	British East Africa	1,814,000
55	Denmark	1,328,000
56	Mozambique	1,317,000
57	Poland and Danzig	1,255,000

[1] Figures in parentheses following name of a country indicate percentage of our total imports supplied by that country.

TABLE 2.—Chief source of United States imports in 1932—Continued

Rank	Country	Value of United States imports
58	Algeria and Tunisia	$1,211,000
59	Belgian Congo	1,204,000
60	Salvador	1,143,000
	All others	15,584,000
	Total imports	1,322,745,000

Source: U.S. Chamber of Commerce, Foreign Trade Department, Our World Trade in 1932.

EXHIBIT G

CHIEF EXPORTS AND IMPORTS OF THE UNITED STATES IN 1932

TABLE 1.—Chief exports

Rank	Commodity	Value	Percent of total exports
1	Unmanufactured cotton	$345,165,000	21.9
2	Gasoline, naphtha, etc	79,081,000	5.0
3	Automobiles, parts, etc	76,274,000	4.8
4	Leaf tobacco	64,983,000	4.1
5	Lubricating oil	48,279,000	3.1
6	Coal and coke	44,543,000	2.8
7	Electrical machinery, etc	43,382,000	2.8
8	Wheat	32,684,000	2.1
9	Lard	31,883,000	2.0
10	Cotton cloth	27,357,000	1.7
11	Crude petroleum	27,106,000	1.7
12	Illuminating oil	23,732,000	1.5
13	Fresh apples	22,417,000	1.4
14	Boards, planks, and scantlings	21,874,000	1.4
15	Wheat flour	18,468,000	1.2
16	Canned fruit	17,526,000	1.1
17	Gas and fuel oil	16,173,000	1.0
18	Refined copper	13,550,000	.9
19	Photographic and projection goods	13,538,000	.9
20	Leather	13,150,000	.8
21	Books, maps, etc	12,441,000	.8
22	Furs	12,119,000	.8
23	Metal-working machinery	12,023,000	.8
24	Iron and steel plates, sheets, etc	10,840,000	.7
25	Agricultural machinery, etc	10,548,000	.7

TABLE 2.—Chief imports

Rank	Commodity	Value	Percent of total imports
1	Coffee	$136,812,000	10.3
2	Raw silk	113,882,000	8.6
3	Cane sugar	96,701,000	7.3
4	Standard newsprint paper	84,676,000	6.4
5	Wood pulp	46,838,000	3.5
6	Crude rubber	32,538,000	2.5
7	Crude petroleum	30,424,000	2.3
8	Furs	27,385,000	2.1
9	Bananas	24,701,000	1.9
10	Unmanufactured tobacco	23,026,000	1.7
11	Raw hides and skins	22,492,000	1.7
12	Fish	21,396,000	1.6
13	Cocoa beans	19,676,000	1.5
14	Art works	18,479,000	1.4
15	Gasoline, naphtha, etc	17,286,000	1.3
16	Burlaps	16,908,000	1.3
17	Tin bars, blocks, pigs, etc	16,474,000	1.2
18	Fertilizers, excluding nitrate of soda	16,386,000	1.2
19	Industrial chemicals	14,441,000	1.1
20	Cheese	12,494,000	1.0
21	Tea	12,455,000	1.0
22	Topped petroleum, including fuel oil	11,401,000	.9
23	Refined copper	10,974,000	.8
24	Diamonds	10,401,000	.8
25	Nuts	9,921,000	.8

Source: U.S. Chamber of Commerce, Foreign Commerce Department, Our World Trade in 1932.

FINANCIAL LEGISLATION

Mr. LUCE. Mr. Speaker, the work of the Committee on Banking and Currency in this session has been of high importance. The main issues and the principles involved should have record.

The tradition of this committee is that it should eschew partisanship. Finance is not largely nor often a matter of party opinion. Accepting that view and also wishing to give the President whole-hearted support in his program for renewing confidence and reviving activity, the minority members of the committee have tried to help everything their judgments approved, have acquiesced where they were in doubt, and have opposed only in those particulars where they were convinced that policies were unsound. Such particulars were few, but they involved principles of vital importance to our future and they should be understood.

They did not appear in the first bill to be considered, that which was made imperative by the closing of all the banks in the crisis coincident with the taking over of the Government by the new administration. Before a week had passed what became Public Law No. 1 was reported from the committee, approved by both Houses, and signed. The need of haste was so great that the bill was not even laid before the committee, but presented directly to the House. Members of the committee, while regretting this, gave it their support, and are glad that no ill result seems to have followed. This was the measure that revived the war powers of the President in view of the peace-time emergency, allowed him to prevent hoarding, put banking operations under more strict control, created conservators to aid in the reopening of banks in distress, provided for preferred stock of such banks, and authorized the issue of Federal Reserve bank notes upon United States obligations and commercial paper as security.

Next came the bill to permit direct loans by Federal Reserve banks to State banks and trust companies, which also received unanimous support.

The next banking measure the House considered did not come from the Banking and Currency Committee, but was part of a bill that had been referred to the Committee on Agriculture. The House itself decided, and in our judgment unwisely, that the whole matter of agricultural credits should be taken away from the Committee on Banking and Currency, which had handled it through all the years since the Farm loan system was created. We had lived with its problems, we knew their history. Among them was that of the joint-stock land banks. Perhaps if their interests had been continued in our charge we would not have been as inconsiderate as was the Committee on Agriculture of the bond and stock holders, who had been allowed to believe that their investments in these banks declared to be "instrumentalities of the Government", would have the protection of the Government. Maybe these banks should have been put out of business, but there are those who think it ought not to have been done in so ruthless a way.

That same bill also escaped orderly treatment by the committee supposed to know something about such things, by adding to the powers of the Federal Reserve System, by authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to issue currency, United States notes, to the maximum of $3,000,000,000, and by authorizing the President to alter the weight of gold and silver dollars, to accept silver in the payment of foreign debts, and to issue certificates against such silver which can be used in payment of any obligations of the United States. The Committee on Banking and Currency may disclaim any responsibility for this legislation.

The currency question did come before the committee in another form, that of the request of the President for unprecedented control over the coinage. On the ground that provisions of public and private obligations purporting to give the obligee a right to require payment in gold, obstruct the power of Congress to regulate the value of money and are therefore contrary to public policy, the resolution declared that such obligations might be discharged in any coin or currency at the time legal tender for public and private debts. This raised the moral issue of the sanctity of contracts and the Republican members of the committee fought as stoutly as they could on the side of national and individual honor.

They recalled the words of the enactment of 1869:

The faith of the United States is solemnly pledged to the payment in coin or its equivalent of all the obligations of the United States not bearing interest, known as United States notes, and of all the interest-bearing obligations of the United States, except in cases where the law authorizing the issue of any such obligations has expressly provided that the same may be paid in lawful money or other currency than gold or silver.

They quoted the words of the Liberty Loan Acts:

The principal and interest thereof shall be payable in United States gold coin of the present standard of value.

In the drives to sell these bonds that made it possible for us to help win the World War, hundreds of speakers and the Government itself dwelt on the promise to pay in gold. Millions of our people bought these bonds with this pledge. Whether all gave equal weight to it is irrelevant where honor is involved. The pledge alone counts, though, no more than one man gave it heed.

As a matter of fact, this pledge had been a vital consideration not alone with public securities but also with a great number of corporate borrowings. Their total has been estimated at a hundred billions in par value. Importance has been attached to the gold promise by countless treasurers of universities, colleges, other educational and philanthropic institutions, by all sorts of men who are intrusted with investing the resources that support work for humanity. This includes the officers of our mutual savings banks with their nine billion and more of deposits, the life-insurance companies with more than 120,000,000 policies outstanding, and all other officials who must think of safety first when exercising their trusts. Should the solemn pledge to them be broken?

The good faith of a nation is its greatest asset. We have boasted that in this no nation is our superior. Upon it we have relied in our international relations. On the very eve of a conference that bids fair to be of supreme consequence to the welfare of the world we were asked to replace good faith with bad faith, to tell those with whom we confer that whatever agreements we make may be repudiated next day or next year. If we broke solemn pledges to our own, what might be expected of those to others?

We are asking sundry nations to pay us what they owe. Would they be more likely to make good their promises if we set them the example of repudiation?

That is the right name for it—repudiation—and that bill ought to be known throughout history as "the repudiation bill of 1933."

It was true that legal casuistry in England and in one of our own subordinate courts had recently perverted the plain meaning of language in order to give a color of defense to repudiation. Not all the subtleties of all the lawyers in the world can change the fact that both parties to these contracts understood the words to mean what they said, what it has been hitherto accepted that they meant.

Our Constitution forbade the States to impair the obligations of contracts. For some unknown reason the fathers did not impose the same prohibition on the Nation. But the moral principle involved is the same. The sanctity of contracts is the cornerstone of our civilization. To violate that sanctity is to invite ruin.

The argument fell on deaf ears. Almost to a man the Democrats voted for repudiation; almost to a man the Republicans voted against repudiation.

The pity of it is that the sacrifice of honor was needless. Had the resolution been for a suspension of gold payments for 2 years or the extent of the emergency as the President might decide, it is probable there would have been no opposition whatever. Furthermore, nobody would have importantly objected to prohibiting gold clauses in future issues of securities, public or private, or in any other kind of obligations. Why, without shadow of excuse, this breach of faith should have been made retroactive and permanent is something that those who voted for the bill will doubtless have opportunity to try to explain to the millions of sufferers who relied on what the law said:

The faith of the United States is solemnly pledged.

Another proposal to which the minority took exception was that to give $500,000,000 to the States for relief purposes. The issue was over whether the money should be given or lent. Should the Nation as a whole give to each of its parts? The Nation was to give $1 for every $3 expended for relief purposes. Against this were urged the unwisdom of creating any more Federal bureaus, the administrative difficulties in determining needs, and particularly the danger in clothing charity with a national interest. The House added to the reasons for criticism by an amendment taking the staff of the new bureau out from under the Civil Service laws, therein flouting the President, who has from the start had the authority to determine what Government employees shall and what shall not be chosen by the merit system rather than by the spoils system. By an overwhelming vote the Democratic majority declared their President should have no say in the matter.

Two of the great fiscal measures of the session had the hearty support of the Republicans of the committee and in the House—the home mortgage bill and the bank reform bill, known generally as the "Glass bill" by reason of the long labors of the Senator from Virginia in its preparation.

The home mortgage bill carried further the idea behind the home loan bank bill that President Hoover had fathered. The home loan bank bill was intended to allow building-and-loan associations, savings banks, and insurance companies to rediscount mortgages and thus raise funds with which to meet the needs of depositors having occasion to withdraw their money, and also to provide additional funds for borrowers wishing to build homes. An unfortunate amendment, accepted reluctantly and perforce, had provided for direct loans. It did great harm by leading many citizens in distress to think they could borrow. As most of them could not in any case give the security required, bitter disappointment was inevitable, even if in point of machinery the proposal had proved unworkable.

The end desired by those who a year ago advocated direct loans will be in some measure reached by the home mortgage law. The Home Loan Board, acting as a corporation, will exchange its bonds for existing mortgages up to 80 percent of the value of the property, and will make new mortgages to be amortized—that is, paid up by installments—through 15 years. Where the mortgagee will not take the bonds, the corporation may lend cash up to 50 percent of the value. Dwellings for not more than four families up to $20,000 in value come under the law, and the maximum for exchange of bonds for mortgages is $14,000. No payment on the principal is to be required for 3 years, and the time for payment of interest on any installment of the principal may be extended if deemed by the corporation to be justifiable. The corporation is to use $150,000 for encouraging the formation of thrift and home-financing institutions where they do not now exist. All told, it is a well-framed plan for helping home owners and home building. Fortunately it will not only meet emergency needs but be a permanent addition to our agencies for social betterment.

Likewise the bank reform bill is much more than a measure of temporary advantage. There will be permanent gain through putting an end, after a year, to the affiliated companies that with such injury to the public were used in the flush times to unload securities now of little or no value. Holding companies will be closely regulated. Bank funds will not be so readily diverted from legitimate enterprise to speculation. Banking and stock broking will be kept farther apart.

The three problems over which there was the most controversy were those of deposit insurance, branch banking, and enlargement of the Federal Reserve System. Unhappy experience in States that have tried the guaranty of deposits, with the fear of mulcting well-conducted banks to protect depositors in weak banks, would justify doubt as to national insurance of deposits; but the experiment may be justified by the certainty that it will help to restore the confidence in our banking institutions which is at the moment so sorely needed. If those who are to administer the law will appreciate the need of more thorough examinations and more stringent requirements, the new system may prove a permanent benefit.

Greater safety for depositors is also one of the ends to be accomplished by the extension of branch banking in States where it is already permitted to State banks, now about a fifth of the whole, with the probability that the new law will rapidly lead others to fall in line. This means not only stronger central banks but also safe banks in the smaller communities, with better adjustment of the supply of capital to local and seasonal needs.

It also means progress toward a unified banking system, which the best authorities hold to be essential to our financial welfare. That progress will be helped, too, by the requirement that 3 years from now all State banks not members of the Federal Reserve System, of which there are now perhaps 8,000, must become members if they wish to continue to enjoy the benefits of deposit insurance. Every bank in the country now shares to some degree in the advantages brought by the Federal Reserve System, and it is but fair that sooner or later every bank shall share in its obligations. This may or may not mean the ultimate disappearance of State banks as much but it does mean uniform and strict supervision.

The country should be thankful that in this bill was at last carried out the assurance given to President Hoover on the night of October 6, 1931, that there should be legislation to lessen the cost of receiverships for closed banks and to return more promptly to depositors therein such of their money as could be salvaged. Although this was in part accomplished by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, the full measure of help that might have been given more than a year and a half ago is only now at last provided. Why the party in control of Congress throughout all this time has not earlier made good the pledge of its leaders, they may explain.

Of course, there are some things in the bank reform bill that do not please everybody. No great law can meet that test. But taken as a whole it met the approval of nearly all the Members of the House and already appears to commend itself to the public at large.

One of the wisest of our financial authorities, giving figures to show that business recovery, now beginning to make progress here, has been in progress for about a year in most of the other important industrial countries, points out that our industries joined in the upturn last summer, and carried the gains forward to the close of the year. Then, he says, political dissensions and banking troubles combined to cause a new decline. The records of the other nations suggest to him that an adequate remedy might have been found if the prompt and vigorous actions taken had been directed to restoring full confidence in our banking system, and had refrained from altering our monetary system. In that even our present business upturn and speculation would probably have been less violent, but possibly our genuine recovery more durable.

If that view is right, we may be thankful that the bank reform bill was at last allowed to have a chance, and though escaping further prolonged delay by but a hair's breadth, survived the conference committee in time for a vote at this session. It is the most important achievement of the banking committees of House and Senate in the score of years since the Federal Reserve System was created. It should help the country.

UNIFORM SYSTEM OF BANKRUPTCY

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 180.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 180

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of H.R. 5950, a bill to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto, and all points of order against said bill are hereby waived. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed 2 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment the committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and the amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I understand that the gentleman from Pennsylvania does not ask for any time.

Mr. RANSLEY. While there is considerable opposition to the bill there is no opposition to the rule, it being an open rule.

Mr. BANKHEAD. With that statement, Mr. Speaker, the rule having been read for information of the House, I do not deem it necessary to make any explanation. I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER].

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, there is no objection to the resolution, since under its provisions the rule provides for amendments to the proposed bill when it is considered under the 5-minute rule.

I want to say this in frankness and candor, while there is a division in the committee on the advisability of enacting this bill into law, I do not think there is any division in the committee as far as the mechanics of the bill are concerned. That is to say, if a bill of this kind is to be enacted into law, it is the belief of members of the committee that the bill is in about as good form as can be written.

The general nature of the bill and the thing that we seek to correct is this: All over this country there are many municipalities, including not only cities, but including taxing districts, improvement districts of every kind and character, that are unable to meet their debts as they mature, their bonded indebtedness, their other indebtedness, and it has become necessary to provide some vehicle whereby those municipalities may go into court and be afforded an opportunity of sitting around the table with their creditors for the purpose of reaching a plan of readjustment. The bill does not provide that any creditor may throw any municipality into bankruptcy at all. Only can the municipality itself go into bankruptcy or go into court with a concrete proposition of settlement, and the bill does not hamper the municipality. It does not hamper the majority of the creditors. The whole theory of the bill is based upon the proposition that such action as is taken must be predicated upon an agreement reached between the municipality and two thirds of the creditors. It deals only with the unwilling minority, with the unwilling 33⅓ percent of the creditors.

That is the only effect that the bill has on the creditors outside of the agreement, but as the law now is, a levee district, an irrigation district, or any other taxing district has no vehicle, no way of coercing or dealing with that unwilling minority, and the result is all over this land today that municipalities are being faced with suits in Federal courts of one nature and another, compelling the levying of taxes and the diversion of funds that ought to be used for other purposes, to the payment of the demands of the minority recalcitrant creditors. The purpose of this is not to hamper the municipality in the discharge of its duty at all, and it only reaches that recalcitrant minority. That is all the bill does.

The bill has been objected to on the ground that this right should not be extended to a taxing district, upon the theory that the bonds or obligations of the taxing district were issued in good faith. The same argument might be made with equal force, that the power of bankruptcy should not be given to an individual or a corporation. I am one of those who believe that all debts are contracted in good faith. In municipalities debts are contracted in good faith, but there are changes brought about by the passage of time, due to the fluctuations in property values which might make it necessary to give to that municipality and to the people within its boundaries the same right that the individual himself may have; but in this case that right does not go that far. The right extends only to giving the municipality the right to go into conference with its creditors and sit around the table. If they can work out a plan, all right; if they cannot work out a plan, no harm is done, and the matter remains just as it is.

How do you get into court? The bill provides that the consent of 30 percent of the creditors must be obtained before a petition may be filed. Then the petition is filed, and the plan is submitted to the court upon a hearing in which any creditor and all creditors are entitled to participate, and upon that hearing the principal question is whether or not the allegations contained in the petition are true. In other words, whether or not the petition is filed in good faith, whether or not the taxing district is actually in condition and position where it is unable to meet its debts as they mature.

Then, if those facts are found and the plan is approved, not by 30 percent but by 66⅔ percent of the creditors of any particular class, the court has a right to and does enter an order approving the term of readjustment, approving the equities of the parties as set forth in the plan. That decree of the court must be based upon the provisions of the plan. Then, when the plan of readjustment has been agreed on and has been approved by the court, the jurisdiction of the court ends, and the governmental power of the taxing district passes back to its commissioners or to its constituted authority and the district proceeds to function the same as if this procedure had never occurred.

One of the principal contentions against the bill is that the bankruptcy power should not be extended to any municipality that might exercise or that does exercise governmental power. There are two classes of municipalities dealt with here. One class, I admit, may exercise governmental power, such as cities, but the other class exercises only proprietary power; and before any plan is approved or can be approved by the court, the court must find first that the municipality is authorized under the existing law—and that means under its charter or under the State law—to enter into or carry out the agreement. Then, on the last page of the bill, page 16, we have sought to cover that objection to the bill by providing that in those municipalities where their powers depend upon the authority from the State, the State may give that authority, and that the plan of readjustment must be approved by that governmental agency or by that branch of the State government that exercises the powers over the various municipalities.

So that there can be no conflict, there can be no such thing under this bill as interference with governmental powers. If this bill is passed as written, the taxing districts of this country will have a means to readjust their debts in accordance with the ability of the taxpayers to pay and upon the agreement of two thirds of its creditors. The recalcitrant minority can be effectively and honestly dealt with upon a policy of "live and let live." The power cannot and will not be abused. It will afford necessary machinery for these municipalities to readjust their obligations and pay their honest debts. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER] has expired.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the adoption of the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

EXTENSION OF GASOLINE TAX, ETC.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I present a conference report on the bill (H.R. 5040) to extend the gasoline tax for 1 year, to modify postage rates on mail matter, and for other purposes, and I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (H.R. 5040) to extend the gasoline tax for 1 year, to modify postage rates on mail matter, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1 and 2, and agree to the same.

The committee of conference have come to no agreement on amendment numbered 3.

R. L. DOUGHTON,
HEARTSILL RAGON,
SAM B. HILL,
ALLEN T. TREADWAY,
ISAAC BACHARACH,
Managers on the part of the House.

PAT HARRISON,
WILLIAM H. KING,
WALTER F. GEORGE,
DAVID A. REED,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 5040) to extend the gasoline tax for 1 year, to modify postage rates on mail matter, and for other purposes, submit the following written statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

On amendment no. 1: This amendment strikes out the phrase "for experimental purposes" in the provisions relating to the elimination on July 1, 1933, of the additional rate on first-class matter mailed for local delivery. The House recedes.

On amendment no. 2: This amendment strikes out the provision of the House bill which transfers the electrical-energy tax from the producer to the consumer and substitutes in lieu thereof a provision which exempts from taxation, under the manufacturers' excise tax title of the Revenue Act of 1932 articles sold for use as fuel supplies, ships' stores, sea stores, or legitimate equipment on vessels of war, fishing or whaling vessels, or vessels engaged in foreign trade, trade between the Atlantic or Pacific ports of the United States, or between the United States and its possessions. The amendment also provides that articles manufactured or produced with the use of articles upon which the tax, under the manufacturers' excise tax title has been paid upon importation, if laden as supplies on such vessel, shall be held to be exported for the purposes of allowance of drawback on such articles. The House recedes.

On amendment no. 3: The committee of conference have come to no agreement on this amendment.

R. L. DOUGHTON,
HEARTSILL RAGON,
SAM B. HILL,
ALLEN T. TREADWAY,
ISAAC BACHARACH,
Managers on the part of the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. CANNON of Missouri). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DOUGHTON]?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the Clerk will read the statement in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the statement.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the first amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment no. 3: Page 5, after line 13, insert section 6 (a), as follows:

"SEC. 6. (a) The Revenue Act of 1932 is amended by inserting after section 615 a new section, to read as follows:

"'SEC. 615 1-2. TAX ON ELECTRICAL ENERGY FOR DOMESTIC OR COMMERCIAL CONSUMPTION

"'(a) There is hereby imposed upon electrical energy sold on or after September 1, 1933, for domestic or commercial consumption and not for resale a tax equivalent to 2 percent of the price for which so sold, to be paid by the vendor under such rules and regulations as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, shall prescribe.

"'(b) The provisions of sections 619, 622, and 625 shall not be applicable with respect to the tax imposed by this section.

"'(c) No tax shall be imposed under this section upon electrical energy sold to the United States or to any State or Territory, or political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia. The right to exemption under this subsection shall be evidenced in such manner as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may by regulation prescribe.'

"(b) Section 616 (a) of the Revenue Act of 1932 is amended to read as follows:

"'(a) There is hereby imposed a tax equivalent to 1 percent of the amount paid for electrical energy for consumption other than domestic or commercial and not for resale furnished on or after September 1, 1933, and before July 1, 1934, to be paid by the person paying for such electrical energy and to be collected by the vendor. If any person manufactures, produces, or imports such electrical energy and uses it to the extent of more than 500 kilowatt-hours per month, he shall be liable for the tax under this subsection in the same manner as if such electrical energy were purchased by him, and the tax shall be computed on the price at which such electrical energy is sold, in the ordinary course of trade, as determined by the Commissioner. No tax shall be imposed under this section upon any payment made for electrical energy used (1) in the production of agricultural products or (2) by any religious, charitable, or educational organization, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual. The right to such exemption under this section shall be evidenced in such manner as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may by regulation prescribe.' None of the provisions of this section or of section 615½ shall apply to publicly owned electric and power plants.

"(c) The title of section 616 of the Revenue Act of 1932 is amended by striking out 'tax on electrical energy' and inserting in lieu thereof 'tax on electrical energy for consumption other than domestic or commercial.'

"(d) Despite the provisions of this section the tax imposed under section 616 of the Revenue Act of 1932 before its amendment by this section on electrical energy furnished before September 1, 1933, shall be imposed, collected, and paid in the same manner and shall be subject to the same provisions of law (including penalties) as if this section had not been enacted."

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. DOUGHTON moves to recede and concur in Senate amendment no. 3 with the following amendment: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"SEC. 6. (a) Effective September 1, 1933, section 616 of the Revenue Act of 1932 is amended to read as follows:

"'SEC. 616. Tax on electrical energy for domestic or commercial consumption: (a) There is hereby imposed upon electrical energy sold for domestic or commercial consumption and not for resale a tax equivalent to 3 percent of the price for which so sold, to be paid by the vendor under such rules and regulations as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, shall prescribe. The sale of electrical energy to an owner or lessee of a building who purchases such electrical energy for resale to the tenants therein shall for the purposes of this section be considered as a sale for consumption and not for resale, but the resale to the tenant shall not be considered a sale for consumption.

"'(b) The provisions of sections 619, 622, and 625 shall not be applicable with respect to the tax imposed by this section.

"'(c) No tax shall be imposed under this section upon electrical energy sold to the United States or to any State or Territory, or political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia. The right to exemption under this subsection shall be evidenced in such manner as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may by regulation prescribe.'

"(b) Despite the provisions of this section, the tax imposed under section 616 of the Revenue Act of 1932 before its amendment by this section on electrical energy furnished before September 1, 1933, shall be imposed, collected, and paid in the same manner and shall be subject to the same provisions of law (including penalties) as if this section had not been enacted."

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY].

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, this is a conference report presented for the second time. This matter of the charge for electrical energy has been in dispute between the two branches for some weeks. Included in the main bill in conference was the so-called "gasoline tax", and a change of rate in postage. Those two items were not in dispute between the conferees, but there was a marked dispute in relation to the charge for electric energy.

The House conferees took the distinct position that no favor should be shown the different types of manufacturers of electric energy. In other words, the difference of opinion between the two branches is this: The House takes the position that the charge for electric energy should be laid against any corporation selling for domestic consumption. There are two types of corporations which supply electric energy. One, the private corporation; the other, the municipal corporation. The Senate adopted, at the instance of the Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON], an amendment exempting from this tax municipally controlled electric energy supply corporations, granting a very distinct favor and a preferred method of treatment of the municipal corporation over the private corporation.

The House conferees are distinctly opposed to that attitude, and the Senate conferees agreed with us in the matter. The Senate conferees went back to the Senate and were defeated on the Senate floor. An amendment exempting from taxation the municipal corporations passed the Senate, we are informed, by a vote of 31 to 21. Therefore, the measure is back in conference, and today we have conferred again with the Senate and have reached the conclusion that this branch should vote whether or not it desires to show favor to and exempt from taxation the municipally owned plants.

Mr. Speaker, I repeat, it is very important that this conference should be settled promptly between the two branches. One reason is that the present gasoline tax will expire the 1st of July, and therefore the extension of it must be put into effect very promptly. Also the postal authorities are anxious for the authority conferred by this bill to change, if they so desire, postal rates. Therefore we are asking that the conferees of the House be supported, and that no favor in the form of an exemption of a particular kind of electrical-energy plant should be shown by the House.

We ask that the motion made by the gentleman from North Carolina, the Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, receive the support of the House.

Mr. Speaker, if I have not made plain the difference between the two branches of Congress, I would be very glad, if any gentleman desires, to see if I can answer an inquiry.

Mr. DOUGHTON. I believe the gentleman has made a very clear statement.

Mr. GILCHRIST. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield.

Mr. GILCHRIST. Is there a difference about the time when this bill should go into effect?

Mr. TREADWAY. No. That was agreed upon in conference. The only thing in disagreement between the two branches is whether or not a municipal plant supplying domestic needs should be exempt from taxation. Understand, this is for domestic consumption and not for consumption by the municipality.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman from Massachusetts 1 additional minute.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Is there not this further difference between the bill as adopted by the House and the proposal adopted by the Senate—that in the other body 1 percent of this tax was transferred to industrial energy, and the amendment adopted in the other body distinctly provides that the tax is to be paid by the consumer?

Mr. TREADWAY. The gentleman is correct. That is one of the differences between the two bodies. Under the House provision the tax is only on the vendor, the producer of the energy.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. The utility company.

Mr. TREADWAY. The only place where the actual producer of the energy is not to pay the tax is when it is sold for resale purposes; for instance, in an apartment house.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. In other words, by adopting this amendment proposed by the chairman of the committee, the provision adopted in the Senate which requires a 1-percent tax to be paid by the consumer of industrial energy will be eliminated.

Mr. TREADWAY. It will be eliminated; yes.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Carolina.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL: Mr. HILL moves to amend the amendment offered by Mr. DOUGHTON by inserting after the first sentence of subsection (c) the following: "None of the provisions of this section shall apply to publicly-owned electric and power plants."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. How much time does the gentleman from North Carolina yield to the gentleman from Washington?

Mr. DOUGHTON. Ten minutes.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. Mr. Speaker, in passing the bill (H.R. 5040), the House amended the existing law as to the tax on electrical energy by transferring the 3-percent tax from the consumer to the producer—from the consumer to the power companies.

This provision of the House bill was amended in the Senate by levying a 2-percent tax to be paid by the power company or producer upon electrical energy for domestic and commercial use. It was further amended, by levying a 1-percent tax on energy to be used in industry to be paid by the consumer; and further than that, the Senate amended the House provision by exempting from the operation of the tax publicly owned electric and power plants.

The motion of the gentleman from North Carolina is to concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment. If adopted the effect would be that the 3-percent tax would be restored to its original status in the House bill to be paid by the power companies on energy for domestic and commercial use with no tax at all on energy to be used for industrial purposes. In other words, it would restore the provisions of the House bill.

Now, since the Senate adopted the further amendment exempting from taxation electrical energy produced by publicly owned electric and power plants, we are bringing this proposition back here under my amendment to the motion of the gentleman from North Carolina that the House may have the opportunity of voting upon this one proposition first. It segregates this one proposition of the exemption of publicly owned electric power plants from taxation so that the House may vote exclusively upon it before voting on the motion of the gentleman from North Carolina.

In other words, the question presented by my amendment is whether this House shall instruct the conferees on the part of the House to recede and concur in the Senate amendment exempting from taxation publicly owned electric and power plants. That is all there is in my amendment.

Mr. BACHARACH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. I yield.

Mr. BACHARACH. Under the provisions of this bill a private corporation which has received authority from a State and is operating under public-utility or public service laws under the sanction of the governing authority which regulates the rates they may charge for the power they produce must pay a 3-percent tax, whereas a municipality competing against them does not pay a dollar toward this tax. Does not the gentleman think this is eminently unfair? In other words, in my judgment, it would absolutely drive the corporation out of business and the bondholders and stockholders would receive very little for their original investment which they made in good faith. I wish the gentleman would answer this question.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. I may say to the gentleman from New Jersey that the question he asks is, to say the least, a debatable one. I would put it on a different ground, however, or, rather, an additional ground if I were making the argument he presents here, and that is that the people themselves, the consumers who buy their electrical energy from a publicly owned and operated electric and power plant are favored as against people who buy their electrical energy from a privately owned electric and power plant, because ultimately the consumers pay this tax.

No one will deny that the private power companies will pass this tax on to the consumer, if they can do so under the authority of the regulatory bodies of the several States; and if they do this, the consumer will pay the tax just the same. In such case the consumer would be paying the tax to the Federal Government, whereas in the case of the consumer who is getting his electrical energy from a public-owned plant would not pay such tax to the Federal Government.

Mr. BACHARACH. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. I yield.

Mr. BACHARACH. It seems to me the gentleman is making an argument in support of my contention, because, if the consumer pays the tax, why should not the municipality charge the additional 3 percent as long as the consumer is the one who is going to pay it?

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. Let me say to the gentleman from New Jersey that my purpose in offering the amendment is to bring this question to the House for a vote, so that it may instruct the conferees what its will is and what it would have them do, whether they should recede and concur in this amendment or whether they should insist on their disagreement. This is my purpose in offering the amendment, and it is for you Members of the House to say what your judgment is on the question. The conferees on the part of the House are here asking your instructions upon this matter, and that is why I am bringing the question before you.

Mr. CASTELLOW. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. I yield.

Mr. CASTELLOW. I want to know whether or not the gentleman's amendment would apply to a plant owned by a county, the same as it would apply to one owned by a municipality?

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. Unquestionably it would. Any municipal organization or district or any part of a State such as a county, city, or a district organized for the purpose of owning and operating a plant without profit and for the benefit of the users within such district, would come within the provisions of this exemption.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. I yield.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I should like to have the gentleman's view on this proposition. If the energy that is produced and sold by municipal plants be exempt, would that be an argument to aid the utility companies in asking public-service commissions to increase rates, and thus pass the tax to the consumers? In other words, if we exempt municipally owned plants would that be an argument for the utility companies to go before the utility commissions and get permission to pass the tax of 3 percent on to the consumer?

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. I think it would have the opposite effect. They will have to cut down their rates, especially if they are in competition with a publicly owned plant, in order to meet the competition; and if they do that they would have to absorb all or part of the tax in order to meet the competition of the publicly owned plant, where there is such competition between a private plant and a public plant.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. It occurred to me that it might be used as an argument to equalize the returns from the rates. I should like to have the gentleman's views about the matter, because I am interested in this tax being paid by the producer, whether that producer is a municipally owned plant or whether it is a privately owned plant. I am opposed to its being paid by the consumer, and I do not want to take any action that would likely transfer this tax from the producer to the consumer.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. It would probably make little difference whether you exempted the publicly owned plant, so far as the efforts on the part of the privately owned plant to transfer the tax to the consumer are concerned. I think they will try to do this anyway, and if they can they will do it. That is why I said that ultimately the consumer will have to pay the tax, and hence it is a discrimination in favor of one set of consumers as against another set of consumers.

Mr. MURDOCK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. Yes.

Mr. MURDOCK. Is not exempting the municipally owned plant the only way you can keep the private utility corporations from passing it on to the consumer?

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. That is probably true; at least, it would tend in that direction.

Mr. MURDOCK. As the gentleman says, they would have to absorb it and in that way save it for the consumer.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. Mr. Speaker, my effort here is simply to present the question to you, because we want the House to tell the conferees upon this question whether we shall recede and concur in this Senate amendment to exempt publicly owned and operated electric light and power plants or whether we shall continue to disagree to that amendment.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. I yield.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. As I understand the proposition pending before the House now, there is a motion by the gentleman from North Carolina to insist upon the amendment as adopted by the House, to wit, to transfer the tax of 3 percent from the consumer to the producer.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. If the gentleman's amendment is adopted, it simply exempts municipally owned plants from the operation of the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina, which is substantially the amendment I originally proposed.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. That is right. It does not disturb the situation presented by the motion of the gentleman from North Carolina so far as it applies to private companies.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. In other words, the 3 percent would still be paid by the power companies.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. The 3 percent would still be paid by the private power companies and would be confined to domestic and commercial use.

Mr. DOUGHTON. If my friend will yield, it leaves the House bill intact so far as commercial and domestic energy is concerned, but the Johnson amendment proposes to relieve municipally owned plants from the payment of the tax.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. The gentleman is correct about that; and that is the question we are now presenting to you, so you can vote upon that question first and have a clean-cut vote on that one proposition.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. I yield.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Will the gentleman explain why the conferees have placed paragraph (c) in this amendment, providing that—

> No tax shall be imposed under this section upon electrical energy sold to the United States or to any State or Territory, or political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. Simply because you would not have the constitutional authority to levy such a tax.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. You say we do not have power to levy a tax upon electrical energy sold to the Government, States, or subdivisions thereof.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. You would not have the power to tax electrical energy used for governmental purposes by the States or any subdivision of the State, such as counties or cities. The Congress might exempt or impose a tax upon power used by the Federal Government in its activities, but you could not impose a tax on power used for governmental purposes by a State or the subdivisions of a State.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. I understand that; but if the Government purchases electrical energy for lighting its Capitol from a private corporation you mean to say it cannot be taxed?

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. The Congress might tax electrical energy furnished to the Federal Government but not electrical energy furnished to the States or subdivisions thereof.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. That has been decided by the committee.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. That is the present law.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Cannot the present law be changed?

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. No. You have not the constitutional authority to do it.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. I am talking about taxing the corporation that sells to the Government.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. I yield.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I want to ask the gentleman a question. As I understand, the adoption of the gentleman's amendment will exempt municipally owned corporations from the payment of the tax.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. The gentleman is correct.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, I was to have some time on this conference report.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. ZIONCHECK].

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, I sent a letter to every Member of this body last night in which I embodied what I considered the fundamental and basic arguments for the exemption of publicly owned light and power utilities from the 3 percent gross revenue tax.

Apparently my hurried and somewhat clumsy effort was justified, for today we are confronted with the necessity of voting upon this all-important question.

An affirmative vote upon Mr. HILL's amendment in effect means that you are voting to actually put a 3-percent tax upon the producer of power. If you do not exempt the municipally owned utilities and thus create an effective yardstick to prevent an increase of rates, you will merely allow the power companies until September 1 to go to their regulatory commissions and increase their power rates by 3 percent, or more, and thus retransfer this tax upon the consumer. As I stated in my letter today, this would be merely to perform a vicious piece of political jugglery.

In the West we effectively regulate the private power companies in the only real manner in which they can be regulated, that is, by the competition of publicly owned and operated light and power plants. Degree by degree we are dragging the power companies out of politics, out of churches, out of clubs, and out of our schools. Until recently more than 75 percent of our community clubs were under the domination and control of power-company employees and propagandists. In order to break this domination the real sincere and conscientious public-spirited citizens had to start a new group of community organizations known as the North End Federated Clubs. The Puget Sound Power & Light Co. bought some 27 memberships for their employees in the Washington Athletic Club at one time, and all this, among other things, was done in order to manufacture public opinion, or, more accurately stated, to spread their propaganda and lies on the unsuspecting public through these ostensibly respectable organizations.

During the Muscle Shoals fight I detailed the record of Seattle's effective competition against the private power company. In brief it amounted to this: Before our City Light was started Seattle residents were paying 20 cents a kilowatt-hour for their electricity. Three months before our own plant started to sell its current the private company, of its own accord, reduced their rates by 8 cents per kilowatt-hour. Step by step we have forced the rates down to a point where now the average domestic rate for Seattle residents is 2.83 cents per kilowatt-hour, which is 48.21 percent of the Nation's average of the domestic current used in the United States, which was 5.87 cents per kilowatt-hour in 1930, according to the Electrical World, January 3, 1932. If the domestic electric power and light consumers of the city of Seattle paid the average domestic rate paid throughout the Nation, they would pay approximately $11,000,000 more per year than they now pay, and that is more than our total yearly taxes.

Until recently we could not sell beyond our city limits, and you could certainly notice the difference as soon as you crossed the boundary line. The amount of current which would cost one $10 in the city of Seattle cost the consumer just outside the city $15.

I want to emphatically point out that the only effective manner in which we can prevent the private power companies from increasing their present rates and shifting the tax upon the consumer is to exempt our municipally owned power companies from this tax. The private power companies will have to sell at a rate equal to that of the publicly owned organizations, for otherwise their customers will immediately demand that their municipality start a publicly owned and operated light and power system; and there is nothing that they dislike more than that.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Yes.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Is it the purpose of the gentleman to put the private companies out of business?

Mr. ZIONCHECK. It is not a question of putting the companies out of business, but it is a question of actually transferring the 3-percent tax from the consumer to the producer.

Mr. HOLLISTER. The gentleman feels it would be better not to allow the private companies to go out of business?

Mr. ZIONCHECK. I think it would be a blessing to the people if all the private power companies were driven out of the country.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Yes.

Mr. BOILEAU. In many parts of the country municipalities buy electrical energy from private utilities and then resell it to the consumer.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. That is right.

Mr. BOILEAU. Could there be any tax imposed if this amendment is adopted?

Mr. ZIONCHECK. There would be no tax on the power sold by the municipality to the consumer.

Mr. BOILEAU. Would there be any tax on the original power sold by the utility corporation to the municipality?

Mr. ZIONCHECK. It is my understanding that there would not, but I am not sure on that point.

Mr. Speaker, the letter I sent to every Member of Congress last night was prepared and sent out in a very hurried manner. However, it embodies the arguments, and I ask unanimous consent to insert it as a part of my remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. CANNON of Missouri). Is there objection?

There was no objection.

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D.C., June 8, 1933.

DEAR COLLEAGUE: Allow me to call your attention to conference report on H.R. 5040, extending the gasoline tax, etc.

On page 3 of that report, under the statement of the managers on the part of the House, you will find the following language:

"The House recedes with an amendment imposing a tax on the vendor of 3 percent of the price for which electrical energy is sold for domestic or commercial consumption, effective September 1, 1933, rather than the fifteenth day after the enactment of the act as proposed by the House. The amendment continues the present tax on the consumer until September 1. * * * The section as agreed to in conference also omits the Senate amendment exempting publicly owned electric and power plants."

We will be called upon to vote on the conference report in the near future, which will somewhat differ from this report, due to the fact that the Senate rejected and recommitted to their conferees this whole matter upon the question of exempting publicly owned electric and power plants.

I hope that you will not feel that I am presumptuous in giving you my views on this matter. I come from a district which has one of the outstanding municipally owned and operated light and power plants in the United States, i.e., Seattle, Wash., and this is a vital question with us.

I construe the extension of time from the fifteenth day after enactment until the 1st day of September as nothing more or less than a deliberate grant of time in which the privately owned power companies can make application to their regulatory bodies of their respective States for an increased rate of at least 3 percent, together with a profit thereon, thereby transferring this tax onto the consumer, together with additional burdens.

If my interpretation is correct, and I believe it is, we will be committing the worst kind of legislative trickery if we allow this.

The only effective manner in which to prevent this vicious jugglery is the absolute exemption of publicly owned and operated light and power plants. They will create an effective yardstick which will prevent any increase after the imposition of the 3 percent tax upon the producer. The privately owned power companies know that if they increase their rates, with no corresponding increase in the rates of the publicly owned plants, there will be the greatest wave of effective public sentiment for public ownership, together with its inherent benefits, ever known in the United States.

There is a serious constitutional question whether the Federal Government can tax a governmentally owned and operated light and power plant which does not sell beyond the confines of the State boundaries. Regardless of this constitutional question, it is inherently wrong to tax a publicly owned plant which does not operate for profit. It would be just as logical to tax the municipally owned and operated water systems on the ground that they are not necessarily a governmental function. To carry this argument to its logical conclusion, it would be just as fair to tax the States, counties, and cities for every yard of cement which they put into their roads and highways on the ground that roads and highways are not necessarily a governmental funtion, due to the fact that not many years back one had to pay tollgate keepers for the use thereof.

Whether you have a publicly owned and operated light and power system in your congressional district or not, this question should be of the most vital importance to you and your constituents because of the basic and fundamental principle involved. It is my belief that we cannot afford in these times to further fool the people by transferring this tax upon the producer only to have it in turn retransferred back upon the consumer with an additional penalty.

Sincerely yours,

M. A. ZIONCHECK.

P.S.—Senators JOHNSON, NORRIS, and BONE led the fight for this principle in the Senate. Their pertinent and highly informed remarks appear in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of June 6, pages 5085 to 5096. The Senate moved to recommit by a vote of 41 to 31.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. I cannot agree with the viewpoint of many who claim that this exemption would be unfair to the private power companies. In the first place, the private power companies never have been fair, nor do they ever want to be. Further, the private power companies have taken unfair advantage of the American people in the manner in which they have watered their stock on mythical investments.

Our Senator BONE, of Washington, states, and he has never been challenged upon this statement, that the Northwestern Electric Co., in the southern end of our State, filed on the water power of a river in southern Washington known as the White Salmon River. They constructed a dam and plant which cost them $1,230,000, or about $82 per horsepower. Then against the bare water rights, which cost them nothing, they issued more than $10,000,000 in securities, and since that time a recent hearing has divulged that they have been paying from 10 percent to 12 percent a year on the $10,000,000, and have used that highly inflated sum as their basis for rate structure. All this was allowed and sanctioned in a State where we claim to have one of the most foolproof regulatory laws in existence.

Many of the State laws do not allow municipalities or political subdivisions to refund their bond issues when they become due. They must pay the interest and the principal or default. What do the private power companies do? Whenever the interest becomes due, or a principal payment necessary, they merely print some more stocks and bonds and unload them upon the gullible public who had been reading their road signs, newspaper advertisements, and radio announcements that such-and-such a power company's bonds and stocks are a safe investment. Is there any Member of the House who does not readily see that the private power companies have an unfair advantage over the municipally owned and operated plants? Why, then, is it unfair to exempt our public plants as provided in this amendment? Again I want to reiterate, if you actually intend to transfer the 3-percent tax from the consumer to the producer vote for this amendment, for otherwise you will be merely fooling your constituents. [Applause.]

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COCHRAN].

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I have been active in trying to get this tax placed where it really belongs, on the producer. I rise to call attention to the statement of the gentleman from Washington, Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL, a moment ago, in reply to my question in regard to paragraph C. The gentleman said that Congress did not have the power to tax the private corporations that sold power to the Government, State, or political subdivisions thereof. I should like to have Mr. HILL, or any Member of this House, regardless of how great a constitutional lawyer he may be, point out where the Constitution or any Supreme Court decision in any way would prohibit the Congress from placing a tax upon electrical energy sold to the Government of the United States. I cannot agree that paragraph C is anything but a little loophole where you are letting the power companies out, insofar as paying the tax for what they are selling to the Government. I admit there is a question as to whether you can tax electrical energy sold to a State or a subdivision thereof, but as to power sold to the Federal Government the Congress has the power to tax.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. ELTSE].

Mr. ELTSE of California. Mr. Speaker, the purpose of the amendment of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTINGTON] was stated to be a transfer of the tax from the consumer to the producer. Is not that correct?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Yes.

Mr. ELTSE of California. Unless you exempt the publicly owned public utilities, which are producers of electrical energy, you are going to make the consumer pay the tax, just as sure as the sun rises. If you want to accept the spirit of the amendment of the gentleman from Mississippi, you will vote for the amendment that has been offered and which is now before you. It seems to me that is as clear as the nose on a person's face. If you want to transfer the tax from the consumer to the producer, you will vote for this amendment, because if you do not the publicly owned public utility has to collect that 3-percent tax from the consumer in the public-utility district. That is all I care to say.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. FORD].

Mr. FORD. Mr. Speaker, to levy a tax of 3 percent on publicly owned power-producing units is, in my judgment, absolutely unfair to the people of the city on which it is levied, and is, I believe, unconstitutional. If we can do that the Congress can pass an act and go into the city of Los Angeles and say to that city that it is going to collect a 3-percent tax on every tax bill that it collects. The power bill that the city of Los Angeles collects from its own people is only another form of taxation. The people of that city built their own power plant. They sold bonds for that purpose. If the revenues of the plant are insufficient, a tax would be levied to make up the deficiency. You would not dare to put a tax on their water bills because everybody says that the water is a natural resource, but we are coming to a point in this country where the cities are producing their own power and where power is recognized as a natural resource. We in Los Angeles are producing today much of our power from our water system, because there is a drop of 3,500 feet from Owens Valley to Los Angeles, and we utilize that and produce 250,000 horsepower of electrical energy. That plant was built by the citizens of Los Angeles. They issued the bonds and paid the principal and the interest on those bonds. It is a purely city enterprise, and to put a 3-percent tax on its production is, in my judgment, violating every form of good, sane governmental practice, and I think it is unconstitutional.

Mr. RANKIN. Would not this all go to the extent of taxing everybody who owns property in a city or town that had a municipally owned plant?

Mr. FORD. It would.

Mr. RANKIN. This would place a burden on the man who owned a little property, even if he might not be able to use electric lights?

Mr. FORD. Yes.

Mr. RANKIN. Whereas the private company could only pass the burden on to the people who used electricity?

Mr. FORD. That is correct. Let me give you some facts. The city of Los Angeles has just made an agreement to borrow from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation $22,800,000 for the purpose of building a power line from Boulder Dam to the city of Los Angeles, and it is this power that is to pass over that line to be marketed in the city of Los Angeles that will ultimately pay back to the Government the $165,000,000 for the building of Boulder Dam. Now, I wish you would get that into your consciousness. If you put another $450,000 or $500,000 on that plant in the form of a tax, it will hamper it in making its payments to the Government of that loan. We have sold bonds. We have paid interest on those bonds. If the Department cannot do it, the city must do it, because it is a city-owned enterprise.

But it is not only Los Angeles that will be adversely affected. Every struggling little municipally owned plant in the country will suffer. The big power companies will go to their State commissions and get the authority to raise their rates to meet this tax, so that in the end the consumer will pay this tax in higher rates. This is unfortunate, but alas! it is true.

Mr. DINGELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORD. I yield.

Mr. DINGELL. The gentleman would not say that the city of Los Angeles is getting the short end of the deal on the Boulder Dam proposition, would he?

Mr. FORD. I do not quite understand what the gentleman is referring to.

Mr. DINGELL. We will be glad to take that power in Detroit any time and pay the $165,000,000.

Mr. FORD. But it cannot be transmitted that far.

Mr. DINGELL. I realize that.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORD. I yield.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. If this amendment is adopted, it will act favorably for all the Southern States that come within the confines of Muscle Shoals, will it not?

Mr. FORD. Certainly. You are laying up trouble for Muscle Shoals if you do not pass this amendment.

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. FORD. I yield.

Mr. RANKIN. If this amendment is defeated then, as I understand it, all the power generated by any governmental agency in the Tennessee Valley would then have to pay this 3-percent tax?

Mr. FORD. I cannot see any other way out of it.

Mr. RANKIN. I am asking for information.

Mr. DOUGHTON. If it is sold to municipalities, it is exempt. If it is sold for private purposes or commercial purposes, of course it would be subject to taxation.

Mr. RANKIN. But the majority of the power then that would be distributed from the power plants developed in the Tennessee Valley would be subject to this tax?

Mr. DOUGHTON. No; because the majority of it will be sold for industrial use, and that is exempt.

Mr. RANKIN. Then you are putting a burden on the little fellow who is able only to use electric lights or a sewing machine or an electric refrigerator, or something like that.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. FORD] has expired.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, the conferees of the Senate and House reached an agreement on all the provisions in the bill save and except the one relating to electric energy. We have had 2 or 3 meetings and have failed to reach an agreement with respect to that tax. The question for the House to determine is one that is easily understood. The Senate has agreed to all of the provisions of the House bill with respect to electric energy except what is known as the "Johnson amendment." The Johnson amendment provides that electric energy produced by municipally owned plants shall be exempt from the provisions of the tax. In other words, the tax will not apply; whereas my amendment provides that electric energy produced for domestic or commercial purposes, not used for governmental functions, shall stand upon the same footing and be subject to the same tax as electric energy produced by private companies. Now, that is easily understood.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOUGHTON. I yield.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. It was stated a few moments ago, as I recall, that in the event a utility company sold power to a municipality and the municipality in turn sold the power for domestic and commercial use, it would be exempt. That is erroneous. The amendment distinctly provides that if the electric energy is to be resold for domestic or commercial purposes the tax imposed is to be paid by the vendor.

Mr. DOUGHTON. That is correct.

Mr. COLDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOUGHTON. I yield.

Mr. COLDEN. If I understood the gentleman's statement correctly, the Muscle Shoals plant can sell to a municipality and be exempt from that tax?

Mr. DOUGHTON. Yes.

Mr. COLDEN. If that is correct, then why could not a municipality construct a plant and sell to its own citizens at cost? What is the difference in principle involved there?

Mr. DOUGHTON. In one case the sale is to a municipality and in the other case it is a sale by a municipality. The gentleman can differentiate between a sale to a municipality and a sale by a municipality. It is a purely governmental function.

Mr. COLDEN. But the municipality is constructing a plant and selling it to its own citizens.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, it is not my purpose to get into a discussion of that question.

Mr. MAY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOUGHTON. I yield.

Mr. MAY. Has the gentleman thought about the proposition that all persons who are taxpayers in a municipality must necessarily contribute by the payment of taxes to the cost of construction or maintenance of any municipal plant, and yet a large number of those same taxpayers may not be consumers of electricity. Does the gentleman not think that is the reason why municipal plants ought to be exempted from the provisions of the bill?

Mr. DOUGHTON. It is always regrettable, of course, to have to impose new, burdensome, and onerous taxes, but it was found necessary at the last Congress in order to meet the emergency and to balance the Budget to impose this tax on electrical energy, a tax upon bank checks, increase the rates of postage, and levy a tax on gasoline.

Mr. DOBBINS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. DOUGHTON. I yield.

Mr. DOBBINS. Has any computation been made of the tax that would be lost to the Government through the adoption of this amendment?

Mr. DOUGHTON. Two million dollars.

Mr. DOBBINS. To that extent the Budget would be thrown out of balance.

Mr. DOUGHTON. By just that much.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOUGHTON. I yield.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I am just wondering if the estimate of $2,000,000 is correct, and, if the gentleman will permit me to interrupt, let me say less than 5 percent of the electrical energy of the United States is produced by municipal plants. If this be true, then the loss to the Government would be about 5 percent of $33,000,000, or $1,500,000. The total revenue at 3 percent is estimated at $33,000,000 for the next current year on energy for domestic and commercial purposes.

Mr. RAGON. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will permit, let me say I misunderstood the gentleman's question. It would be about $2,000,000.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. That is more nearly correct. As I understand, it would mean about $1,500,000 loss in revenue by the adoption of the Hill amendment. The fact of the matter is, less than 5 percent of the tax would be received from this particular source—that is, from municipally or publicly owned plants.

Mr. DOUGHTON. So far as I know that is true.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOUGHTON. I yield.

Mr. KELLER. I notice that the conferees from the Senate and the House have failed to agree on this for several days. Is this correct?

Mr. DOUGHTON. That is correct.

Mr. KELLER. If the Senate committee has refused to agree, what is the use of sending it back again? Why not accept this amendment which is included in the Senate bill?

Mr. DOUGHTON. The Senate conferees not only refused to agree but the Senate, by a roll-call vote, adopted the Johnson amendment. What will transpire if it goes back again I do not know. It is a case for the House to determine what it thinks is the proper and right thing to do.

If a municipally owned plant goes on the market and sells power in competition with privately owned plants, it has not occurred to some of us that preference should be shown the municipally owned plant. If the House thinks a preference should be shown the municipally owned plant, we are but the servants of this House and intend to carry out whatever instructions the House gives us.

Mr. KVALE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield to me and permit me to make a statement in his time?

Mr. DOUGHTON. I yield.

Mr. KVALE. The House conferees and the Senate conferees met at least six times, according to a statement made in the Senate, and the House conferees did not accept the proposal embodied in the Johnson amendment. The Senate conferees were of the same mind; but when they went back to the Senate, it was adopted by a record vote, and the Senate conferees, therefore, insist upon the retention of the Johnson amendment, and that is substantially what is embodied in the amendment offered by the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL].

Mr. DOUGHTON. There is nothing sacred about that. We have the same right to refuse to recede from our position. We are in the same situation they are in.

Mr. TREADWAY. Is it not true also that the Senate conferees agreed with the House on this bill?

Mr. DOUGHTON. They did.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOUGHTON. I yield.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Is it not also true that the Senate conferees voted against the Johnson amendment when it came in there?

Mr. DOUGHTON. If they had kept on voting that way, we never would have reached an agreement. Perhaps the gentleman knows more about it than the rest of us do.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. They were very weak-hearted.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, it is not proper to question the fairness of those who sit on a conference committee?

Mr. DOUGHTON. I think that is entirely improper. The young gentleman did not mean anything wrong by it.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOUGHTON. I yield.

Mr. RANKIN. As I understand this amendment, if the Hill amendment is adopted that ends the controversy.

Mr. DOUGHTON. If the Hill amendment is adopted; yes.

Mr. RANKIN. That will settle the controversy?

Mr. DOUGHTON. Exactly so. We will then be in agreement, and the bill as amended will be ready for the signature of the President.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. RAGON].

Mr. RAGON. Mr. Speaker, the House conferees have tried to follow what they thought was the will of the House.

We had a great deal of trouble in imposing what we thought was the will of the House upon the Senate conferees.

Now, I want to talk to you gentlemen about this as a practical question, and I want to appeal to you to meet this question as practical men.

The question was finally won by the House conferees sustaining the Whittington amendment putting a 3-percent tax upon the producers of electrical energy. The Senate had amended the bill to provide a 2-percent tax on electrical energy and 1-percent tax on industrial power, or power dedicated to industrial uses. We thought this was far outside the purview of the action of the House. We struggled for two or three meetings upon that question. Finally, in an effort to compromise, there was suggested that we make the tax on electrical power 2½ percent, with the tax upon industrial power one half of 1 percent. After much debate and long-extended meetings we failed to agree upon that. The House conferees trying to follow what this House wanted, we found ourselves in a lot of trouble. We found it had involvements of which the House did not dream or that we did not dream of. But notwithstanding what we thought were some of the inequities, the House conferees stayed by what we thought the House wanted.

Now, let us look into the real facts for a moment. I remember one of the Senators from the West—I do not know whether under the parliamentary procedure I am permitted to call his name or not—a Senator from a small western State, whose name carries respect as that of a fair-minded, liberal-thinking man, who in contending for the provisions of the Senate amendment said that if we put this tax of 3 percent upon the power companies of his State, it would kill the little power plants there owned by one man in little towns that cannot provide their own power plants, and into which the big companies will not come.

I mention this merely as an involvement. Then the question came up of the Johnson amendment. I am sorry I was not here at the beginning of this debate, and I may go over some of the things that have already been brought out. If I do, I beg your pardon; but here is the situation: There is not much involvement to any State of this Union save and except upon the Pacific coast, and let us be frank about that. I have forgotten the exact figures, but perhaps one of the conferees can tell me.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAGON. Yes.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 10 additional minutes.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Are there not more communities throughout the United States like Chanut, Kans.——

Mr. RAGON. Please ask me your question and do not make a speech.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Are there not municipally owned plants that not only operate their plants, but with the profits they make, pay all the taxes of the community?

Mr. RAGON. I am just approaching that question, and if the gentleman will forbear his question a moment, I think I will save him the trouble of asking me any further questions. I am glad the gentleman has brought that up.

We find on the Pacific coast the greatest percentage of municipally owned plants, and this question is very acute in southern California and I believe in northern California as well. It seems to be particularly related to that State, due to a fight that has been made there upon the big power companies.

Mr. COLDEN. Just turn that around.

Mr. RAGON. Did I say a fight upon the big power companies?

Mr. COLDEN. Yes.

Mr. RAGON. I meant a fight by the big power companies on the municipally owned plants. The gentlemen from California are much more familiar with that than I.

I think about 14 percent of the municipally owned plants of the entire Union are to be found in California.

Now, in my own State, as a common illustration of what obtains in the South and the East, we have not to exceed 10 municipally owned power plants. We have not to exceed 25 privately owned power plants; that is, plants owned in the little towns and cities. The other plants are owned by the large power companies.

Now, what is the principle involved here? I live in a small town, and I gave this illustration to the conferees, and I think it perhaps furnished the best illustration you could get. I suppose my town is one of 3,500 population. In that town we have a municipally owned plant. This plant was formed and exists by reason of the formation of an improvement district. This improvement district erected this plant. It sent out its lines beyond the city limits and furnished this cotton gin and that coal mine and this creamery out here with power. There is a little plant at Fort Smith, Ark. How large it is I do not know, but it happens to run a line to my town, 60 miles away, and then 10 miles beyond the town. This plant also furnishes power to the coal mines and the cotton gins, because our municipally owned plant there is not large enough to do all the work. There was a conflict between the two companies and the result is that they formed an agreement whereby they both operate in their own respective zones. The people who own the Fort Smith power plant, as I understand it, are people of very small capital. Our power plant there in Clarksville, the last I knew of it, had an accumulated surplus over a period of several years of about $41,000, which was lying in the bank there not drawing a cent.

Now, what are you doing? You are saying to the power plant there that is going out and furnishing this cotton gin with power, the plant that has money in the bank vaults, "You shall not pay any of this tax." Now, here is a private citizen, an American citizen, just as good as you or I, who has put his fortune into the construction of a power plant that would not have been started if it had not been for him. The people in my little city would be suffering from a lack of power if it had not been for this man or for this small group of business men. They have come there and now you say to them, "If you sell power to this cotton gin that is in competition with this other cotton gin over here, you are taxed 3 percent." Then you have the citizen who buys from the tax-free municipal plant paying one rate and the citizen right by his side who buys power from the private plant, who has had this tax passed on, paying without fault upon his part a higher rate.

Mr. Speaker, this brings it down in a nutshell to the point involved here. It is a question, as I see it, that, perhaps, does not amount to so much in the long run except the principle involved. I believe the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTINGTON] brought out here a little while ago that it amounted to about $2,000,000, but as a matter of honor and principle and integrity, I say to you that that little man who owns his plant in this little town at the forks of the creek down in North Carolina is entitled to just as much exemption from taxation as the big municipally owned plant out in California.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAGON. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Speaking of little power companies, we have one that filed on a river and put up a million dollar dam and power site, and then for the filing, which did not cost them a dime, they put in the water site at $10,000,000 and they have been earning on that valuation 10 and 12 percent ever since, and to show you the difference between municipally owned plants and privately owned plants——

Mr. RAGON. I know them both. I have spent my life among them both.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. When a municipal power company's bonds come due, they have not an opportunity to refund, under State law; but when a private company's bonds become due, they always come out with an armful of soap wrappers and sell them to the public.

Mr. RAGON. Here is the situation: There has grown up in this country the idea that power companies have been abusing the public. Everybody knows that; it is just like the railroad situation used to do. Now, shall we go out here and impose upon these 25 little towns, these 25 little plants that are owned by private individuals in my State—shall we punish them because perhaps some big power companies have in my State, like yours, abused the public in the past?

Mr. COLDEN. I should like to ask the gentleman a question. Do you think it is fair to compare the little plants in his town with the big plant, say in Los Angeles, that does not sell except to its own investors and own supporters?

Mr. RAGON. That is true—perhaps your plant does not do that. You may not go out beyond the boundaries of your own cities. Your city can own its own plant, but in my State you cannot do that. The only way they get around it is by establishing improvement districts. That brings up a serious question. I have forgotten whether under the Supreme Court decision improvement districts have been considered units of government.

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAGON. I yield.

Mr. RANKIN. The gentleman speaks of municipal plants making money. I want to say that a great many are losing money. This only throws an added burden on the owners of property in those municipalities.

Mr. RAGON. But when you put the 3-percent tax on the little private power plant what are you going to do?

Mr. RANKIN. I can tell the gentleman what they will do in his State—if his people will wake up, they can get connected with Muscle Shoals within 18 months.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Washington to the amendment proposed by the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 196, nays 181, not voting 53, as follows:

[Roll No. 60]

YEAS—196

Allen	Doxey	Jones	Rayburn
Allgood	Drewry	Kee	Richards
Arens	Driver	Keller	Robertson
Beam	Dunn	Kelly, Ill.	Robinson
Beiter	Ellzey, Miss.	Kelly, Pa.	Rogers, Okla.
Berlin	Eltse, Calif.	Kemp	Romjue
Biermann	Englebright	Kloeb	Sabath
Boileau	Evans	Kniffin	Sadowski
Brennan	Farley	Kramer	Sanders
Brown, Ky.	Fitzgibbons	Kvale	Sandlin
Browning	Flannagan	Lambertson	Scrugham
Buck	Fletcher	Larrabee	Sears
Burch	Ford	Lea, Calif.	Secrest
Busby	Foulkes	Lee, Mo.	Shallenberger
Byrns	Frear	Lehr	Shannon
Cady	Fulmer	Lemke	Shoemaker
Cannon, Mo.	Gasque	Lesinski	Sinclair
Cannon, Wis.	Gibson	Ludlow	Smith, Va.
Carpenter, Kans.	Gilchrist	Lundeen	Smith, Wash.
Carpenter, Nebr.	Gillespie	McClintic	Spence
Carter, Calif.	Gillette	McFarlane	Stalker
Cartwright	Glover	McGrath	Strong, Tex.
Cary	Goldsborough	McGugin	Stubbs
Castellow	Gray	McKeown	Sutphin
Chapman	Green	McLeod	Swank
Church	Greenwood	McMillan	Tarver
Cochran, Mo.	Griswold	McSwain	Taylor, Tenn.
Coffin	Guyer	Mapes	Terrell
Colden	Hancock, N.C.	Martin, Colo.	Thomason, Tex.
Collins, Calif.	Hart	Martin, Mass.	Thurston
Collins, Miss.	Hastings	Martin, Oreg.	Traeger
Colmer	Healey	May	Truax
Connery	Henney	Mead	Turner
Cooper, Tenn.	Hildebrandt	Miller	Underwood
Cox	Hill, Ala.	Milligan	Vinson, Ky.
Cravens	Hill, Knute	Mitchell	Wallgren
Crowe	Hill, Samuel B.	Monaghan	Wearin
Crump	Hooper	Moran	Weideman
Culkin	Hope	Morehead	Welch
Cummings	Howard	Mott	Werner
Dear	Hughes	Murdock	West, Ohio
DeRouen	Imhoff	Owen	Whittington
Dickinson	James	Parks	Wilcox
Dirksen	Jeffers	Patman	Wilson
Disney	Jenckes	Peavey	Withrow
Dobbins	Johnson, Minn.	Pierce	Wolcott
Dockweiler	Johnson, Okla.	Polk	Wood, Mo.
Dondero	Johnson, Tex.	Ramsay	Woodruff
Dowell	Johnson, W.Va.	Rankin	Zioncheck

NAYS—181

Adair	Andrew, Mass.	Arnold	Bailey
Adams	Andrews, N.Y.	Bacharach	Bakewell
Bankhead	Dingell	Lehlbach	Rogers, N.H.
Black	Ditter	Lewis, Colo.	Rudd
Blanchard	Doughton	Lindsay	Ruffin
Bland	Duffey	Lozier	Schaefer
Blanton	Duncan, Mo.	Luce	Schuetz
Bloom	Durgan, Ind.	McCarthy	Seger
Boehne	Eaton	McCormack	Simpson
Bolton	Edmonds	McFadden	Sirovich
Boylan	Eicher	McLean	Sisson
Britten	Faddis	Major	Smith, W.Va.
Brown, Mich.	Fiesinger	Maloney, Conn.	Snell
Brumm	Fish	Maloney, La.	Snyder
Brunner	Fitzpatrick	Marshall	Somers, N.Y.
Buchanan	Focht	Meeks	Stokes
Bulwinkle	Foss	Merritt	Strong, Pa.
Burke, Nebr.	Fuller	Millard	Studley
Burnham	Gambrill	Muldowney	Sullivan
Caldwell	Goodwin	Musselwhite	Swick
Carden	Goss	Nesbit	Taber
Carley	Granfield	Norton	Taylor, S.C.
Cavicchia	Gregory	O'Brien	Thom
Celler	Griffin	O'Connell	Thompson, Ill.
Chase	Haines	O'Connor	Tinkham
Chavez	Hancock, N.Y.	Oliver, Ala.	Tobey
Christianson	Harlan	Oliver, N.Y.	Treadway
Claiborne	Harter	Palmisano	Turpin
Clark, N.C.	Hess	Parker, Ga.	Umstead
Clarke, N.Y.	Higgins	Parker, N.Y.	Vinson, Ga.
Cochran, Pa.	Hoidale	Parsons	Wadsworth
Cole	Hollister	Perkins	Waldron
Condon	Holmes	Peterson	Walter
Connolly	Huddleston	Pettengill	Watson
Cooper, Ohio	Jacobsen	Peyser	Weaver
Crosby	Jenkins	Pou	West, Tex.
Cross	Kenney	Powers	Whitley
Crowther	Kerr	Prall	Wigglesworth
Cullen	Kinzer	Ragon	Williams
Darden	Knutson	Ramspeck	Wolfenden
Darrow	Kocialkowski	Randolph	Wolverton
Deen	Kurtz	Ransley	Wood, Ga.
Delaney	Lambeth	Reece	Woodrum
De Priest	Lamneck	Reilly
Dickstein	Lanham	Richardson
Dies	Lanzetta	Rogers, Mass.

NOT VOTING—53

Abernethy	Crosser	Kleberg	Rich
Almon	Douglass	Kopplemann	Schulte
Auf der Heide	Doutrich	Lewis, Md.	Steagall
Ayers, Mont.	Eagle	Lloyd	Sumners, Tex.
Ayres, Kans.	Fernandez	McDuffie	Sweeney
Bacon	Gavagan	McReynolds	Taylor, Colo.
Beck	Gifford	Mansfield	Utterback
Beedy	Hamilton	Marland	Warren
Boland	Hartley	Montague	White
Brooks	Hoeppel	Montet	Williford
Buckbee	Hornor	Moynihan	Young
Burke, Calif.	Kahn	O'Malley
Carter, Wyo.	Kennedy, Md.	Reed, N.Y.
Corning	Kennedy, N.Y.	Reid, Ill.

So the amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The following pairs were announced:

On the vote:

Mr. Warren (for) with Mr. Hartley (against).
Mr. Young (for) with Mr. Corning (against).

Until further notice:

Mr. Abernethy with Mr. Bacon.
Mr. Steagall with Mr. Doutrich.
Mr. Taylor of Colorado with Mr. Gifford.
Mr. Ayres of Kansas with Mr. Beck.
Mr. Crosser with Mr. Carter of Wyoming.
Mr. Douglass with Mr. Rich.
Mr. McReynolds with Mr. Beedy.
Mr. McDuffie with Mr. Reed of New York.
Mr. Auf der Heide with Mr. Moynihan.
Mr. Montague with Mrs. Kahn.
Mr. Almon with Mr. Reid of Illinois.
Mr. Sumners of Texas with Mr. Burke of California.
Mr. Kennedy of New York with Mr. Marland.
Mr. White with Mr. O'Malley.
Mr. Lewis of Indiana with Mr. Ayers of Montana.
Mr. Kleberg with Mr. Schulte.
Mr. Sweeney with Mr. Utterback.
Mr. Boland with Mr. Williford.
Mr. Eagle with Mr. Brooks.
Mr. Montet with Mr. Lloyd.
Mr. Gavagan with Mr. Hamilton.
Mr. Fernandez with Mr. Kennedy of Maryland.

Mr. ABERNETHY. Mr. Speaker, I did not get into the Hall until after my name was called.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, my colleague, Mr. WARREN is absent, on account of illness. If present, he would have voted "aye."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question now is on the amendment as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. ELTSE of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask the Chair if, under the present legislative status, it is not in order to call up the bill H.R. 5950?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule just adopted, a motion to go into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union is in order.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I am willing to consent to the present request for 5 minutes, but I desire to give notice that hereafter I shall object to any more unanimous-consent requests.

Mr. SNELL. If the gentleman is going to object hereafter, why not object to them all alike?

Mr. HOWARD. Reserving the right to object, may I ask the gentleman from Texas if I clearly understand that he is going to object to any unanimous-consent request for the passage of other measures today?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I feel, Mr. Speaker, that I must object to this unanimous-consent request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5950) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H.R. 5950, the Bankruptcy Act, with Mr. GLOVER in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the first reading of the bill will be dispensed with.

There was no objection.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. WILCOX].

Mr. WILCOX. Mr. Chairman, during the first part of the time which has been allotted to me, I hope to explain very briefly the necessity for this legislation and the contents of the bill. During the latter part of the time allotted to me I shall be glad to answer any questions which the Membership may desire to propound. I hope the Membership will withhold questions until the latter half of the time which has been allotted to me.

Mr. Chairman, on Monday of this week this House passed a bill extending the power of the bankruptcy court to corporations. Previously similar provisions had been made for railroads, for the farmers, individuals, and others. That relief was very necessary in order that the country might readjust itself and get itself out of this terrible depression.

The relief afforded by those bills, however, has not been sufficient. There is a more serious problem, a more serious situation confronting the people in many sections of the United States than that which grows out of the troubles of the railroads or the troubles of the corporations or of any other class or group of our citizens.

Since 1920 the bonded indebtedness of our municipalities, counties, and special tax districts has increased at the rate of more than $1,300,000,000 a year. From 1920 to 1931 this enormous increase in the bonded indebtedness of these tax units increased to such enormous proportion that it is now estimated there are outstanding and in the hands of investors more than $18,000,000,000 of municipal, county, and district bonds. In order to meet the annual maturities on this enormous indebtedness it has been necessary to levy taxes at such high rates that the taxpayers in many sections have been unable to meet their tax payments, with the result that there are now in the United States between 1,000 and 1,500 communities which are in default in the payment of their public obligations.

When I give that number I refer only to those communities of 10,000 or more population and only to those communities whose defaults have been actually verified. It is conservatively estimated that when we take into consideration the great number of special tax districts and villages and small towns, that there are today between three and four thousand governmental units in the United States which are in default in the payment of their obligations. This condition is not limited to any one section of the country or to any one class of municipalities. It has extended into 41 States and includes such great and populous centers as the city of Detroit, the fourth largest city in the United States; the cities of Akron, Lorain, and Marion, Ohio; the cities of Miami, St. Petersburg, and West Palm Beach, in my own State; Raleigh, Greensboro, and Asheville, in North Carolina; and so on throughout the United States.

The great problem which grows out of this trouble and the great problem which we have to settle here is that unless some means can be found by which those municipalities, counties, and districts may adjust this indebtedness on the basis of their ability to pay, the local governments in these more than 3,000 communities will collapse and the people will find themselves without local government. After all, Mr. Chairman, we look to the local municipal government for the performance of those functions of government which have to do with the preservation and protection not only of the peace and health of our citizens but the very lives of the people themselves. Unless some means, unless some fair and equitable plan may be evolved by which those debts may be adjusted, we will soon find that in more than 3,000 communities in 41 States in the United States our people will be without the protection of local municipal government, and we will thereby endanger not only the peace of the country but the health and often the very lives of millions of American citizens.

This bill does not do violence to any of our ideas of honesty. It does no violence to any of our preconceived notions of the right thing. This bill, when boiled down into simple terms, when stripped of all unnecessary verbiage and put into the layman's language, does simply this and nothing more: It simply provides that when a governmental unit finds itself with an indebtedness that it cannot carry it may adjust that debt on the basis of its capacity to pay, if it is able to work out a plan which is acceptable to two thirds of its creditors. In other words, the sole purpose of this bill is to give the court jurisdiction to force the recalcitrant minority to come in and accept that which is for their own best interest, and which has been agreed to and accepted by two thirds, in amount, of the outstanding indebtedness.

I am going to give you one example. I think this bill had its inception and grew out of a situation which occurred in my own little city, a city of 25,000 people, and I cited it to you as an example of the necessity of this law. For 3 years my city undertook to work out a plan of adjustment of its debt. It finally secured the consent of more than 90 percent of its creditors to an adjustment plan which was agreeable to the city and to 90 percent of the creditors. One man, holding 2 percent in amount of the indebtedness, brought a mandamus, interrupted, and interfered with, and set aside the agreement which had been entered into by more than 90 percent of the creditors. The result of it was that other creditors joined with him; the mandamus was issued by the court, and a tax levy was put on sufficient to meet the requirement of the bond issue, and that little town today has a tax levy for 1 year's taxes of 425 mills on the dollar, or $425 on the $1,000 of valuation.

A man who had a $1,000 house in that little town finds himself today with a tax rate of $425 for 1 year's municipal taxes. That is the result of being unable, through not having legal machinery, to prevent this one man holding 2 percent in amount of indebtedness being brought into court and forced to accept the provisions of an agreement which had been accepted as fair and equitable by more than 90 percent of the outstanding creditors.

